If a taxpayer purchases all of the assets of a franchisee's business, including the franchise rights, for a fixed sum and the original franchisor retains a significant power, right, or continuing interest with respect to the franchise, is the taxpayer entitled, pursuant to section 1253(d)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code, to amortize the portion of the purchase price allocable to the franchise?

FACTS

In 1967, Z transferred a franchise to Y. The franchise agreement gave Y the exclusive right to package, distribute, and sell products bearing the Z trade names and trademarks within a certain geographic area. Pursuant to the franchise agreement, Y was required to follow specific formulas in the production process, to maintain adequate productive capacity, to meet various quality control standards, and to promote the sale and distribution of the Z products. The agreement stated that Y's rights under the franchise agreement could not be transferred without the prior written consent of Z. The agreement contained no restrictions on the duration of the franchise granted to Y, provided Y complies with the provisions of the agreement. The agreement is a "franchise" as defined in section 1253(b)(1) of the Code. The franchise is also a "capital asset" in Y's hands, within the meaning of section 1221 of the Code.

In 1987, Y sold its business to X for 200,000*x* dollars. Among the assets transferred to X were Y's rights under the franchise agreement with Z. X can establish under section 1060 of the Code that 10,000*x* dollars of the total 200,000*x* purchase price was paid for the franchise rights, that 100,000x dollars was paid for the tangible assets, and that the remaining 90,000x dollars represented the going concern value and goodwill of the business. X, Y, and Z are unrelated parties. Prior to the sale, Z consented to the transfer of the franchise rights to X and confirmed that the franchise agreement remained in full force and effect after the sale. Although Y did not retain any interest in the franchise, X is subject to the same restrictions and conditions imposed by Z in the franchise agreement issued to Y. X did not pay any amount to Z on the transfer of the franchise.

On its federal income tax return for the 1987 calendar year, X claimed a deduction of 1,000*x* dollars (1/10 of the 10,000*x* dollars paid to Y for the franchise rights) under section 1253(d)(2)(A) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1253(a) of the Code states that a transfer of a franchise, trademark, or trade name shall not be treated as a sale or exchange of a capital asset if the transferor retains any significant power, right, or continuing interest with respect to the subject matter of the franchise, trademark, or trade name.

Section 1253(b)(1) of the Code states that the term "franchise" includes an agreement which gives one of the parties to the agreement the right to distribute, sell, or provide goods, services, or facilities, within a specific area.

Section 1253(b)(2) of the Code states that the term "significant power, right, or continuing interest" includes, but is not limited to, the following rights with respect to the interest transferred:

(A) A right to disapprove any assignment of such interest, or part thereof.

(B) A right to terminate at will.

(C) A right to prescribe the standards of quality of products used or sold, or of services furnished, and of the equipment and facilities used to promote such products or services.

(D) A right to require that the transferee sell or advertise products or services of the transferor.

(E) A right to require that the transferee purchase substantially all supplies and equipment from the transferor.

(F) A right to payments contingent on the productivity, use, or disposition of the subject matter of the interest transferred if such payments constitute a substantial element under the transfer agreement.

Section 1253(d)(2)(A) of the Code states that if a transfer of a franchise, trademark, or trade name is not (by reason of the application of subsection (a)) treated as a sale or exchange of a capital asset, then any noncontingent payment which is made in discharge of a principal sum agreed upon in the transfer agreement shall be allowed as a deduction (in the case of a single payment made in discharge of such principal sum) ratably over the period beginning with the tax year in which the payment is made and ending with the ninth succeeding tax year or ending with the last tax year beginning in the period of the transfer agreement, whichever period is shorter.

In the present situation, Y did not retain any significant power, right, or continuing interest with respect to the transferred franchise. The franchise was a capital asset in Y's hands. As to Y, therefore, the transaction was a sale of a capital asset.

X, however, acquired the franchise subject to the rights and powers imposed by Z in the original franchise agreement between Z and Y. These retained rights and powers constitute significant powers, rights, and continuing interests under section 1253(b)(2) of the Code. If X had acquired the franchise directly from Z, X would have been entitled under section 1253(d)(2) to amortize the cost of the franchise over a period of 10 years. The question presented, therefore, is whether X is to be denied the benefits of amortization because the franchise was acquired from the prior franchisee rather than from the franchisor.

Section 1253 of the Code does not address specifically the problem of a transfer of a franchise from a prior franchisee to a subsequent franchisee. It can be argued, however, that a literal reading of the statute precludes the subsequent franchisee from obtaining the benefits of amortization under section 1253(d)(2), which applies only if section 1253(a) causes the transfer to be treated other than as a sale or exchange of a capital asset. When, as in the present situation, the prior franchisee retains no significant power, right, or continuing interest, the transaction can be viewed as such a sale or exchange.

Although the above argument is consistent with the express language of the statute, it ignores the congressional intent that a taxpayer should be entitled to amortize its cost under section 1253(d)(2) of the Code if it obtains a franchise subject to a significant power, right, or continuing interest. The tax treatment afforded the purchaser should not turn upon whether the franchise was obtained from the franchisor or from a prior franchisee.

In addition, although the consideration for the franchise in the present case was paid to the prior franchisee, the franchisor was a party to the transaction because the franchisor's consent was required to effect the transfer. The franchise rights run from the franchisor to the new franchisee, and the franchisor retains a significant power, right, or continuing interest. Thus, from the standpoint of the new franchisee, both the prior franchisee and the franchisor are transferors and the transfer is subject to the type of restrictions that, under section 1253(a) of the Code, normally prevent the transaction from being considered a sale or exchange of a capital asset.

HOLDING

X is entitled, under section 1253(d)(2) of the Code, to amortize the portion of the purchase price attributable to its acquisition of Y's franchise rights.

This holding is limited to amounts properly allocable to the franchise rights acquired. The Internal Revenue Service will scrutinize closely transactions of this type to ensure a proper allocation of the purchase price among the franchise, goodwill, and other assets.

These elections were enacted by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations cross-referenced in the notice of proposed rulemaking  [page 916, this Bulletin].

DATE: Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains Temporary Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 1291(d)(2), 1294, 1295, and 1297(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. These provisions were added to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 by section 1235 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514). The temporary regulations are effective for taxable years beginning after 1986. However, these regulations are not intended to address comprehensively the issues raised by sections 1291, 1294, 1295, and 1297 of the Code.

NEED FOR TEMPORARY GUIDANCE

The temporary regulations provided by this document will remain in effect until superseded by final regulations on these elections. Passive foreign investment companies and their shareholders wishing to make the elections in this Treasury decision for their first taxable year beginning after 1986 have an immediate need for guidance with respect to the time and manner of making the elections. For this reason, it is impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or to issue the decision subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

General

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 established special rules for the taxation of U.S. persons that are shareholders of passive foreign investment companies (PFICs). For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, a foreign corporation will be classified as a PFIC if either 75 percent or more of its gross income for the taxable year is passive, or 50 percent or more of the average value of its assets for the taxable year produce passive income or are held for the production of passive income. Subject to certain exceptions, passive income for these purposes generally is foreign personal holding company income as defined in section 954(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.

There are two types of PFICs. Absent an election to be treated as a qualified electing fund (QEF), a PFIC is considered a "nonqualified fund." U.S. persons that are shareholders of nonqualified funds are subject to special ordinary income treatment and a deferred tax amount upon disposition of the stock and receipt of certain distributions. If, however, a PFIC makes the election under section 1295 to be a QEF, its shareholders that are U.S. persons will be taxed currently on their respective shares of the QEF's earnings.

Statutory Provisions

Election to be a Qualified Electing Fund. A PFIC may make the election under section 1295 to be a QEF for any taxable year. To be effective for a particular taxable year, the election must be filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center in Philadelphia before the 15th day of the third month of the following taxable year. The election, once made, applies to the year for which first effective and all subsequent taxable years that the electing company is a PFIC. The election may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary. In addition, to be a QEF, the PFIC must comply with requirements prescribed by the Secretary for determining its ordinary earnings and net capital gain for each taxable year, for reporting the U.S. ownership of its stock, and for other purposes necessary to carry out the objectives of the PFIC provisions.

QEF Shareholder Election to Recognize Gain. U.S. persons that are shareholders of a QEF are taxed under section 1293 on their pro rata shares of the QEF's annual ordinary earnings and net capital gain. If the QEF was a nonqualified fund in a prior taxable year included in the shareholder's holding period, the U.S. person also may be taxable under section 1291 on dispositions of the QEF stock and receipt of certain distributions. To limit the shareholders taxation to section 1293, the shareholder may make the election under section 1291(d)(2) to mark the stock to market as of the first day of the QEF's first taxable year as a QEF. A U.S. person making this election is deemed to have sold the stock held in the QEF on that day for its fair market value. The deemed sale is taxable as a disposition subject to the special tax rules of section 1291. Gain, but not loss, realized on the deemed sale will be recognized. The shareholder's basis in the stock will be adjusted for any gain recognized, and the shareholder's holding period shall thereafter be treated as beginning on the date of the deemed sale. Thereafter, the shareholder will be taxable only under section 1293 with respect to the subsequent earnings derived from the investment in the QEF.

Election to Extend Time for Payment of Tax. The U.S. investor in a QEF is currently taxed on the undistributed earnings of the QEF; however, section 1294 enables the shareholder to elect annually to defer payment of the tax on those earnings, subject to an interest charge. The electing shareholder may terminate the election at any time by paying the tax and interest due. Otherwise, the election automatically terminates upon the occurrence of an event described in section 1294(c).

Election to Purge Stock of PFIC Taint. If, in a particular taxable year, a shareholder owns stock in a foreign corporation which qualifies as a PFIC under section 1296, the stock will retain its character as PFIC stock in subsequent taxable years unless the PFIC is a QEF for the shareholder's entire holding period. An election is available under section 1297(b)(1), however, which allows a shareholder to purge the PFIC taint attributable to stock of a corporation that was a PFIC but no longer qualifies as such under the passive income or passive asset test of section 1296 (former PFIC). Unless the election is made, the shareholder will continue to be taxable pursuant to section 1291 even after the corporation ceases to meet the PFIC definitional test of section 1296. The election effects a deemed sale of the stock and only applies in circumstances in which the PFIC was not a qualified electing fund at some time during the electing shareholder's holding period. The electing shareholder is treated as having sold the stock in the former PFIC on the last day of the former PFIC's last taxable year during which it met the PFIC definitional test. The deemed sale is treated as a disposition for purposes of section 1291 and, therefore, is subject to the deferred tax amount defined in section 1291(c).

EXPLANATION OF TEMPORARY REGULATIONS

The temporary regulations provide the time, manner and other requirements for making the elections under section 1291(d)(2), 1294, 1295, and 1297(b)(1).

Election to be a Qualified Electing Fund. Section 1.1295-1T of the temporary regulations prescribes the time and manner for making the QEF election and the requirements for continued QEF qualification. The temporary regulations provide that the PFIC must file its QEF election with the Philadelphia Service Center before the 15th day of the third month following the taxable year for which the election is made. The temporary regulations permit a PFIC whose post-1986 short taxable year ended before December 31, 1987 to make the election any time before March 15, 1988. The QEF election will not be available to PFICs with any bearer shares. As part of the election, the PFIC must provide certain information, including the total ordinary earnings and net capital gain for the year of the election and, in certain cases, the fair market of a share of its stock as of the first day of the election year. However, any PFIC which must file its election statement before May 15, 1988, will be able to amend and supplement the information provided in its election statement as well as extend the time to satisfy the other election requirements in §1.1295-1T(b) described below by June 15, 1988.

The temporary regulations also require the PFIC to notify its shareholders of the daily amount of ordinary earnings and net capital gain of the PFIC deemed earned on a share of stock during the taxable year. However, if the number of outstanding shares of stock in the PFIC changed at any time during the year, the PFIC must provide the shareholders a schedule of the per share amounts of ordinary earnings and net capital gain of the PFIC for each day during the taxable year. The PFIC must send the shareholder notification and request for certification by the 15th day of the third month following each taxable year to which the election applies. However, the date for sending shareholder notification and request for certification statements is extended until June 15, 1988 for elections filed before March 15, 1988 under §1.1295-1T(b)(1)(iii) of the temporary regulations.

The shareholder notification and certification statement will require certain shareholders of record that hold the stock for their own benefit to complete the certification statement and return it to the PFIC. The shareholder notification and request for certification statement also will advise certain types of shareholders of record to notify their owners, or the persons on whose behalf they hold the stock, of their pro rata shares of the earnings of the PFIC. These shareholders also must be advised to request the indirect owners to report their status as U.S. persons to the PFIC. Only U.S. persons that are direct or indirect shareholders of the PFIC are required to certify their status to the PFIC. The temporary regulations provide that failure of a shareholder to comply with the request for certification will not invalidate the QEF election.

The temporary regulations require the QEF to provide the Internal Revenue Service, by the 15th day of the ninth month following each taxable year to which the election applies, the names, addresses and taxpayer identification numbers of the U.S. persons obtained through certification, and their pro rata shares of the ordinary earnings and net capital gain. For taxable years after the year of the election, this information will be required as part of the annual report to be filed by the QEF by the 15th day of the ninth month following each year to which the election applies. The annual report will be similar to the election statement.

The temporary regulations also require a QEF to amend the earnings information filed with the Internal Revenue Service and sent to its shareholders at any time that a recalculation of the ordinary earnings and net capital gain of the QEF is necessary.

The temporary regulations under §1.1295-1T(b)(3) require the QEF to appoint a person resident in the United States as the QEF's authorized representative in the United States for tax administrative purposes. Section 1.1295-1T(b)(4) requires the QEF to maintain permanent books of account, records and other documents that are necessary to verify the reported amounts of ordinary income and capital gain, to maintain ledgers of all shareholders of record for each year to which the election applies, to keep copies of such documents in the United States, and to make the documents available for inspection by Internal Revenue Service personnel.

Section 1.1295-1T(b)(9) provides that if the electing corporation was a nonqualified fund during a post-1986 taxable year prior to the taxable year for which the section 1295 election is made, it must determine, for purposes of the shareholder election under section 1291(d)(2), the fair market value of its stock on the first day of its first taxable year as a QEF (the valuation date) according to the rules specified in §1.1295-1T(b)(9)(i) and (ii). This requirement does not apply to a foreign corporation that makes the election for its first taxable year during which it qualifies as a PFIC. A PFIC required to make the fair market value determination must provide this information to those persons that were its shareholders on the valuation date.

The section 1295 election may be revoked by the PFIC but only with the consent of the Commissioner. The Commissioner's determination will take into account the enactment of technical corrections to the Tax Reform Act of 1986 after the PFIC made the election, as well as provisions of PFIC regulations published after the PFIC made the election.

QEF Shareholder Election to Recognize Gain. Section 1.1291-10T specifies the time and manner for making the election under section 1291(d)(2) of the Code to treat the stock of a PFIC as sold on the first day on which the PFIC is a QEF. This election only applies to a U.S. person that held such stock in the QEF when it was a nonqualified fund. The election may be made by a shareholder that may realize either a gain or a loss on the deemed sale (although the loss will not be recognized). Section 1.1291-10T(c) provides that the shareholder may make the election only with respect to the taxable year that includes the first day of the QEF's first taxable year as a QEF. Section 1.1291-10T(d) provides that, in order to make the election under section 1291(d)(2), the shareholder generally must pay the tax arising under section 1291 by the due date (determined without extensions) of the return for the shareholder's taxable year that includes the first day of the QEF's first taxable year as a QEF. If the shareholder files the election after the due date, the electing shareholder will have to pay the tax on the gain included in income, the deferred tax amount, and the interest for the underpayment of tax pursuant to section 6601.

The temporary regulations provide rules for direct shareholders making the election under section 1291(d)(2). Guidance for indirect shareholders wishing to make the election will be provided at a later time.

Election to Extend Time for Payment of Tax. Section 1.1294-1T specifies the time and manner for making the annual election under section 1294 to extend the time for payment of the tax liability which is attributable to the undistributed earnings of the QEF, included in income under section 1293, for the taxable year of the QEF that ended during the taxable year of the shareholder. The tax liability is defined in §1.1294-1T(f) as the excess of the tax imposed under chapter 1 of the Code for the taxable year over the tax that would be imposed for the taxable year without regard to the inclusion in income under section 1293 of undistributed earnings. The electing shareholder will be required to state in the section 1294 election the amount of ordinary earnings and net capital gain of the QEF included in the income of the shareholder for the year and the amount of the tax liability, payment of which is being deferred by reason of the election under section 1294. An extension of time to pay tax terminates upon the occurrence of any of the events listed in §1.1294-1T(e). These events include receipt of earnings to which the election is attributable, transfer or pledge of the stock with respect to which the section 1294 election applies, a loan, pledge or guarantee by the QEF to the electing shareholder or to a person related to the shareholder, cessation of the QEF's status as a QEF or as a PFIC, or a determination by the District Director pursuant to section 1294(c)(3) that collection of the tax is in jeopardy.

Election to Purge Stock of PFIC Taint. Section 1.1297-3T provides the time and manner for making the election under section 1297(b)(1) of the Code to treat the PFIC stock as sold on the last day of the last taxable year during which it was a PFIC. Thereafter, the foreign corporation will not be treated as a PFIC in the hands of the shareholder. The shareholder makes the election by filing an amended tax return within three years after the due date, as extended, of the shareholder's tax return for the taxable year that includes the date of the deemed sale. The shareholder must describe in the election the manner in which the former PFIC lost the characteristics of a PFIC. The electing shareholder will be liable for interest for underpayment of tax for the year of the deemed sale.

The temporary regulations provide rules for direct shareholders making the election under section 1297(b)(1). Guidance for indirect shareholders wishing to make the election will be provided at a later time.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

It has been determined that this temporary regulation is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Therefore, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. A general notice of proposed rule is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

§1.1291-10T. Election by a United State person to recognize gain in a qualified electing fund (Temporary).

(a) Purpose and scope. This section provides rules for making the election under section 1291(d)(2). Under that section, a U.S. person may elect to recognize gain with respect to stock in a qualified electing fund (QEF) held on the first day of the QEF's first taxable year during which it is a QEF. In general, a QEF is a foreign corporation that is a passive foreign investment company (PFIC), as defined in section 1296, and that has made the election under section 1295. For rules concerning the election by a PFIC under section 1295, see §1.1295-1T.

(b) Election to recognize gain— (1) In general. A U.S. person may elect to recognize gain under the provisions of this §1.1291-10T if such person was a shareholder of a QEF on the qualification date. A person that makes such an election shall be treated as having sold on the qualification date for its fair market value stock of the QEF that the person held on that date. The deemed sale is taxed as a disposition pursuant to section 1291. Under that section, the gain is considered earned pro rata over the shareholder's holding period in the stock, and is taxed as ordinary income. The tax on the gain attributable to post-1986 taxable years during which the corporation is a PFIC is based on the value of tax deferral and includes an interest charge. An election may be made by a shareholder that would realize a loss on the deemed sale. Any loss realized on the deemed sale may not be recognized.

(2) Qualification date. The qualification date with respect to any shareholder of a QEF is the first day of the QEF's first taxable year as a QEF.

(3) Exception. This election does not pertain to a shareholder that held stock in a PFIC which was a QEF for all of the PFIC's taxable years beginning after 1986 during which it qualified as a PFIC and that are included in whole or in part in the shareholder's holding period. See section 1291(d)(1).

(c) Time for making the election. Except as provided below, an election under this §1.1291-10T must be made with the filing of the electing shareholder's tax return for the taxable year which includes the qualification date. The election may be made by filing an amended tax return within three years of the due date, as extended, for the shareholder's tax return for the taxable year which includes the qualification date.

(d) Manner of making the election—(1) In general. The election shall be made by filing Form 8621 or a statement containing the information and representations required by paragraph (d)(2) of this section, reporting the gain on the income tax return as required by section 1291(a)(2), and by paying the tax on the gain as required by section 1291 (including the payment of the deferred tax amount required under sections 1291(a)(1)(C) and 1291(c)). The electing shareholder that makes the election under this section after the due date of the return (determined without extensions) shall pay interest, pursuant to section 6601, on the underpayment of tax for the taxable year that includes the qualification date.

(2) Information to be included in the election. If a statement is used in lieu of Form 8621, the statement should be identified, in a heading, as an election under section 1291(d)(2). The statement must contain the following information and representations:

(i) The name, address and taxpayer identification number of the electing shareholder;

(ii) The name, address and taxpayer identification number of the QEF, the stock of which is the subject of the election;

(iii) A statement that the shareholder is making the election under section 1291(d)(2);

(iv) A representation that the person making the election was a shareholder in the QEF on the qualification date;

(v) The qualification date;

(vi) A schedule of the shares held by the electing shareholder in the QEF on the qualification date, listing the date(s) of acquisition, the number of shares acquired on each date listed, and the electing shareholder's tax basis in each of those shares;

(vii) The fair market value of the stock in the QEF as of the qualification date, as provided to the electing shareholder by the QEF pursuant to §1.1295-1T(b)(5); and

(viii) A schedule showing the computation of the gain recognized on the deemed sale, and the calculation of the deferred tax amount, as defined in section 1291(c).

(e) Adjustment to basis; treatment of holding period. An electing shareholder that recognizes gain on the deemed sale shall increase its adjusted basis in the stock by the amount of gain recognized. An electing shareholder shall not adjust the basis in stock with respect to which the shareholder realized a loss on the deemed sale. An electing shareholder thereafter shall treat its holding period in the stock, for purposes of sections 1291 through 1297, as beginning on the qualification date without regard to whether it recognized gain on the deemed sale; for purposes of section 1223, the holding period in the stock in the QEF shall include the period prior to the deemed sale.

§1.1294-1T. Election to extend the time for payment of tax on undistributed earnings of a qualified electing fund (Temporary).

(a) Purpose and scope. This section provides rules for making the annual election under section 1294. Under that section, a U.S. person that is a shareholder in a qualified electing fund (QEF) may elect to extend the time for payment of its tax liability which is attributable to its share of the undistributed earnings of the QEF. In general, a QEF is a passive foreign investment company (PFIC), as defined in section 1296, that makes the election under section 1295. Under section 1293, a U.S. person that owns, or is treated as owning, stock of a QEF at any time during the taxable year of the QEF shall include in gross income, as ordinary income, its pro rata share of the ordinary earnings of the QEF for the taxable year and, as long-term capital gain, its pro rata share of the net capital gain of the QEF for the taxable year. The shareholder's share of the earnings shall be included in the shareholder's taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the QEF ends.

(b) Election to extend time for payment—(1) In general. A U.S. person that is a shareholder of a QEF on the last day of the QEF's taxable year may elect under section 1294 to extend the time for payment of that portion of its tax liability which is attributable to the inclusion in income pursuant to section 1293 of the shareholder's share of the QEF's undistributed earnings. The election under section 1294 may be made only with respect to undistributed earnings, and interest is imposed under section 6601 on the amount of the tax liability which is subject to the extension. This interest must be paid on the termination of the election.

(2) Exception. An election under this §1.1294-1T cannot be made for a taxable year of the shareholder if any portion of the QEF's earnings is includible in the gross income of the shareholder for such year under either section 551 (relating to foreign personal holding companies) or section 951 (relating to controlled foreign corporations).

(3) Undistributed earnings—(i) In general. For purposes of this §1.1294-1T the term "undistributed earnings" means the excess, if any, of the amount includible in gross income by reason of section 1293(a) for the shareholder's taxable year (the includible amount) over the sum of (A) the amount of any distribution to the shareholder during the QEF's taxable year and (B) the portion of the includible amount that is attributable to stock in the QEF that the shareholder transferred or otherwise disposed of before the end of the QEF's year. For purposes of this paragraph, a distribution will be treated as made from the most recently accumulated earnings and profits.

(ii) Effect of a loan, pledge or guarantee. A loan, pledge, or guarantee described in §1.1294-1T(e)(2) or (4) will be treated as a distribution of earnings for purposes of paragraph (b)(3)(i)(A). If earnings are treated as distributed in a taxable year by reason of a loan, pledge or guarantee described in §1.1294-1T(e)(2) or (4), but the amount of the deemed distribution resulting therefrom was less than the amount of the actual loan by the QEF (or the amount of the loan secured by the pledge or guarantee), earnings derived by the QEF in a subsequent taxable year will be treated as distributed in such subsequent year to the shareholder for purposes of paragraph (b)(3)(i)(A) by virtue of such loan, but only to the extent of the difference between the outstanding principal balance on the loan in such subsequent year and the prior years' deemed distributions resulting from the loan. For this purpose, the outstanding principal balance on a loan in a taxable year shall be treated as equal to the greatest amount of the outstanding balance at any time during such year.

Example (1). (i) Facts. FC is a PFIC that made the election under section 1295 to be a QEF for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. S owned 500 shares, or 50 percent, of FC throughout the first six months of 1987, but on June 30, 1987 sold 10 percent, or 50 shares, of the FC stock that it held. FC had $100,000*x* of ordinary earnings but no net capital gain in 1987. No part of FC's earnings is includible in S's income under either section 551 or 951. FC made no distributions to its shareholders in 1987. S's pro rata share of income is determined by attributing FC's income ratably to each day in FC's year. Accordingly, FC's daily earnings are $274*x* ($100,000*x*/365). S's share of the earnings of FC is $47,484*x*, determined as follows.

Accordingly, S's pro rata share of FC's earnings for the first six months of FC's year deemed earned while S held 50 percent of FC's stock is $24,797*x* ($274*x* × 181 days × 50%). S's pro rata share of FC's earnings for the remainder of FC's year deemed earned while S held 45 percent of FC's stock is $22,687*x* ($274*x* × 184 days × 45%). Therefore, S's total share of FC's earnings to be included in income under section 1293 is $47,484*x* ($24,797*x* + $22,687*x*).

(ii) Election. S intends to make the election under section 1294 to defer the payment of its tax liability that is attributable to the undistributed earnings of FC. The amount of current year undistributed earnings as defined in §1.1294-1T(b)(3) with respect to which S can make the election is the excess of S's inclusion in gross income under section 1293(a) for the taxable year over the sum of (1) the cash and other property distributed to S during FC's tax year out of earnings included in income pursuant to section 1293(a), and (2) the earnings attributable to stock disposed of during FC's tax year. Because S sold 10 percent, or 50 shares, of the FC stock that it held during the first six months of the year, 10 percent of its share of the earnings for that part of the year, which is $2,480*x* ($24,797*x* × 10%), is attributable to the shares sold. S therefore cannot make the election under section 1294 to extend the time for payment for its tax liability on that amount. Accordingly, S can make the election under section 1294 with respect to its tax on $45,004*x* ($47,484*x* less $2,480*x*), which is its pro rata share of FC's earnings, reduced by the earnings attributable to the stock disposed of during the year.

Example (2). (i) Facts. The facts are the same as in Example (1) with the following exceptions. S did not sell any FC stock during 1987. Therefore, because S held 50 percent of the FC stock throughout 1987, S's pro rata share of FC's ordinary earnings was $50,000*x*, no part of which was includible in S's income under either section 551 or 951. There were no actual distributions of earnings to S in 1988. On December 31, 1987, S pledged the FC stock as security for a bank loan of $75,000*x*. The pledge is treated as a disposition of the FC stock and therefore a distribution of S's share of the undistributed earnings of FC up to the amount of the loan principal. S's entire share of the undistributed earnings of FC are deemed distributed as a result of the pledge of the FC stock. S therefore cannot make the election under section 1294 to extend the time for payment of its tax liability on its share of FC's earnings for 1987.

(ii) Deemed distribution. In 1988, FC has ordinary earnings of $100,000*x* but no net capital gain. S's pro rata share of FC's 1988 ordinary earnings was $50,000*x*. S's loan remained outstanding throughout 1988; the highest loan balance during 1988 was $74,000*x*. Of S's share of the ordinary earnings of FC of $50,000*x*, $24,000*x* is deemed distributed to S. This is the amount by which the highest loan balance for the year ($74,000*x* exceeds the portion of the undistributed earnings of FC deemed distributed to S in 1987 by reason of the pledge ($50,000*x*). S may make the election under section 1294 to extend the time for payment of its tax liability on $26,000*x*, which is the amount by which S's includible amount for 1988 exceeds the amount deemed distributed to S during 1988.

(c) Time for making the election—(1) In general. An election under this §1.1294-1T may be made for any taxable year in which a shareholder reports income pursuant to section 1293. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2), the election shall be made by the due date, as extended, of the tax return for the shareholder's taxable year for which the election is made.

(2) Exeption. An election under this section may be made within 60 days of receipt of notification from the QEF of the shareholder's pro rata share of the ordinary earnings and net capital gain if notification is received after the time for filing the election provided in paragraph (c)(1) (and requires the filing of an amended return to report income pursuant to section 1293). If the notification reports an increase in the shareholder's pro rata share of the earnings previously reported to the shareholder by the QEF, the shareholder may make the election under this paragraph (c)(2) only with respect to the amount of such increase.

(d) Manner of making the election—(1) In general. A shareholder shall make the election by (i) attaching to its return for the year of the election Form 8621 or a statement containing the information and representations required by this section and (ii) filing a copy of Form 8621 or the statement with the Internal Revenue Service Center, P.O. Box 21086, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19114.

(2) Information to be included in the election statement. If a statement is used in lieu of Form 8621, the statement should be identified, in a heading, as an election under section 1294 of the Code. The statement must include the following information and representations:

(i) The name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the electing shareholder and the taxable year of the shareholder for which the election is being made;

(ii) The name, address and taxpayer identification number of the QEF if provided to the shareholder;

(iii) A statement that the shareholder is making the election under section 1294 of the Code;

(iv) A schedule containing the following information:

(A) the ordinary earnings and net capital gain for the current year included in the shareholder's income under section 1293;

(B) the amount of cash and other property distributed by the QEF during its taxable year with respect to stock held directly or indirectly by the shareholder during that year, identifying the amount of such distributions that is paid out of current earnings and profits and the amount paid out of each prior year's earnings and profits; and

(C) the undistributed PFIC earnings tax liability (as defined in paragraph (f) of this section) for the taxable year, payment of which is being deferred by reason of the election under section 1294;

(v) The number of shares of stock held in the QEF during the QEF's taxable year which gave rise to the section 1293 inclusion and the number of such shares transferred, deemed transferred or otherwise disposed of by the electing shareholder before the end of the QEF's taxable year, and the date of transfer; and

(vi) The representations of the electing shareholder that—

(A) No part of the QEF's earnings for the taxable year is includible in the electing shareholder's gross income under either section 551 or 951 of the Code;

(B) The election is made only with respect to the shareholder's pro rata share of the undistributed earnings of the QEF; and

(C) The electing shareholder, upon termination of the election to extend the date for payment, shall pay the undistributed PFIC earnings tax liability attributable to those earnings to which the termination applies as well as interest on such tax liability pursuant to section 6601. Payment of this tax and interest must be made by the due date (determined without extensions) of the tax return for the taxable year in which the termination occurs.

(e) Termination of the extension. The election to extend the date for payment of tax will be terminated in whole or in part upon the occurrence of any of the following events:

(1) The QEF's distribution of earnings to which the section 1294 extension to pay tax is attributable; the extension will terminate only with respect to the tax attributable to the earnings that were distributed.

(2) The electing shareholder's transfer of stock in the QEF (or use thereof as security for a loan) with respect to which an election under this §1.1294-1T was made. The election will be terminated with respect to the undistributed earnings attributable to the shares of the stock transferred. In the case of a pledge of the stock, the election will be terminated with respect to undistributed earnings equal to the amount of the loan for which the stock is pledged.

(3) Revocation of the QEF's election as a QEF or cessation of the QEF's status as a PFIC. A revocation of the QEF election or cessation of PFIC status will result in the complete termination of the extension.

(4) A loan of property by the QEF directly or indirectly to the electing shareholder or related person, or a pledge or guarantee by the QEF with respect to a loan made by another party to the electing shareholder or related person. The election will be terminated with respect to undistributed earnings in an amount equal to the amount of the loan, pledge, or guarantee.

(5) A determination by the District Director pursuant to section 1294(c)(3) that collection of the tax is in jeopardy. The amount of undistributed earnings with respect to which the extension is terminated under this paragraph (d)(5) will be left to the discretion of the District Director.

(f) Undistributed PFIC earnings tax liability. The electing shareholder's tax liability attributable to the ordinary earnings and net capital gain included in gross income under section 1293 shall be the excess of the tax imposed under chapter 1 of the Code for the taxable year over the tax that would be imposed for the taxable year without regard to the inclusion in income under section 1293 of the undistributed earnings as defined in paragraph (b)(3) of this section.

Example. The facts are the same as in §1.1294-1T(b)(3), Example (1), with the following exceptions. S, a domestic corporation, did not dispose of any FC stock in 1987. Therefore, because S held 50 percent of the FC stock throughout 1987, S's pro rata share of FC's ordinary earnings was $50,000*x*. In addition to $50,000*x* of ordinary earnings from FC, S had $12,500*x* of domestic source income and $6,000*x* of expenses (other than interest expense) not definitely related to any gross income. These expenses are apportioned, pursuant to §1.861-8(c)(2), on a pro rata basis between the domestic and foreign source income—$1,200*x* of expenses, or one-fifth, to domestic source income, and $4,800*x* of expenses, or four-fifths, to the section 1293 inclusion. FC paid foreign taxes of $25,000*x* in 1987. Accordingly, S is entitled to claim as an indirect foreign tax credit pursuant to section 1293(f) a proportionate amount of the foreign taxes paid by FC, which is $12,500*x* ($25,000*x* × $50,000*x*/$100,000*x*). S is taxed in the U.S. at the rate of 34 percent. The amount of tax liability for which S may extend the time for payment is determined as follows:

1987 Tax Liability (with section 1293 inclusion)

Source	U.S.	Foreign
Section 1293	0	50,000*x*

Foreign tax credit	12,500x
1987 Tax Liability	6,710*x*

§1.1294-1T (f) Example

1987 Tax Liability (without section 1293 inclusion)

U.S. tax rate	x34%
U.S. tax	2,210*x*
Foreign tax credit	0
Hypothetical 1987 Tax Liability	2,210*x*

The amount of tax, payment of which S may defer pursuant to section 1294, is $4,500*x* ($6,710*x* less $2,210*x*).

(g) Authority to require a bond. Pursuant to the authority granted in section 6165 and in the manner provided therein, and subject to notification, the District Director may require the electing shareholder to furnish a bond to secure payment of the tax, the time for payment of which is extended under this section. If the electing shareholder does not furnish the bond within 60 days after receiving a request from the District Director, the election will be revoked.

(h) Annual reporting requirement. The electing shareholder must attach Form 8621 or a statement to its income tax return for each year during which an election under this section is outstanding. The statement must contain the following information: (1) the total amount of undistributed earnings as of the end of the taxable year to which the outstanding elections apply; (2) the total amount of the undistributed PFIC earnings tax liability and accrued interest charge as of the end of the year; (3) the total amount of distributions received during the taxable year; and (4) a description of the occurrence of any other termination event described in paragraph (e) of this section that occurred during the taxable year. The electing shareholder also shall file by the due date, as extended, for its return a copy of Form 8621 or the statement with the Philadelphia Service Center, P.O. Box 21086, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19114.

U.S. persons that are shareholders of a QEF are taxable annually, pursuant to section 1293, on their pro rata shares of the earnings and profits of the QEF unless the shareholder makes the election under section 1294 to extend the time for payment of tax on undistributed earnings. The election under section 1295 may not be made by a PFIC that issues any of its shares in bearer form or is otherwise unable to identify all of its shareholders of record. Box 21086, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19114:

(i) A schedule containing the following information obtained pursuant to the certification procedure described in §1.1295-1T(b)(5) from each direct or indirect shareholder that certified its status as a U.S. person: Names, addresses, taxpayer identification numbers, their pro rata shares (determined in the manner described in section 1293(b)) of the ordinary earnings and net capital gain of the PFIC for the taxable year determined in accordance with section 1293(e), and their pro rata shares of cash and fair market value of other property distributed to them or to the persons that held the stock directly or indirectly for their benefit.

(9) Fair market value determination by certain companies. If a foreign corporation is making the election to be a QEF for a taxable year other than the first taxable year during which it qualified as a PFIC under section 1296, it must determine the fair market value of its stock on the first day of its first taxable year to which the election under section 1295 applies (the valuation date). A PFIC required to make the fair market value determination shall notify its shareholders of the stock value pursuant to paragraph (b)(5) of this section. This value is to be used by the shareholder in making the election under section 1291(d)(2) to recognize gain on a deemed sale of the PFIC stock held on the valuation date. For purposes of determining the fair market value of the stock in the PFIC, the following rules shall apply.

(i) Companies other than open-end investment companies. The fair market value of companies, other than open-end investment companies as defined in paragraph (b)(9)(ii)(B) of this section, shall be determined pursuant to subdivisions (A) through (E) of this paragraph (b)(9)(i).

(A) If the stock of the PFIC was regularly traded on an established securities market on the valuation date, the fair market value of the stock shall be the closing price of the stock on the valuation date. If there were no sales on the valuation date, but there were sales on dates within 30 business days before or after the valuation date, the fair market value shall be the mean of the opening and closing prices on the nearest date before or after the valuation date.

(B) If the stock of the PFIC was regularly traded in more than one established securities market, the price of the stock on a composite listing of all established securities markets in which it is regularly traded must be used, provided such a composite listing is set forth in a generally available listing or publication of general circulation. If such a composite listing is not available, the records of the price in the established securities market in which the stock is principally traded must be used.

(C) In any case in which a dividend is declared on a share of stock before the valuation date but payable to stockholders of record on a date after the valuation date, the amount of the dividend must be added to the ex-dividend quotation in determining the fair market value of the stock as of the valuation date.

(D) If the stock in the PFIC was not traded on an established securities market on the valuation date, or within 30 business days before or after the valuation date, the fair market value of the stock shall be the value determined by applying the guidelines of Rev. Rul. 59-60; 1959-1 C.B. 237, as amplified by Rev. Rul. 77-287, 1977-2 C.B. 319, Rev. Rul. 80-213, 1980-2 C.B. 101, and Rev. Rul. 83-120, 1983-2 C.B. 170.

(E) For purposes of this paragraph, the terms "established securities market" "regularly traded" shall have the meanings given such terms in §1.897-1(m) and (n), respectively. However, stock will not be treated as regularly traded if there was not a sale of the stock within 30 business days before or after the valuation date on an established securities market.

(ii) Open-end investment companies—(A) The fair market value of a share in a PFIC that is an open-end investment company (commonly known as a "mutual fund") shall be its public redemption price (or bid price) on the valuation date. If there is no public redemption price quoted by the PFIC for the valuation date, the fair market value of the mutual fund share is the last public redemption price quoted by the PFIC for the most recent day preceding the valuation date for which there was a quotation. In any case where a dividend is declared on a share in a PFIC that is an open-end investment company before the valuation date, but payable to shareholders of record after the valuation date and the share is quoted "ex-dividend" on the valuation date, the amount of the dividend must be added to the ex-dividend quotation in determining the fair market value of the share as of the valuation date.

(B) The term "open-end investment company" and the term "mutual fund" include only a company that on the applicable valuation date was engaged in offering its shares to the public in the capacity of an open-end investment company. An open-end investment company is an investment company that stands ready to redeem its shares, on demand, at their current net asset value.

(C) The term "public redemption price" and the term "bid" price mean the price (the current net asset value) at which the opened investment company will redeem its shares.

(c) Revocability of the election—(1) In general. The election under section 1295 may be revoked by the PFIC only with the consent of the Commissioner. In addition, the Commissioner may revoke the election for failure of the PFIC to satisfy any requirement set forth in this section within 90 days of the mailing of notification from the Internal Revenue Service of such failure. The revocation will be effective for the taxable year for which the requirement was not satisfied. The PFIC shall notify the U.S. persons that are its shareholders within 90 days of receipt of a notice from the Internal Revenue Service that the election under section 1295 has been revoked.

(2) Failure to obtain shareholder certification. The election under section 1295 will not be invalidated or revoked in the event a shareholder of the PFIC fails to provide the certification requested pursuant to paragraph (b)(5) of this section.

§1.1297-3T. Deemed sale election by a United States person that is a shareholder of a passive foreign investment company (Temporary).

(a) In general. Except as indicated below, a shareholder of a foreign corporation that no longer qualifies as a passive foreign investment company (PFIC) shall be treated for tax purposes as holding stock in a PFIC and therefore continue to be subject to taxation under section 1291 unless the shareholder makes the election under section 1297(b)(1). This continuing PFIC taint shall not apply to stock in a PFIC for which an election under section 1295 to be a qualified electing fund (QEF) has been in effect throughout that portion of the shareholder's holding period during which the PFIC qualified as a PFIC. A U.S. person making the election under section 1297(b)(1) shall be treated as having sold its stock in the PFIC on the last day of the last taxable year of the foreign corporation during which it qualified as a PFIC (termination date). The shareholder thereafter shall not be treated as holding stock in a PFIC and shall not be subject to taxation under section 1291. The deemed sale is taxed as a disposition under section 1291. Pursuant to that section, the gain, if any, is considered earned pro rata over the shareholder's holding period in the stock and is taxed as ordinary income. The tax on the gain is based on the value of the tax deferral and includes an interest charge. Any loss realized in the deemed sale may not be recognized. This section provides rules for making the election under section 1297(b)(1). The election is available to a U.S. person that is a shareholder of a foreign corporation if—

(1) The foreign corporation was a PFIC at any time during the period the U.S. person held the stock;

(2) At any one time during the U.S. person's holding period, the foreign corporation qualified as a PFIC but was not a QEF; and

(3) The foreign corporation is no longer a PFIC within the meaning of section 1296.

(b) Time and manner of making the election—(1) In general. The shareholder shall make the election under this section and section 1297(b)(1) by filing an amended income tax return for its taxable year that includes the termination date within three years of the due date, as extended, for the shareholder's tax return for such taxable year. The shareholder must attach to the amended return either Form 8621 or a statement, prepared in accordance with paragraph (c)(2) of this section, reporting the gain on the deemed sale of the stock as required by section 1291(a)(2) (as if such deemed sale occurred under section 1291(d)(2)), and by paying the tax on the gain as required by section 1291 (including the payment of the deferred tax amount required under sections 1291(a)(1)(C) and 1291(c)). The electing shareholder also shall pay interest, pursuant to section 6601, on the underpayment of tax for the taxable year of termination. An electing shareholder that realizes a loss shall report the loss on Form 8621, but shall not recognize the loss.

(2) Information to be included in the election. If a statement is used, the statement should be identified, in a heading, as an election under section 1297(b)(1). The statement must include the following information and representations:

(i) The name, address and taxpayer identification number of the electing shareholder;

(ii) The name, address and taxpayer identification number, if any, of the PFIC;

(iii) A statement that the shareholder is making the election under section 1297(b)(1);

(iv) The period in the electing shareholder's holding period in the stock during which the foreign corporation was a PFIC, the period during which it was a QEF (and whether the shareholder elected under section 1294 to defer payment of its tax liability attributable to any portion of such period), and the termination date;

(v) The manner in which the PFIC lost the characteristics of a PFIC;

(vi) A schedule listing the shares in the PFIC held by the electing shareholder on the termination, listing the date(s) each share or block of shares acquired, the number of shares acquired on each date listed, and the tax basis of each share;

(vii) The fair market value of the stock in the PFIC on the termination date; for this purpose, the fair market value of the stock shall be determined according to the rules of §1.1295-1T(b)(9); and

(viii) A schedule showing the computation of the gain recognized on the deemed sale, and a calculation of the deferred tax amount, as defined in section 1291(c).

(3) Adjustment to basis; treatment of holding period. An electing shareholder that recognizes gain on the deemed sale of stock shall increase its adjusted basis in the stock by the amount of gain recognized. An electing shareholder shall not adjust the basis in stock with respect to which the shareholder realized a loss on the deemed sale. An electing shareholder shall thereafter treat its holding period in the stock, for purposes of sections 1291 through 1297, as beginning on the day following the termination date without regard to whether it recognized gain on the deemed sale; for section 1223 purposes, the holding period in the stock in the PFIC shall include the period prior to the deemed sale.

Consolidated Return Regulations—Deferral of Gain or Loss

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary and final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary and final regulations that amend §1.1502-13, §1.1502-14, §1.1502-13T and add new §1.1502-14T to the consolidated return regulations. The temporary and final regulations supplement the existing regulations by providing rules relating to complete liquidations of subsidiaries that are taxable to the distributing corporation. The text of the temporary and final regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [LR-47-88, page 935, this Bulletin].

EFFECTIVE DATE: These regulations are effective upon publication and apply to consolidated income tax returns for which the due date (without extensions) is after April 14, 1988.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document adds new temporary regulations §1.1502-14T to Part 1 of Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations and makes conforming amendments to §§1.1502-13T, 1.1502-13 and 1.1502-14. The temporary regulations added by this document will remain in effect until superseded by later temporary or final regulations relating to these matters.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

Under §1.1502-14(c)(2) of the consolidated return regulations, any gain recognized by the distributing corporation on a complete liquidation is accounted for as if the distributing and distributee member corporations filed separate returns. Because a distribution in complete liquidation of a member of a group is not a "deferred intercompany transaction" (see §1.1502-13(a)) and is not otherwise treated as such (see §§1.1502-14(c)(1) and (2)), any gain or loss recognized by the distributing corporation in a transaction described §1.1502-14(c)(2) is taken into account in the taxable year in which the transaction occurs.

Under subchapter C of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and the consolidated return regulations, the Internal Revenue Service is unaware of any circumstance in which gain or loss recognized by the distributing corporation in a complete liquidation should not be deferred in the same manner as is provided for other distributions described in §1.1502-14(a) and (b). See also H.R. Rep. No. 100-495, 100th Cong., 1st Sess. 969 (1987). Accordingly, temporary regulation §1.1504-14T is added, and related temporary regulation §1.1502-13T is amended, to provide for the deferral of any gain or loss recognized by the distributing corporation on any complete liquidation to the same extent that deferral is provided for gain recognized with respect to a nonliquidating distribution under section 311. The temporary regulations under new §1.1502-14T, and the amended related regulations under §1.1502-13T, generally apply to distributions in complete liquidation of a corporation that occur during a taxable year for which the due date (without extensions) for the filing of the income tax return is after April 14, 1988.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required.

§1.1502-13T Temporary regulations for certain intercompany transactions.

(c) Deferral of gain or loss on intercompany transactions—(1) Inheritance of deferred gain or loss. If the assets of the selling member are acquired by one or more other members in an acquisition to which section 381(a) applies, or pursuant to a distribution in a complete liquidation not described in section 332(b), the member acquiring the greatest portion of the assets (measured by fair market value) of the selling member shall be subject to the provisions of §1.1502-13(d), (e), and (f) with respect to the entire remaining balance of the deferred gain or loss. If two or more members acquire the same portion (which is greater than that acquired by any other members), the common parent shall select which such member shall be subject to the provisions of §1.1502-13(d), (e), and (f). For purposes of this section and §1.1502-13, a member which inherits the balance of the deferred gain or loss under this subparagraph (1) shall be treated as the selling member.

(2) Effective date. Paragraph (c)(1) of this section applies, and §1.1502-13(c)(6) does not apply, to acquisitions of assets by one or more members from another member in taxable years for which the due date (without extensions) of the income tax return is after April 14, 1988. (2) Effective date. Paragraph (f)(1) of this section applies, and §1.1502-13(f)(2)(ii)(a) does not apply, when the selling member or the member which owns the property ceases to be a member of the group in a taxable year for which the due date (without extensions) of the income tax return is after April 14, 1988. In the case of a transaction to which this paragraph (f) applies, a reference in this part to §1.1502-13(f) is treated as including a reference to this paragraph (f).

Par. 5. There is added immediately after §1.1502-14 a new §1.1502-14T to read as follows:

§1.1502-14T Treatment of distributing corporation (temporary).

(a) Deferral of gain or loss. To the extent gain or loss is recognized to the distributing corporation on a distribution described in §1.1502-14 (a) or (b) (including any amount which is treated as gain under sections 311, 336, 341(f)(2), 453B, 1245(a)(1) or 1250(a)(1)), such gain or loss shall be deferred by the distributing corporation. Such deferred gain or loss shall be taken into account by the distributing corporation at the time and in the manner specified in §1.1502-13(d), (e), and (f), as if such distributing corporation were a "selling member" and the distributee were a "purchasing member."

(b) Effective date. Paragraph (a) of this section applies, and §1.1502-14(c) does not apply, to distributions described in §1.1502-14 (a) or (b) that occur in taxable years for which the due date (without extensions) of the income tax return is after April 14, 1988. In the case of a transaction to which this section applies, a reference in this part to §1.1502-14(c) is treated as including a reference to this section.

The provisions contained in this Treasury Decision are needed to immediately amend the consolidated return regulations in response to amendments made by the section 10223 of the Revenue Act of 1987. It is therefore found impracticable and contrary to the public interest to issue this Treasury Decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

TITLE 25.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Consolidated Return Regulations—Adjustment on Disposition of Stock of Subsidiary

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations that add new §1.1502-32T to the consolidated return regulations. The temporary regulations supplement the adjustment under §1.1502-32(g) on the disposition by a member of stock of a subsidiary. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [page 933, this Bulletin].

EFFECTIVE DATE: These regulations are effective for stock of a subsidiary that ceases to be a member of an affiliated group filing a consolidated return during a taxable year of the group ending after November 30, 1987. A member may elect to apply the new rules to stock not otherwise covered by such rules if the stock is disposed of in a taxable year ending after November 30, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document adds temporary regulations §1.1502-32T to Part 1 of Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations. The temporary regulations added by this document will remain in effect until superseded by later temporary or final regulations relating to these matters.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

Section 1.1502-32(g) of the consolidated return regulations provides that when a subsidiary in a group filing a consolidated return leaves the group, members of the group owning stock in the subsidiary must reduce the basis of such stock by the excess of the net positive adjustments for all consolidated return years over the net negative adjustments for all consolidated return years. The reduction is made on the first day of the subsidiary's first separate return year, and it applies only to stock retained by members. Section 1.1502-32(g) also applies if a member that owns stock in a subsidiary leaves the group. The purpose of the reduction is to prevent artificial losses when the stock retained by the member is subsequently sold.

Members of a group filing a consolidated return are subject to the investment adjustment rules of §1.1502-32. These investment adjustment rules require that the basis of the stock of subsidiary members be increased to reflect undistributed earnings and profits and decreased upon the distribution of these earnings and profits. The effect of the investment adjustment rules is to ensure that the income and loss of members of a consolidated group are taken into account only once in computing the taxable income of the group. Without §1.1502-32(g), during a separate return year a subsidiary could distribute consolidated earnings and profits without the members making a corresponding reduction in the basis of their retained stock. Thus in separate return years, members would retain the high basis in the subsidiary's stock that they obtained through positive investment adjustments for earnings and profits during the consolidated years. Absent the §1.1502-32(g) reduction in basis, a separate return year distribution of the subsidiary's consolidated earnings and profits would set the stage for an artificial loss on the sale of the subsidiary's stock.

For example, assume that in 1986, corporation P forms subsidiary S with $100 capital. In 1986 and 1987, P and S file consolidated returns and S has earnings and profits of $200. On the last day of 1987, P's basis in the stock of S is $300 (due to the investment adjustment rules of §1.1502-32). On December 31, 1987, P sells one-half of its S stock to corporation X, a nonmember, for $150. P has no gain on this sale ($150 amount realized less $150 basis in one-half S stock). On January 1, 1988, P's basis in its remaining S stock is reduced by $100 under the provisions of §1.1502-32(g) (the portion of the $200 positive investment adjustment resulting from S's earnings that is attributable to P's remaining 50 percent stock ownership in S).

Absent §1.1502-32(g), S could create an artificial loss by distributing its $200 earnings and profits ($100 to P and $100 to X) on January 1, 1988. P would not be required to make a negative adjustment to its basis in its remaining S stock to reflect this distribution, since S would no longer be a member of the P group and therefore would not be subject to the investment adjustment rules of §1.1502-32. P's basis in the S stock it retained would remain $150, even though the value of the S stock held by P would be $50 following the distribution. Therefore, P could sell its remaining S stock for $50 and recognize a $100 loss on the sale.

Section 1.1502-32(g) prevents a distribution of consolidated earnings and profits by a subsidiary after disaffiliation from creating the potential for a subsequent artificial loss on the sale of the subsidiary's stock, by requiring a reduction in the basis of the stock at the time of disaffiliation. However, the reduction that §1.1502-32(g) requires may cause harsh results in certain situations because the basis adjustment occurs at the time of disaffiliation, whether or not dividend stripping subsequently occurs.

To avoid the effect of §1.1502-32(g), consolidated groups have utilized the deemed dividend provisions of §1.1502-32(f)(2). Under §1.1502-32(f)(2), a group may capitalize the earnings and profits of a subsidiary by treating the earnings and profits as distributed to the parent and immediately contributed by the parent to the capital of the subsidiary. After a deemed dividend, there generally is no net positive adjustment remaining in the stock of the subsidiary. Instead, the basis of the subsidiary's stock has been increased by the deemed capital contribution. There is no need to apply §1.1502-32(g), since there are no longer any earnings and profits in the subsidiary.

The deemed dividend, however, is available only to groups that own 100 percent of the subsidiary's stock on each day of its taxable year. Also, since a deemed dividend applies to the subsidiary's earnings and profits account as of the last day of the prior taxable year, it cannot be used to capitalize earnings and profits accumulated in the final consolidated return year. Groups that own subsidiaries with minority shareholders have used the consent dividend provisions of section 565 as a substitute for the deemed dividend provisions. Groups also have used the consent dividend to capitalize the earnings and profits of the subsidiary for its final consolidated return year. T.D. 8166, [page 254, this Bulletin] published December 15, 1987, restricts the use of consent dividends under section 565 to corporations that are subject to the accumulated earnings tax, personal holding companies, foreign personal holding companies, regulated investment companies, and real estate investment trusts. Because of the restrictions placed upon the use of consent dividends by T.D. 8166, most groups do not qualify to use consent dividends.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

The temporary regulations do not change the amount of the adjustment, and they continue to treat the portion of the adjustment in excess of the basis of the adjusted stock as immediately includible in income as income described in §1.1502-19(a). The temporary regulations, however, do not immediately reduce basis when a subsidiary (or a member that owns the subsidiary's stock) leaves the group. Instead, the basis reduction is deferred, generally until the subsidiary makes a distribution that would have cause a reduction in the basis of its stock had affiliation continued to exist.

The deferral of the basis reduction is accomplished through the establishment of a basis reduction account that applies to the stock of the subsidiary retained by the member. The basis reduction account also applies to any stock acquired by the member in exchange for the disaffiliated subsidiary's stock if the acquired stock has a substituted basis in the hands of the member. In addition, it continues to apply if the stock is transferred to another member. However, if the stock is transferred to a nonmember corporation that is related to the transferor corporation within the meaning of section 304, the basis of the stock is reduced, immediately before the transfer, by the amount of the basis reduction account, and the basis reduction account is eliminated. A special rule provides for the elimination of a basis reduction account when a nonmember whose stock is subject to the basis reduction account becomes a member.

An anti-duplication rule is provided to deal with cases where a distribution of earnings and profits would result in reductions in basis under both the temporary regulations and other provisions of the Code and regulations.

The regulations also provide that members owning stock of a subsidiary that ceased to be a member of the group in a taxable year ending on or before November 30, 1987, may elect to apply the new rules to stock disposed of in a taxable year of the group ending after November 30, 1987. Taxpayers that make this election must certify that they have the information necessary to determine these adjustments.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. The collection of information requirements contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB (Control number 1545-1046).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citations:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  §1.1502-32T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 1502.

Par. 2. Section 1.1502-32 is amended by adding paragraph (g)(4) to read as follows:

§1.1502-32 (Amended)

(g) ***

(4) For dispositions of stock in taxable years ending after November 30, 1987 see §1.1502-32T.

Par. 3. There is added immediately after §1.1502-32 a new §1.1502-32T to read as follows:

§1.1502-32T Investment adjustments (temporary)

(a) Adjustment on disposition—(1) Amount of adjustment. A member owning stock in a subsidiary shall determine the net basis increase in each share of such stock that the member owns on the first day of the first separate return year of the member or of the subsidiary, whichever occurs first. The net basis increase is the excess with respect to such share of—

(i) The net positive adjustments under §1.1502-32(e)(2) for all consolidated return years, over

(ii) The net negative adjustments under §1.1502-32(e)(1), plus any decreases under §1.1502-32(f)(1)(i), for all consolidated return years.

(2) Amount taxable. If the net basis increase with respect to a share exceeds the basis of the share, the amount of the excess shall, as of the day immediately preceding such first day, be included in the income of the member as income described in §1.1502-19(a).

(3) Basis reduction on distribution—(i) General rule. The amount of the net basis increase not included in income under paragraph (a)(2) is treated as a "basis reduction account." If subsequently there is a dividend distribution with respect to the share, the basis of the share is reduced under this section by the amount of the distribution, but only to the extent of the basis reduction account for that share. The basis reduction account is decreased by distributions to which the preceding sentence applies.

(ii) Anti-duplication rule; earnings and profits adjustments. Adjustments under paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section to the basis of a share for distributions shall not duplicate adjustments otherwise applicable to the same distributions, such as adjustments under §1.1502-32(b)(2)(iii) with respect to the consolidated return of another group. If the preceding sentence applies because of a reduction under §1.1502-32, the basis reduction account is decreased, except to the extent a distribution is attributable to earnings and profits earned after the establishment of the basis reduction account. Appropriate adjustments shall also be made with respect to the earnings and profits of each member.

(4) Special rules—(i) Nonmember becomes a member. If a nonmember whose stock is subject to a basis reduction account becomes a member of the group with respect to which the net basis increase under paragraph (a)(1) of this section was determined, the basis reduction account for the stock is eliminated.

(ii) Dispositions of stock subject to a basis reduction account—(A) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(4)(ii)(B) and (C) of this section, if stock subject to a basis reduction account is disposed of by a member, the basis reduction account is eliminated.

(B) Exchanges in substituted basis transactions. If a member exchanges stock subject to a basis reduction account for stock of another corporation, and the member's basis in the stock received in the exchange is determined in whole or in part by reference to the member's basis in the stock exchanged, the stock received becomes subject to the basis reduction account, and the rules of this section apply to the stock received as if it were the stock exchanged. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(F) shall be considered to result in an exchange.

(C) Transfers to members. Stock that is subject to a basis reduction account in the hands of a transferor member will continue to be subject to the basis reduction account in the hands of a transferee member.

(D) Reduction of basis in certain transactions. If stock that is subject to a basis reduction account is transferred to a nonmember, and the nonmember is controlled by the transferor within the meaning of section 304(c), the basis of the stock is reduced, immediately before the transfer, by the amount of the basis reduction account at that time and the basis reduction account is eliminated.

(iii) Exchange of member stock for nonmember stock creating a basis reduction account. If a member exchanges stock of a member subsidiary for stock of a nonmember, and the member's basis in the stock received in the exchange is determined in whole or in part by reference to the member's basis in the stock exchanged, then the stock of the nonmember shall be treated as becoming subject to this section as a result of the exchange, as if the member subsidiary had become a nonmember immediately before the exchange.

(5) Example. The following example illustrates the application of paragraph (a) of this section.

Example: (i) Corporation P forms corporation S with a capital contribution of $100. P and S file a consolidated return for 1987. S has $100 of earnings and profits for 1987, which increases P's basis in the S stock by $100. On January 1, 1988, X, the common parent of an unrelated group, buys all the stock of P, and P and S are included in the consolidated return of the X group for 1988. During 1988, S has earnings and profits of zero, and it distributes $10 to P. On January 1, 1989, P sells all of the stock of S to an unrelated purchaser.

(ii) Under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, P must determine its net basis increase in the stock of S as of the first day of P's or S's first separate return year. Under §1.1502-1(e), consolidated return years of the X group are separate return years of the P group, and the computation is therefore made as of January 1, 1988. The net basis increase is $100. Since this amount is less than $200, the basis of the stock, no amount is taxable under paragraph (a)(2) of this section. The basis of the S stock is not reduced under this section on January 1, 1988, but a basis reduction account is established under paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section in the amount of $100.

(iii) The $10 distribution by S is a distribution to which this section applies, since (from the standpoint of the former P group) it is a dividend distribution to a member with respect to stock of a subsidiary for which there is a basis reduction account. However, the distribution also results in a basis reduction in the stock of S under §1.1502-32(b)(2)(iii)(c), since (from the standpoint of the X group) it is a distribution of earnings and profits accumulated in separate return years of S. Under paragraph (a)(3)(ii) of this section, the reduction under paragraph (a)(3)(i) is not made, and since the distribution is not attributable to earnings and profits earned after the basis reduction account was established, the basis reduction account is decreased from $100 to $90.

(iv) P's basis for determining gain or loss on the sale of the S stock is $190. The remaining $90 basis reduction account in the stock is eliminated under paragraph (a)(4)(ii)(A) of this section as a result of P's sale of the stock.

(b) Effective date—(1) General Rule. Paragraph (a) of this section applies, and §1.1502-32(g) does not apply, to stock of a subsidiary that ceases to be a member of a group during a taxable year of the group ending after November 30, 1987.

(2) Election to apply paragraph (a). A member owning shares of stock of a subsidiary to which paragraph (a) of this section does not apply, may elect to have paragraph (a) and not §1.1502-32(g) apply to shares disposed of in a taxable year of the group ending after November 30, 1987. The election shall contain a certification that the member has the information necessary to determine the adjustments required by paragraph (a) of this section. The election is made by attaching a statement to the return of the member for the taxable year in which the stock is disposed of. To the extent that the basis of stock is increased pursuant to an election under this paragraph (b)(2), appropriate adjustments shall be made to the earnings and profits of each member for the taxable year in which the election is made and subsequent years to reflect such increase in basis and, as appropriate, adjustments later made to the basis reduction account.

The provisions contained in this Treasury Decision are needed to immediately amend the consolidated return regulations in response to the restrictions placed upon the use of consent dividends by temporary regulations under section 565. It is therefore found impracticable and contrary to the public interest to issue this Treasury Decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Lawrence B. Gibbs,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved March 14, 1988.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Chapter 11.—Estate Tax
Subchapter A.—Estates of Citizens or Residents
Part IV.—Taxable Estate

Section 2055.—Transfers For Public, Charitable, and Religious Uses

26 CFR 20.2055-2: Transfers not exclusively for charitable purposes.

Does a charitable "lead" annuity interest qualify as a guaranteed annuity interest if the trustee has the discretion to commute and prepay the charitable interest prior to the expiration of the specified term of the annuity. See Rev. Rul. 88-27, page 331.

Section 2056.—Bequests, Etc., to Surviving Spouse

26 CFR 20.2056(b)-4: Marital deduction; valuation of interest passing to surviving spouse.

Marital deduction; South Carolina; liability of residuary share for debts and expenses. For purposes of computing the marital deduction for residents of South Carolina dying after 1978, the surviving spouse's share of the residuary interest is reduced by the expenses and debts allocated by South Carolina law to such shares but is not reduced by state and federal death taxes. Rev. Rul. 78-419 obsolete for estates of decedents dying after 1978.

Rev. Rul. 88-12

ISSUE

If a resident of South Carolina dies after 1978 and the decedent's will contains no provision for the apportionment of debts, expenses, or death taxes, is the value of property interests bequeathed to the surviving spouse under the residuary clause of the will reduced by a portion of those debts, expenses and taxes for purposes of determining the amount of the deduction allowed under section 2056 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The decedent, D, a resident of South Carolina, died testate in 1982, survived by S, D's spouse, and A and B, D's children. The decedent's will contained specific and general bequests and a residuary clause. Under the residuary clause, D gave one-half of the residue to S and divided the remaining one-half evenly between A and B. Although D's will directed that the debts and administration expenses be paid promptly, it did not contain any provision for the apportionment among the beneficiaries of payment of debts, expenses, and any death taxes. Both federal and state death taxes were imposed on D's estate. The residuary bequest to S qualifies for the estate tax marital deduction under section 2056 of the Code.

In 1978, South Carolina amended its statute concerning the method of determining the value of the taxable estate for state estate tax purposes. The amended statute is effective for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1978. With respect to the apportionment of debts and expenses, the statute provides that, in the absence of a provision in a decedent's will to the contrary, in determining the net marital deduction allowable for South Carolina estate tax purposes in either an intestate situation or a testate situation involving a residuary share, the intestate or testate share passing to a surviving spouse shall be liable for, and charged with, a pro rata share of debts, funeral expenses, and expenses of administration. The amount charged against the spouse's share is the proportion that the value of the intestate share or the testate share of the residuary estate passing to a surviving spouse bears to the value of the total intestate estate or total residuary estate before reduction for debts and expenses. See S.C. Code Ann. sec. 12-15-60(1) (Law. Co-op. Supp. 1986).

Regarding the apportionment of state and federal death taxes, the statute was also amended to provide that, in the absence of a provision in the decedent's will to the contrary, the intestate share or testate share of the residuary estate passing to a surviving spouse will not be charged with any death taxes, state or federal, to the extent that the share qualifies for the statutory marital deduction. See S.C. Code Ann. supra, sec. 12-15-60(2).

The South Carolina estate tax law adopts by reference the deductions allowed for purposes of the federal estate tax including the marital deduction allowed under section 2056 of the Code. See S.C. Code Ann. supra, sec. 12-15-60.

In this situation, D's will made no provision for the apportionment of debts, expenses, and taxes. Therefore, pursuant to S.C. Code Ann. sec. 12-15-60, D's executor charged S's one-half share of the residue with one-half of the estate debts and expenses. Also pursuant to state law, S's share of the residue was not charged with any state or federal estate taxes. Accordingly, D's executor distributed to S, in satisfaction of S's residuary bequest, an amount equal to one-half of the residue less one-half of the estate debts and expenses. The executor deducted this amount as the marital deduction under state and federal law.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2001(a) of the Code imposes a tax on the transfer of the taxable estate of every decedent who is a citizen or resident of the United States.

Section 2056(a) of the Code provides that the value of the taxable estate shall be determined by deducting from the value of the gross estate an amount equal to the value of any interest in property which passes from the decedent to the decedent's surviving spouse. Section 2056(b)(4)(A) provides that in determining the value of any interest in property passing to the surviving spouse for the purpose of the deduction granted by section 2056(a), there shall be taken into account the effect that the federal estate tax imposed by section 2001 of the Code, or any other estate, succession, legacy or inheritance tax, has on the net value of such interest. Section 2056(b)(4)(B) provides that where the interest in property passing to the surviving spouse is encumbered in any manner or where the surviving spouse incurs any obligation imposed by the decedent with respect to the passing of such interest, the encumbrance or obligation must be taken into account in valuing the spouse's interest.

In ascertaining the net value of the interest passing to the surviving spouse for purposes of determining the allowable marital deduction, applicable state law is determinative of the extent to which federal and state death taxes and debts and expenses are chargeable against the spouse's interest. See Estate of Milliken v. Commissioner, 70 T.C. 883 (1978), acq., 1979-1 C.B. 1.

Since D was a resident of South Carolina and D's estate is administered in South Carolina, it is necessary to look to South Carolina law to determine whether the interests in property passing to S under the residuary clause are charged with a portion of the debts, expenses, and taxes of D's estate.

Rev. Rul. 78-419, 1978-2 C.B. 244, considers the application of South Carolina law, as in effect prior to the amendments discussed above, to a situation similar to that presented here. In Rev. Rul. 78-419, the surviving spouse was bequeathed a portion of the residuary estate and the will was silent regarding the apportionment of debts and expenses. The revenue ruling concludes that, under South Carolina law applicable prior to 1979, the surviving spouse's share of the residue was not chargeable with any estate debts and expenses, to the extent the spouse's interest qualified for the marital deduction under state and federal law. Accordingly, the amount passing to the surviving spouse, and consequently the allowable marital deduction, was based on the spouse's share of the residue without reduction for any debts and expenses.

However, under S.C. Code Ann. sec. 12-15-60, as currently in effect, the spouse's share of the residue is, under the circumstances presented here, chargeable with a pro rata share of estate debts and expenses but is not chargeable with any portion of the federal or state estate tax liability. Accordingly, since S was bequeathed one-half of the residue, D's executor properly determined the amount passing to S under state law by charging S's one-half share with one-half of the estate debts and expenses. Further, since S's residuary bequest qualified for the marital deduction under state and federal law, S's share was not reduced by any state or federal estate taxes. The amount of the allowable marital deduction under section 2056 was correctly determined based on the amount to S under applicable South Carolina law.

HOLDING

If a resident of South Carolina dies after 1978, and the decedent's will contains no provision for the apportionment of debts, expenses, or death taxes, then the value of the property interests passing to the surviving spouse under the residuary clause of the will is reduced by a pro rata portion of the estate debts and expenses, but not by any death taxes, for purposes of determining the amount of the marital deduction allowed under section 2056 of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 78-419 is obsoleted for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1978.

Chapter 12.—Gift Tax
Subchapter C.—Deductions

Section 2522.—Charitable And Similar Gifts

(Also Sections 170, 2055; 1.170A-6, 20.2055-2.)

Charitable transfers; "lead" annuity interest; guaranteed prepayment. A charitable "lead" interest does not qualify as a guaranteed annuity interest under section 2552(c)(2)(B) of the Code if the trustee has the discretion to commute and prepay the charitable interest prior to the expiration of the specified term of the annuity.

Rev. Rul. 88-27

ISSUE

Does a charitable "lead" annuity interest qualify as a guaranteed annuity interest under section 2522(c)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code if the trustee has the discretion to commute and prepay the charitable interest prior to the expiration of the specified term of the annuity?

FACTS

In 1986, A, the donor, transferred $1,000x to an irrevocable trust. The terms of the trust provide that an annuity of $60x per year is to be paid for a period of 10 years to X Charity, a corporation described in section 2522(a) of the Code. Upon the expiration of the 10 year period, the trust is to terminate and the remaining corpus is to be paid to A's child, B. Under the terms of the trust, the trustee is granted the discretion to use trust income or principal to commute and prepay the future annuity payments due X Charity. The trust instrument also provides that the prepayment amount shall be based on the discount rate and methodology used to calculate the present value of annuity payments under the Code and the Gift Tax Regulations in effect at the time of the prepayment.

Section 2522(a) of the Code provides, in part, that in computing taxable gifts, a deduction is allowed for the amount of all transfers to or for the use of a corporation organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes.

Section 2522(c)(2) of the Code provides, in part, that where a donor transfers an interest in property to or for a charitable purpose and an interest in the same property passes to or for a noncharitable use, then no deduction is allowed under section 2522(a) unless the charitable transfer is in certain prescribed forms.

Section 2522(c)(2)(B) of the Code provides, in part, that, in the case of a charitable "lead" interest (i.e., any interest, other than a remainder interest, transferred for the use described in section 2522(a)), the interest must be in the form of a guaranteed annuity.

Section 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi) (a) of the regulations, in part, defines a guaranteed annuity as an arrangement under which a determinable amount is paid, at least annually, for a specified term. An amount is determinable if the exact amount which must be paid under the conditions specified in the instrument of transfer can be ascertained as of the date of the gift. On the other hand, that subdivision of the regulations provides, by means of an example, that an amount is not determinable if the payments may be redetermined after the date of the gift by reference to a fluctuating index which cannot be determined as of the date of the gift.

The issue presented in this case is whether A's transfer to X Charity satisfies the definition of a guaranteed annuity.

Under section 2522(c)(2)(B) of the Code and section 25.2522(c)-3(c)(2)(vi)(a) of the regulations, a guaranteed annuity must, at least, satisfy the following two requirements: (1) the annuity must represent the right to receive periodic payments over a specified period of time, and (2) the exact amount payable under the annuity must be determinable as of the date of the gift.

Although the charitable annuity created by A provides for the payment to charity of $60x a year for 10 years, the charitable annuity sis subject to prepayment at the discretion of the trustee. The amount of any prepayment is determined on a commuted basis at a date subsequent to the date of transfer. Under these circumstances, the interest does not represent the right to receive periodic payments over a specified period of time because the number of payments will be a function of whether, and to what extent, the trustee decides to prepay the charitable annuity. Similarly, the exact amount payable cannot be determined as of the date of the gift because the amount of each payment will be dependent on whether the trustee decides to prepay.

Therefore, A's transfer to charity is not a guaranteed annuity interest within the meaning of section 2522(c)(2)(B) because the charity does not have the right to receive periodic payments over a specified term and the periodic payments that the charity is entitled to receive are not determinable in amount as of the date of the gift.

HOLDING

If the trustee has the discretion to commute and prepay the charitable "lead" annuity interest prior to the expiration of the specified term of the annuity, the interest does not qualify as a guaranteed annuity interest under section 2522(c)(2)(B) of the Code, and under section 2522(a), no deduction is allowed for the amount of the transfer to charity.

The result would be the same even if the trust instrument provided that the prepayment amount were to be calculated using the discount rate and methodology used to calculate the present value of annuity payments under the Code and regulations in effect on the date the annuity was established, because the exact amount payable to charity can not be determined as of the date of the gift.

Chapter 13.—Tax on Certain Generation-Skipping Transfers
Subchapter A.—Tax Imposed

Section 2601.—Tax Imposed

26 CFR 26.2601-1: Effective dates.

T.D. 8187

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER B, PART 26—GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER TAX REGULATIONS; PART 26a—TEMPORARY GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE TAX REFORM ACT OF 1976; PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Effective Date Rules and Return Requirements Relating to the Generation-Skipping Transfer Tax

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains amendments to the temporary and final regulations relating to the effective date provisions, return requirements, and certain special rules for the tax on generation-skipping transfers. This action is necessary because of changes to the applicable tax law made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2085). These regulations affect all persons making or receiving a generation-skipping transfer. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations cross-referenced in the notice of proposed rulemaking in  [page 925, this Bulletin].

DATES: These regulations apply to all generation-skipping transfers made after October 22, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document provides temporary generation-skipping transfer tax regulations under Chapter 13 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code), as added by section 1431 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the Act), concerning the effective date, return requirements, and certain special rules. The temporary regulations provided by this document will remain in effect until superseded by final regulations on this subject. By a separate notice of proposed rulemaking appearing elsewhere in  [page 925, this Bulletin], the regulations promulgated in this document are also proposed to be prescribed as final generation-skipping transfer tax regulations (26 CFR Part 26) under sections 2601 and 2662.

In General

Chapter 13, as amended by the Act, imposes a flat-rate tax on all noncharitable transfers of property that result in the avoidance of the estate or gift tax in one or more generations below that of the transferor. Certain exceptions to the generation-skipping transfer tax are provided for gifts excluded from tax under sections 2503(b) and (e), transfers covered by the $1,000,000 exemption as defined in section 2631, and direct transfers to grandchildren to the extent that the aggregate amount of such transfers does not exceed $2 million per grandchild ("the grandchild exclusion"). The latter exception applies only to transfers that occur before January 1, 1990. See sections 1433(b)(3) and 1433(d) of the Act and §26.2601-1(d) of these regulations.

Generation-skipping transfers are taxed at the applicable rate as defined in section 2641. This rate is equal to the product of the maximum Federal estate tax rate (55% for 1987-1992) and the inclusion ratio (as defined in section 2642(a)).

These regulations provide rules relating to the effective date provisions in section 1433 of the Act and return requirements. Because Congress is currently considering major technical revisions to Chapter 13, it was considered inappropriate to promulgate rules addressing other areas in the statute. After Congress has concluded its deliberations, substantive regulations, directed at issues where guidance is most needed, will be promulgated. The Internal Revenue Service requests comments identifying these issues. Additional comprehensive regulations will also be published in the future.

Effective Dates

The Chapter 13 tax as enacted in 1976 has been repealed, retroactive to June 11, 1976. Those persons who paid tax under the prior Chapter 13 are entitled to a refund or credit. The time and manner of filing a claim for such refund is provided in §26.2601-1(c)(2)(ii) of these regulations.

Chapter 13 of the Code, as added by the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, generally applies to inter vivos transfers occurring after September 25, 1985, and to all transfers occurring October 22, 1986. The generation-skipping transfer tax does not apply, however, to certain transfers under trusts that were irrevocable on September 25, 1985; transfers occurring under certain wills and revocable trusts executed before October 22, 1986; and certain transfers by a decedent if the decedent was under a mental disability on October 22, 1986. The effective date rules are set forth in section 1433 of the Act and §26.2601-1(b) of these regulations.

Special Rules

A direct skip is a transfer that is subject to estate or gift tax and that is made to a skip person (as defined in section 2613). Section 1433(b)(3) of the Act provides that the term "direct skip" shall not include any transfer before January 1, 1990, from a transferor to a grandchild of the transferor to the extent that the aggregate transfers from such transferor to such grandchild do not exceed $2,000,000 (the "grandchild exclusion").

These regulations do not provide rules for determining when a transfer in trust for the benefit of a grandchild will qualify for the grandchild exclusion because the issue is currently being considered by Congress. However, these regulations do provide guidance regarding the special election provided by section 1433(d) of the Act. That election allows a transferor to elect to treat certain inter vivos and testamentary contingent transfers in trust for the benefit of a grandchild as a direct transfer to the grandchild qualifying the transfers for the grandchild exclusion. The rules for this election are set forth in §26.2601-1(d).

Return Requirements

These regulations specify the time and manner in which a generation-skipping transfer must be reported to the Internal Revenue Service. The due date for a return depends upon the type of event that gives rise to liability for the tax. Generally, the person liable for the tax is required to file the return. In general, in the case of a direct skip (other than a direct skip from a trust), the transferor or the transferor's executor is liable for the tax and must make the return. In the case of a taxable termination or a direct skip from a trust, the trustee is liable for the tax and must make the return. In the case of a taxable distribution, the distributee is liable for the tax and must make the return. However, the regulations also set forth special return requirements for certain direct skips at death under trusts. The return requirement rules are set forth in §26.2662-1.

NEED FOR TEMPORARY REGULATIONS

There is need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury Decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. §533(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6) does not apply, and no regulatory flexibility analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis is therefore not required.

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. The requirements have been approved by OMB (control number 1545-0985).

(a) Transfers subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this section, the provisions of Chapter 13 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) apply to any generation-skipping transfer, as defined in section 2611, made after October 22, 1986.

(2) Certain transfers deemed made after October 22, 1986. For purposes of Chapter 13 and paragraph (a)(1) of this section, any inter vivos transfer that was—

(i) Subject to a tax imposed by Chapter 12, and

(ii) Made after September 25, 1985, and before October 23, 1986, shall be treated as if it were made on October 23, 1986. Where such inter vivos transfer was made to a trust, any subsequent distribution from such trust or termination of an interest in such trust that occurred before October 23, 1986, shall be treated as if the distribution from the trust or termination of interest in the trust occurred immediately after the deemed transfer on October 23, 1986. In the case of multiple transfers to, distributions from, and/or terminations with respect to a trust, all such events shall be treated as if they occurred on October 23, 1986, in the same order as they actually occurred. See paragraph (b)(1)(iv)(B) of this section for rules to determine the portion of such distributions and terminations subject to tax under Chapter 13. This paragraph (a)(2) shall not apply to transfers to trusts covered by the transition rules of paragraphs (b)(2) and (b)(3) of this section.

(b) Exceptions—(1) Irrevocable trusts—(i) In general. The provisions of Chapter 13 will not apply to any generation-skipping transfer under a trust (as defined in section 2652(b)) that was irrevocable on September 25, 1985. The rule of the preceding sentence does not apply to a portion of any generation-skipping transfer under an irrevocable trust where additions are made to the trust after September 25, 1985. See paragraph (b)(1)(iv) of this section for rules to determine the portion of such trust subject to the provisions of Chapter 13.

(ii) Irrevocable trust defined—(A) In general. Unless otherwise provided in either paragraph (b)(1)(ii)(B) or (b)(1)(ii)(C) of this section, any trust (as defined in section 2652(b)) in existence on September 25, 1985, will be considered an irrevocable trust.

(B) Property includible in estate under section 2038. A trust will not be considered an irrevocable trust to the extent that, on September 25, 1985, the settlor held a power with respect to such trust that would have caused the value of the trust to be included in the settlor's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes by reason of section 2038 (without regard to powers relinquished before September 25, 1985) if the settlor had died on September 25, 1985. A trust will be considered subject to a power on September 25, 1985, even though the exercise of the power was subject to the precedent giving of notice, or even though the exercise could take effect only on the expiration of a stated period, whether or not on or before September 25, 1985, notice had been given or the power had been exercised. A trust will not be considered subject to a power if the power is, by its terms, exercisable only on the occurrence of an event or contingency not subject to the settlor's control (other than the death of the settlor) and if the event or contingency had not in fact taken place on September 25, 1985.

(C) Property includible in estate under section 2042. A policy of insurance on an individual's life that is treated as a trust under section 2652(b) will not be considered an irrevocable trust to the extent that, on September 25, 1985, the insured possessed any incident of ownership (as defined in §20.2042-1(c)), that would have caused the value of the trust (i.e., the insurance proceeds) to be included in the insured's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes by reason of section 2042, if the insured had died on September 25, 1985.

Example (1). On September 25, 1985, S, the settlor of a trust that was created before September 25, 1985, held a testamentary power to add new beneficiaries to the trust. S held no other powers over any portion of the trust. The testamentary power held by S would have caused the trust to be included in S's gross estate under section 2038 if S had died on September 25, 1985. Therefore, the trust is not an irrevocable trust for purposes of this section.

Example (2). On September 25, 1985, W, the wife of the settlor of a trust in existence on that date, had an annual right to withdraw a portion of the corpus of such trust. The trust was otherwise irrevocable on that date. Because the power was not held by the settlor of the trust, it is not a power described in section 2038 of the Code. Thus, the trust is considered an irrevocable trust for purposes of this section.

Example (3). In 1984, A created a trust and retained the right to expand the class of remaindermen to include any of A's afterborn grandchildren. As of September 25, 1985, all of A's grandchildren, were named remaindermen of the trust. Since the exercise of A's power was dependent on there being afterborn grandchildren who were not members of the class of remaindermen, a contingency that did not exist on September 25, 1985, the trust is not considered subject to the power on September 25, 1985, and is an irrevocable trust for purposes of this section. The result is not changed even if grandchildren are born after September 25, 1985, whether or not A exercises his power to expand the class of remaindermen.

Example (4). On September 25, 1985, B purchased an insurance policy on her own life and designated her daughter, D, and granddaughter, GD, as the beneficiaries. B retained the power to obtain from the insurer a loan against the surrender value of the policy. B's insurance policy is a trust (as defined in section 2652(b)) for Chapter 13 purposes. This trust will not be considered an irrevocable trust because, on September 25, 1985, B possessed an incident of ownership that would have caused the value of the policy to be included in B's gross estate under section 2042 if B had died on that date.

Example (5). In 1984, S created a trust naming S's grandchildren as the income and remainder beneficiaries. S retained the power to revoke one-half of the value of the trust at any time prior to S's death. S retained no other powers over the trust corpus. S did not die before September 25, 1985, nor did S exercise or release the power before that date. The half of the trust not subject to S's power to revoke is considered to be irrevocable.

(iii) Trust containing qualified terminable interest property—(A) In general. For purposes of Chapter 13, a trust described in paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section that holds qualified terminable interest property by reason of an election under section 2056(b)(7) or section 2523(f) will be treated in the same manner as if the donor spouse had made an election under section 2652(a)(3). Thus, transfers from such trusts will not be subject to Chapter 13, and the donor spouse will be treated as the transferor of such property. See paragraph (b)(1)(v)(C) of this section for rules concerning the treatment of the trust when estate tax otherwise payable out of property in the trust is not paid out of such property.

(B) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (b)(1)(iii).

Example (1). On March 28, 1985, H established a trust. The trust instrument provided that the trustee must distribute all income annually to H's wife, W, during her life. Upon W's death the remainder is to be distributed to H and W's grandson, GS. H elected under section 2523(f) to treat the property in the trust as qualified terminable interest property. On December 1, 1987, W died and soon thereafter the trust assets were distributed to GS. Because the trust was irrevocable on September 25, 1985, the transfer to GS will not be subject to tax under Chapter 13. H will be treated as the transferor with respect to the transfer of the trust assets to GS in the same manner as if H had made an election under section 2652(a)(3) to reverse the effect of the section 2523(f) election for Chapter 13 purposes.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that the trust instrument provides that after W's death all income is to be paid annually to H and W's daughter, D. Upon D's death the remainder is to be distributed to GS. D dies on October 1, 1995, and soon thereafter the trust assets are distributed to GS. Because the trust was irrevocable on September 25, 1985, the termination of D's interest is not subject to Chapter 13.

(iv) Additions to irrevocable trusts—(A) In general. An addition made after September 25, 1985, to an irrevocable trust, which is excluded from Chapter 13 by reason of paragraph (b)(1) of this section, will subject a proportionate amount of distributions from, and terminations of interests in property held in, such trust to the provisions of Chapter 13. When an addition is made, the trust shall be deemed to consist of two portions, a portion not subject to Chapter 13 (the "non-Chapter 13 portion") and a portion subject to Chapter 13 (the "Chapter 13 portion"), each with a separate inclusion ratio (as defined in section 2642(a)). The non-Chapter 13 portion represents the value of the assets of the trust as it existed on September 25, 1985. The applicable fraction (as defined in section 2642(a)(2)) for the non-Chapter 13 portion is deemed to be 1 and the inclusion ratio for such portion is 0. The Chapter 13 portion of the trust represents the value of all additions made to the trust after September 25, 1985. The inclusion ratio for the Chapter 13 portion shall be determined under section 2642. This paragraph requires separate portions of one trust only for purposes of determining inclusion ratios. For purposes of Chapter 13, a constructive addition under paragraph (b)(1)(v) shall be treated as an addition. See paragraph (b)(4) for exceptions to the additions rule of this paragraph (b)(1)(iv).

(B) Terminations of interests in and distributions from trusts. Where a termination or distribution described in section 2612 occurs with respect to a trust to which an addition has been made, the portion of such termination or distribution allocable to the Chapter 13 portion is determined by reference to the allocation fraction, as defined in paragraph (b)(1)(iv)(C) of this section. In the case of a termination described in section 2612(a) with respect to a trust, the portion of such termination that is subject to Chapter 13 is the product of the allocation fraction and the value of the trust (to the extent of the terminated interest therein). In the case of a distribution described in section 2612(b) from a trust, the portion of such distribution that is subject to Chapter 13 is the product of the allocation fraction and the value of the property distributed.

(C) Allocation fraction—(1) In general. The "allocation fraction" is a fraction that allocates appreciation and accumulated income between the Chapter 13 and non-Chapter 13 portions of a trust. The numerator of the allocation fraction is the amount of the addition (valued as of the date the addition was made) determined without regard to whether or not any part of the transfer is subject to tax under Chapter 11 or Chapter 12. The denominator of the allocation fraction is the total value of the entire trust immediately after the addition. For purposes of this section, the phrase "total value of the entire trust" means the fair market value of the property held in trust (determined under the rules of section 2031) reduced by any amount attributable to the trust that is similar to an amount that would be allowable as a deduction under section 2053. Where there is more than one addition to corpus after September 25, 1985, the portion of the trust subject to Chapter 13 after each such addition will be determined pursuant to a revised fraction. In each case, the numerator of the revised fraction is the sum of—

(i) The value of that portion of the trust immediately before the latest addition that, because of prior additions, is subject to Chapter 13, and

(ii) The amount of the latest addition. The denominator of the revised fraction is the total value of the entire trust immediately after the addition. If the transfer to the trust is a generation-skipping transfer, the numerator and denominator shall be reduced by the amount of the generation-skipping transfer tax, if any, which is imposed by Chapter 13 on the transfer and actually recovered from the trust. The allocation fraction shall be rounded off to five decimal places (.00001).

(2) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (b)(1)(iv).

Example (1). On August 16, 1980, A established an irrevocable trust. Under the trust instrument, the trustee is required to distribute the entire income annually to A's child, C, for life, then to A's grandchild, GC, for life. Upon GC's death, the remainder is to be paid to GC's issue. On October 1, 1986, when the total value of the entire trust was $400,000, A transferred $100,000 to the trust. The allocation fraction is computed as follows:

Thus, immediately after the transfer, 20 percent of the value of future generation-skipping transfers under the trust will be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that immediately prior to the transfer on October 1, 1986, the fair market value of the individual assets in the trust totaled $400,000. Also assume that the trust had accrued and unpaid debts, expenses, and taxes totaling $300,000. Assume further that the entire $300,000 represented amounts that would be deductible under section 2053 if the trust were includible in a decedent's gross estate. Thus, the numerator of the allocation fraction is $100,000 and the denominator of the allocation fraction is $200,000 [($400,000 − $300,000) + $100,000]. Thus, the allocation fraction is .5 ($100,000/$200,000) and 50 percent of the value of future generation-skipping transfers will be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that on January 30, 1988, when the total value of the entire trust is $600,000, A transfers an additional $40,000 to the trust. Before the transfer, the value of the portion of the trust that was attributable to the prior addition was $120,000 [$600,000 × .2]. The new allocation fraction is computed as follows:

$$\frac{$120{,}000 + $40{,}000}{$600{,}000 + $40{,}000} = \frac{$160{,}000}{$640{,}000} = .25$$

Thus, immediately after the transfer, 25 percent of the value of future generation-skipping transfers under the trust will be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3) except that on March 1, 1989, when the value of the trust is $800,000, C dies. A generation-skipping transfer occurs at C's death because of the termination of C's life estate. Therefore, $200,000 [$800,000 × .25] is subject to tax under Chapter 13.

(v) Constructive additions—(A) In general. Except as provided below, where any portion of a trust remains in the trust after the release, exercise, or lapse of a power of appointment over that portion of the trust, and the release, exercise or lapse is treated to any extent as a taxable transfer under Chapter 11 or Chapter 12, the value of the entire portion of the trust subject to the power that was released, exercised, or lapsed will be treated as an addition to the trust. The creator of the power will be considered the transferor of the addition except to the extent that the release, exercise, or lapse of the power is treated as a taxable transfer under Chapter 11 or Chapter 12. In the latter case, the transferor for purposes of Chapter 11 or Chapter 12 is the transferor for purposes of Chapter 13.

(B) Special rule for certain powers of appointment. The release, exercise, or lapse of a power of appointment (other than a general power of appointment as defined in section 2041(b)) will not be treated as an addition to a trust if—

(1) Such power of appointment was created in an irrevocable trust that is not subject to Chapter 13 under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, and

(2) In the case of an exercise, such power of appointment is not exercised in a manner that may postpone or suspend the vesting, absolute ownership or power of alienation of an interest in property for a period, measured from the date of creation of the trust, extending beyond any life in being at the date of creation of the trust plus a period of 21 years. If a power is exercised by creating another power it will be deemed to be exercised to whatever extent the second power may be exercised.

(C) Constructive addition if liability is not paid out of trust corpus. Where a trust described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section is relieved of any liability properly payable out of the assets of such trust, the person or entity who actually satisfies the liability will be considered to have made a constructive addition to the trust in an amount equal to the liability. The constructive addition occurs when the trust is relieved of liability (i.e., when the right of recovery is no longer enforceable). For example, where an estate fails to exercise the right of recovery available under section 2207A for federal estate tax paid on the value of property includible in the estate under section 2044, the beneficiaries of the estate are considered to have added an amount equal to such federal estate tax attributable to such property to the trust at the time the right of recovery lapses.

(D) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (b)(1)(v).

Example (1). On June 19, 1980, H established an irrevocable trust with a corpus of $500,000. The trust instrument provides that the trustee shall distribute the entire income from the trust annually to H's wife, W, during her life. At W's death the remainder is to be distributed to H and W's grandson, GS. H also gave W a general power of appointment over one-half of the trust assets. On December 21, 1989, when the value of the trust corpus is $1,500,000, W dies without having exercised her general power of appointment. The value of one-half of the trust corpus, $750,000 [$1,500,000 × .5], is included in W's gross estate under section 2041(a) and is subject to tax under Chapter 11. Because the value of one-half of the trust corpus is subject to tax under Chapter 11 with respect to W's estate, W is treated as the transferor of that property for purposes of Chapter 13 (see section 2652(a)(1)(A)). For purposes of the generation-skipping transfer tax, the lapse of W's power of appointment is treated as if $750,000 [$1,500,000 × .5] had been distributed to W and then transferred back to the trust. Thus, W is considered to have added $750,000 0.5 × $1,500,000 at the date of her death. Because this constructive addition occurred after September 25, 1985, 50 percent of the corpus of the trust became subject to Chapter 13 at W's death.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that on October 1, 1985, when the trust assets were valued at $800,000, H added $200,000 to the trust. After the transfer on October 1, 1985, the allocation fraction was .2 [$200,000/$1,000,000]. On December 21, 1989, when the value of the trust corpus is $1,500,000, W dies without having exercised her general power of appointment. The lapse of W's general power of appointment is treated as if one-half of the corpus has been distributed to W and then transferred by W back to the trust. The value of the property in the trust immediately prior to the constructive addition (i.e., after the deemed distribution to W) would have been $750,000. Thus, after this constructive distribution and constructive addition the new allocation fraction is 0.6 [$900,000/$1,500,000]. The numerator of the fraction is the value of that portion of trust assets that were subject to Chapter 13 immediately prior to the addition (by reason of the first addition) $150,000 [0.2 × $750,000], plus the value of the constructive transfer, $750,000, which equals $900,000. The denominator of the fraction, $1,500,000, is the total value of the trust assets immediately after the transfer. Thus, 60 percent of the corpus of the trust became subject to Chapter 13.

Example (3). On September 25, 1985, B possessed a general power of appointment over the assets of an irrevocable trust that had been created by C in 1980. Under the terms of the trust, B's power lapsed on July 20, 1987. For federal gift tax purposes, B is treated as making a gift of ninety-five percent [100% − 5%] of the value of the corpus (see section 2514). However, because the entire trust was subject to the power of appointment, 100 percent (that portion of the trust subject to the power) of the assets of the trust are treated as a constructive addition. Thus, the entire amount of all generation-skipping transfers occurring pursuant to the trust instrument after July 20, 1987, will be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (4). On March 1, 1985, H established an irrevocable trust as defined in paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section. Under the terms of the trust instrument, the trustee is required to distribute the entire income annually to H's son, S, for life, then to H's grandchild, GS, for life. GS has the power to appoint any or all of the trust assets to Trust 2 which is an irrevocable trust (as defined in paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section) that was established on August 1, 1985. The terms of Trust 2's governing instrument provide that the trustee shall pay income to H's greatgrandson, GGS, for life. Upon GGS's death the remainder is to be paid to GGS's issue. GGS was alive on March 1, 1985, when Trust 1 was created. S died on April 1, 1986. On July 1, 1987, GS exercised the power of appointment. The exercise of GS's power will not subject future transfers pursuant to Trust 2 to tax under Chapter 13 because exercise of the power in favor of Trust 2 does not suspend the vesting, absolute ownership, or power of alienation of an interest in property for a period, measured from the date of creation of Trust 1, extending beyond any life in being at the date of creation of Trust 1 plus a period of 21 years.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (4) except that GS established Trust 2 on June 1, 1987. The exercise of GS's power will not cause future transfers pursuant to Trust 2's governing instrument to be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (5) except that GGS was born on March 28, 1986. The exercise of GS's power in favor of Trust 2 will cause the corpus of Trust 1 to be subject to Chapter 13, because GGS was not born until after the creation of Trust 1. Thus, such exercise may suspend the vesting, absolute ownership, or power of alienation of an interest in the trust corpus for a period, measured from the date of creation of Trust 1, extending beyond any life in being at the date of creation of Trust 1 plus a period of 21 years.

(vi) Appreciation and income. Except to the extent that the provisions of paragraphs (b)(iv) and (v) of this section allocate subsequent appreciation and accumulated income between the original trust and additions thereto, appreciation in the value of the trust and undistributed income added thereto will not be considered an addition to the corpus of a trust.

(2) Transition rule for wills or revocable trusts executed before October 22, 1986—(i) In general. The provisions of Chapter 13 will not apply to any generation-skipping transfer under a will or revocable trust executed before October 22, 1986, provided that—

(A) The document in existence on October 21, 1986, was not amended at any time after October 21, 1986, in any respect which results in the creation of, or an increase in the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer,

(B) In the case of a revocable trust, no addition was made to the revocable trust after October 21, 1986, which results in the creation of, or an increase in the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer, and

(C) The decedent died before January 1, 1987.

(ii) Revocable trust defined. For purposes of this section, the term "revocable trust" means any trust (as defined in section 2652(b)) except to the extent that, on October 22, 1986, the trust—

(A) Was an irrevocable trust described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section, or

(B) Would have been an irrevocable trust described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section had it not been created or become irrevocable after September 25, 1985, and before October 22, 1986.

(iii) Will or revocable trust containing qualified terminable interest property. The rules contained in paragraph (b)(1)(iii) of this section shall apply to any will or revocable trust covered by the transition rule of this paragraph (b)(2).

(iv) Amendments to will or revocable trust. For purposes of this section, an amendment to a will or a revocable trust in existence on October 21, 1986, will not be considered to result in the creation of, or an increase in the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer where the amendment is—

(A) Basically administrative or clarifying in nature and only incidentally increases the amount transferred, or

(B) Designed to ensure that an existing bequest or transfer qualifies for the applicable marital or charitable deduction for estate, gift, or generation-skipping transfer tax purposes and only incidentally increases the amount transferred to a skip person.

For purposes of determining whether a particular amendment to a will or revocable trust creates, or increases the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer, the effect of the instrument(s) in existence on October 21, 1986, will be measured against the effect of the instrument(s) in existence on the date of death of the decedent or on the date of any prior generation-skipping transfer. If the effect of an amendment cannot be immediately determined, it will be deemed to create, or increase the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer until a determination can be made.

(v) Additions to revocable trusts. Except as provided below, any addition made after October 21, 1986, but before the death of the settlor, to a revocable trust will subject all subsequent generation-skipping transfers under the trust to the provisions of Chapter 13. All additions made to a revocable trust after the death of the settlor (if the settlor dies before January 1, 1987) will be treated as additions to an irrevocable trust. See §26.2601-1(b)(1)(v) for rules involving constructive additions to trusts. See §26.2601-1(b)(1)(v)(B) for rules providing that certain transfers to trusts will not be treated as additions for purposes of this section.

(vi) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of paragraph (b)(2)(iv) of this section. In the following examples, assume that the testator dies on December 31, 1986.

Example (1). On November 1, 1986, A executes a codicil to a will that was in existence on October 21, 1986, removing one of the co-executors named in the will. Although the codicil may have the effect of lowering administrative costs and thus increasing the amount transferred, it will be considered administrative in nature and thus it will not cause generation-skipping transfers under the will to be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (2). On November 1, 1986, B executes a codicil to his will that was in existence on October 21, 1986, revoking a bequest of $100,000 to C, a non-skip person (as defined under section 2613(b)) and causing that amount to be added to a residuary trust containing generation-skipping provisions. Such an amendment will be deemed to increase a generation-skipping transfer and will prevent any transfers under the will from qualifying under paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section. If, however, C dies before B and under local law the property would have been added to the residue in any event because the bequest would have lapsed, the codicil will not be considered an amendment that increases a generation-skipping transfer.

Example (3). On October 21, 1986, D's will provided that an amount equal to the maximum allowable marital deduction would pass to D's spouse with the residue of the estate passing to a trust established for the benefit of skip persons. On October 23, 1986, the will is amended to provide that the marital share passing to D's spouse shall be the lesser of the maximum allowable marital deduction or the minimum amount which will result in no estate tax liability for D's estate. The amendment may increase the amount of a generation-skipping transfer. Therefore any generation-skipping transfers under the will will be subject to tax under Chapter 13. If it becomes apparent that the amendment did not increase the amount of a generation-skipping transfer, a claim for refund may be filed with respect to any generation-skipping transfer tax that was paid within the period set out in section 6511.

Example (4). On October 21, 1986, C's will provided for the creation upon C's death of two trusts for the benefit of skip persons. On November 1, 1986, C executed a codicil to the will specifically increasing the amount of a generation-skipping transfer under the will. All transfers made pursuant to the will or either of the trusts created thereunder are precluded from qualifying under the transition rule of paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section and are therefore subject to tax under Chapter 13.

Example (5). Assume that C in example (4) later executed a second codicil deleting the increase to the generation-skipping transfer. Because the provision increasing a generation-skipping transfer did not become effective it will not be considered an amendment to a will in existence on October 22, 1986.

Example (6). Prior to October 22, 1986, S created a trust in which S retained the power to revoke the transfer at any time prior to S's death. The trust provided that upon the death of S the income was to be paid to S's spouse, W, for life and then to S's nephews A, B, and C in equal shares for life, with one-third of the corpus to be distributed per stirpes to each nephew's surviving issue upon the death of the nephew. A became disabled and S modified the trust on December 1, 1986, to increase A's share of the income. Since the amendment did not result in the creation of, or increase in the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer, transfers pursuant to the trust will not be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (7). Assume the same facts as in example (6) except that A, B, and C are skip persons (as defined in section 2613). S's amendment of the trust increasing A's share of the income will subject the trust to the provisions of Chapter 13 because the amendment increases the amount of a generation-skipping transfer.

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (7) except that S's amendment of the trust adds S's grandchild, D, as an income beneficiary. The trust will be subject to the provisions of Chapter 13 because this amendment creates a generation-skipping transfer.

Example (9). Assume the same facts as in example (6) except that the amendment adds S's brother, B, as a beneficiary. B's issue are to take a one-fourth share of the corpus per stirpes upon B's death. Because the distribution to be made upon B's death may involve skip persons, the amendment will be considered an amendment that creates or increases a generation-skipping transfer until a determination can be made. Accordingly, all distributions from and terminations of interests in such trust shall be subject to Chapter 13 until it is determined that no skip person has been added to the trust. At that time a claim for refund may be filed within the period set out in section 6511 with respect to any generation-skipping transfer tax that was paid.

(3) Transition rule in the case of mental incompetency—(i) In general. Where an individual was, on October 22, 1986, under a mental disability to change the disposition of his or her property and did not regain his or her competence to dispose of such property before the date of his or her death, the provisions of Chapter 13 shall not apply to any generation-skipping transfer—

(A) Under a trust (as defined in section 2652(b)) to the extent such trust consists of property, or the proceeds of property, the value of which was included in the gross estate of the individual (other than property transferred by or on behalf the individual during his life after October 22, 1986), or

(B) Which is a direct skip that occurs by reason of the death of the decedent.

(ii) Mental disability defined. For purposes of this section, the term "mental disability" means mental incompetence to execute an instrument governing the disposition of the decedent's property, whether or not there was an adjudication of incompetence and whether or not there has been an appointment of a guardian, fiduciary, or other person charged with either the care of the decedent or the care of the decedent's property.

(iii) Decedent who has not been adjudged mentally incompetent. If the decedent has not been adjudged mentally incompetent by a court, the executor must file, with Form 706, either—

(A) A certification from a qualified physician stating that the decedent was mentally incompetent at all times on and after October 22, 1986, and did not regain competence to modify or revoke the terms of the trust or will prior to his or her death, or

(B) Sufficient other evidence demonstrating that the decedent was mentally incompetent at all times on and after October 22, 1986, as well as a statement explaining why no certification is available from a physician.

(iv) Decedent who has been adjudged mentally incompetent. If the decedent has been adjudged mentally incompetent, a copy of the judgment or decree, and any modification thereof, must be filed with the Form 706.

(v) Rule applies even if another person has power to change trust terms. In the case of a transfer from a trust, this paragraph (b)(3) shall apply even though a person charged with the care of the decedent or the decedent's property has the power to revoke or modify the terms of the trust, provided that the power is not exercised after October 22, 1986, in a manner that creates, or increases the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer. See paragraph (b)(2)(iv) of this section for rules concerning amendments that create or increase the amount of a generation-skipping transfer.

(4) Exceptions to additions rule. (i) In general. Any addition to a trust made pursuant to an instrument or arrangement covered by the transition rules in paragraphs (b)(2) or (b)(3) will not be treated as an addition for purposes of this section. Moreover, any property transferred inter vivos to a trust will not be treated as an addition if the same property would have been added to the trust pursuant to an instrument covered by the transition rules in paragraphs (b)(2) or (b)(3) of this section.

(ii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section.

Example (1). On December 31, 1980, A created an irrevocable trust having a corpus of $100,000. Under the terms of the trust, the corpus was to be held for the benefit of A's grandchild, GC. Pursuant to the terms of A's will, a document entitled to relief under the transition rule of paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the residue of the estate was paid to the trust. Because the addition to the trust was paid pursuant to the terms of an instrument (A's will) which was not subject to the provisions of Chapter 13 because of paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the payment to the trust is not considered an addition to the corpus of the trust. Thus, future distributions to or for the benefit of GC, will not be subject to the provisions of Chapter 13.

Example (2). H is the grantor of a trust which was irrevocable on September 25, 1985. H's will, which was executed before October 22, 1986, and not amended thereafter, provides that upon his death the entire estate will pour over into his trust. On October 1, 1985, H transfers $100,000 to the trust. While H's will otherwise qualifies for relief under the transition rule in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the transition rule is not applicable unless A dies prior to January 1, 1987. Thus, if H dies after December 31, 1986, the transfer will be treated as an addition to the trust for purposes of any distribution made from the trust after the transfer to the trust on October 1, 1985. If H dies before January 1, 1987, the entire trust (as well as any distributions from or terminations of interests in the trust prior to his death) will be excluded, under paragraphs (b)(2) of this section, from Chapter 13 because the $100,000 would have been added to the trust under a will which would have qualified under paragraph (b)(2) of this section. In either case, for any generation-skipping transfers made after the transfer to the trust on October 1, 1985, but before H's death, the $100,000 will be treated as an addition to the trust and a proportionate amount of the trust will be subject to Chapter 13.

Example (3). H and W are the settlors of separate revocable trusts with equal values. Both trusts were established for the benefit of skip persons (as defined in section 2613). W dies on December 1, 1985, and under the provisions of her trust the corpus pours over into H's trust. If H dies before January 1, 1987, the entire trust is excluded under paragraph (b)(2) of this section from the operation of Chapter 13. If H dies after December 31, 1986, the entire trust is subject to the generation-skipping transfer tax provisions because H's trust is not a trust described in paragraph (b)(1) or (b)(2) of this section. In the latter case, the fact that W died before January 1, 1987, is irrelevant because the corpus of her trust was added to a trust that never qualified under the transition rules of paragraph (b)(1) or (b)(2) of this section.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3) except that upon the death of W on December 1, 1985, her trust continues as an irrevocable trust and that the corpus of H's trust is to be paid over upon his death to W's trust. Again, if H dies before January 1, 1987, W's entire trust falls within the provisions of paragraph (b)(1) of this section. However, if H dies after December 31, 1986, the "pour-over" is considered an addition to the trust. Therefore, W's trust is not a trust excluded under paragraph (b)(2) because an addition is made to the trust.

Example (5). A, the spouse of the settlor of an irrevocable trust that was created in 1980, had, on September 25, 1985, a general power of appointment over the trust assets. The trust provides that should A fail to exercise the power of appointment the property is to remain in the trust. On October 21, 1986, A executed a will under which A failed to exercise the power of appointment. If A dies before January 1, 1987, without having exercised the power in a manner which results in the creation of, or increase in the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer (or amended the will in a manner that results in the creation of, or increase in the amount of, a generation-skipping transfer), transfers pursuant to the trust or the will will not be subject to Chapter 13 because the trust is an irrevocable trust and the will qualifies under paragraph (b)(2) of this section.

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (5) except that on October 22, 1986, A did not have a will. Upon A's death, or upon the prior exercise or release of the power, the value of the entire trust will be treated as having been distributed to A, and A will be treated as having made an addition to the trust in the amount of the entire corpus. All subsequent distributions or terminations pursuant to the trust will be subject to Chapter 13. It is immaterial whether A's death occurs before January 1, 1987, since paragraph (b)(2) of this section is only applicable where a will or revocable trust was executed before October 22, 1986.

(c) Transfers before October 22, 1986—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, transfers before October 22, 1986, are not subject to generation-skipping transfer tax. In the case of any tax imposed by Chapter 13 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as in effect on October 31 1986), such tax (including interest, additions to tax, and additional amounts) will not be assessed and if assessed, the assessment will be abated, and if collected, will be credited or refunded (with interest) as an overpayment, upon filing of a claim for credit or refund.

(2) Refunds of overpayments—(i) Waiver of statute of limitations. Except as provided below, a refund or credit of any payment of tax referred to in paragraph (c)(1) of this section shall be allowed without regard to whether, at any time before October 22, 1987, such refund or credit is barred by law.

(ii) Time and manner in which a claim for a credit or refund must be filed. A claim for a refund or credit, that would otherwise be barred by the statute of limitations but for paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section, must be filed on or before the later of October 22, 1987, or the expiration of the period for filing a claim set out in section 6511 and the regulations thereunder. To claim a refund, Form 843 must be filed in accordance with the instructions thereto.

(d) $2,000,000 grandchild exclusion—(1) In general. For purposes of this chapter, the term "direct skip" shall not include any transfer before January 1, 1990, from a transferor to a grandchild of the transferor to the extent the aggregate transfers from such transferor to such grandchild do not exceed $2,000,000. For purposes of the preceding sentence, section 2612(c)(2) shall not apply in determining whether an individual is a grandchild of the transferor.

(2) Treatment of transfers in trust. [RESERVED]

(3) Election for certain contingent transfers—(i) In general. A transferor may elect to treat certain transfers in trust for the benefit of the transferor's grandchild as a direct skip to a grandchild thereby qualifying it for the $2,000,000 grandchild exclusion as defined in this paragraph (d). The election is available only to the extent that the transfer occurred before October 22, 1986, and would be a transfer that would qualify for the $2,000,000 grandchild exclusion except for the fact that the trust instrument provides that, if the grandchild dies before vesting of the interest transferred as defined in paragraph (d)(3)(ii) of this section, the interest passes to any person other than the grandchild's estate. This election is available only if during the life of the grandchild, no portion of the corpus or income of the trust may be distributed to (or for the benefit of) any person other than such grandchild. This election is not available if the trust has more than one grandchild as a beneficiary. If a transferor makes an election under this paragraph (d)(3) with respect to a transfer, such transfer shall be subject to federal estate tax on the grandchild's death in the same manner as if the contingent gift over had been to the grandchild's estate. If all or a portion of a transferor's generation-skipping transfer exemption was previously allocated to property with respect to which a valid election is made under this paragraph (d)(3), such allocation will be deemed to be ineffective without regard to section 2631(b). In addition, if a transferor paid tax imposed by Chapter 13 on the transfer of property with respect to which a valid election is made under this paragraph (d)(3), such transferor may obtain a refund of such tax by filing Form 843 on or before June 13, 1988. The election once maid is irrevocable.

(ii) Vesting defined. For purposes of this paragraph (d)(3), an interest in property is vested only if the entire value of the transferred property in which such interest is held will be includible in the grandchild's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes.

(iii) Manner of election. The election described in this paragraph (d)(3) is made by attaching a notice of election to a Form 709 filed with the appropriate district office of the Internal Revenue Service within the time set out in paragraph (d)(3)(v) of this section. The notice of election must be signed by both the grandchild (or the grandchild's guardian) and the holders of the contingent gift over (or their authorized representative) and must contain an agreement that:

(A) The property subject to the election or the proceeds thereof, together with any accumulated income therefrom, will be included in the grandchild's estate for federal estate tax purposes even if it is not otherwise includible in such grandchild's estate, and

(B) The estate of the grandchild will have the right of recovery described in paragraph (d)(3)(vi) of this section.

(iv) Information to be included in the election—

(A) The notice of election shall also contain the following information:

(1) A statement describing the grandchild's right of recovery under paragraph (d)(3)(vi) of this section;

(2) The transferor's name and taxpayer identification number as they appear on the generation-skipping transfer tax return;

(3) The trust's taxpayer identification number and a copy of the trust instrument;

(4) The name, address, and taxpayer identification number of all trust beneficiaries including the holders of the contingent gift over;

(5) The transferor's adjusted basis of the transferred property;

(6) The date of the transfer;

(7) The fair market value of the property at the date of the transfer;

(8) A detailed description of the transferred property;

(B) For real estate provide:

(1) A legal description of each parcel;

(2) The street number, name, and the area if the property is located in a city; and

(3) A short statement of improvements made to the property;

(C) For bonds, provide:

(1) The number of bonds transferred;

(2) The name of obligor;

(3) The date of maturity;

(4) The rate of interest;

(5) The date or dates when interest is payable;

(6) The series number if there is more than one issue; and

(7) The CUSIP number, if available. The CUSIP number is a nine digit number assigned by the American Banking Association to traded securities.

(D) For stocks provide:

(1) The number in shares;

(2) The exact name of the corporation;

(3) Whether the stock is common or preferred;

(4) The issue and par value;

(5) The location of the principal business office, the State in which incorporated, and the date of incorporation, if unlisted;

(6) The principal exchange where sold, if listed and

(7) The CUSIP number, is available. The CUSIP number is a nine digit number assigned by the American Banking Association to traded securities.

For interests in property based on the length of a person's life, provide the date of birth of the person. For life insurance policies, provide the name of the insurer and the policy number.

(v) Time for election. The election provided by this paragraph (d)(3) must be made on or before June 13, 1988.

(vi) Right of recovery in grandchild's estate—(A) In general. The election must contain an agreement granting the grandchild's estate the right to recover the estate tax (including penalties and interest thereon) attributable to the value of property included in the gross estate solely by reason of an election under this paragraph (d)(3) from the person or persons to whom the property is transferred. The amount of estate tax attributable to such property is the amount by which the total tax under Chapter 11 which has been paid, exceeds the total tax under chapter 11 which would have been payable if the value of such property had not been included in the gross estate. Nothing herein should be construed to prohibit the grandchild from directing his executor not to pursue the right to recovery otherwise available under the terms of the agreement.

(B) More than one recipient of property. For purposes of this paragraph (d)(3), if there is more than one contingent beneficiary of the property, the agreement may provide that the right of recovery shall apply jointly to all such beneficiaries or it may provide that the estate tax liability be apportioned among such persons according to the relative values of their interests at the time of the inclusion. However, the agreement must provide that the right of recovery shall be against each such contingent beneficiary.

(vii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (d)(3). Assume in each example that the trust satisfies all requirements for the $2,000,000 grandchild exclusion except as set forth below and that all requirements of the election under this paragraph (d)(3) are satisfied.

Example (1). On September 16, 1986, A established a trust and funded it with $1,000,000. The trust instrument provides that the trust assets shall be transferred to A's grandson, GS, when he attains the age of 30, but if he dies before reaching 30, the assets shall be distributed to GS's heirs. GS is 10 years old at the time of the transfer. The transfer does not qualify for the $2,000,000 grandchild exclusion under paragraph (d)(1) of this section. On April 1, 1987, A elects under this paragraph (d)(3) to treat the transfer as a direct skip to GS. Assuming A's aggregate transfers to GS, up to and including this transfer, do not exceed $2,000,000, the transfer is not subject to tax under Chapter 13.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that GS dies intestate on March 1, 1988, and GS's mother and father receive the property as GS's heirs. Because of the agreement contained in the notice of election, the property in the trust will be subject to federal estate tax in GS's gross estate in the same manner as if the contingent gift over had been to GS's estate. GS's executor will have a right of recovery against GS's mother and father for the estate taxes attributable to property included in GS's gross estate.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that the trust instrument provides for payments of income to GS for life, with the remainder to A's greatgrandson, GGS. A is not eligible to make the election under this paragraph (d)(3) because, under the terms of the trust instrument, there is not a contingent gift over.

§26.2662-1 Generation-skipping transfer tax return requirements.

(a) In general. Chapter 13 imposes a tax on generation-skipping transfers (as defined in section 2611). The requirements relating to the return of tax depend on the type of generation-skipping transfer involved. This section contains rules for filing the required tax return. Paragraph (c)(2) of this section provides special rules concerning the return requirements for generation-skipping transfers pursuant to certain trust arrangements (as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section) such as life insurance policies and annuities.

(b) Form of return—(1) Taxable distributions. Form 706GS (D) must be filed in accordance with its instructions for any taxable distribution (as defined in section 2612(b)). The trust involved in a transfer described in the preceding sentence must file Form 706GS(D-1) in accordance with its instruction. A copy of Form 706GS(D-1) shall be sent to each distributee.

(2) Taxable terminations. Form 706GS(T) must be filed in accordance with its instructions for any taxable termination (as defined in section 2612).

(3) Direct skip—(i) Inter vivos direct skips. Form 709 must be filed in accordance with its instructions for any direct skip that is subject to a tax imposed by Chapter 12 and occurs during the life of the transferor.

(ii) Direct skips occurring at death—(A) In general. Form 706 must be filed in accordance with its instructions for any direct skips that are subject to a tax imposed by Chapter 11 and occur at the death of the decedent.

(B) Direct skips payable from a trust. Schedule R-1 of Form 706 must be filed in accordance with its instructions for any direct skip from a trust if such direct skip is subject to a tax imposed by Chapter 11. See paragraph (c)(2) of this section for special rules relating to the person liable for tax and required to make the return under certain circumstances.

(c) Person liable for tax and required to make return—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this section, the following person is liable for the tax imposed by section 2601 and must make the required tax return—

(i) The transferee in a taxable distribution (as defined in section 2612(b)),

(ii) The trustee in the case of a taxable termination (as defined in section 2612(a)),

(iii) The transferor (as defined in section 2652(a)(1)(B)) in the case of an inter vivos direct skip (as defined in section 2612(c)),

(iv) The trustee in the case of a direct skip from a trust or with respect to property that continues to be held in trust, or

(v) The executor in the case of a direct skip (other than a direct skip described in paragraph (c)(1)(iv) of this section) if the transfer is subject to a tax imposed by Chapter 11. See paragraph (c)(2) of this section for special rules relating to direct skips to or from certain trust arrangements (as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section).

(2) Special rule for direct skips occurring at death with respect to property held in trust arrangements—(i) In general. In the case of certain property held in a trust arrangement (as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section) at the transferor's date of death, the person who is required to make the return and who is liable for the tax imposed by Chapter 13 is determined under paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section.

(ii) Trust arrangement defined. For purposes of this §26.2662-1, the term "trust arrangement" includes any arrangement (other than an estate) which, although not an explicit trust, has the same effect as an explicit trust. For purposes of this §26.2662-1, the term "explicit trust" means a trust described in §301.7701-4(a).

(iii) Executor liable if transfer less than $100,000. In any case of a direct skip occurring at death, the executor of the decedent's estate shall be liable for the tax imposed on that direct skip by Chapter 13 and is required to file Form 706 (and not Schedule R-1 of Form 706) if, at the date of the decedent's death,—

(A) The property involved in the direct skip is held in a trust arrangement, and

(B) The total value of the property involved in direct skips with respect to the trustee of that trust arrangement is less than $100,000.

In cases where the rule of this paragraph (c)(2)(iii) imposes liability for the generation-skipping transfer tax on the executor, the executor shall be entitled to recover, from the trustee (if the property continues to be held in trust) or from the recipient of the property (in the case of a transfer from a trust), the generation-skipping transfer tax attributable to the transfer.

(iv) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (c)(2).

Example (1). On August 1, 1988, A, the insured under an insurance policy, died. The proceeds ($95,000) were includible in A's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes. A's grandchild GC, was named the sole beneficiary of the policy. The insurance policy is treated as a trust under section 2652(b)(1), and the payment of the proceeds to GS is a transfer "from a trust" for purposes of Chapter 13. Therefore, the payment of the proceeds to GS is a direct skip. Since the proceeds from the policy ($95,000) are less than $100,000, the executor is liable for the tax imposed by Chapter 13 and is required to file Form 706.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that A is the insured under two insurance policies issued by the same insurance company. The proceeds ($75,000) from each policy were includible in A's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes. A's grandson, GS, was named the sole beneficiary of Policy 1 and A's granddaughter, GD was named the sole beneficiary of Policy 2. GS and GD are skip persons (as defined in section 2613). Therefore, the payments of the proceeds are direct skips. Since the total value of the policies ($150,000) exceeds $100,000, the insurance company is liable for the tax imposed by Chapter 13 and is required to file Schedule R-1 of Form 706.

Example (3). On August 1, 1988, A, the insured under an insurance policy, dies. The policy provides that the insurance company shall make monthly payments of $750 to GC, A's grandchild, for life with the remainder payable to A's greatgrandchild, GGC. The face value of the policy is $110,000. Since the proceeds will continue to be held by the insurance company (the trustee), the proceeds are treated as if they were transferred to a trust for purposes of Chapter 13. The trust is a skip person (as defined in section 2613(a)(2)) and the transfer is a direct skip. Since the total value of the policy ($110,000) exceeds $100,000, the insurance company is liable for the tax imposed by Chapter 13 and is required to file Schedule R-1 of Form 706.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3) except that the policy provides that the insurance company shall make monthly payments of $500 to GC and that the face value of the policy is $95,000. The transfer is a transfer to a trust for purposes of Chapter 13. However, since the total value of the policy ($95,000) is less than $100,000, the executor is liable for the tax imposed by Chapter 13 and is required to file Form 706.

(3) Limitation on personal liability of trustee. A trustee shall not be personally liable for any increases in the tax imposed by section 2601 which is attributable to the fact that—

(i) A transfer was made to the trust during the life of the transferor for which a gift tax return was not filed, or

(ii) The inclusion ratio with respect to the trust, determined by reference to the transferor's gift tax return, is erroneous, the actual inclusion ratio being greater.

This paragraph (c)(3) shall not apply if the trustee has or is deemed to have knowledge of facts sufficient to reasonably conclude that a gift tax return was required to be filed or that the inclusion ratio was erroneous. A trustee will be deemed to have knowledge of such facts if the trustee's agent, employee, partner, or co-trustee has knowledge of such facts.

(4) Exceptions—(i) Minors. Where a distributee who is a minor is otherwise required to make a return, the return may be made for the minor by the minor's guardian or, if no guardian has been appointed, by a person charged with the care of the minor's person or property.

(ii) Returns made by fiduciaries. See section 6012(b) and the regulations thereunder for a fiduciary's responsibilities regarding the returns of decedents, returns of persons under a disability, returns of estates and trusts, and returns made by joint fiduciaries.

(d) Time and manner of filing return—(1) In general. Forms 706, 706GS(D), 706GS(D-1), 706GS(T), 709, and Schedule R-1 of Form 706 must be filed with the Internal Revenue Service office with which an estate or gift tax return of the transferor must be filed. The return shall be filed—

(i) In the case of a direct skip, on or before the date on which an estate or gift tax return is required to be filed with respect to the transfer (see section 6075(b)(3)), and

(ii) In all other cases, on or before the 15th day of the 4th month after the close of the calendar year in which such transfer occurs.

(2) Exceptions—(i) Inter vivos direct skips made after September 25, 1985, and on or before October 22, 1986. The return with respect to the tax imposed by Chapter 13 on any inter vivos direct skip after September 25, 1985, and on or before October 22, 1986, must be filed on or before June 13, 1988.

(ii) Taxable distributions and taxable terminations occurring after September 25, 1985, and before January 1, 1988. If the person liable for the tax under this chapter is required to file Form 706GS(T) or 706GS(D), with respect to a transfer which occurred after September 25, 1985, and before January 1, 1988, the return shall be filed on or before a date to be specified in an announcement that will appear in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

(iii) Direct skips at death. The due date for any return with respect to the tax imposed by Chapter 13 on any direct skip attributable to the death of the decedent shall be no earlier than June 13, 1988.

(e) Place for filing returns. See section 6091 and the regulations thereunder for the place for filing any return, declaration, statement, or other document, or copies thereof, required by this chapter.

(f) Lien on property. The liens imposed under sections 6324, 6324A, and 6324B are applicable with respect to the tax imposed under Chapter 13. Thus, a lien under 6324 is imposed in the amount of the tax imposed by section 2601 on all property transferred in a generation-skipping transfer until the tax is fully paid or becomes uncollectible by reason of lapse of time. The lien attaches at the time of the generation-skipping transfer and is in addition to the lien for taxes under section 6321.

Subtitle C.—Employment Taxes
Chapter 21.—Federal Insurance
Contribution Act
Subchapter C.—General Provisions

Section 3121.—Definitions

FICA, hospital insurance; state and political subdivision employees. Guidance is provided, in question and answer form, concerning the application of the hospital insurance (medicare) tax portion of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) by section 3121(u) of the Code, to wages for services performed by state and political subdivision employees hired after March 31, 1986. Rev. Rul. 86-88 supplemented.

Rev. Rul. 88-36

This revenue ruling supplements Rev. Rul. 86-88, 1986-2 C.B. 172, which provides guidelines, in question and answer form, concerning the 1985 amendment of section 3121(u) of the Internal Revenue Code. In general, the amendment extends the hospital insurance (medicare) tax portion of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) to wages for services rendered by state and political subdivision employees hired after March 31, 1986.

In this revenue ruling, the terms "state," "political subdivision," "state employer," "political subdivision employer," and "continuing employment exception" have the same meanings as in Rev. Rul. 86-88.

Services Subject to the Medicare Tax

Q1. If an individual receiving social security retirement insurance benefits was hired as an employee of a state or political subdivision after March 31, 1986, are the services performed by the individual for the state or political subdivision subject to the medicare tax?

A1. Yes. The fact that an employee is receiving social security retirement insurance benefits does not affect the employee's liability for the medicare tax.

Q2. Are services performed by an election official or election worker for a state employer or political subdivision employer subject to the medicare tax?

A2. Yes, unless the remuneration paid in a calendar year for such service is less than $100. Section 3121(u)(2)(B)(ii)(V) of the Code, added by section 1895(b)(18)(A) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 852. This amendment is effective for services rendered after March 31, 1986.

Q3. A township has a small number of regularly employed fire fighters. To assist these fire fighters, certain residents of the township have volunteered their services in cases of emergency. The township alerts these residents to emergencies by sounding a siren. The township keeps a record of the residents who respond to the emergency calls and periodically pays each such resident a nominal amount for each emergency for which the resident performed services. Are the payments made to the residents by the township subject to the medicare tax?

A3. No. The services are considered to be performed by an employee of a state or political subdivision on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, snow, earthquake, flood, or other similar emergency and thus are not subject to the medicare tax. See Section 3121(u)(2)(B)(ii)(III) of the Code.

The Continuing Employment Exception

Q4. An individual was hired in September 1984 as a part-time cook by a state hospital to perform two hours of paid service each Sunday preparing the evening meal. The individual is not a patient or inmate of the hospital and has worked two hours each week as an employee of the hospital continuously since September 1984. Are the individual's services performed after March 31, 1986, subject to the medicare tax?

A4. No. The continuing employment exception applies here if the individual was performing regular and substantial services for remuneration for the state employer or political subdivision employer before April 1, 1986. Whether this requirement is met is a question of fact. On these facts, the individual's services are determined to be regular and substantial, and the exception applies.

Q5. In November 1982, an individual was elected to a state public office for a four-year term beginning in January 1983, making the individual an employee of the state. In November 1986, the individual was re-elected. Are the individual's services performed in the second term that begins in January 1987 subject to the medicare tax?

A5. No. The continuing employment exception applies here if the employment relationship has not been terminated after March 31, 1986. The individual was re-elected before the first term expired, so there was no break in the employment relationship.

Q6. B, a school district employee, performed regular and substantial services for remuneration for a political subdivision employer during the school year beginning in September 1985 and ending in May 1986. In May 1986, the school district notified B that B's employment would be terminated as of the end of May 1986 because the school district might not receive sufficient funding. B continued to be covered under the school district's health insurance program through August 1986 on the same basis as before May 1986. Sufficient funding was provided, and in September 1986 B began working on the same basis as before. Are B's services performed after August 31, 1986, subject to the medicare tax?

A6. No. In Fact, B's employment with the school district was continuous because the school district received sufficient funding. The school district's personnel policies indicate that the employment relationship continued because B retained health insurance coverage. See Q&A6 of Rev. Rul. 86-88.

Q7. C, a professor at a state university, performed regular and substantial services for remuneration for the university from September 1985 to June 1986. C was granted a leave of absence for the 1986-1987 school year, with the right to return to the same position at the end of the leave. In September 1987, C returned from the leave and resumed the same position with the university. Are C's services performed after returning from the leave of absence subject to the medicare tax?

A7. No. The leave of absence was granted by the university and did not terminate the employment relationship. The university's peronnel policies indicate that the employment relationship continued because C was given the right to return to the same position. See Q&A6 of Rev. Rul. 86-88.

Q8. D taught a two-hour photography course twice a week at a local community college in the spring semester, which began on March 1, 1986. D then signed a three-year agreement with the college that he would teach the same course every spring. When D returned in the spring of 1987, were his services subject to the medicare tax?

A8. No. D was performing regular and substantial services for remuneration prior to April 1, 1986. The employment relationship was not terminated, as D had a commitment to return to the same position each spring.

Q9. Each summer, a Township Parks Department advertises for workers to cut grass. E was hired by the township in May 1985 to cut grass during that summer. E stopped performing services for the township at the end of that summer. In May 1986, E was again hired by the township to cut grass. Are E's services performed when E returned in May 1986 subject to the medicare tax?

A9. Yes. E's employment relationship was terminated after April 1, 1986, as E had no commitment to perform services for the township each summer.

Q10. A part-time police officer has been paid on a weekly basis since March 10, 1986, to be "on call" for a set schedule of hours each week. When the officer is "on call," he must stay at his residence and be available to provide assistance in the case of an emergency or to handle any police business that may arise. Are the services performed by the officer after April 1, 1986 subject to the medicare tax?

A10. No. Although the officer responds to calls on an "as needed" basis, he has a set schedule of hours during which he is performing the service of being available to respond to such calls. Based on the above facts, the officer was performing regular and substantial services for remuneration prior to April 1, 1986 and thus, qualifies for the continuing employment exception to the medicare tax.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 31, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 48—MANUFACTURERS AND RETAILERS EXCISE TAXES; PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Election to Have Certain Diesel Fuel Taxes Imposed on Sales to Retailers

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the collection of excise taxes on diesel fuel under an election provided by section 4041(n) of the Code. Changes to the law relating to diesel fuel were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. These regulations provide guidance to taxpayers who are subject to these laws. This document does not reflect changes to the diesel fuel excise tax that were made by the Revenue Act of 1987.

EFFECTIVE DATES: The regulations are effective and apply to sales of diesel fuel for use in diesel-powered highway vehicles made after March 31, 1987, and before April 1, 1988, with the exception of the following provisions, which are effective as of March 1, 1988:

§48.4041-21T(h)(1) following "section 4041(a)(1),";

§48.4041-21T(i)(3); and

§48.4041-21T(k)(1).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains amendments to the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 48) under section 4041 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code). These regulations conform the regulations to section 1702 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2773], which added section 4041(n) to the Code. These regulations do not reflect changes made to the diesel fuel excise tax by the Revenue Act of 1987 (Pub. L. 100-203, 101 Stat. 1330).

Under section 4041(a)(1) of the Code, excise taxes are imposed on the sale of any liquid sold for use as fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle. The taxes are imposed when the liquid is sold to an owner, lessee, or other operator of a diesel powered highway vehicle for use as fuel in such vehicle.

Because there are many more retail outlets for diesel fuel sales than there are diesel fuel wholesalers, Congress determined that the number of taxpayers required to file returns for the diesel fuel tax would be reduced if a mechanism was provided to impose the tax at the time of sale to the retailer. Such a mechanism would reduce the tax administrative burden to taxpayers and the tax enforcement cost to the Internal Revenue Service.

Accordingly, the Tax Reform Act added section 4041(n) to the Code. Under this provision, a qualified diesel fuel retailer may elect to shift the liability for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) to the seller of the fuel to that retailer. A qualified retailer is not required to make the election with respect to all its sellers in order for the election to become effective. The qualified retailer remains liable, however, for any tax imposed on the subsequent sale of diesel fuel purchased tax-free from a seller not covered by a valid election.

Making the election

To make the election as to a particular seller, a qualified retailer must notify the seller in writing and obtain the seller's written consent to liability for the tax. The qualified retailer must then file Form 8587 with the District Director for the district in which the retailer's principal place of business is located, attaching a copy of the seller's consent. If the District Director approves the seller and determines that all the requirements for making the election have been met, the District Director will validate the election and notify the qualified retailer and the seller in writing.

Effect of a valid election

Once a qualified retailer has made a valid election with respect to a particular seller under this provision, the qualified retailer must buy all diesel fuel from that seller tax-paid. However, a liquid will not be treated as taxable diesel fuel and the seller will not be liable for the tax if the qualified retailer certifies in writing that the liquid will not be sold for use as fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle. This exception is discussed in greater detail below. In addition, a qualified retailer may add a new seller at any time by making a supplemental election as to that seller under the same rules as for making an initial election, as set forth above.

Revocation of the election

A qualified retailer may revoke a valid election with respect to a particular seller at any time by submitting a written statement of revocation to the District Director. A revocation made by a qualified retailer is effective as of the date specified by the District Director in a written notice sent to the qualified retailer and the seller as to whom the revocation is made. If the retailer subsequently makes another election as to that seller under section 4041(n) of the Code, the new election cannot become effective before the beginning of the fourth full calendar quarter following the effective date of the revocation. The District Director may also revoke a qualified retailer's election by sending a written notice of revocation to the qualified retailer and each of the affected sellers if the District Director determines that such action is necessary to protect the revenue. A revocation made by the District Director takes effect on the date specified in the written notice of revocation. A new election made under section 4041(n) following a revocation by the District Director cannot become effective before the beginning of the revocation.

Revocation of Seller's Consent

A seller may revoke consent to liability for the tax imposed on the sale of diesel fuel to a qualified retailer by submitting a written statement of revocation to the District Director. A revocation of consent is effective as of the date specified by the District Director in a written notice sent to the seller and the qualified retailer.

Penalty for failing to notify

If a qualified retailer fails to notify a seller of the election in writing, all diesel fuel purchased from that seller is treated as if sold by the qualified retailer in a sale of diesel fuel taxable under section 4041(a)(1) of the Code on the date the qualified retailer purchased it. The qualified retailer must also pay a penalty pursuant to section 6652(j)[k] equal to 5% of any tax imposed on the sale under section 4041(a)(1). In addition, the qualified retailer's election under this section is subject to revocation by the District Director if the District Director determines such action is necessary to protect the revenue.

Requirements for approval of a seller

In order to be approved under a qualified retailer's election, a seller of diesel fuel must fulfill certain requirements. The proposed regulations require that the seller: (a) be in the trade or business of selling diesel fuel for resale by a retailer; (b) hold a valid Federal Employer's Identification Number; (c) have a regular, physical place of business in the state or territory in which its principal place of business is located; and (d) have complied with all local laws regarding the sale of diesel fuel in each jurisdiction in which it sells diesel fuel. The District Director may withhold or revoke approval of the seller if the seller does not fulfill these requirements, or if the District Director determines that such action is necessary to protect the revenue.

Liquid Certified for Use as Other Than Diesel Fuel

Liquid otherwise taxable under section 4041(a)(1) of the Code is not treated as diesel fuel for the purposes of an election made under section 4041(n) if the qualified retailer certifies in writing to the seller that the liquid will not be sold for use as fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle. If the liquid is actually used as diesel fuel, however, or if the qualified retailer cannot establish, upon request of the District Director, that the liquid was used for a purpose other than as diesel fuel, the qualified retailer, and not the seller, is liable for all taxes which would have been imposed on the sale if it had not been certified as nontaxable.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6) does not apply and no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291, and that Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required.

(b) In general. A retailer of diesel fuel may elect, with a seller's written consent, to have the excise tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) on all sales of fuel for use in diesel-powered highway vehicles imposed on such seller at the time of sale to the retailer. A retailer who has made a valid election under paragraph (d) of this section is considered a qualified retailer (as defined in paragraph (c)(1) of this section), and may purchase diesel fuel tax-paid from any seller approved by the District Director under the qualified retailer's election. An approved seller is liable for any tax imposed on a sale of diesel fuel to the qualified retailer by section 4041(a)(1) at the time of sale, except as provided in paragraph (i) of this section. Once a qualified retailer has made a valid election with respect to one or more approved sellers, tax-free purchases of diesel fuel may be made under paragraph (e) of this section only from a person not approved as a seller under a valid election. This election is available for sales made to a qualified retailer after March 31, 1987. See paragraph (c) of this section for definitions of "qualified retailer" and "seller". See paragraph (d)(2) of this section for rules relating to approval of a seller by the District Director.

(c) Definitions—(1) Qualified retailer. For purposes of this section, a "qualified retailer" is any retailer who—

(i) Makes a valid election under paragraph (d)(1) of this section to have section 4041(n)(1) apply to all sales of diesel fuel to such retailer by any seller approved by the District Director under paragraph (d)(2) of this section, and

(ii) Agrees to provide a written notice, as described in paragraph (d)(1)(i)(A) of this section, to each seller with respect to whom the election is made that section 4041(n)(1) applies to all sales of diesel fuel to such retailer by any seller approved by the District Director under paragraph (d)(2) of this section.

(2) Retailer. For purposes of this section, a retailer is any person who sells diesel fuel for use as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle. Such term does not include a person who sells diesel fuel primarily for resale.

(3) Seller. A seller is any person who sells diesel fuel to a retailer.

(d) Manner of election—(1) Procedure for making election—(i) Filing requirements. To make the election, a qualified retailer must, prior to purchasing diesel fuel under the terms of this section, agree to have the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) apply to all sales of diesel fuel to the retailer by any seller approved by the District Director under paragraph (d)(2) of this section by—

(A) Providing the seller with a written notice (as described in paragraph (g) of this section) that the retailer is making the election and that, once validated by the District Director,

(1) The election applies to all sales of diesel fuel to such retailer by a seller approved by the District Director under paragraph (d)(2) of this section; and

(2) The retailer may not purchase diesel fuel tax-paid from any person that is not an approved seller;

(B) Obtaining a written consent to liability (as described in paragraph (h) of this section) from the seller for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) on the sale of diesel fuel to the qualified retailer; and

(C) Filing Form 8587, Election by Qualified Diesel Fuel Retailer, with the District Director for the district in which the qualified retailer's principal place of business is located, together with a copy of the written consent to liability received from each seller listed on the Form 8587 filed.

(ii) Acknowledgement by the District Director. The District Director shall send a written acknowledgement of receipt to the retailer upon receiving the retailer's Form 8587 and all consents attached thereto.

(2) Approval of a seller by the District Director—(i) In general. In order to participate under a qualified retailer's election, a seller must be approved by the District Director for the district in which the qualified retailer's principal place of business is located. Before approving a seller, the District Director must first receive a copy of the seller's written consent to liability (as described in paragraph (h) of this section) for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) on the sale of diesel fuel to the qualified retailer.

(ii) Authority to withhold or revoke approval—(A) In general. The District Director may withhold or revoke approval of a seller under a qualified retailer's election if the seller does not fulfill the requirements of paragraph (h) of this section, or if the District Director determines that such action is necessary to protect the revenue. In making this determination, the District Director may consider the tax compliance record of the seller or of a person related to the seller within the meaning of section 267(b) or section 707(b)(1). For example, a District Director may withhold or revoke approval of a seller if the seller or a person related to the seller—

(1) Has had a penalty assessed against such person under chapter 68 of the Internal Revenue Code; or

(2) Has been convicted of a crime under chapter 75 of the Internal Revenue Code.

(B) Notification of approval withheld or revoked. If the District Director withholds approval of a seller listed on a retailer's Form 8587, the District Director shall so notify the retailer and the seller for whom approval is withheld. Such notification may be made either orally or in writing. The retailer may then either amend the Form 8587 to delete that seller's name from the list of sellers appearing therein, or the retailer may withdraw the election application entirely. If the District Director revokes approval of a seller under the rules of paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(A) of this section, the District Director shall notify such seller and each qualified retailer under whose election the seller had been approved in writing immediately following such revocation. A revocation of a seller's approval under paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(A) takes effect on the date specified by the District Director in the written notice. A notice of revocation sent to a qualified retailer under this paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(B) shall be limited to informing the qualified retailer of the fact and date of revocation. A notice of revocation sent to a seller under this paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(B) must include a statement of the reason for the revocation.

(3) Adding a new seller. A qualified retailer may make an election under this section with respect to a new seller at any time. See, however, paragraph (e) of this section for rules governing sales of diesel fuel to a qualified retailer from a person not approved as a seller under a valid election.

(4) Validation of election. The District Director shall validate an election with respect to a seller listed on the retailer's Form 8587 when the District Director determines that the requirements of this section have been met and approves the seller under paragraph (d)(2) of this section. If the election is validated with respect to a particular seller, the District Director shall notify the qualified retailer and the approved seller in writing that the election is valid, and that the seller is liable for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) on all sales of diesel fuel to the qualified retailer as of the effective date of the election. The effective date of an election made under this section is the date specified by the District Director in the written notice of liability sent to the seller and the qualified retailer under this paragraph (d)(4) upon validation of the election. See, however, paragraph (k)(1) of this section for rules regarding a revocation of the election provided by this section made by a qualified retailer, and paragraph (k)(2) of this section regarding a revocation made by the District Director.

(e) Failure to make election. If a retailer fails to make a valid election under this section with respect to any seller, this section does not apply and the retailer is liable for all taxes imposed by section 4041 on the sale of diesel fuel. If a qualified retailer has made a valid election under this section, but fails to make a valid election as to a seller not approved under an existing election, the qualified retailer may not purchase diesel fuel from that seller tax-paid under the terms of this section.

(f) Penalty for failure to provide notice—(1) In general. If a qualified retailer fails to provide a written notice (as described in paragraph (d)(1)(i)(A) of this section) to a seller with respect to whom the election is made, all sales of diesel fuel made by that seller to the qualified retailer are treated as sold by the qualified retailer in a sale to which section 4041(a)(1)(A) applies on the date that such fuel is sold to the qualified retailer. Sales of diesel fuel made to the qualified retailer by other sellers approved under a valid election are not affected by such a violation of the terms of the election. See section 6652(j)[k] for rules relating to the penalty imposed for failure to provide notice of the election to the seller.

(2) Presumption where written consent received. If a qualified retailer has received a written consent to liability for the excise tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) from a seller, as required by paragraph (h) of this section, it will be presumed that the qualified retailer has provided the written notice required by paragraph (d)(1)(i)(A) of this section to the seller.

(g) Retailer's notice to seller. The notice that a qualified retailer is required to give to each seller under paragraph (d)(1)(i)(A) of this section in making an election under this section must be substantially in the following form:

RETAILER'S NOTICE TO SELLERS

[of election under 26 U.S.C. 4041(n)]

__________, 19__. I certify
that I am the ______________
of the retailer named below, and that I am authorized to execute this document. The purpose of this notice is to inform you that the named retailer is making an election under 26 U.S.C. 4041(n)(1) to have the diesel fuel excise tax imposed by 26 U.S.C. 4041(a)(1) imposed on the seller at the time such retailer purchases diesel fuel from any seller approved by the District Director under this election. A retailer may not purchase diesel fuel tax-paid from any person not approved by the District Director as a seller under a valid election. The District Director will not approve you as a seller under this election if you do not furnish the retailer with a written statement of consent to assume liability for the tax imposed by 26 U.S.C. 4041(a)(1) on all sales of diesel fuel to the retailer. The retailer must attach a copy of such consent to the form used to make this election, or the election will not be validated. If you are approved as a seller under this election, the District Director will notify you in writing of the effective date of your liability for the tax imposed by 26 U.S.C. 4041(a)(1) on all sales of diesel fuel to the retailer named below.

(h) Seller's consent to liability—(1) In general. To be approved as a seller under a qualified retailer's election, a seller, under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section, must consent in writing to assume liability for the tax imposed on the sale of diesel fuel by section 4041(a)(1), and certify, under penalties of perjury, that such seller—

(i) Is in the trade or business of selling diesel fuel for resale by a retailer;

(ii) Holds a valid Federal Employer's Identification Number (E.I.N.);

(iii) Has a regular place of business in a physical location (other than a post office box) in the state or territory in which the seller's principal place of business is located; and

(iv) Has complied with all laws regarding licensing, registration, bond, or other requirements to enable such person to sell diesel fuel within the law of each jurisdiction in which such person sells diesel fuel.

(2) Form of consent. A seller's written consent to liability for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) must be in substantially the following form:

of the seller named below, and that I am authorized to execute this document. The company named below consents to assume liability for the taxes imposed under 26 U.S.C. 4041(a)(1) on the sale of diesel fuel to the qualified retailer named below until such time as the qualified retailer's election is revoked. I understand that a failure to file any appropriate tax return or pay any tax due on the sale of diesel fuel to such qualified retailer, or otherwise to comply with any requirement incident to liability for the tax may result in the termination of my status as an approved seller of diesel fuel, and may subject me and/or the named company to prosecution under all relevant provisions of law, together with costs of prosecution therefor.

(i) Liquid that is not treated as diesel fuel—(1) In general. A liquid is not treated as diesel fuel for use in a diesel-powered highway vehicle for purposes of this section if the qualified retailer certifies in writing to the seller of such liquid that it will not be sold for use as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle. The certification must provide the qualified retailer's name, address and E.I.N., and be signed under penalties of perjury by the qualified retailer or a person having the power and authority to bind the qualified retailer. The retailer must give the certification to the seller on or before the earlier of the date of sale or delivery of the liquid. The qualified retailer must maintain sufficient records of its sales to establish the purpose for which the liquid is sold, and the person(s) to whom sold. See section 4041(n)(3)(C) for the definition of diesel fuel. See §48.4041-8(b)(4) for the definition of a diesel-powered highway vehicle.

(2) Liability for violation of certification. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 4041(n)(1), if—

(i) Liquid certified under this paragraph for use other than as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle is in fact used as diesel fuel; or

(ii) A qualified retailer, upon request of the District Director, fails to establish by probative evidence other than the certification described in paragraph (i)(1) of this section, that liquid purchased tax-free under paragraph (i)(1) of this section is not in fact used as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle, such liquid shall be treated as a diesel fuel subject to tax under section 4041(a)(1), and the retailer, and not the seller, is liable for the tax on the sale of the liquid.

(3) Acceptable form of certification. A retailer's certification under paragraph (i)(1) of this section that a liquid is not to be sold for use as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle must be substantially in the following form:

RETAILER'S CERTIFICATION

[To support tax-free sale of liquid for use other than as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle
pursuant to 26 U.S.C.
4041(n)(3)(C)(ii)]

__________, 19___. I certify
(Date)
that I am the ______________ (owner or authorized agent) of the qualified retailer named below, and that I am authorized to execute this document. I further certify that liquid fuel purchased from ______________ on (name and address of seller)
__________, 19___ will be sold,
only for use other than as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle (as defined in Treasury Regulations §48.4041-8).

I understand that if this liquid is in fact used as a fuel for a diesel-powered highway vehicle, the qualified retailer named below will be liable for the tax which would have been imposed on the sale of the liquid to the retailer, but for this certification, and that both the qualified retailer and the user must be prepared to establish the purpose for which this liquid is used. I also understand that the fraudulent use of this certification to substantiate the tax-free sale of liquid otherwise treated as diesel fuel may subject me and all parties making such use of this certification to prosecution under all relevant provisions of law, together with costs of prosecution therefor.

Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have executed this certification and that the statements made are to the best of my knowledge and belief, true, correct, and complete.

(j) Exemptions not to apply. No exemption from the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) shall apply to a sale to which section 4041(n)(1) or 4041(n)(4)(A) applies. See sections 6416, 6427, and the regulations thereunder for provisions allowing a credit or refund for certain sales and uses of fuel.

(k) Revocation of election—(1) By qualified retailer—(i) In general. A qualified retailer may voluntarily revoke a valid election with respect to any seller at any time, by submitting a written statement to the District Director revoking the election. The revocation must provide the name, address, and E.I.N. of both the qualified retailer and the seller, and must be signed by the qualified retailer or an authorized agent. The District Director will then notify the qualified retailer and each seller as to whom the revocation is made, in writing, of the effective date of the revocation. A voluntary revocation made by a qualified retailer under this paragraph (k)(1)(i) takes effect on the date specified by the District Director in the written notice. Once the revocation becomes effective, the retailer, and not the seller, is liable for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) on sales of diesel fuel to the retailer.

(ii) Effective date of a new election following a voluntary revocation. An election made by the retailer under this section with respect to a seller as to whom an election was previously revoked cannot have an effective date before the beginning of the fourth calendar quarter following the effective date of the revocation. Thus, for example, assume that in 1987 a qualified retailer, A, makes a valid election as to approved sellers X, Y, and Z. If A revokes the election with respect to X effective as of January 15, 1988, a subsequent election made by A with respect to X cannot become effective until April 1, 1989.

(iii) Acceptable form for revocation. The statement of revocation of the election under paragraph (k)(1) of this section must be substantially in the following form:

I understand that by making this revocation, the qualified retailer named below will resume liability, as of a date specified by the District Director in a written notice of revocation, for the taxes imposed by 26 U.S.C. 4041(a)(1) on a taxable sale of diesel fuel purchased from a seller named above which is subsequently sold to an owner, lessee, or other operator of a diesel-powered highway vehicle for use as a fuel in such vehicle.

(2) Revocation by the District Director—(i) In general. The District Director may revoke a qualified retailer's election at any time by notifying the qualified retailer and each of the affected sellers in writing, if, based on the facts and circumstances surrounding sales to such qualified retailer, the District Director determines that revocation is necessary to protect the revenue. A revocation made by the District Director takes effect on the date specified by the Direct Director in the written notice. A notice of revocation sent to a seller under this paragraph (k)(2) shall be limited to informing the seller of the fact and date of revocation only. A notice of revocation sent to a qualified retailer under this paragraph (k)(2) must include a statement of the reason for the revocation. Facts and circumstances which would support a District Director's decision to revoke a qualified retailer's election include, but are not limited to, situations in which the qualified retailer knowingly and willfully—

(A) Sells a liquid covered by an exemption certification described in paragraph (i) of this section as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle, if the retailer also fails to pay the tax due on such a sale;

(B) Forges a seller's written consent to liability for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1);

(C) Supplies false information as to a fact material to any aspect of the election provided by this section to either a seller or to the District Director; or

(D) Violates any of the terms of the election or uses the exemption certification described in paragraph (i) of this section in order to avoid the payment of any tax imposed by this chapter, or to postpone or in any manner to interfere with the collection of any such tax.

(ii) Making a new election following revocation by the District Director. Following revocation of a qualified retailer's election by the District Director, a subsequent election made by the retailer under this section cannot have an effective date before the beginning of the fourth calendar quarter following the effective date of the revocation.

(l) Revocation of seller's consent to liability. A seller may revoke consent to liability for the tax imposed on the sale of diesel fuel to a qualified retailer under section 4041(n) at any time by submitting a written statement to the District Director revoking the consent. The revocation must provide the name, address, and E.I.N. of both the seller and the qualified retailer, and must be signed by the seller or an authorized agent. The District Director will then notify the seller and the qualified retailer in writing of the effective date of the revocation. A revocation of consent made under this paragraph (l) takes effect on the date specified by the District Director in the written notice. Once the revocation becomes effective, the retailer, and not the seller, is liable for the tax imposed on the sale of diesel fuel by section 4041(a)(1).

(m) Recordkeeping requirements—(1) Qualified retailer. A qualified retailer who has made a valid election under this section must retain the following records with respect to the tax imposed by section 4041 (whether or not the qualified retailer incurs liability for such tax) for at least three years after the due date of the tax return for the return period to which the records relate, or the date such tax is paid, whichever is the later—

(i) A copy of the notice given to each seller under paragraph (d)(1)(i)(A) of this section stating that an election is being filed;

(ii) The original or a copy of the seller's written consent to liability for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1), required under paragraphs (d)(1)(i)(B) and (d)(2)(i) of this section;

(iii) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (d)(4) of this section stating that an election has been validated;

(iv) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(B) of this section stating that the District Director has revoked the approval of a seller under such qualified retailer's election;

(v) A copy of each certification given to a seller under paragraph (i)(1) of this section relating to a sale of liquid not treated as diesel fuel;

(vi) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (k)(1)(i) or (k)(2)(i) of this section stating that an election made under this section has effectively been revoked; and

(vii) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (l) of this section stating that a seller's consent to liability has effectively been revoked.

(2) Seller. Each seller must retain the following records with respect to the tax imposed by section 4041 (whether or not such seller incurs liability for such tax) for at least three years after the due date of the tax return for the return period to which the records relate, or the date such tax is paid, whichever is the later—

(i) Each written notice received from a qualified retailer under paragraph (d)(1)(i)(A) of this section;

(ii) A copy of each consent furnished to a qualified retailer under paragraph (d)(1)(i)(B) or (c)(2)(i) of this section;

(iii) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (d)(4) of this section stating that the seller is liable for the tax imposed by section 4041(a)(1) on a sale of diesel fuel to a qualified retailer;

(iv) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(B) of this section stating that such seller's approval has been revoked;

(v) Each certification received from a qualified retailer under paragraph (i)(1) of this section relating to a sale of liquid not treated as diesel fuel;

(vi) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (k)(1)(i) or (k)(2)(i) of this section stating that a qualified retailer's election has effectively been revoked; and

(vii) Each notice received from the District Director under paragraph (1) of this section stating that a seller's consent to liability has effectively been revoked.

Subchapter B.—Heavy Trucks and Trailers

Section 4052.—Definitions and Special Rules

26 CFR 145.4052-1: Special rules and definitions.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 145—TEMPORARY EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE HIGHWAY REVENUE ACT OF 1987 (PUB. L. 100-17)

Excise Tax on Heavy Trucks, Truck Trailers and Semitrailers, and Tractors

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary regulations relating to the excise tax imposed on the retail sale of heavy trucks, truck trailers and semitrailers, and tractors. Changes in the applicable tax law were made by sections 505 and 506 of the Highway Revenue Act of 1987 (Title V of the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987). These regulations affect manufacturers, producers, importers, dealers, and lessors of these articles and will provide them with the guidance needed to comply with the law. In addition, the text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations cross-referenced in the notice of proposed rulemaking in  [LR-17-86, page 923, this Bulletin].

DATES: Generally these regulations apply to heavy trucks, truck trailers and semitrailers, and tractors sold on or after October 1, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

This document contains amendments to the Temporary Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 145) under section 4052 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code), as amended by sections 505 and 506 of the Highway Revenue Act of 1987 (Title V of the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987) (Pub. L. 100-17, 101 Stat. 256, 258-59) (''the Act''), relating to the excise tax on the sale of heavy trucks, truck trailers and semitrailers, and tractors. The amendments modify temporary regulations previously promulgated under section 512 of the Highway Revenue Act of 1982 (Title V of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act). The temporary regulations provided by this document will remain in effect until superseded by final regulations on this subject.

Section 4051(a) of the Code imposes a 12 percent tax on the first retail sale of heavy trucks, truck trailers and semitrailers, and tractors. Section 505(a) of the Act amended section 4052(a)(1) to provide that the term ''first retail sale'' means ''the first sale, for a purpose other than for resale or leasing in a long-term lease, after manufacture, production, or importation''.

Under section 4052(a)(1), the leasing of an article on a long-term basis is treated as the first retail sale, and the tax under section 4051 is imposed on such article at the time the article is leased, rather than at the time the manufacturer, producer, or importer sells the article to the lessor. Section 4052(f) provides that the term ''long-term lease'' means any lease with a term of 1 year or more. The leasing of an article on a short-term basis (i.e., less than one year) before the first retail sale of such article is treated as a taxable use under section 4052(a)(3), and the tax under section 4051 is imposed at the time of that lease.

The tax imposed on either a long-term or short-term lease is computed on a price established by the Commissioner that is based on the retail sales price of similar articles (a constructive sales price). See discussion of ''Presumptive retail sales price'' w.

Definition of first retail sale

Temporary regulations §145.4052-1, relating to the excise tax on heavy trucks, truck trailers and semitrailers, and tractors, were revised by temporary regulations published in the Federal Register on September 13, 1985 (T.D. 8050) (50 FR 37350) [1985-2 C.B. 206]. Those revised regulations provided that a sale by a manufacturer, producer, or importer is treated as the first retail sale unless either (a) the purchaser is not in the business of leasing and intends to resell the article, or (b) the seller and the purchaser are registered under section 4222 (prescribing rules relating to the registration required to make tax-free sales), and the seller receives a certificate indicating the purchaser's intent to resell the articles.

Section 4052, as amended by the Act, treats a long-term lease as a first retail sale. Sections 145.4052-1(a)(1), (a)(2), and (a)(3) of these temporary regulations set forth certification requirements that determine when the first retail sale of an article occurs.

Certification requirements

Section 145.4052-1(a)(2) of these temporary regulations provides that the sale of an article will be taxable as the first retail sale unless (a) the sale is a tax-free sale under section 4221, (b) the purchaser and seller are registered under §48.4222(a)-1 and the seller in good faith accepts a proper certification from the purchaser that the purchaser intends either to lease the article on a long-term basis or to resell the article, or (c) there has been a prior taxable sale of the article. "Taxable sale" for these purposes includes a long-term lease or a taxable use, such as a short-term lease. If the purchaser does not meet one of the exceptions in §1.4052-1(a)(2), the seller will be liable for the tax imposed on the sale.

Thus, §145.4052-1(a)(2) allows a purchaser who intends either to lease on a long-term basis or to resell an article to purchase such article tax-free. In such cases the tax under section 4051 will be imposed on a subsequent taxable sale or use of the article.

Paragraphs (a)(4) and (d)(3)(ii) of §145.4052-1 set forth special rules regarding imposition of the tax. Section 145.4052-1(a)(4) provides that in certain circumstances tax will be imposed on the resale or long-term lease of a tax-paid trailer or semitrailer and the seller of such trailer or semitrailer shall be liable for such tax. Under §145.4052-1(a)(4) the seller may in such cases reduce the tax liability by the amount of tax previously paid with respect to the article.

Section 145.4052-1(d)(3)(ii) provides that the tax under section 4051 shall be computed on a price that includes a presumed markup when a person other than a manufacturer, producer, or importer is designated as the seller of an article but (a) such person does not perform significant activities relating to the processing of the sale of the article and (b) the principal purpose of processing the sale through such person is to avoid or evade the presumed markup imposed under section 4052(b)(4)(A)(ii).

In order to achieve comparable tax treatment along long-term leases, sales by manufacturers, producers, or importers, and retail sales by other persons, sections 505(b) and 506(a) of the Act amended section 4052(b) by adding new paragraphs (b)(3) and (4). These paragraphs were added to ensure that the tax base of most transactions considered to be taxable sales subject to section 4051 includes either an actual or a presumptive retail markup. As a result, sections 4052(b)(3) and (4) provide that the tax imposed by sections 4051 shall, under certain circumstances, be computed on a presumptive retail sales price (i.e., a tax base that includes a presumed markup).

Section 4052(b)(3) provides that the tax imposed on any long-term lease that is treated as the first retail sale of an article shall be computed on a tax base that includes the price at which the article was sold to the lessor, the cost of any parts and accessories installed by the lessor, and an amount equal to a presumed markup. Section 145.4052-1(c)(5) of the regulations is amended to provide that the tax imposed on a short-term lease by a person other than a manufacturer, producer or importer shall also be computed on a tax base that includes the price at which the article was sold to the lessor, the cost of any parts and accessories installed by the lessor, and an amount equal to the presumed markup. However, the leasing of an article by a person other than a manufacturer, producer, or importer will not be subject to tax under section 4051 if such article was previously subject to tax under that section.

Similarly, section 4052(b)(4) provides that the tax imposed on a sale by a manufacturer, producer, or importer shall be computed on a tax base that includes an actual or constructive sales price of the article and an amount equal to a presumed markup.

For purposes of these temporary regulations, a single presumed markup percentage of four percent has been established for most articles subject to section 4051. However, truck trailers, semitrailers, and remanufactured trucks and tractors are subject to a zero percent markup. The imposition of a presumed markup percentage greater than zero percent on these articles is not necessary to carry out the purpose of the section 4051 retail tax because retail sales of trailers and semitrailers are generally made by trailer manufacturers. Similarly, remanufactured trucks and tractors generally are not sold through an established retail distribution network.

The presumed markup percentage is defined under section 4052(b)(3)(B) as "the average markup percentage of retailers of articles of the type involved." The Internal Revenue Service is currently examining whether it is appropriate to exercise its regulatory authority to establish additional markup percentages for different categories of articles. A tax system involving different markups raises a variety of problems relating to administration and enforcement. Therefore, the Service is requesting comments and suggestions relating to this particular issue in order to administer this tax fairly and efficiently.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6) does not apply, and no regulatory flexibility analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis is therefore not required.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations.

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 145 is amended as follows:

PART 145—TEMPORARY EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE HIGHWAY REVENUE ACT OF 1987 (Pub. L. 100–17)

Paragraph 1. The authority for part 145 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 145.4052-1 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 4052(d).

Par. 2. Section 145.4052-1 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

2. The heading and text for paragraph (b) are revised to read as set forth below.

3. Paragraph (c)(1) is amended by deleting the first sentence and inserting in its place, "For purposes of this section and §145.4051-1, the use of an article will be deemed to be a sale of the article." and by removing from the second sentence the words "unless such article is thereafter sold for resale".

4. Paragraph (c)(5) is amended by deleting the first sentence from paragraph (c)(5)(i) and inserting in its place "Except as provided in paragraphs (c)(5)(ii) and (c)(5)(iii) of this section," and by adding a new paragraph (c)(5)(iii) as set forth below.

5. Paragraph (d) is amended by redesignating paragraphs (d)(2), (d)(3), and (d)(4) as paragraphs (d)(8), (d)(9), and (d)(10), respectively, and by adding new paragraphs (d)(2), (d)(3), (d)(4), (d)(5), (d)(6), and (d)(7) to read as set forth below.

6. Paragraphs (d)(2) is amended by removing the words "paragraph (d)(2)(iii)" from the second sentence of paragraph (d)(2)(iii) and by inserting, in their place, the words "paragraph (d)(8)(iii)".

7. Paragraph (f) is removed.

8. Paragraph (e) is redesignated as paragraph (f) and a new paragraph (e) is added to read as set forth below.

9. A new paragraph (g) is added to read as set forth below.

§145.4052-1 Special rules and definitions.

(a) First retail sale—(1) General rule. For purposes of section 4052(a)(1) and §145.4051-1, the term "first retail sale" means a taxable sale described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

(2) Taxable sale. The sale of an article is a taxable sale unless—

(i) The sale is a tax-free sale under section 4221,

(ii) Both the purchaser and the seller are registered under section 4222 and §48.4222(a)-1 and the seller has in good faith accepted from the purchaser a proper certification, as provided in paragraph (a)(6) of this section, executed in good faith, that the purchaser intends to lease such article on a long-term basis or resell such articles, or

(iii) There has been a prior taxable sale of the article. Notwithstanding the preceding clause, the sale of a chassis or body of a trailer or semitrailer ("trailer or semitrailer") less than six months after a taxable sale of the article shall be treated as a taxable sale.

(3) Computation of tax—(i) In general. If the sale of an article is a taxable sale under paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the tax shall be computed on the price as determined under paragraph (d) of this section.

(ii) Exception. If the taxable sale of an article is a taxable use of such article under paragraph (c) of this section, the tax shall be computed on the price as determined under paragraph (c) of this section.

(4) Special rule for tax-paid trailer and semitrailer. In the case of a taxable sale of a trailer or semitrailer less than six months after a taxable sale of the article, the seller in the subsequent sale ("the subsequent seller") may claim a credit equal to the amount of tax previously paid by another person ("the previous taxpayer") under section 4051(a)(1) with respect to the prior taxable sale of the article. The credit for such tax will be allowed to the subsequent seller only if the form on which the credit is claimed is accompanied by a statement, signed by the subsequent seller, indicating the amount of the credit being claimed under this paragraph (a)(4) and stating that—

(i) The subsequent seller has not been repaid any portion of such tax by the previous taxpayer,

(ii) The subsequent seller has not provided the previous taxpayer with written consent to allow the previous taxpayer to claim a credit or refund of such tax under section 6416(a), and

(iii) The subsequent seller has records (e.g., invoices) substantiating the amount of tax paid by the previous taxpayer with respect to the prior taxable sale of such article.

In no case shall the amount of the credit allowable under this paragraph (a)(4) with respect to an article exceed the tax liability of the subsequent seller with respect to the sale of such article.

(5) No installment payments of tax. If a lease or an installment sale (or another form of sale under which the sales price is paid in installments) is, or is deemed to be, a taxable sale under this section, then the liability for the entire tax arises at the time of the lease or installment sale. No portion of the tax is deferred by reason of the fact that the sales price is paid in installments.

(6) Certificate. A certificate signed by the purchaser, or an officer or employee authorized by the purchaser to sign the certificate, may be accepted by a seller in support of a nontaxable sale to the purchaser. If it is impracticable to furnish a separate certificate for each sale because of the frequency of sales to such purchaser, a certificate covering all orders between given dates (such period not to exceed 12 calendar quarters) will be acceptable. The purchaser may revoke the certificate by sending a written revocation to the seller. The certificate and proper records of invoices, orders, etc., relating to sales made pursuant to such certificate, must be retained by the seller as provided in section 6001 and the regulations thereunder. The certificate shall be substantially in the following form:

EXEMPTION CERTIFICATE

I hereby certify that I am ______
(Title)
of ______________________,
that I am authorized to execute this certificate, and that:

______ the article or articles specified in the accompanying order, or on the reverse side hereof, (or) ______ all orders placed by the purchaser for the period commencing ______ (Date) (period not to exceed 12 calendar quarters), are purchased either for resale or for lease on a long-term basis.

I have filed Form 637 and have received registration number ______.

I understand that the fraudulent use of this certificate to secure exemption will subject me and all parties making such fraudulent use to a fine of not more than $10,000, or to imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both, together with costs of prosecution.

(7) Registration. Section 4222 and the regulations thereunder shall apply to persons making sales which are not treated as taxable sales pursuant to paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of this section.

(b) Tax treatment of leases—(1) Long-term lease. For purposes of this section and §145.4051-1, the leasing of an article on a long-term basis (as defined in paragraph (d)(6) of this section) will be deemed to be a sale of the article and will be deemed to be a taxable sale unless one of the exceptions contained in paragraph (a)(2) of this section applies. Thus, if a dealer purchases an article tax-free under an exception contained in paragraph (a)(2) of this section and then leases the article on a long-term basis, the leasing of the article will be treated as a taxable sale.

(2) Short-term lease. For purposes of this section and §145.4051-1, the leasing of an article on a short-term basis (as defined in paragraph (d)(6) of this section) will be deemed to be a taxable use of such article under paragraph (c) of this section and will be deemed to be a taxable sale unless one of the exceptions contained in paragraph (a)(2) of this section applies.

(3) Computation of tax—(i) Long-term lease by manufacturer, producer, or importer. When a manufacturer, producer, or importer is the lessor of an article on a long-term basis (as defined in paragraph (d)(6) of this section) and such lease is deemed to be a taxable sale under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, the tax shall be computed on a presumptive retail sales price as determined under paragraph (d)(4)(i) of this section. The manufacturer, producer, or importer shall be liable for the tax as if the article were sold at retail by such manufacturer, importer, or retailer.

(ii) Long-term lease by persons other than manufacturer, producer, or importer. When a person other than a manufacturer, producer, or importer is the lessor of an article on a long-term basis (as defined in paragraph (d)(6) of this section) and such lease is deemed to be a taxable sale under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, the tax shall be computed on a presumptive retail sales price as determined under paragraph (d)(5)(i) of this section. Such person shall be liable for the tax as if the article were sold at retail by such person.

* * * * *

(c) Use treated as a sale. ***

(5) Computation of tax—(i) ***

(iii) In the case of any short-term lease (as defined in paragraph (d)(6) of this section) by any person other than a manufacturer, producer, or importer (or related person as defined in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section) of an article that is deemed to be a taxable use of such article under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the tax imposed by section 4051(a)(1) shall be computed on a price equal to the sum of—

(A) The price (as determined under paragraph (d) of this section) at which such article was sold to the lessor plus the cost of any parts and accessories installed by the lessor (or an agent of the lessor) on such article before the first use or lease by the lessor, plus

(B) The product of the sum described in paragraph (c)(5)(iii)(A) of this section and the presumed markup percentage (as defined in paragraph (d)(7) of this section).

(d) Determination of price—(1) In general. ***

(2) Presumptive retail sales price where tax paid by manufacturer, producer, or importer—(i) In general. In the case of a taxable sale (other than a taxable sale described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section) where a manufacturer, producer, importer, or related person is liable for the tax imposed by section 4051, such tax shall be computed on a price equal to the sum of—

(A) The price that would (but for this paragraph (d)(2)) be determined under this paragraph (d), and

(B) The product of the price determined under paragraph (d)(2)(i)(A) of this section and the presumed markup percentage (as defined in paragraph (d)(7) of this section).

(ii) Related person defined—(A) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(B) of this section, the term "related person" means any person that is a member of the same controlled group (within the meaning of section 5061(e)(3)) as the manufacturer, producer, or importer.

(B) Exception for permanent retail establishment. A person shall not be treated as related person with respect to the sale of any article if—

(1) Such person sells the article through a permanent retail establishment in the normal course of business of being a retailer, and

(2) Such person has records (e.g., invoices) that substantiate that the article was sold for a price that included a markup equal to or greater than the presumed markup percentage (as defined in paragraph (d)(7) of this section).

(3) Retail sales price where tax paid by person other than a manufacturer, producer, importer, or related person. (i) In general. In the case of a taxable sale (other than a taxable sale defined in paragraph (b)(1) of this section) where a person other than a manufacturer, producer, importer, or related person is liable for the tax imposed by section 4051, such tax shall be computed on a price determined under paragraph (d)(1) of this section.

(ii) Exception. When a person other than a manufacturer, producer, importer, or related person is liable for the tax imposed by section 4051, such tax shall be computed on a price determined under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section if—

(A) Such person does not perform any significant activities relating to the processing of the sale of an article,

(B) The principal purpose for processing the sale through such person is to avoid or evade the presumed markup under paragraph (d)(2)(i)(B) of this section, and

(C) Such person does not have records (e.g., invoices) substantiating that the article was sold for a price that included a markup equal to or greater than the presumed markup percentage as defined in paragraph (d)(7) of this section.

(4) Presumptive retail sales price in the case of a lease by a manufacturer, producer, or importer. In the case of any long-term lease (as defined in paragraph (d)(6) of this section) by a manufacturer, producer, importer, or a related person (as defined in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section) of an article that is deemed to be a taxable sale of such article under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, the tax imposed by section 4051(a)(1) shall be computed on a price equal to the sum of—

(i) A constructive sales price established by the Commissioner based on the price at which such article would be sold by a manufacturer, producer, or importer in a sale other than a taxable sale (e.g., a sale to which the exceptions contained in paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of this section applies) on the date the lease is made, and

(ii) The product of the constructive sales price referred to in paragraph (d)(4)(i) of this section and the presumed markup percentage as defined in paragraph (d)(7) of this section.

(5) Presumptive retail sales price in the case of a long-term lease by any other person. In the case of any long-term lease (as defined in paragraph (d)(6) of this section) of an article in which any person other than a manufacturer, producer, or importer (or related person as defined in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section) is the lessor and the long-term lease is deemed to be a taxable sale of such article under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, the tax imposed by section 4051(a)(1) shall be computed on a price equal to the sum of—

(i) The price (as determined under this paragraph (d)) at which such article was sold to the lessor plus the cost of any parts and accessories installed by the lessor (or an agent of the lessor) on such article before the first use by the lessee or leased in connection with such long-term lease, and

(ii) The product of the sum described in paragraph (d)(5)(i) of this section and the presumed markup percentage as defined in paragraph (d)(7) of this section.

(6) Long-term and short-term lease defined. For purposes of this section, the term "long-term lease" means any lease with a term of one year or more. The term "short-term lease" means any lease with a term of less than one year. In determining a lease term, options to renew shall be taken into account. In addition, two or more successive leases that are part of the same transaction (or a series of related transactions) with respect to the same or substantially similar article, shall be treated as one lease.

(7) Presumed markup percentage—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (d)(7)(ii) of this section, for purposes of this section the term "presumed markup percentage" shall be four percent.

(ii) Exceptions. For purposes of this section the "presumed markup percentage" for trailers, semitrailers, and remanufactured automobile truck chassis and bodies and tractors shall be zero percent. For purposes of this section an article is a remanufactured article if—

(A) The refurbishing, renovation, or repair of the article causes it to be subject to the tax imposed by section 4051, and

(B) Before remanufacture, such article was previously subject to the tax imposed by section 4051 (or section 4061 prior to its repeal).

(e) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). M manufactures trucks that are taxable under section 4051. On July 11, 1988, D a corporation that is a dealer, purchases one truck from M for $50,000. M does not own any stock in D. Prior to this transaction, D gave M a certificate that meets the specifications detailed in paragraph (a)(6) of this section. The certificate states that the truck will be resold or leased on a long-term basis. M's sale to D is not a taxable sale of the truck (within the meaning of paragraph (a)(2) of this section). On July 20, 1988, D resells the truck to a purchaser, P, for $52,000. The additional $2,000 includes the dealer's mark-up, costs of transporting the truck from M to D, and overhead. No parts or accessories were added to the truck. P did not give D a certificate and did not have an agreement with D under which all vehicles purchased were to be resold. The sale of the truck by D to P is a taxable sale within the meaning of paragraph (a)(3) of this section. Therefore, D has a tax liability of $6,240 (12% × $52,000).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that M owns 80 percent of D's stock. D and M are members of the same controlled group (within the meaning of section 5061(e)(3)). Therefore, D is a related person under paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(A) of this section. On July 20, 1988, D sells the truck to P for $51,000. D does not have records substantiating that the truck was sold for a price that included a markup equal to or greater than the presumed markup percentage. The tax on the sale of the truck to P is determined under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section. Therefore, D has a tax liability of $6,240 (12% × ($50,000 + ($50,000 × 4%))).

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that D does not perform any significant activities relating to the sale. Assume further that the principal purpose for processing the sale through D is to avoid the presumed markup and that D did not sell the truck for a price that included a markup equal to or greater than the presumed markup percentage. D, however, is designated the seller of the truck on the invoice. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(3)(ii) of this section, the price of the truck shall be computed on a price determined under paragraph (d)(2)(i). Therefore, D, the taxpayer, has a tax liability of $6,240 [12% × ($50,000 + ($50,000 × 4%))].

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that on July 20, 1988, D leases the truck for a two-year period (i.e., on a long-term basis) to L, a lessee. D's leasing of the truck to L is treated as a taxable sale under paragraph (b)(1) of this section and the tax is computed on the price as determined under paragraph (d)(5)(i) of this section. D has a tax liability of $6,240 [12% × ($50,000 + ($50,000 × 4%))].

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that on July 20, 1983, D leases the truck to L for a six-month period (i.e., a short-term lease). The lease is treated as a use under paragraph (b)(2) of this section. The tax is computed on the price as determined under paragraph (c)(5) of this section. D has a tax liability of $6,240 [12% × $50,000 + $50,000 × 4%))].

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that D does not give M a certificate. The sale by M to D is a taxable sale of the truck under paragraph (a)(2) of this section. M's tax liability is $6,240 [12% × $50,000 + ($50,000 × 4%))]. On July 20, 1988, D leases the truck to L, a lessee. The lease has a two-year term. Since the lease to L occurred after a taxable sale of the truck, paragraph (b)(1) of this section does not apply, and the lease is not treated as a taxable sale under this section.

Example (7). M manufactures trucks that are taxable under section 4051. On July 11, 1988, M leases a truck to a lessee, L. The lease has a two-year term. The lease is treated as a taxable sale under paragraph (b)(1) of this section and the tax is computed on the price as determined under paragraph (d)(4)(i) of this section. The constructive sales price established by the Commissioner, pursuant to paragraph (d)(4)(i) of this section, is $50,000. M has a tax liability of $6,240 [12% × ($50,000 + ($50,000 × 4%))].

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (7) except that the lease has a six-month term. The lease is treated as a taxable use under paragraph (b)(2) of this section and the tax is computed under paragraph (c)(5) of this section. The constructive sales price established by the Commissioner, pursuant to paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section, is $52,000. M has a tax liability of $6,240 (12% × $52,000).

Example (9). M manufactures truck trailers and semitrailers that are taxable under section 4051. On July 5, 1988, D, a dealer, purchases a trailer from M for $10,000. Prior to this transaction, D did not give M a certificate and D did not have an agreement with M to resell all articles purchased. The sale by M to D is a taxable sale of the trailer under paragraph (a)(2) of this section. M has a tax liability of $1,200 (12% × $10,000 + ($10,000 × 0%)).

Example (10). Assume the same facts as in example (9) except that on July 12, 1988, D resells the trailer to P, a purchaser, for $10,500 (the additional $500 includes the dealer's markup, costs of transporting the trailer from M to D, and overhead). P did not give D a certificate and P did not have an agreement with D that stipulates that all articles purchased were to be leased on a long-term basis or resold. The sale of the trailer by D to P is a taxable sale within the meaning of paragraph (a)(3) of this section. Therefore, D has a tax liability of $1,260 (12% × $10,500). D, however, may file for a credit of $1,200 under section 6402 provided that the requirements of paragraph (a)(4) of this section are met.

(g) Effective date—(1) In general. Except as provided below, the provisions of this section shall be effective for articles sold or leased on or after April 1, 1983.

(2) Certain sales made prior to November 12, 1985. If a sale to a lessor before November 12, 1985, was not taxable under §145.4052-1 of the temporary regulations contained in 26 CFR part 145 revised as of April 1, 1983, (the "prior regulations") and it was so treated by the parties, a subsequent sale or lease that was or would have been treated as the first retail sale of the article under the prior regulations will be treated as a taxable sale for purposes of this section. The tax on such subsequent sale will be based on a price determined under paragraph (d) of this section. For example, if an article was sold to a purchaser who intended to lease such article long-term, the sale would not have been taxable under the prior regulations even though the seller did not receive a certificate of the purchaser's intent to lease the vehicle. If such a sale was treated as nontaxable by the parties, and the purchaser leases it long-term on or after October 1, 1987, the lease will be treated as a taxable sale of the article. The tax is to be computed under paragraph (b)(3)(ii) of this section and the price will be computed under paragraph (d)(5).

(3) Certain sales made after November 11, 1985, and before October 1, 1987—(i) Sales not treated as taxable by purchaser and seller. If a sale to a purchaser after November 11, 1985, and before October 1, 1987, was not treated as taxable by the parties, a subsequent sale or lease that was or would have been treated as the first retail sale of the article under the temporary regulations published in the September 13, 1985, issue of the Federal Register (50 FR 37350) [T.D. 8050, 1985-2, C.B. 206]("the interim regulations") will be treated as taxable sale for purposes of this section. The tax on a sale or lease after September 30, 1987, will be based on a price determined under paragraph (d) of this section. For example, if a vehicle was sold on January 3, 1987, to a purchaser who intended to resell the article and who was not in the business of leasing to any extent, the sale would not have been taxable under the interim regulations even though the seller did not receive a certificate indicating the purchaser's intent to resell the article. If such a sale was not treated as a taxable sale by the parties, and the purchaser resells the article, the resale will be treated as a taxable sale of the article under paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

(ii) Sales treated as first retail sale by purchaser and seller. If the sale of an article after November 11, 1985, and before October 1, 1987, was treated as a taxable sale by the parties and tax was paid with respect to the article under the interim regulations, the subsequent sale of the article by the purchaser will not be treated as a taxable sale under paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

Subchapter D.—Recreational Equipment
Part I.—Sporting Goods

Section 4161.—Imposition of Tax

Definitions and standards of taxation are provided for articles of sport fishing equipment listed in section 4162(a) of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 88-52, below.

Section 4162.—Definitions; Treatment of Certain Resales

(Also Section 4161.)

Sport fishing equipment; definitions; standards of taxation. Definitions and standards of taxation are provided for articles of sport fishing equipment listed in section 4162(a) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 88-52

PURPOSE

This revenue ruling defines certain items of sport fishing equipment that are enumerated in section 4162(a) of the Internal Revenue Code and that are subject to the excise tax under section 4161(a)(1).

LAW

Section 4161(a)(1) of the Code imposes on the sale of any article of sport fishing equipment by the manufacturer, producer, or importer a tax equal to 10 percent of the price for which it is sold.

Section 4161(a)(2)(A) of the Code provides that in the case of an electric outboard motor or sonar device suitable for finding fish, section 4161(a)(1) shall be applied by substituting "3 percent" for "10 percent."

Section 4161(a)(2)(B) of the Code provides that the tax imposed by section 4161(a)(1) on any sonar device suitable for finding fish shall not exceed $30.

Section 4161(a)(3) of the Code provides that in the case of any sale by the manufacturer, producer, or importer of any article of sport fishing equipment, such article shall be treated as including any parts or accessories of such article sold on or in connection therewith or with the sale thereof.

Section 4162(a) of the Code enumerates articles of sport fishing equipment taxable under section 4161(a). Section 4162(b) provides that certain sonar devices shall not be considered sonar devices suitable for finding fish.

DEFINITIONS

In order to assist taxpayers in determining the taxability of fishing equipment, the articles enumerated in section 4162(a) and 4162(b) are defined as follows:

(1) Fishing rods and poles (and component parts therefor). A fishing rod or pole is any tube or shaft-like device (regardless of size or length) made of natural, synthetic, or other material that is designed or used to cast, troll, or otherwise present a bait or lure to fish. The term "fishing rods and poles" does not include bamboo poles that are not designed or intended for use in fishing. Any pole intended for attaching a fishing line to or through is considered a fishing rod or pole. Jigsticks and other similar devices used in ice fishing are considered fishing rods or poles.

A "component part" of a fishing rod or pole is a rod handle, guide, reel seat, blank rod, tip-top, ferrule, or any other device that is designed to be attached to a pole or rod for use in fishing. No tax is imposed on the sale of strike indicators (alarm switches that attach to a fishing rod) and carrying cases for fishing rods.

(2) Fishing reels. A fishing reel is any mechanical device that can be attached to a rod or pole and is used or designed for dispensing and retrieving fishing line. The term includes reels used in fly fishing, reels or spools employed for dispensing and retrieving the line attached to arrows and spears used in fishing, and reels or spools designed for use in ice fishing.

(3) Fly fishing lines and other fishing lines not over 130 pounds test. These lines include all lines, either monofilament, multifilament, synthetic, metal, organic, or inorganic, that are used or designed for the purpose of attaching lures, hooks, flies, bobbers, sinkers, or any other item of terminal tackle, including lines used to attach items of terminal tackle to one another, such as leaders. Fishing lines over 130 pounds test are not taxable. (Such lines are able to suspend a 130 pound weight without breaking or stretching more than five percent of line length while suspending that weight.)

(4) Fishing spears, spear guns, and spear tips. A fishing spear is any tube or shaft-like device that ends in a sharp tip and is designed for the purpose of spearing fish. A spear gun is any device designed for propelling a shaft or tube-like device through the water for the purpose of spearing fish. A spear tip is any device that ends in one or several sharp tips, that may be attached to a shaft or tube-like device, and that is designed for the purpose of spearing fish. Fishing spears, spear guns, and spear tips do not include bows and fish arrows used in the sport of bowfishing.

(5) Items of terminal tackle. Terminal tackle includes, but is not limited to the following items—

(A) Leaders. A leader is any article used for attaching the end of a fishing line to a hook or lure or any other device of terminal tackle. The term includes, but is not limited to, swivels and snaps.

(B) Artificial lures. Artificial lures are all devices (from whatever materials made) that are designed to be attached to a fishing line, and that simulate an article considered edible to fish or that otherwise are intended to induce a fish to attempt to confront, swallow, bite, or consume the device. An artificial lure usually includes one or more attached hooks. Artificial lures include, but are not limited to, plugs, spoons, jigs, feathers, spinners, soft-plastic lures, and spear fishing decoys.

(C) Artificial baits. An artificial bait is any bait that simulates an article considered edible to fish and that is designed to be attached to a hook or lure. The term does not include preserved packaged natural baits.

(D) Artificial flies. An artificial fly consists of a hook to which feathers, beads, lead, or other items are attached to make the article resemble an insect or any other organism considered edible to fish. An artificial fly is usually designed to be attached to a fishing line, leader, swivel, or snap.

(E) Fishing hooks. A fishing hook is any curved or bent metallic device that terminates in a sharp point and is designed for the purpose of catching, holding, or pulling fish or fishing bait.

(F) Bobbers. A bobber is any device used as a means to suspend a fishing line or lure in the water column, or that can be used to visually track the location and status of fishing line and associated hooks and bait. A bobber can be attached to fishing line and is made of wood, cork, plastic, styrofoam, or other material. It can be any size, shape, or color.

(G) Sinkers. A sinker is any device wholly or in part made of lead or another metallic substance designed to attach to a fishing line or to items of terminal tackle in order to cause the terminal tackle to descend into the water column. A sinker can be of any size or shape.

(H) Snaps. A snap is a catch, clip, or fastening device. It is designed at one end to attach to a swivel or tie onto the end of a fishing line and to attach, by means of a clasp at the other end, to items of terminal tackle.

(I) Drayles. A drayle (or drail) is any article made, wholly or in part, of lead or another metallic substance that can be tied or otherwise attached to the end of a fishing line to which are attached leaders or other items of terminal tackle. A drayle (drail) is designed to be trolled behind a boat so that the line or terminal tackle descends into the water column.

(J) Swivels. A swivel is any device designed so that fishing line and/or items of terminal tackle can be attached to one or more of the ends of the device. The device is also designed so that the end(s) of the fishing line and/or items of terminal tackle attached to the end(s) of the device can pivot freely.

No tax is imposed on the sale of items otherwise considered to be terminal tackle if they are designed for use and ordinarily are used on fishing line over 130 pounds test. The term "terminal tackle" does not include natural baits.

(6) Specific items of fishing supplies, accessories and equipment.

(A) Fish stringers. A fish stringer is any article designed or sold as a device for attaching fish through the opercular opening and mouth. The term includes any device consisting of a series of metal or plastic clips, as well as a cord consisting of a ring and threader connected by the cord.

(B) Creels. A creel is any portable container designed for storing and carrying fish from the time they are caught until the time they are removed from the container for consumption or preservation. A creel can be made of any material.

(C) Tackle boxes. A tackle box is a portable container primarily designed, intended for use, or sold as an item in which to store or organize fishing paraphernalia like hooks, lures, flies, sinkers, or bobbers, until the items are placed on a fishing line, rod, or reel. A tackle box can be made of any material.

(D) Bags, baskets, and other containers designed to hold fish. A bag, basket, or other container designed to hold fish is a container designed to be hung over the side of a boat or other structure to keep fish captive and alive in the water. These containers may be made of any material. The term includes collapsible baskets or any similar device designed for the same purpose.

(E) Portable bait containers. A portable bait container is any portable device designed or sold as an article to hold or transport bait in connection with recreational fishing activities. Examples of portable bait containers are minnow buckets, killy cars (floating cages), and grasshopper cages.

(F) Fishing vests. A fishing vest is a garment designed for storing various lures, flies, hooks, or other fishing paraphernalia. A fishing vest may also have the capacity to store fish. A fishing vest is usually made from durable, water-repellent material. The term "fishing vest" includes vests with flotation capacity, but not vests that are intended solely as flotation devices.

(G) Landing nets. A landing net consists of a handle connected to a hoop that is covered by a bag-type net. A landing net is primarily designed for scooping fish out of the water and onto shore, into a vessel, or onto any structure. Any fishing net is taxable as a landing net if it can be used as a landing net and if it incorporates in its design the three major components of a landing net—a handle, a hoop, and a bag-type net. A landing net may have a telescoping handle or may be made of material that floats.

(H) Gaff hooks. A gaff hook consists of a handle and a hook. A gaff hook is primarily designed for holding or lifting fish onto shore, into a vessel, or onto any structure once a fish is brought to the shore, boat, or structure on the end of a fishing line. A gaff hook can be made of any material and can be any size. The hook on a gaff hook may or may not be barbed. The term "gaff hook" includes, but is not limited to, straight or fixed-head gaffs, flying gaffs, and tuna hooks.

(I) Fishing hook disgorgers. A fishing hook disgorger is any implement designed to remove fishing hooks from the mouth, gill, arches, or stomach of fish. A fishing hook disgorger can be made of any material. Pliers are not considered fishing hook disgorgers for purposes of this section.

(J) Dressing for fishing lines and artificial flies. A dressing for fishing lines or artificial flies is any substance designed to be applied to a fishing line or an artificial fly to enhance the flotation of the line or fly or that is otherwise designed to attract fish to the artificial fly.

(7) Fishing tip-ups and tilts. A fishing tip-up or tilt is a device used in ice fishing that is designed to alert the person fishing that a fish is hooked, in the process of attempting to eat bait on a hook, or in the process of attempting to bite a bait or lure. A fishing tip-up or tilt consists of parts such as a spool on a spindle and a spring-mounted flag on opposite ends of a vertical pole or arm, with cross members to support the pole or arm over a hole in the ice. A fishing tip-up or tilt need not have a spring-mounted flag to be considered taxable under this section.

(8) Fishing rod belts. A fishing rod belt is an article that fastens around or near the waist of the person fishing. It is designed for holding the butt end of a rod or pole in a cup-like depression to aid in the handling of the rod or reel. A gimbal belt is an example of a fishing rod belt.

(9) Fishing rod-holders. A fishing rod-holder is a device that is portable and can be inserted into a beach, clamped onto a boat, or mounted onto any structure. A fishing rod-holder holds a rod or pole in a stationary position relative to the beach, boat, or structure. A storage rack for rods, generally known as a rod rack, is not considered a fishing rod-holder for this purpose.

(10) Fishing harnesses. A fishing harness is any article worn by an angler to transmit muscular power to the rod or to absorb strain. Fishing harnesses are usually made of canvas, leather, and/or similar materials, and have straps with devices that can be fastened to the reel and/or sockets into which the rod butt may be seated. A fighting chair harness is an example of a fishing harness.

(11) Fish fighting chairs. A fish fighting chair is a heavily built chair usually designed to have a footrest, rod holder, and swivel base attached. A fish fighting chair is usually permanently installed in a suitable fishing boat for the purpose of fighting deep sea fish with rod and reel. However, the chair may be mounted in the boat so as to be removable.

(12) Fishing outriggers. A fishing outrigger is a device, or pair of devices, attached to a boat, consisting of a braced rod or tube, with a means for attaching a fishing line out and away from the boat for trolling purposes. A fishing line is attached to a fishing outrigger in such a way that when a fish strikes the bait, the line is released from the outrigger so that the fish may be fought directly with rod and reel. A fishing outrigger can be of any size.

(13) Fishing downriggers. A fishing downrigger is a device used for submerging and lowering a fishing line and bait down and away from a boat while trolling. A downrigger usually consists of a boom and reel attached to the boat supporting a cable (downrigger line) and weight (sinker), with a means for attaching fishing line in such a way that when a fish strikes the trolled bait, the line is released from the weight so that the fish may be fought directly with rod and reel.

(14) Electric outboard boat motors. An electric outboard motor includes an electrically powered motor designed to be attached to the outer surface of a boat to facilitate the movement of the boat through the water.

(15) Sonar devices suitable for finding fish. A sonar device suitable for finding fish includes any such device except sonar devices that are graph recorders, digital type devices, and meter readout devices. Similarly, any combination sonar device that includes a graph recorder or meter readout is not taxable as an article of sport fishing equipment. Any other combination device is taxable.

Generally, articles of fishing equipment not specified in sections 4162(a) or 4152(b) of the Code are not subject to tax. Examples of such articles are: portable folding fishing chairs, rod-holders or fishwells designed for permanent installation, and fishing kites. Items of terminal tackle that may not be specifically enumerated in section 4162(a)(5) are subject to the tax.

The tax imposed by section 4161 of the Code applies only to articles of sport fishing equipment that are designed or constructed for use in the sport of fishing. Accordingly, the tax does not apply to those articles that, although nominally articles of sport fishing equipment, are in the nature of toys or novelties that merely simulate articles of sport fishing equipment, and are not designed or constructed for practical use in sport fishing. Except for items of terminal tackle designed for use and ordinarily used on fishing line over 130 pounds test, an article otherwise defined in this revenue ruling as an article of sport fishing equipment is subject to tax under section 4161 unless the taxpayer shows that the article is primarily designed for a purpose other than recreational fishing. If, however, such article as a practical matter can be used for recreational fishing as well as another purpose, the article is subject to tax under section 4161.

Section 4161(a) of the Code subjects to excise tax all parts and accessories for taxable sport fishing equipment that are sold on or in connection with the equipment, or in connection with its sale. The tax attaches in such cases whether or not charges for the parts or accessories are billed separately. To be considered a part or accessory for an article of sport fishing equipment specified in section 4162(a), an item must be either essential to the operation of the specified article, or be designed to improve its performance or appearance.

Subchapter B.—Communications

Section 4251.—Imposition of Tax

26 CFR 49.4251-1: Imposition of tax.
(Also Section 4252; 49.4252-1.)

Communications; leases; customer premises equipment. Lease payments for customer premises equipment used in connection with local telephone service are amounts paid for local telephone service and thus are subject to the tax imposed by section 4251(a)(1) of the Code, even though those payments are made to a lessor that does not otherwise provide access to a local telecommunications system.

Rev. Rul. 88-5

ISSUE

Does the communications excise tax imposed by section 4251(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code apply to lease payments for customer premises equipment (CPE) that is used in connection with local telephone service, if the payments are made to a lessor that does not otherwise provide access to a local telecommunications system?

FACTS

A vendor that is not otherwise engaged in providing access to a local telecommunications system leases CPE to residential and business customers. CPE is equipment (including mobile equipment) that is located on the customer's premises and is used wholly or in part for communications purposes. The customer uses the CPE in connection with local telephone service provided by a local telephone company that is unrelated to the vendor. None of the leased CPE is provided by the vendor in connection with the customer's nontaxable "private communication service" as defined in section 4252(d) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4251(a)(1) of the Code imposes an excise tax on amounts paid for communications services. Those services, as enumerated in section 4251(b)(1), are: local telephone service, toll telephone service, and teletypewriter exchange service.

Section 4252(a) of the Code defines "local telephone service" as:

> (1) the access to a local telephone system, and the privilege of telephonic quality communication with substantially all persons having telephone or radio telephone stations constituting a part of such local telephone system, and
> (2) any facility or service provided in connection with a service described in paragraph (1).
> The term "local telephone service" does not include any service which is a "toll telephone service" or a "private communication service" as defined in subsections (b) and (d) of section 4252.

The recurring payments for CPE in the present situation are not for a "toll telephone service" as that term is defined in section 4252(b) of the Code or a "private communication service" as that term is defined in section 4252(d). However, the question remains whether leased CPE constitutes a "facility" provided in connection with access to a local telephone system and the privilege of telephonic quality communication with substantially all persons having telephone or radio telephone stations constituting a part of such local telephone system.

The Facilities and Services Excise Tax Regulations predate the statutory use of, and hence do not define, the term "local telephone service." However, section 49.4252-1 of the regulations does define the term "general telephone service," a term that was replaced in sections 4251 and 4252 with the term "local telephone service" by the Excise Tax Reduction Act of 1965, 1965-2 C.B. 568.

The legislative history of the Excise Tax Reduction Act of 1965 states that the term "local telephone service" was adopted in place of "general telephone service" and other changes in the wording of section 4252 of the Code were made in order:

> to make it clear that it is the service as such which is being taxed and not merely the equipment being supplied. Thus, in the case of local telephone service, the definition makes it clear that it is the right of access to a local telephone system and the privilege of telephonic quality communication which is taxed together with facilities or services provided with this service.

In interpreting the term "general telephone services," section 49.4252-1(b)(5) of the regulations provides as follows:

> In cases where a person leases line or channels, equipment, and other facilities used in conjunction with general telephone service, the amounts paid by such person for such lines or channels, equipment, and other facilities constitute amounts paid for general telephone service, notwithstanding the fact that the lines or channels, equipment, and other facilities used in conjunction with such service are supplied by different persons or in part by the user of such service.

Thus, this regulation indicates that "equipment" such as CPE is a specific "facility" among "other facilities" expressly referenced therein. Further, the regulation provides that amounts paid for such equipment constitute amounts paid for "general telephone service" even though such equipment is supplied by a person other than the person supplying the exchange connection.

Although the 1965 amendments to section 4252 of the Code clarified that payments for telephone access "and not merely" payments for telephone equipment were included in the tax base, payments for the provision of equipment were not removed from the tax base. Moreover, there was no indication of Congressional intent to change the rule in the regulations that payments for "facilities used in conjunction with" telephone services are taxable even when those facilities "are supplied by different persons."

The above interpretation is consistent with the result reached on similar facts in Situation 1 of Rev. Rul. 73-401, 1973-2 C.B. 363, modified by Rev. Rul. 86-36, 1986-1 C.B. 325. In Rev. Rul. 73-401, a lessee used communications equipment in connection with a taxable local telephone service. The lessor of the equipment was not otherwise engaged in furnishing communications services. The ruling holds that the lease payments for the communications equipment are amounts paid for equipment provided in connection with a taxable communications service and, therefore, the tax imposed by section 4251(a)(1) of the Code applies to amounts paid for the use of that equipment.

Rev. Rul. 86-36 does not require a different result here. That ruling held that the Internal Revenue Service will follow the decision in Trans-Lux Corporation v. United States, 696 F. 2d 963 (Fed. Cir. 1982). Trans-Lux held that rental payments for the lease of a teletypewriter terminal are not subject to the federal communications tax on teletypewriter exchange service. Regardless whether the lessor of the terminals also provides a teletypewriter exchange service, the rental payments are not subject to the tax because the lease of a teletypewriter terminal does not provide either access to a teletypewriter exchange system or the privilege of intercommunication with all persons constituting a part of the same teletypewriter exchange system. The rationale of that holding is not applicable here. Unlike the definition of "local telephone service" in section 4252(a) of the Code, the definition of "teletypewriter exchange service" in section 4252(c) refers only to "access. . .and the privilege of intercommunication" and not to "any facility. . .provided in connection with" that access or privilege.

Accordingly, CPE is a taxable "facility" and, to be taxed, that facility need not be provided by the same entity providing the service described in section 4252(a)(1) of the Code. To fall within the meaning of the term "local telephone service," the facility need only be provided "in connection with" the service described in section 4252(a)(1).

HOLDING

The lease payments for CPE used in connection with local telephone service are amounts paid for local telephone service under section 4252(a) of the Code, and thus are subject to the tax imposed by section 4251(a)(1), even though those payments are made to a lessor that does not otherwise provide access to a local telecommunications system.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 41—EXCISE TAX ON USE OF CERTAIN HIGHWAY MOTOR VEHICLES

Reduction of Heavy Vehicle Use Tax for Foreign-Based Vehicles

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the imposition of the heavy vehicle use tax on foreign-based highway motor vehicles. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987. The regulations affect owners of highway motor vehicles that have a base for registration purposes in a contiguous foreign country and provide them with the guidance needed to comply with the law.

DATES: The regulations are effective for taxable periods beginning after June 30, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On September 4, 1987, the Federal Register published a notice of proposed rulemaking proposing amendments to the Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 41) under sections 4481, 4483, 6001, and 6091 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code) (52 FR 33602) by cross-reference to temporary regulations published the same day in the Federal Register (52 FR 33583). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 507 of the Highway Revenue Act of 1987 (Title V of the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987) (Pub. L. 100-17, 101 Stat. 260) which imposed the heavy vehicle use tax under section 4481 of the Code on foreign-based highway motor vehicles. The Internal Revenue Service did not receive any comments on the proposed regulations. No public hearing was requested or held. For this reason, the final regulations adopt the temporary regulations without any substantive changes.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS

It has been determined that this regulation will not have a significant impact on a substantial number of small entities. The number of small entities affected is minimal. Accordingly, these final regulations are not subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act of 1980 (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6). The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this regulation is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required.

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These regulations have been approved by OMB.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 41 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 41 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 41.6001-3 also issued under 101 Stat. 260.

Par. 2. Section 41.4481-1 is amended by substituting "1993" for "1988" every place it appears and by revising paragraph (a)(2) to read as set forth below:

(2) (i) For taxable periods beginning after June 30, 1985, and before July 1, 1987, any highway motor vehicle that is issued a base plate by a Canadian province under the International Registration Plan (IRP) or similar agreement and has a proportional registration under such agreement to satisfy the registration laws of any of the United States shall be exempt from the tax imposed by section 4481(a).

(ii) For each taxable period beginning after June 30, 1987, the tax imposed by section 4481(a) shall apply to any highway motor vehicle that has a base for registration purposes in a contiguous foreign country upon the first use of such vehicle on the public highways in the United States during such period. See §41.4483-7 relating to a reduction of the tax in the case of a highway motor vehicle that has a base for registration purposes in a contiguous foreign country.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Section 41.4481-3 is amended by revising the first sentence of paragraph (a) to read as set forth below:

§41.4481-3 Registration.

(a) For purposes of the regulations in this part, the term "registered" when used in reference to a highway motor vehicle means—

(1) Registered under the law of any State or Territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, or contiguous foreign country, or

(2) Required to be registered under the law of any State or Territory of the United States or contiguous foreign country in which such highway motor vehicle is operated or situated or, in case the vehicle is operated or situated in the District of Columbia, under the law of the District of Columbia.

* * * * *

Par. 4. Section 41.4482(c)-1 is amended by substituting "1993" for "1988" every place it appears in paragraph (b).

Par. 5. Section 41.4483-5 is amended by substituting "1993" for "1988" where it appears.

Par. 6. A new §41.4483-7 is added immediately after §41.4483-6 to read as follows:

§41.4483-7 Reduction in tax for vehicles registered in a contiguous foreign country.

(a) In general. In the case of a highway motor vehicle that, for any taxable period, has a base for registration purposes in a contiguous foreign country, the tax imposed by section 4481 for such taxable period shall be 75 percent of the tax that would be imposed but for this section. A highway motor vehicle has a base for registration purposes in a contiguous foreign country in any taxable period in which such vehicle is registered under the laws of a contiguous foreign country and such vehicle is not registered under the laws of any of the United States other than proportionately registered under a proration agreement (such as the International Registration Plan). A highway motor vehicle is not considered to have a base for registration purposes in a contiguous foreign country in any taxable period in which such vehicle is registered under the laws of any of the United States and such State is required under §41.6001-2(b) to receive proof of payment of the tax imposed by section 4481(a) with respect to such highway motor vehicle. For purposes of this paragraph (a), a highway motor vehicle that is allowed to operate in a State under a reciprocity agreement is not considered to be registered under the laws of that State.

(b) Contiguous foreign country. The term "contiguous foreign country" means Canada or Mexico.

Par. 7. A new §41.6001-3 is added immediately after §41.6001-2 to read as follows:

§41.6001-3 Proof of payment for entry into the United States.

(a) In general. (1) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, proof of payment of the tax imposed by section 4481(a) must be presented to United States Customs officials with respect to any highway motor vehicle subject to the tax imposed by section 4481(a) that has a base for registration purposes in a contiguous foreign country upon entry of such vehicle into the United States during any taxable period to which this section applies. Such proof of payment must relate to tax paid (or suspended under §41.4483-3) for the taxable period that includes the date of entry into the United States. See paragraph (c) of this section for the definition of the term "proof of payment."

(2) No proof of payment is required upon entry of a highway motor vehicle described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section into the United States if, as of the date of such entry, the period of time for filing a return of the tax imposed on such vehicle by section 4481(a) for the taxable period that includes the date of such entry has not expired and a written declaration is presented to United States Customs officials. Such declaration must state that, as of the date of such entry, the period of time for filing a return of the tax imposed on such vehicle by section 4481(a) for the taxable period that includes the date of such entry has not expired. The written declaration must include (1) the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the person liable under §41.4481-2 for the tax imposed on such vehicle; (2) the vehicle identification number of such vehicle; (3) the date on which such vehicle was first used on the public highways in the United States during the taxable period (or a statement that the current entry is the first use on the public highways in the United States during the taxable period); (4) an acknowledgement by the person liable for the tax imposed on such vehicle that the willful use of the declaration to evade or defeat the tax otherwise applicable under section 4481(a) will subject such person to a fine or imprisonment or both; and (5) the signature of the person liable for the tax imposed on such vehicle. A copy of the written declaration shall be retained in the records of the person liable for the tax imposed on such vehicle under the rules of §41.6001-1. See §41.6071(a)-1 for rules regarding the time for filing a return of the tax imposed by section 4481(a).

(b) Failure to provide proof of payment. If, upon attempting to enter the United States, the operator of a highway motor vehicle described in paragraph (1) of this section is unable to present proof of payment of the tax imposed by section 4481(a), or documentation described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, with respect to such vehicle, then such vehicle may be denied entry into the United States.

(c) Proof of payment—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, the proof of payment required in paragraph (a) of this section shall consist of a receipted Schedule 1 (Form 2290) that is returned by the Internal Revenue Service to a taxpayer that files a return of tax under section 4481(a) and pays the amount of tax (or installment thereof) due with such return. A photocopy of such receipted Schedule 1 shall also serve as proof of payment. Such proof of payment shall also serve as proof of suspension of the tax under §41.4483-3 for the number of vehicles entered in that part of the Schedule 1 designated for vehicles for which tax has been suspended. The vehicle identification number of any vehicle for which a return is being filed, whether tax is being paid with respect to such vehicle or tax is suspended on such vehicle, must appear on the Schedule 1 (or an attached page) in order for the Schedule 1 to be a valid proof of payment for such vehicle.

(2) Acceptable substitute for receipted Schedule 1. For purposes of this section, a photocopy of the Form 2290 (with the Schedule 1 attached) that is filed with the Internal Revenue Service for a vehicle being entered into the United States with sufficient documentation of payment of tax due at the time the Form 2290 is filed (such as a photocopy of both sides of a cancelled check) shall be accepted as proof of payment. No documentation of payment of tax is required with the substitute proof of payment if at the time the Form 2290 is filed the tax imposed by section 4481(a) is suspended under §41.4483-3 with respect to the vehicle entering the United States. This substitute proof of payment may be used to enter a vehicle into the United States when, for example, the receipted Schedule 1 has been lost, or if the taxpayer that filed a Form 2290 with respect to such vehicle has not received a receipted Schedule 1 at the time such vehicle enters the United States.

(d) Taxable periods to which this section applies. This section shall apply to any taxable period beginning on or after July 1, 1987.

Par. 8. Section 41.6091-1 is amended as follows:

(a) The second sentence of paragraph (a) is revised to read as set forth below.

(b) The second sentence of paragraph (b) is revised to read as set forth below.

§41.6091-1 Place for filing returns.

(a)  If the person has no principal place of business or legal residence in any internal revenue district, the return shall be filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA.

(b)  If a corporation has no principal place of business or principal office or agency in any internal revenue district, the return shall be filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA.

Par. 9. The authority for 26 CFR Part 602 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 10. Section 602.101(c) is amended by inserting the following item in the appropriate place in the table:

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains final amendments to the Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 55) under chapter 44 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. These amendments provide guidance for the proper manner and method of reporting and paying the 4% excise tax imposed on REITs and RICs. The regulations reflect the amendment to section 4981 by section 668 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 ("Act") (Pub. L. No. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2085)[1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1, 223] and the addition of section 4982 by section 651 of the Act. This document also contains an amendment to the temporary regulations relating to certain elections under the Act (26 CFR §5h.5). T.D. 8124 [1987-1 C.B. 353], which added 26 CFR §5h.5, was published in the Federal Register (52 FR 3623) on February 5, 1987. The amendment to the temporary regulations relates to the time for making the election available to RICs under section 4982(e)(4). These amendments were published in proposed form in the FEDERAL REGISTER on September 9, 1987 (52 FR 33953) [1987-2 C.B. 1033]. There was no public hearing regarding the proposed amendments, and there were no written comments regarding the proposed amendments. Therefore, the amendments, as proposed, are adopted by this Treasury Decision.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS
EXCISE TAX PROCEDURES

Section 4981 imposes a nondeductible excise tax on any REIT. Such excise tax is equal to 4% of the excess, if any, of the required distribution for any calendar year over the distributed amount for such calendar year. New section 4982 imposes a similar nondeductible 4% excise tax on RICs. In general, these provisions require a REIT or a RIC to distribute an amount equal to the sum of specified percentages of its ordinary income and capital gain net income to its shareholders prior to the end of any calendar year in order to avoid the excise tax liability. Amounts not required to be distributed currently must be distributed before the end of the following calendar year.

The regulations prescribe the manner and method of paying the excise taxes imposed under sections 4981 and 4982. If a REIT is liable for the excise tax imposed by section 4981, such tax must be reported on Form 8612. A RIC which is liable for the excise tax imposed by section 4982 must report such tax on Form 8613. The excise tax return must be filed on or before March 15 of the first calendar year subsequent to the calendar year to which the excise tax liability applies. Full payment of the excise tax liability must accompany the excise tax return. The excise tax return, together with the payment satisfying such excise tax, are to be filed at the place specified in the existing regulations under Part 55. District directors and directors of service centers have the discretion to grant extensions of time for filing the excise tax return of up to six months. However, an extension of time for filing the excise tax return generally shall not operate to extend the time for the payment of the excise tax or any part thereof. Thus, payment satisfying the excise tax liability must still be made on or before the prescribed due date for the excise tax return, i.e., March 15.

Section 4981, as in effect prior to the amendments made by the Act, imposed an excise tax on the undistributed income of a REIT determined on the basis of the REIT's taxable year. The amendments made to section 4981 by the Act impose an excise tax on the undistributed income of a REIT determined on the basis of a calendar year, effective for calendar years after 1986. The regulations interpret the amendments made to section 4981 by the Act so that a REIT with a taxable year ending after December 31, 1986, will not be liable for the excise tax under the pre-Act version of section 4981 for that year.

The regulations do not address the determination of the proper amount of the excise tax imposed by sections 4981 and 4982. Any issues related to such determination that may be appropriately addressed by regulations will be considered when regulations are developed to reflect other amendments to the REIT and RIC provisions made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

SECTION 4982(e)(4) ELECTION

Section 4982(e)(4) allows a RIC to elect to use the period ending November 30 or December 31 for purposes of computing capital gain net income under section 4982 if that date corresponds to the end of the RIC's taxable year. Once an election under section 4982(e)(4) has been made by a RIC, the election can only be revoked with the consent of the Secretary. Section 5h.5(a)(2)(vi) of Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations provides that the election under section 4982(e)(4) is to be made on the excise tax return for RICs (Form 8613) and that the election must be made on or before March 15 of the first calendar year beginning after the end of the first excise tax period for which the election is to be effective. Because RICs must also use Form 8613 to report and pay the excise tax imposed under section 4982, and because RICs are permitted to request an extension of time to file Form 8613, the amendment to §5h.5(a)(2)(vi) permits an extension of time for making the election under section 4982(e)(4) in those situations where a RIC is granted an extension of time to file Form 8613.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis therefore is not required. Although a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicited public comment was issued, the Internal Revenue Service concluded when the notice was issued that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply because the rules provided herein are interpretative. Accordingly, these final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The collections of information contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. The requirements have been approved by OMB under control number 1545-0999.

Section 4981A.—Tax on Excess Distributions From Qualified Retirement Plans.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE, CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, SUBCHAPTER H, PART 54—PENSION EXCISE TAXES PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Excise Tax on Excess Distributions From Retirement Plans

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to excess distributions from qualified plans, individual retirement plans, and section 403(b) annuity contracts, custodial accounts, and retirement income accounts. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. These regulations will affect administrators of, participants in, and beneficiaries of qualified pension, etc. plans; institutions that sponsor and individuals who administer individual retirement plans, individuals who use individual retirement plans and simplified employee pensions for retirement income and beneficiaries of individual retirement plans; and employees for whom amounts are contributed to section 403(b) annuity contracts, custodial accounts, or retirement income accounts and beneficiaries of such contracts and accounts. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations for the notice of proposed rulemaking  [page 880, this Bulletin.]

DATES: The regulations generally apply to calendar years beginning after December 31, 1986, except as otherwise specified in the Act.

SUMMPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document amends the Pension Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 54) to provide temporary rules under section 4981A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. The temporary regulations reflect the addition of section 4981A to the Code by section 1133 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (1986 Act) (100 Stat. 2481) [1986–3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 398].

DESCRIPTION OF EXCESS DISTRIBUTION RULES OVERVIEW

The 1986 Act provides for a new excise tax under section 4981A on excess distributions from qualified retirement plans and tax-sheltered annuities (qualified employer plans) and individual retirement accounts (IRAs).

To the extent that during any calendar year annual distributions for an individual from qualified employer plans and IRAs exceed a threshold amount, the 1986 Act generally imposes an excise tax equal to 15 percent of this excess. If the individual is also liable for the 10-percent tax on early distributions under section 72(t) (also added by the 1986 Act), this new excise tax on the excess distributions may be reduced by the 10-percent income tax on early distributions. Not every distribution from these plans and IRAs is subject to the 15-percent excise tax. The provision allows reduction for specific itemized exceptions and also allows a reduction for pre-existing accrued benefits as of August 1, 1986. These reductions are discussed below. The 1986 Act also imposes an excise tax equal to 15 percent of the decedent's benefits that are held under qualified employer plans and IRAs on the date of death. This excise tax on death is treated as an additional tax imposed under the estate tax provisions. In general, this excise tax is an additional estate tax and the calculation of this excise tax is independent of the calculation of the estate tax owed upon death.

TAX ON LIFETIME DISTRIBUTIONS

Section 4981A of the Internal Revenue Code (Code) imposes an excise tax on an individual who receives "excess distributions" from qualified employer plans and IRAs. Excess distributions are defined in section 4981A(c)(1) as the total amount of distributions during any calendar year to the extent that such amounts exceed either $112,500 (adjusted for cost-of-living increases (COLAs)) or $150,000. The plan or IRA need not be tax-qualified at the time of the distributions if it previously received the benefits of tax-qualified status. Not all distributions from these plans or IRAs are subject to the excise tax. Section 4981A lists various exclusions. Among these exclusions are distributions made after the individual's death (these distributions are subject to the excise tax on death); payments made to a spouse or former spouse pursuant to a qualified domestic relations order that are includible in the income of such spouse; tax-free distributions attributable to the individual's investment under the plan or IRA (e.g., after-tax employee contributions, loan amounts previously includible in the individual's income, etc.); and distributions to the individual that are not includible in gross income because the individual makes a qualifying rollover (e.g., a rollover to an IRA or qualified retirement plan permitted by Code sections 402(a)(5), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 405(d)(3) or 408(d)(3)). Additionally, the regulations provide for exclusion of medical benefits and health coverage provided under an arrangement described in section 401(h) that are excludible from income under section 104, 105, or 106. Distributions to a spouse, as described above, are distributions to such spouse for purposes of calculating the spouse's tax under this provision.

Section 54.4981A–1T a. General Provisions and Excess Distributions, Q&A a–1 through a–9, discusses how this excise tax is computed in the case of these lifetime distributions.

SPECIAL GRANDFATHER RULE

Section 4981A(c)(5) allows an individual to elect a special rule to calculate the individual's tax under this new provision. In order to be eligible for this special calculation, the individual must have benefits under these plans and IRAs whose present value equals at least $562,500 as of August 1, 1986 (grandfather amount). If this special rule is elected, the individual's distributions are offset by the grandfather amount in a manner specified under these regulations over the individual's lifetime, and upon death in the case of an outstanding grandfather amount. The grandfather benefits are not specifically allocated to individual plans but rather offset all distributions that are subject to the new tax. The regulations provide methods for calculating these grandfathered benefits. The calculation of benefits as of August 1, 1986 is done by plan administrators or trustees who hold benefits under these plans or IRAs. The rules provide an alternative simplified method for calculating the grandfather amount. Generally, the amount of such benefits is furnished to the individual upon the individual's request and is then used to substantiate the individual's (or the estate's) calculation of the excise tax for all years that the individual has remaining assets in all retirement plans and IRAs, including one for which the individual has no grandfather benefit.

The regulations provide rules as to the rate at which the grandfathered benefit is recovered (See Q&A b–11 through 14 of §54.4981A–1T). In order to use this special tax calculation under the grandfather rule, an individual must elect in a manner specified under the regulations. Also, the individual must choose between two alternative methods for recovering the grandfather amount, the "discretionary method" or "the attained age method." Under either method, all distributions received between August 1 and December 31, 1986 are treated as grandfathered amounts.

Under the discretionary method, distributions after 1986 are treated as coming from grandfather amounts in an amount equal to 10 percent of the distributions. For any calendar year, the individual may elect to accelerate the 10-percent rate of grandfather recovery to 100 percent. If the individual elects this acceleration, the 100 percent rate applies to all distributions in the calendar year and, to the extent that there is a remaining grandfather amount, applies to subsequent years until the grandfather benefits are reduced to zero. This discretionary method is provided in the regulations because other methods considered would impose burdensome and complex recordkeeping on administrators of all qualified employer plans and IRAs under which the individual has benefits.

The other method, the attained age method, is only available to an individual who was 35 or older on August 1, 1986. Under this method the distributions that are received in a calendar year are treated as a recovery of the grandfather amount based on a formula that takes into account the individual's age on August 1, 1986 and the individual's age on the December 31 of the calendar year. In general, under this method the grandfather amount recovered diminishes as the individual ages.

Even though distributions that are treated as a recovery of a grandfather amount are not taxable, they are taken into account (by applying such amounts first against the threshold amount) in determining whether or not other distributions that the individual receives are subject to the excise tax. An individual who elects the special rule for the grandfather amount has a threshold amount that is limited to $112,500 (adjusted for COLAs) and may not use the $150,000 threshold amount. Thus, for example, an individual who recovers distributions under the 10-percent discretionary rule in calendar year 1987 and who receives a distribution of $150,000 in 1987 has $37,500 of distributions subject to the excise tax of 15 percent ($150,000 – $112,500). Because the portion of the distribution which is treated as the grandfather amount recovered of $15,000 (10% of $150,000) is less than the threshold amount of $112,500, the recovery of this grandfather amount does not affect the calculation of the 1987 excise tax.

ADDITIONAL EXCISE TAX UPON DEATH

Section 4981A(d) imposes a 15-percent tax on the individual's excess accumulation on the date of death. In general, accumulation is defined in the same manner as distributions except that there is no exclusion for distributions made after death and the imposition of the tax is not conditioned on receipt of a distribution. The excise tax on an excess accumulation is imposed by increasing the Chapter 11 (estate) tax otherwise due with respect to the individual's estate. The tax is payable under the rules governing the payment of estate tax, e.g., the tax is due 9 months after the date of death and is paid by the executor.

This 15-percent additional excise tax is unaffected by the normal estate tax calculation. Thus, no credits, deductions, exclusions or other special rules for determining the decedent's estate tax affect the calculation of the section 4981A(d) excise tax. For example, the 15-percent tax may apply even though there is no estate tax liability and a Form 706 would have to be filed only to report the excise tax.

The accumulation equals the value of the decedent's interest in all qualified retirement plans and IRAs on the date of death. Generally, these values are determined in the same manner that the value of such interest would be determined for purposes of the estate tax. If the estate is subject to estate tax, the alternate valuation date rules in section 2032 apply. In calculating the amount of the excess accumulation, the value of the decedent's interest in qualified employer plans and IRAs is taken into account regardless of the number of the decedent's beneficiaries. Life insurance proceeds excludible under section 101(a) are not subject to tax.

The calculation of this additional excise tax upon death is done in accordance with several special computational rules. First, an alternative threshold amount is used to determine the amount of the excess accumulation. The alternative threshold amount is based on a hypothetical single life annuity commencing as of the date of the decedent's death payable for the life of an individual whose age is the same as the age of the decedent (in whole years) as of the date of the decedent's death. The annual amount of such annuity used to determine the alternative threshold amount is the annual threshold amount ($150,000 or the applicable $112,500 adjusted for COLAs) in effect on the date of death.

Second, if the special grandfather rule applies and the decedent's remaining unrecovered grandfather amount exceeds the applicable alternative threshold amount, the excess accumulation is determined by reducing the decedent's accumulation by the decedent's remaining unrecovered grandfather amount rather than by the alternative threshold amount.

The excise tax on accumulations is in lieu of subjecting post-death distributions (including distributions of death benefits under these plans or IRAs) to the annual tax on excess distributions received by the decedent's beneficiaries. Thus, except in limited circumstances such as a decedent's spouse (or other individual permitted under prior law) treating a retirement plan or IRA as his own plan or IRA, the decedent's interest in such plan or IRA will not be subject to the tax on lifetime distributions when received by the decedent's beneficiary or beneficiaries.

REPORTING, RECORDKEEPING AND ELECTIONS GRANDFATHER AMOUNTS

An individual must make the special grandfather elections on the individual's income tax return for the 1987 or 1988 taxable year. In general, those elections become irrevocable upon the time for filing, with extensions, the return for the 1988 taxable year. If the individual is deceased, the personal representative of the individual may make such elections. The value of the grandfather amount is determined under the records furnished to the individual by the individuals responsible for administering the plans and IRAs. The individual must maintain these records, as well as a copy of the return under which the elections were made, to substantitate later recovery of grandfather amounts. The individual may not independently determine the value of the grandfather amount, as the grandfather amount may only be substantiated by records furnished the individual under the plans or IRAs for which the individual is claiming a grandfather amount. The regulations provide rules governing how the individual and the plan or IRA trustees or plan administrators must keep records, request information or furnish information concerning these grandfather amounts.

The individual in each taxable year that is subject to the new excise tax must furnish information concerning all distributions from qualified employer plans and IRAs with the individual's income tax return. The tax is reported on the Form 5329, Return for Individual Retirement Arrangement and Qualified Retirement Plans Taxes. The Form 5329 is presently being revised and will be available later this year. The tax is due at the time for filing the relevant income tax return in the same manner that income taxes would be due. Individuals who have no grandfather amount and receive distributions that are less than the threshold amount ($150,000 or $112,500 indexed) are not required to file the Form 5329 for the taxable year.

In general, comparable reporting rules apply to the excise tax on excess accumulations. Thus, the personal representative may elect the grandfather rule in the same manner that the individual may elect the rules. The executor of the estate of an individual who has an excess accumulation must file Schedule S (Form 706) with the applicable estate tax return of the individual. Thus, the excise tax is due when the estate tax (if any) would be due. The Schedule S (Form 706) and applicable instructions will provide more detail and rules as to the reporting of the excise tax under section 4981A.

OTHER SPECIAL RULES

The regulations provide special rules for (1) taxpayers who elect special tax treatment under sections 402 and 403 for lump sum distributions received in a taxable year (see Q&A c-1 of §54.4981A-1T); and (2) the offset of the excise tax on excess distributions by the 10-percent tax under section 72(t) on early distributions from qualified retirement plans (see Q&A c-4 of §54.4981A-1T).

EFFECTIVE DATE OF TAX

The excise tax is generally effective with respect to excess distributions received after December 31, 1986 (see Q&A c-6 of §54.4981A-1T). The additional excise tax on excess accumulations is effective for deaths occurring after December 31, 1986 (see Q&A d-11 of §54.4981A-1T).

ANTICIPATION OF TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS

H.R. 2636 and S. 1350, "the Technical Corrections Act of 1987" would provide numerous technical corrections to section 4981A, correcting and clarifying the rules contained therein. The rules adopted in the regulations anticipate the technical corrections that are arguably clarifying rather the correcting. The rules in the regulations that anticipate technical corrections are listed below:

a. Determination of excess contributions.

1. The regulations provide that the distribution of an annuity contract not currently includible in income in satisfaction of plan liabilities is disregarded for purposes of calculating excess distributions.

2. The regulations provide that distributions of certain excess deferrals and excess contributions are not taken into account in determining excess contributions.

b. Determination of excess accumulation.

1. The regulations provide that, in determining a decedent's aggregate interest for purposes of determining the tax on excess accumulations, certain benefits are excluded. Those benefits are benefits which generally parallel benefits which if distributed before death, would have been excluded in determining excess distributions. Those benefits also include life insurance proceeds excludible under section 101(a).

2. The regulations provide that no credits under section 2010 through 2016 or other reduction permitted by chapter 11 are allowable against the tax under section 4981A(d) for excess accumulations.

3. The regulations provide that excess accumulations are computed without regard to community property law.

4. The regulations provide that the alternate threshold amount used to determine excess accumulations is based on a hypothetical single life annuity for the life of an individual whose age is the same as the age of the decedent (in whole years) as of the decedent's date of death.

c. Application of the grandfather rule.

1. The regulations apply the grandfather rule at death in determining the amount of the tax on excess accumulations.

2. The regulations provide that certain benefits payable with respect to an individual are not taken into account in determining the amount grandfathered. These are benefits (e.g., the individual's investment in the contract and benefits payable to certain alternate payees) that when distributed are excluded in determining the amount of excess distributions.

3. The regulations provide that the election of the grandfather rule must be made not later than the due date (with extensions) for filing the individual's 1988 income tax return.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The collection of information requirements contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB under Control NO. 1545-0203.

Adoption of amendments to the Regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 54 and 602 are amended as follows:

PENSION EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS (26 CFR Part 54)

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 54 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 54.4981A-1T is also issued under 26 U.S.C. 4981A.

Par. 2. There is added the following new section after §54.4978-1T to read as follows: §54.4981A-1T Tax on excess distributions and excess accumulations (Temporary).

The following questions and answers relate to the tax on excess distributions and excess accumulations under section 4981A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by section 1133 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514)[1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 1),1, 398].

a. General Provisions and Excess Distributions.

a-1: Q. What changes were made by section 1133 of TRA '86 regarding excise taxes applicable to distributions from qualified employer plans and individual retirement plans?

A. Section 1133 of TRA '86 added section 4981A to the Code. Section 4981A imposes an excise tax of 15 percent on (a) excess distributions, as defined in section 4981A(c)(1) and Q&A a-2 of this section, and (b) excess accumulations, as defined in section 4981A(d)(3) and Q&A d-2 of this section. The excise tax on excess distributions generally applies to excess distributions made after December 31, 1986 (see Q&A c-6 of this section). The excise tax on excess accumulations applies to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1986 (see Q&A d-11 of this section). Excess distributions are certain distributions from qualified employer plans and individual retirement plans. Excess accumulations are certain amounts held on the date of death of an employee or individual by qualified plans and individual retirement plans.

a-2: Q. How are excess distributions defined?

A. Excess distributions are generally defined as the excess of the aggregate amount of distributions received by or with respect to an individual during a calendar year over the greater of (a) $150,000 (unindexed) or (b) $112,500 (indexed as provided in Q&A a-9 of this section beginning in 1988 for cost-of-living increases). Certain individuals may elect to have the portion of their excess distributions that is subject to tax determined under a "special grandfather" rule that is described below (see Q&A b-1 through b-14 of this section).

a-3: Q. Distributions from what plans and arrangements are taken into account in applying section 4981A?

A. (a) General rule. Section 4981A applies to distributions under any qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan described in section 4981A(e). For this purpose, a qualified employer plan means any—

(1) Qualified pension, profit-sharing or stock bonus plan described in section 401(a) that includes a trust exempt from tax under section 501(a);

(2) Annuity plan described in section 403(a);

(3) Annuity contract, custodial account, or retirement income account described in section 403(b)(1), 403(b)(7) or 403(b)(9); and

(4) Qualified bond purchase plan described in section 405(a) prior to that section's repeal by section 491(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (TRA '84)[1984-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 356].

(b) Individual retirement plan. An individual retirement plan is defined in section 7701(a)(37) and means any individual retirement account described in section 408(a) or individual retirement annuity described in section 408(b). Also, an individual retirement plan includes a retirement bond described in section 409(a) prior to that section's repeal by section 491(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (TRA '84)[1984-3 C.B. (Vol. 1)1, 356].

(c) Other distributions. (1) Distributions under any plan, contract or account that has at any time been treated as a qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan described in paragraph (a) or (b) of this Q&A a-3 will be treated for purposes of section 4981A as distributions from a qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan whether or not such plan, contract, or account satisfies the applicable qualification requirements at the time of the distribution.

(2)(i) For purposes of this paragraph (c), an employer plan will be considered to have been treated as a qualified employer plan if any employer maintaining the plan has at any time filed an income tax return and claimed deductions that would be allowable under section 404 (and that were not disallowed) only if the plan was a qualified employer plan under section 401(a) or 403(a). Similarly, if an income tax return has been filed at any time with respect to the trust (or plan or insurance company), and the income of the trust (insurance company, etc.) is reported (and is not disallowed) based on the trust (or plan) being treated as a qualified employer plan described in section 401(a), or 403(a) or (b), then the employer plan is considered to have been treated as a qualified employer plan.

(ii) For purposes of this paragraph (c), an individual retirement plan (IRA) will be considered to have been treated as a qualified IRA if any contributions to the IRA were either deducted (or designated as a nondeductible contribution described in section 408(o)) on a filed individual income tax return or excluded from an individual's gross income on a filed income tax return because such contributions were reported as regular contributions or rollover contributions (such as those described in section 402(a)(5), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), or 408(d)(3)) to an IRA described in section 408(a) or (b) (or section 409 of pre-1984 law). Similar treatment applies to an employer contribution to a simplified employee pension described in section 408(k), if such contribution is deducted on an employer's filed income tax return, including a self-employed individual's return.

a-4: Q. Which distributions with respect to an individual under a qualified employer plan or an individual retirement plan are excluded from consideration for purposes of determining an individual's excess distributions?

A. (a) Exclusions. In determining the extent to which an individual has excess distributions for a calendar year, the following distributions are disregarded—

(1) Any distribution received by any person with respect to an individual as a result of the death of that individual.

(2) Any distribution with respect to an individual that is received by an alternate payee under a qualified domestic relations order within the meaning of section 414(p) that is includible in the income of the alternate payee.

(3) Any distribution with respect to an individual that is attributable to the individual's investment in the contract as determined under the rules of section 72(f). This would include, for example, distributions that are excluded from gross income under section 72 because they are treated as a recovery of after-tax employee contributions from a qualified employer plan or nondeductible contributions from an individual retirement plan.

(4) Any portion of a distribution to the extent that it is not included in gross income by reason of a rollover contribution described in section 402(a)(5), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), or 408(d)(3).

(5) Any health coverage or any distribution of medical benefits provided under an arrangement described in section 401(h) to the extent that the coverage or distribution is excludible under section 104, 105 or 106.

(b) Alternate payee. Any distributions to an alternate payee described in paragraph (a)(2) of this Q&A a-4 must be taken into account by such alternate payee for purposes of calculating the excess distributions received by (or excess accumulations held by) the alternate payee.

a-5: Q. If an annuity contract that represents an irrevocable commitment to provide an employee's benefits under the plan is distributed to an individual, how are the distribution of such annuity contract and distributions of amounts under such a contract taken into account for purposes of calculating excess distributions?

A. Except to the extent that the value of an annuity contract is includible in income in the year the contract is distributed or any subsequent year, the distribution of an annuity contract (including a group annuity contract) in satisfaction of plan liabilities is disregarded for purposes of calculating excess distributions. Any amounts that are actually distributed under the contract to the individual (to the extent not excluded under Q&A a-4 of this section) or are otherwise includible in income with respect to the contract (e.g., by reason of the inclusion in income of the value of the annuity contract in the year of the contract's distribution or any subsequent year) are taken into account for purposes of calculating excess distributions for the calendar year during which such amounts are received or otherwise includible in income. For purposes of this Q&A a-5, the term "plan" means any qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan specified in section 4981A(e) and Q&A a-3 of this section.

a-6: Q. Are minimum distributions required under section 401(a)(9), 408(a)(6), 408(b)(3) or 403(b)(10) taken into account to determine excess distributions?

A. Yes. Distributions received during a calendar year are taken into account in determining an individual's excess distributions for such calendar year even though such distributions are required under section 401(a)(9), 408(a)(6), 408(b)(3) or 403(b)(10). For example, minimum distributions under section 401(a)(9) received during the 1987 calendar year for calendar years 1985 and 1986 will be subject to section 4981A as distributions for 1987.

a-7: Q. Are distributions of excess deferrals permitted under section 402(g)(2), or distributions of excess contributions or excess aggregate contributions permitted under section 401(k) or (m), or distributions of IRA contributions permitted under section 408(d)(4) or (5) taken into account for purposes of calculating excess distributions?

A. No. Distributions of excess deferrals, excess contributions, excess aggregate contributions, distributions of IRA contributions, and income allocable to such contributions or deferrals, that are made in accordance with the provisions of sections 402(g)(2), 401(k)(8), 401(m)(6), or 408(d)(4) or (5) are not taken into account for purposes of calculating excess distributions.

a-8: Q. What distributions from qualified employer plans or individual retirement plans are taken into account in determining an individual's excess distributions?

A. With the exception of distributions noted above in Q&As a-4, a-5, and a-7 of this section, all distributions from qualified employer plans or individual retirement plans must be taken into account in determining an individual's excess distributions for the calendar year in which such distributions are received. In general, all such distributions are taken into account whether or not they are currently includible in income. Thus, for example, net unrealized appreciation in employer securities described in section 402(a) is taken into account in the year distributed. However, health coverage or distributions of medical benefits provided under an arrangement described in section 401(h) that are excludible from income under section 104, 105, or 106 are not subject to section 4981A. In addition, distributions that are excludible from income because they are rolled over to a plan or an individual retirement account are not taken into account. (See Q&A a-4(a)(4) and (5) of this section). Amounts that are includible in income for a calendar year are treated as distributions and, thus, are taken into account even if the amounts are not actually distributed during such year. Thus, deemed distributions to provide insurance coverage includible in income under section 72 (PS-58 amounts), loan amounts treated as deemed distributions under section 72(p), and amounts includible under section 402(b) or section 403(c) by reason of the employer plan or individual retirement plan not being qualified during the year are taken into account.

a-9: Q. Will the dollar threshold amount used to determine an individual's excess distributions be adjusted for inflation in calendar years after 1987?

A. Beginning in 1988, the $112,500 threshold amount is adjusted to reflect post-1986 cost-of-living increases (COLAs) at the same time and in the same manner as the adjustment described in section 415(d). The threshold amount is adjusted even though the distribution is from a defined contribution plan that is subject to a freeze on COLAs because the defined benefit plan limit is below $120,000 (see section 415(c)(1)(A)). However, the $150,000 threshold amount is not adjusted to reflect such increases.

b. Special Grandfather Rule

b-1: Q. How are benefits accrued before TRA '86 treated under the excise tax provisions described in section 4981A?

A. (a) Grandfather amount. Certain eligible individuals may elect to use a special grandfather rule that exempts from the excise tax the portion of distributions treated as a recovery of such individual's total benefits accrued on or before August 1, 1986 (grandfather amount). However, distributions that are treated as a recovery of the grandfather amount are taken into account in determining the extent to which other distributions are excess distributions (see Q&A b-4 of this section). Under this special grandfather rule, the grandfather amount equals the value of an individual's total benefits (as described in Q&As b-8 and b-9 of this section) in all qualified employer plans and individual retirement plans on August 1, 1986. An individual's benefits in such plans include amounts determinable on August 1, 1986, that are payable to the individual under a qualified domestic relations order within the meaning of section 414(p) (QDRO). However, QDRO benefits that, when distributed, are includible in the income of the alternate payee are not included in the employee's grandfathered amount. Further, plan benefits that are attributable to a deceased individual and that are payable to an eligible individual as a beneficiary are generally not included in determining the eligible individual's grandfather amount. Procedures for determining the grandfather amount are described in Q&As b-11 through b-14 of this section.

(b) Recovery of grandfather amount. The portion of any distribution made after August 1, 1986, that is treated as a recovery of a grandfather amount depends on which of two grandfather recovery methods the individual elects. The two alternative methods are described in Q&As b-11 through b-14 of this section. The amount of the distribution for a year that is treated as a recovery of a grandfather amount in a year is applied to reduce the individual's unrecovered grandfather amount for future years (i.e., the individual's accrued benefits as described in Q&As b-8 and b-9 on August 1, 1986, reduced by previous distributions treated as a recovery of a grandfather amount) on a dollar for dollar basis until the individual's unrecovered grandfather amount has been reduced to zero. When the individual's grandfather amount has been reduced to zero, the special grandfather rule ceases to apply and the entire amount of any subsequent excess distributions received is subject to the 15 percent excise tax.

b-2: Q. Who may elect to use the special grandfather rules?

A. Any individual whose accrued benefits as described in Q&As b-8 and b-9 of this section in all qualified plans and individual retirement plans on August 1, 1986 (initial grandfather amount) have a value of at least $562,500 may elect to use the special grandfather rule.

b-3: Q. How does an eligible individual make a valid election to use the special grandfather rule?

A. (a) Form of election. An individual who is eligible to use the special grandfather rule must affirmatively elect to use that rule. The election is made on a Form 5329 filed with the individual's income tax return (Form 1040, etc.) for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1989 (i.e., the 1987 or 1988 taxable year).

(b) Information required. The individual must report the following information on the Form 5329:

(1) The individual's initial grandfather amount.

(2) The grandfather recovery method to be used.

(3) Such other information as is required by the Form 5329.

(c) Deadline for election. The deadline for filing such election is the due date, calculated with extensions, for filing the individual's 1988 income tax return. If an individual dies before the expiration of such deadline, an election, or the revocation of a prior election, may be made as part of the final income tax return filed on behalf of such deceased individual by the deceased individual's personal representative. An election or revocation of a prior election may also be filed before the expiration of such deadline with Schedule S (Form 706). See Q&A c-7 of this section.

(d) Revocation of election. Elections filed before the deadline may be revoked by filing an amended income tax return for any applicable year. A change in the grandfather recovery method is considered a revocation of a prior election and an amended Form 5329 must be filed for any prior year in which a different grandfather recovery method was used. Thus, a change in the election may require a change in the 1987 tax return. An individual must refile for 1987 based on the new election if additional tax is owed. However, an election (or nonelection) is irrevocable after the filing deadline for the taxable year beginning in 1988 has passed. Thus, an individual who has not made an election by the last day plus extensions for filing the 1988 return may not do so through an amended return.

(e) Subsequent years. (1) Any eligible individual who has elected the special grandfather rule must attach to the individual's income tax return for all subsequent taxable years in which the individual receives excess distributions (determined without regard to the grandfather rule) a copy of the Form 5329 on which the individual elected the grandfather rule. A copy of the Form 5329 on which the individual (or the individual's personal representative) elected the grandfather rule must also be filed with Schedule S (Form 706) unless the initial election is filed with such schedule.

(2) The individual must also make such other reports in the form and at the time as the Commissioner may prescribe. See Q&A c-7 of this section for the applicable reporting requirements if the individual or the individual's estate is liable for any tax on excess distributions or on an excess accumulation under section 4981A(a) or (d).

b-4: Q. How do individuals who have elected to use the special grandfather rule determine the extent to which their distributions for any calendar year are excess distributions?

A. (a) Excess distributions under grandfather rule, threshold amount. Individuals who elect to use the special grandfather rule are not eligible to use the $150,000 threshold amount in computing their excess distributions for any calendar year. Instead, such electing individuals must compute their excess distributions for a calendar year using a $112,500 (indexed for cost-of-living increases) threshold amount. The rule of this paragraph (a) applies for all calendar years, including the calendar year in which an individual's unrecovered grandfather amount has been reduced to zero and all subsequent calendar years. Once the indexed amount has increased to $150,000 or more, the threshold amount will be the same for all individuals.

(b) Base for excise tax under grandfather rule. Although the portion of any distribution that is treated as a recovery of an individual's grandfather amount is not subject to the excise tax, such portion must be taken into account in determining the extent to which the individual has excess distributions for a calendar year. The effect of this rule is that the amount against which the 15 percent excise tax is applied for any calendar year during which a grandfather amount is recovered equals the individual's distributions for such year reduced by the greater of (1) the applicable threshold amount for such year or (2) the grandfather amount recovered for such year. (See the examples in Q&A b-14 of this section.)

b-5: Q. How is the value of an individual's total accrued benefits on August 1, 1986, calculated for purposes of determining (a) whether an individual is eligible to elect the special grandfather rule and (b) the amount of any electing individual's initial grandfather amount under such rule?

A. (a) Introduction. The value of an individual's total accrued benefits on August 1, 1986, is the sum of the values of the individual's accrued benefits on such date under all qualified employer plans or individual retirement plans, as determined under this Q&A b-5. If such value exceeds $562,500, the individual may elect the special grandfather rule. In such case, the value so determined may be applied against distributions as determined under this section, whether or not such distributions are from the same plan or IRA for which such grandfather amount is determined. For purposes of determining the value of accrued benefits on August 1, 1986, an annuity contract or an individual's interest in a group annuity contract described in Q&A a-5 of this section is treated as an accrued benefit under the qualified retirement plan or IRA from which it was distributed and an IRA is treated as a defined contribution plan.

(b) Defined benefit plan—(1) General rule. The amount of an individual's accrued benefit on August 1, 1986, under a defined benefit plan is determined as of that date under the provisions of the plan based on the individual's service and compensation on that date. The present value of such benefit is determined by an actuarial valuation of such accrued benefit performed as of August 1, 1986. Alternatively, accrued benefits may be determined as of July 31, 1986. In such case, the applicable rules are applied by substituting the July 31 date for the August date in the applicable provisions. (See Q&A b-9 of this section for rules for determining the amount of benefits and values and the actuarial assumptions to be used in such determination.)

(2) Alternative method. Alternatively, the present value of an individual's accrued benefit on August 1, 1986, may be determined using the following method:

(i) Determine the amount of the individual's actual accrued benefit (prior benefit) on the valuation date that immediately precedes August 1, 1986 (prior date). The valuation date for purposes of using this alternative method is the valuation date used for purposes of section 412. In making this determination, plan amendments that are adopted after that prior date are disregarded.

(ii) Determine the amount of the individual's adjusted accrued benefit (adjusted prior benefit) on the prior date by reducing the prior benefit in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this Q&A b-5 by the amount of distributions that reduce the accrued benefit or transfers from the plan and by increasing the prior benefit in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this Q&A b-5 by any increase in benefit resulting from either transfers to the plan or plan amendments that were made (or, in the case of a plan amendment, both adopted and effective) after the prior valuation date, but on or before August 1, 1986.

(iii) Determine the amount of the individual's actual accrued benefit (future benefit) on the valuation date immediately following August 1, 1986 (next date). In making this determination, plan amendments, etc. that are either adopted or effective after August 1 are disregarded.

(iv) Determine the amount of the individual's adjusted accrued benefit (adjusted future benefit) on the next date by increasing the future benefit in paragraph (b)(2)(iii) of this Q&A b-5 by the amount of any distributions that reduce the accrued benefit or transfers from the plan and by reducing the future benefit in paragraph (b)(2)(iii) of this Q&A b-5 by the amount of any transfer to the plan that was made after August 1, 1986, but on or before the next valuation date to the amount in paragraph (b)(2)(iii) of this Q&A b-5.

(v) Calculate the weighted average of paragraphs (b)(2)(ii) and (b)(2)(iv) of this Q&A b-5, where the weights applied are the number of complete calendar months separating the applicable prior date and the applicable next date, respectively, and August 1, 1986.

(vi) Determine the actuarial present value of the benefit in paragraph (b)(2)(v) of this Q&A b-5 as of August 1, 1986, using the methods and assumptions described in Q&A b-9 of this section. The grandfather amount on August 1, 1986, attributable to the accrued benefits under the defined benefit plan is equal to the amount determined in paragraph (b)(2)(vi) of this Q&A b-5.

(3) Certain insurance plans treated as defined contribution plans. (i) Accrued benefits not in pay status under a plan satisfying the requirements of section 411(b)(1)(F) are determined under the rules in paragraph (c) of this Q&A b-5 for defined contribution plans. For purposes of applying paragraph (c) of this Q&A b-5 to such benefits, the cash surrender value of the contract is substituted for the account balance. If accrued benefits are in pay status under such a plan, the rules of this paragraph (b) apply to such benefits.

(ii) Accrued benefits not in pay status that are attributable to voluntary employee contributions (including rollover amounts) to a defined benefit plan are determined under the rules in paragraph (c) of this Q&A b-5 as if the account balance attributable thereto is under a defined contribution plan. If such benefits are in pay status and are used to fund the benefit under the defined benefit plan, the rules of this paragraph (b) apply to such benefits.

(c) Defined contribution plan—(1) General rule. The value of an individual's accrued benefit on August 1, 1986, under a defined contribution plan (including IRAs) is the value of the individual's account balance on such date (or on the immediately preceding day). Paragraph (b)(3) of this Q&A b-5 requires that benefits derived from certain insured plans and from voluntary contributions to a defined benefit plan be determined under the rules of this paragraph (c).

(2) Alternative method. Alternatively, if a valuation was not performed as of August 1, 1986 (or as of the immediately preceding day), the value of an individual's accrued benefit may be determined as follows:

(i) Determine the value of the individual's account balance on the valuation date immediately preceding August 1, 1986 (prior valuation date).

(ii) Determine the value of the individual's adjusted account balance on the prior valuation date by subtracting (or adding, respectively) the amount of any distribution, including a transfer to another plan or a forfeiture from the account balance (or the amount of any allocation to the account balance, including a transfer from another plan, rollover received or forfeiture from another account) that was made after the prior valuation date but on or before August 1, 1986, from (or to) the amount in paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this Q&A b-5.

(iii) Determine the value of the individual's account balance on the valuation date immediately following August 1, 1986 (next valuation date).

(iv) Determine the value of the individual's adjusted account balance on the next valuation date by adding (or subtracting, respectively) the amount of any distribution, of a type described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this Q&A b-5 (or the amount of any allocation to the account balance, of a type described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this Q&A b-5), that was made after August 1, 1986, but on or before the next valuation date to (or from) the amount in paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this Q&A b-5.

(v) Calculate the weighted average of paragraphs (c)(2)(ii) and (c)(2)(iv) of this Q&A b-5, where the weights applied are the number of complete calendar months separating the applicable valuation date and the applicable next date, respectively, and August 1, 1986.

The grandfather amount on August 1, 1986, attributable to the account balance in the defined contribution plan or the individual retirement plan is the amount in paragraph (c)(2)(v) of this Q&A b-5.

b-6: Q. For purposes of determining the value of accrued benefits in a defined contribution plan or a defined benefit plan on August 1, 1986, are nonvested benefits taken into account?

A. Yes. All accrued benefits, whether or not vested, are taken into account.

b-7: Q. To what extent are benefits payable with respect to an individual under a qualified employer plans or an individual retirement plan not taken into account for purposes of calculating the individual's grandfather amount?

A. (a) Exclusions. The following benefits payable with respect to an individual are not taken into account for purposes of this calculation:

(1) Benefits attributable to investment in the contract as defined in section 72(f). However, amounts attributable to deductible employee contributions (as defined in section 72(o)(5)(A)) are considered part of the accrued benefit.

(2) Amounts that are determinable on August 1, 1986, as payable to an alternate payee who is required to include such amounts in gross income (a spouse or former spouse) under a qualified domestic relations order (QDRO) within the meaning of section 414(p).

(3) Amounts that are attributable to IRA contributions that are distributed pursuant to section 408(d)(4) or (5).

(b) Alternate payee. Under a QDRO described in paragraph (a)(2) of this Q&A b-7, amounts are considered part of the accrued benefit of the alternate payee for purposes of calculating the value of the alternate payee's accrued benefit on August 1, 1986. Similarly, such amounts are used by the alternate payee to compute excess distributions.

b-8: Q. What adjustments to the grandfather amount are necessary to take into account rollovers from one qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan to another such plan?

A. (a) Rollovers outstanding on valuation date. Generally, rollovers between plans result in adjustments to the grandfather amount under the rules in Q&A b-5 of this section. However, if a rollover amount is distributed from one plan on or before an applicable valuation date of such plan and is rolled over into the receiving plan after the receiving plan's applicable valuation date and if these events result in an inappropriate duplication or omission of the rollover amount, then an adjustment to the grandfather amount must be made to remove the duplication or omission. The Commissioner may provide necessary rules concerning this adjustment.

(b) Valuation. If the rollover amount described in paragraph (a) of this Q&A b-8 is in a form of property other than cash, the property of which the outstanding rollover consists is valued as of the date the rollover contribution is received by the transferee qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan and that value is the amount of the rollover. If the outstanding rollover is in the form of cash, the amount of the cash is the amount of the rollover.

b-9: Q. What is the form of the grandfather benefit under a defined benefit plan and how is it valued?

A. (a) Benefit form. The grandfather amount under a defined benefit plan is determined on the basis of the form of benefit (including any subsidized form of benefit such as a subsidized early retirement benefit or a subsidized joint and survivor annuity) provided under the plan as of August 1, 1986 that has the greatest present value as determined in paragraph (b) of this b-9. If the plan provides a subsidized joint and survivor annuity, for purposes of determining the grandfather amount, it will be assumed that an unmarried individual is married and that the individual's spouse is the same age as the individual. Assumptions as to future withdrawals, future salary increases or future cost-of-living increases are not permitted.

(b) Value of grandfather amount. The grandfather amount under a defined benefit plan is the present value of the individual's benefit form determined under paragraph (a) of this Q&A b-9. Thus, the benefit form is reduced to reflect its value on the applicable valuation date. The present value of the benefit form on August 1, 1986, or the applicable date, is computed using the factors specified under the terms of the plan as in effect on August 1, 1986, to calculate a single sum distribution if the plan provides for such a distribution. If the plan does not provide for such a distribution form, such present value is computed using the interest rate and mortality assumptions specified in §20.2031-7 of the Estate Tax Regulations.

b-10: Q. Is the plan administrator (or trustee) of a qualified plan (or individual retirement account) required to report to an individual the value of the individual's benefit under the plan as of August 1, 1986?

A. (a) Request required. No report is required unless the individual requests a report and the request is received before April 15, 1989. If requested, the plan administrator (or trustee or issuer) must report to such individual the value of the individual's benefit under the plan as of August 1, 1986, determined in accordance with Q&A b-5 through b-9 of this section. Such report must be made within a reasonable time after the individual's request but not later than July 15, 1989.

(b) Other rules. Alternate payees must make their own request for valuation reports. Any report furnished to an employee who has an alternate payee with respect to the plan must include the separate values attributable to each such individual. Any report furnished to an alternate payee must include only the value attributable to the alternate payee. Reports may be furnished to individuals even if no request is made. Individuals must keep records of the reports received from plans or IRAs in order to substantiate all grandfather amounts.

(c) Authority. The rules in this Q&A are provided under the authority in section 6047(d).

b-11: Q. How is the portion of a distribution that is treated as a recovery of an individual's grandfather amount as described in b-1 of this section to be calculated?

A. (a) General rule. All distributions received between August 1 and December 31, 1986, inclusive, are treated as a recovery of a grandfather amount. The portion of distributions received after December 31, 1986, that is treated as a recovery of the grandfather amount is determined under either the discretionary method or the attained age method. An amount that is treated as a recovery of grandfather benefits is applied to reduce the initial grandfather amount that was calculated as of August 1, 1986, on a dollar for dollar basis until the unrecovered amount has been reduced to zero. No other recalculation of the grandfather amount is to be made for a date after August 1, 1986.

(b) Methods, etc. The grandfather amount may be recovered by an individual under either the discretionary method or the attained age method. After the individual's total grandfather amount is treated as recovered under either method, the tax on excess distributions and excess accumulations is determined without regard to any grandfather amount.

b-12: Q. Under the discretionary method, what portion of each distribution is treated as a return of the individual's grandfather amount?

A. (a) Initial percentage. Under the discretionary method, unless the individual elects in accordance with paragraph (b) below, 10 percent of the total distributions that the individual receives during any calendar year is treated as a recovery of the grandfather amount.

(b) Acceleration. The individual may elect to accelerate the rate of recovery to 100 percent of the total aggregate distributions received during a calendar year commencing with any calendar year, including 1987 (acceleration election). In such case, the rate of recovery is accelerated to 100 percent for the calendar year with respect to which the election is made and for all subsequent calendar years.

(c) Election. To recover the grandfather amount using the discretionary method, an individual must elect to use such method when making the election to use the special grandfather rule on the Form 5329. (See Q&A b-3 of this section.) The acceleration election must be made for the individual's taxable year beginning with or within the first calendar year for which such election is made and must be filed with the individual's income tax return for that year. Such acceleration election may also be made or revoked retroactively on an amended return for such year. However, the acceleration election may not be made after the individual's death other than with the individual's final income tax return or with a return for a prior year for which a return was not filed before the individual's death. Thus, the acceleration election may not be made on an amended return filed after the individual's death for a year for which a return was filed before the individual's death. The preceding two sentences shall not apply to deaths occurring in 1987 or 1988. The estate is entitled to use the remaining grandfather amount to determine if there is an excess accumulation. See Q&A d-3 of this section. The acceleration election shall be made on such form and in such manner as the Commissioner prescribes in a manner consistent with the rules of this section.

b-13: Q. Under the attained age method, what portion of each distribution is treated as a return of the individual's grandfather amount?

A. Under the attained age method, the portion of total distributions received during any year that is treated as a recovery of an individual's grandfather amount is calculated by multiplying the individual's aggregate distributions for a calendar year by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the difference between the individual's attained age in completed months on August 1, 1986, and the individual's attained age in months at age 35 (420 months). The denominator of the fraction is the difference between the individual's attained age in completed months on December 31 of the calendar year and the individual's attained age in months at age 35 (420 months). An individual whose 35th birthday is after August 1, 1986, may not use the attained age method.

b-14. Q. How is the 15 percent tax with respect to excess distributions for a calendar year calculated by an individual who has elected to use the special grandfather rule?

A. The calculation of the excise tax may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example 1. (a) An individual (A) who participates in two retirement plans, a qualified defined contribution plan and a qualified defined benefit plan, has a total value of accrued benefits on August 1, 1986 under both plans of $1,000,000. Because this amount exceeds $562,500, A is eligible to elect to use the special grandfather rule to calculate the portion of subsequent distributions that are exempt from tax. A elects to use the discretionary grandfather recovery method and attaches a valid election to the 1987 income tax return. A does not elect to accelerate the rate of recovery for 1987. On October 1, 1986, A receives a distribution of $200,000. On February 1, 1987, A receives a distribution of $45,000 and, on November 1, 1987, receives a distribution of $200,000. The 15 percent excise tax applicable to aggregate distributions in 1987 is calculated as follows:

(1)	Value of grandfather amount on 8/1/86	$1,000,000
(2)	Grandfather amounts recovered in 1986 but after 8/1/86	$200,000
(3)	Value of grandfather amount on 12/31/86 ((1) − (2))	$800,000
(4)	Grandfather recovery percentage	10%
(5)	Distributions between 1/1/87 and 12/31/87 ($45,000 + $200,000)	$245,000
(6)	Portion of (5) exempt from tax ((4) × (5))	$24,500
(7)	Amount potentially subject to tax ((5) − (6))	$220,500
(8)	Portion of aggregate distributions in excess of $112,500 ($45,000 + $200,000 − $112,500)	$132,500
(9)	Amount subject to tax (lesser of (7) and (8))	$132,500
(10)	Amount of tax (15% of (9))	$19,875
(11)	Remaining undistributed value of grandfather amount as of 12/31/87 ((3) − (6))	$775,500

(b) In 1988, A receives no distributions from either plan. On February 1, 1989, A receives a distribution of $300,000 and on December 31, 1989, receives a distribution of $75,000. A makes a valid acceleration election for the 1989 taxable year, whereby A accelerates the rate of grandfather recovery that will apply for calendar years after 1988 to 100 percent. Assume the annual threshold amount for the 1989 calendar year is $125,000 (i.e., 112,500 indexed). The 15 percent excess tax applicable to distributions in 1989 is calculated as follows:

(1)	Value of grandfather amount on 1/1/89	$775,500
(2)	Grandfather recovery percentage designated for 1989 calendar year	100%
(3)	Distributions between 1/1/89 and 12/31/89 ($300,000 + $75,000)	$375,000
(4)	Portion of (3) exempt from tax (2) × (3)	$375,000
(5)	Amount potentially subject to tax ((3) − (4))	$ 0
(6)	Portion of aggregate distributions in excess of $125,000 ($300,000 + $75,000 − $125,000)	$250,000
(7)	Amount subject to tax (lesser of (5) and (6))	$ 0
(8)	Amount of tax (15% of (7))	$ 0
(9)	Remaining undistributed value of grandfather amount as of 12/31/89 ((1) − (4))	$400,500

The entire amount of any distribution for subsequent calendar years will be treated as a recovery of the grandfather amount and applied against the grandfather amount until the unrecovered grandfather amount is reduced to zero.

Example 2. The facts are the same as in Example 1 except that A elects to use the attained age recovery method and A makes a valid election for the 1987 taxable year. Further assume that A's attained age in months on August 1, 1986 is 471 months and on December 31, 1987 is 488 months. The 15 percent excise tax applicable to aggregate distributions in 1987 is calculated as follows:

(1)	Value of grandfather amount on 8/1/86	$1,000,000
(2)	Grandfather amounts recovered in 1986 but after 8/1/86	$200,000
(3)	Value of grandfather amount on 12/31/86 ((1) − (2))	$800,000
(4)	Completed months of age in excess of 420 on 8/1/86	51
(5)	Completed months of age in excess of 420 on 12/31/87	68
(6)	Grandfather fraction as of 12/31/86 ((4) divided by (5))	3/4
(7)	Distributions between 1/1/87 and 12/31/87 ($45,000 + $200,000)	$245,000
(8)	Portion of (7) exempt from tax ((6) × (7))	$183,750
(9)	Amount potentially subject to tax ((7) − (8))	$61,250
(10)	Portion of aggregate distributions in excess of $112,500 ($45,000 + $200,000 − $112,500)	$132,500
(11)	Amount subject to tax (lesser of (9) and (10))	$61,250
(12)	Amount of tax (15% of (11))	$9,187
(13)	Unrecovered grandfather amount as of 12/31/87 ((3) − (8))	$616,250

c. Special Rules

c-1: Q. How is the excise tax computed if a person elects special tax treatment under section 402 or 403 for a lump sum distribution?

A. (a) General rule—(1) Conditions. Section 4981A(c)(4) provides for a special tax computation that applies to an individual in a calendar year if the individual receives distributions that include a lump sum distribution and the individual makes certain elections under section 402 or 403 with respect to that lump sum distribution (lump sum election).

(2) Lump sum election. A lump sum election includes an election of (i) 5-year income averaging under section 402(e)(4)(B); (ii) phaseout capital gains treatment under sections 402(a)(2) or 403(a)(2) prior to their repeal by section 1122(b) of TRA '86 and as permitted under section 1122(h)(4) of TRA '86; (iii) grandfathered long-term capital gains under sections 402(a)(2) and 403(a) prior to such repeal and as permitted by section 1122(h)(3) of TRA '86; and (iv) grandfathered 10-year income averaging under section 402(e) (including such treatment under a section 402(e)(4)(L) election) prior to amendment by section 1122(a) of TRA '86 and as permitted by section 1122(h)(3)(A)(ii) and (5) of the TRA '86 [1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 383].

(3) Special tax computation. (i) If the conditions in paragraph (a)(1) of this Q&A c-1 are satisfied for a calendar year, the rules of this subparagraph (a)(3) apply for purposes of determining whether there are excess distributions and tax under section 4981A.

(ii) All distributions are divided into two categories. These two categories are the lump sum distribution and other distributions. Whether or not particular distribution is a distribution subject to section 4981A and is in either category is determined under the rules in section 4981A and this section. Thus, the exclusions under section 4981A(c)(2) and Q&A a–4(a) of this section apply here. For example, a distribution that is a tax-free recovery of employee contributions is not in either category.

(iii) The excise tax under section 4981A(c)(1) is computed in the normal manner except that (A) it is the sum of the otherwise applicable taxes determined separately for the two categories of excess distributions and (B) a different amount (threshold amount) is subtracted from the distributions in each category in determining the amount of the excess distributions. The threshold amount that is subtracted from the portion of the distributions that is not part of the lump sum distribution is the applicable threshold amount, determined without regard to section 4981A(c)(4) and the lump sum election. Thus, the threshold amount subtracted from the amount in this category is either the $150,000 amount or the $112,500 amount (indexed). The threshold amount that is subtracted from the amount of the lump sum distribution is 5 times the applicable threshold amount as described above. Thus, the threshold amount subtracted from the lump sum distribution is $750,000 or 5 times $112,500 indexed (initially $562,500).

(b) Grandfather rule.—(1) In general. This paragraph (b) provides special rules where an individual makes both the grandfather election described in section 4981A(c)(5) and the lump sum election described in paragraph (a) of this Q&A c–1. See Q&A b–11 through 14 for other rules that apply to such grandfather election.

(2) Discretionary method. If the individual uses the discretionary method, described in Q&As b–11 and 12 of this section, the applicable threshold amount is $112,500 (indexed). Under this method, the grandfather amount is recovered at a 10 percent or 100 percent rate in any calendar year and is offset separately against distributions in each category of distributions at the appropriate rate. If, for any calendar year, distributions are received in both categories and the total of the appropriate percentage (10 percent or 100 percent) of the distributions in each category exceed the unrecovered grandfathered account, then such grandfather amount must be recovered ratably from the distributions in each category. This rule applies even if the distributions in one category are less than the threshold amount for that category and the distributions in the other category exceed the threshold amount for that category.

(3) Attained age method. If the individual uses the attained age method, described in Q&As b–11 and 13 of this section, the threshold amount is $112,500 (indexed). Under this method, to determine the portion of the distributions in each category that is treated as a recovery of the grandfather amount, the fraction described in Q&A b–13 of this section is applied separately to the distributions in each category of distributions. If, for any calendar year, distributions are received in both categories and the total of the amounts of the distributions in each category that are treated as a recovery of the grandfather amount exceeds the unrecovered grandfather amount, then such grandfather amount must be recovered ratably from the distributions in each category. This rule applies even if the distributions in one category are less than the threshold amount for that category and the distributions in the other category exceed the threshold amount for that category.

(c) Amount in lump sum category. All amounts received from the employer that are required to be distributed to the individual in order to make a lump sum election described in paragraph (a) of this Q&A c–1 are included in the lump sum category. Amounts are in the lump sum category even though they are not subject to income tax under the election. Thus, for example, the following amounts would be in the lump sum category: (1) appreciation on employer securities received as part of a distribution for which a lump sum treatment is elected; and (2) amounts that are phased out when section 1122 of TRA '86 is elected. However, accumulated deductible employee contributions under the plan (within the meaning of section 72(o)(5)) are in the nonlump sum category.

(d) Examples. The rules in this Q&A C–1 are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). (a) On January 1, 199X, individual A who is age 65 and is a calendar year taxpayer receives a lump sum distribution described in section 402(e)(4)(A) from a qualified employer plan (Plan X). A receives no other distribution in 199X. A elects 5-year income averaging under section 402(e)(4)(B) and also elects section 402(e)(4)(L) treatment (treating pre-74 participation as post-1973 participation) on A's income tax return for 199X. Thus, A also makes the lump sum election described in paragraph (a)(2), above. For 199X, the $112,500 threshold amount indexed is $125,000. A does not make a grandfather election so that A's threshold amount is $150,000.

(b) A's distribution from Plan X consists of cash in the amount of $800,000. A has a section 72(f) investment in the contract. A has over the years made after tax contributions to Plan X of $50,000. A's distributions subject to section 4981A equal $750,000 because of the exclusion of A's $50,000 after-tax contributions.

(c) A's distributions consist solely of amounts in the lump sum category. A's threshold amount equals $750,000 under the rules of this paragraph (a)(iii), above, (5 times $150,000). Because A's threshold amount ($750,000) equals the amount of A's distribution from Plan X ($750,000) no part of A's distribution from Plan X is treated as an excess distribution subject to the 15-percent excise tax.

Example (2). (a) Assume the same facts as in Example (1), except that A receives an additional distribution from an individual retirement plan described in section 408(a)(IRA Y) in 199X of $150,000. A has made no nondeductible contributions to IRA Y and all of the $150,000 is a distribution subject to section 4981A.

(b) A's distributions consist of two categories, the lump sum category (Plan X $750,000) and the other than lump sum category (IRA Y $150,000). A separate threshold amount is subtracted from A's IRA Y distribution. This threshold amount equals $150,000 under the rules of this paragraph (a)(3), above, the same initial threshold amount that is applied against the lump sum prior to the multiplication by 5). Because A's threshold amount ($150,000) equals the amount of A's distribution from IRA Y ($150,000), no part of A's distribution from IRA Y would be treated as an excess distribution subject to the 15-percent excise tax.

Example (3). (a) Assume the same facts as in Example (2), except that A's distribution is $825,000 from Plan X, before reduction of $50,000 for employee contributions, instead of $800,000, so that A's distribution subject to section 4981A from Plan X is $775,000. A made a valid grandfather election. Therefore, the applicable threshold amount is $125,000 ($112,500 indexed for 199X). A's unrecovered grandfather amount as of the end of the year preceding 199X is $1,000,000 (A had a benefit under another retirement plan (Plan Z), on August 1, 1986, and A's account balance under Plan Z, which is a stock bonus plan, is $6,000,000 on January 1, 199X). A also made a valid election of the discretionary method to recover A's grandfather amount.

(b) If A recovers A's grandfather amount in 199X at the 10 percent rate, 10 percent of A's distributions that are in the lump sum category (Plan X $775,000) is treated as a recovery of A's grandfather amount. Similarly, 10 percent of A's distributions that are in the other than lump sum category (IRA Y $150,000) is treated as a recovery of A's grandfather amount. Thus, A's grandfather amount is reduced by $92,500 ($77,500 Plan X and $15,000 IRA Y) for the 199X calendar year and is $907,500 on January 1 of the year following 199X. Because the amounts of the distributions in each category that are treated as a recovery of grandfather amount are less than the applicable threshold amount for each category ($625,000 Plan X, $125,000 IRA Y), the recovery of the grandfather amount does not affect the calculations of the 199X excise tax.

(c) Because A's distribution from IRA Y of $150,000 exceeds A's threshold amount of $125,000 ($112,500 indexed) applicable to nonlump sum distributions by $25,000 and A's distribution subject to section 4981A from Plan X of $775,000 exceeds A's threshold amount of $625,000 (5 × $125,000) applicable to lump sums by $150,000, A is subject to the 15-percent excise tax. A's tax under section 4981A is $26,250 (15 percent of $25,000 plus 15 percent of $150,000).

Example (4). (a) Assume the same facts as in Example (3) except that A makes a valid acceleration election under the discretionary method with respect to A's grandfather amount of $1,000,000 for calendar year 199X.

(b) Because A's grandfather amount on January 1, 199X ($1,000,000) equals or exceeds A's distribution subject to section 4981A ($925,000) for 199X, no part of A's distribution from Plan X or IRA Y would be treated as excess distribution subject to the 15-percent excise tax.

(c) A's distributions subject to 4981A from Plan X of $775,000 and from IRA Y of $150,000 are offset 100 percent by A's grandfather amount of $1,000,000. Therefore, A's grandfather amount on January 1 of the year following 199X is $75,000 ($1,000,000 minus $925,000). This $75,000 would be required to be offset 100 percent against any distributions received in that year.

Example (5). (a) Assume the same facts as in Example (4), except that A's distribution subject to section 4981A from Plan X, after reduction of the $50,000 for employee contributions, is $1,000,000 and from IRA Y is $125,000 (equal to the threshold amount), totaling $1,125,000.

(b) Because the sum of the amount received in the lump sum category and the other than lump sum category of distributions is greater than the grandfather amount ($1,000,000), the grandfather amount must be allocated to each separate category on the basis of the ratio of the amount received in each category to the sum of these amounts. Thus, $888,889 ($1,000,000 × ($1,000,000 divided by $1,125,000)) is allocated to the lump-sum category and $111,111 ($1,000,000 X ($125,000 divided by $1,125,000)) is allocated to the other than lump sum category. A's distributions of $1,000,000 in the lump sum category are reduced by $888,889, the greater of $625,000 (the threshold amount) or $888,889 (grandfather amount), and equal $111,111. A's excise tax is $16,666 (15 percent of $111,111). A owes no excess distribution tax on the $125,000 received from IRA Y because it is fully offset by the threshold amount of $125,000.

(c) Because A's distribution subject to section 4981A for the year of $1,125,000 ($1,000,000 plus $125,000) exceeds A's grandfather amount on January 1, 199X of $1,000,000, A's grandfather amount is zero for all subsequent calendar years.

c–2: Q. Must retirement plans be amended to limit future benefit accruals so that the amounts that are distributed would not be subject to an excise tax under section 4981A?

A. No. A qualified employer plan need not be amended to reduce future benefits so that the amount of annual aggregate distributions are not subject to tax under section 4981A. Section 415 does, however, require plan provisions that limit the accrual of benefits and contributions to specified amounts. The operation of the excise tax of section 4981A is independent of plan qualification requirements limiting benefits and contributions under qualified plans.

c–3: Q. Is a plan amendment reducing accrued benefits a permitted method of avoiding the excise tax?

A. No. Accrued benefits may not be reduced to avoid the imposition of the excise tax. Such reduction would violate employer plan qualification requirements, including section 411(d)(6).

c–4: Q. To what extent is the 15 percent section 4981A tax reduced by the 10 percent section 72(t) tax?

A. (a) General rule. The 15 percent tax on excess distributions may be offset by the 10 percent tax on early distributions to the extent that the 10 percent tax is applied to excess distributions. For example, assume that individual (A), age 56, receives a distribution of $200,000 from a qualified employer plan (Plan X) during calendar year 1987. Further, assume that the entire distribution is subject to the 10-percent tax of section 72(t). A tax of $20,000 (10% of $200,000) is imposed on the distribution under section 72(t). Assuming that the distribution is not a lump sum distribution eligible for special tax treatment under section 402, part of the distribution is subject to tax under section 4981A. If A does not elect the special grandfather rule, A's dollar limitation is $150,000 and the amount of the $200,000 distribution that is an excess distribution is $50,000 ($200,000 – $150,000). The 15 percent tax is $7,500 (15% of $50,000). The portion of the $20,000 section 72(t) tax on early distributions that is attributable to the excess distribution is $5,000 (10% of $50,000). This amount is credited against the section 4981A tax. Therefore, the total tax imposed on the distribution under both provisions is $22,500 ($20,000 + ($7,500 – $5,000)).

(b) Example. (1) If some, but not all, distributions made for a calendar year are subject to the section 72(t) tax, the offset is applied only to the extent that the section 72(t) tax applies to amounts that exceed the applicable threshold amount for that calendar year. For example, assume that during 1987 individual B receives a distribution of $40,000 that is not subject to the 10 percent section 72(t) tax and a separate distribution of $160,000 that is subject to the 10 percent section 72(t) tax. A tax of $16,000 (10% of $160,000) is imposed by section 72(t). Excess distributions for the year, assuming B does not elect the special grandfather rule, are $50,000 ($40,000 + $160,000 – $150,000). The tax under section 4981A is $7,500 (15% of $50,000). For purposes of determining the extent to which the 10 percent tax is applied to excess distributions, the only amounts subject to the 10 percent tax that are taken into account are distributions in excess of $150,000 (or if greater, the $112,500 (indexed) threshold for the year). The amount of distributions for 1987 to which the 10 percent tax is applicable $160,000) exceeds $150,000 by $10,000. Thus, the portion of the section 72(t) tax of $16,000 that is attributable to excess distributions equals $1,000 (10 percent of $10,000). This amount is credited against the section 4981A tax. The total tax payable under the provisions of sections 72(t) and 4981A is $22,500 ($16,000 + ($7,500 – $1,000)).

(c) Net unrealized appreciation. A distribution consisting of net unrealized appreciation of employer securities that is excluded from gross income is not subject to section 72(t) and, therefore, there is no section 72(t) tax on such distribution that may be used to offset the tax on excess distributions.

c–5: Q. If a distribution that is subject to both the 10 percent tax on early distributions from qualified plans imposed under section 72(t) and the 15 percent tax on excess distributions imposed under section 4981A is received by an individual who elects to calculate the 15 percent tax using the special grandfather rule, how is the offset of the 10 percent tax imposed under section 72(t) calculated?

A. The section 4981A tax is reduced only by the amount of the 10 percent tax that is attributable to the portion of the distribution to which the section 4981A tax applies. For example, assume that (a) an individual (A), age 57, receives during 199X a distribution from a qualified plan of $325,000 that is subject to the 10 percent section 72(t) tax; (b) the distribution is not a lump sum distribution and is subject to the 15 percent excise tax imposed by section 4981A; (c) A has elected to use the special grandfather rule; and (d) A accelerates the rate of recovery of the remaining grandfather amount of $250,000 so that only $75,000 of this distribution is subject to the section 4981A tax. Thus, the section 4981A tax is $11,250 (15% of $75,000). The portion of the section 72(t) 10 percent tax that is offset against the section 4981A tax of $11,250 is limited to $7,500 (10% of $75,000), the section 72(t) tax on the amount of distributions after taking into account the reduction under the grandfather rule.

c-6: Q. When do distributions become subject to the excise tax under section 4981A?

A. (a) General rule. Excess distributions made after December 31, 1986, are subject to the excise tax under section 4981A.

(b) Transitional rule—(1) Termination. Distributions prior to January 1, 1988, made on account of certain terminations of a qualified employer plan are not subject to tax under section 4981A. For a plan termination to be eligible for this transitional rule, the plan termination must occur before January 1, 1987. For purposes of applying the rules of section 4981A (except the reporting requirements), any such distribution is treated as if made on December 31, 1986. The distribution of an annuity contract is not an excepted distribution. See Q&A a-5 of this section.

(2) Lump sum distributions. A lump sum distribution that an individual who separates from service in 1986 receives in calendar year 1987 before March 16 is treated as a distribution received in 1986 if such individual elects to treat it as received in 1986 under the provisions of section 1124 of TRA '86. Thus, such a qualifying section 1124 distribution is not subject to tax under section 4981A for 1987. For purposes of applying the rules of section 4981A, the amount attributable to such distribution is included in the individual's August 1, 1986 accrued benefit and such distribution is treated as if made on December 31, 1986.

(3) Grandfather amount recovery. If an individual described in this paragraph elects the special grandfather rule, the entire amount of distributions described in subparagraph (1) or (2) of this paragraph (b) is treated as a recovery of the individual's grandfather amount because it is treated as received on December 31, 1986. Thus, the individual's outstanding grandfather amount as of the date of the distribution is reduced by the amount of such distribution.

c-7: Q. How is the tax on excess distributions or on excess accumulations under section 4981A reported?

A. (a) Tax on excess distributions. An individual liable for tax on account on excess distributions under section 4981A must complete Form 5329 and attach it to his income tax return for the taxable year beginning with or within the calendar year during which the excess distributions are received. The amount of the tax is reported on such form and in such manner as prescribed by the Commissioner.

(b) Tax on excess accumulations—(1) General rule. If, with respect to the estate of any individual, there is a tax under section 4981A(d) on account of the individual's excess accumulations, the amount of such tax is reported on Schedule S (Form 706 or 706NR). Schedule S must be filed on or before the due date under section 6075 including extensions, for filing the estate tax return. The tax under section 4981A(d) must be paid by the otherwise applicable due date for paying the estate tax imposed by chapter 11 even if, pursuant to section 6018(a), no return is otherwise required with respect to the estate tax imposed by chapter 11.

(2) Earliest due date. Notwithstanding paragraph (b)(1) of this c-7, the due date for filing Schedule S (Form 706) and paying the tax on excess accumulations under section 4981A(d) is not earlier than February 1, 1988. Thus, with respect to the estates of individuals dying in January through April of 1987, the due date for filing Schedule S (Form 706) and paying any tax owed under section 4981A(d) is not earlier than February 1, 1988 even if the due date for filing the Schedule 706 and paying the estate tax imposed by chapter 11 is an earlier date. Further, no interest or penalties will be charged for failure to pay any tax on excess accumulations under section 4981A before January 31, 1988.

c-8: Q. Does the fact that the benefits under a qualified retirement plan or individual retirement account are community property affect the determination of the excise tax under section 4981A?

A. Generally, no. The operation of community property law is disregarded in determining the amount of aggregate annual distributions. Thus, the excise tax under section 4981A is computed without regard to the spouse's community property interest in the individual's or decedent's distributions or accumulation. Also, any reporting to the individual by a trustee, must be done on an aggregate basis without regard to the community property law.

d. Excess Accumulations

d-1: Q. To what extent does section 4981A increase the estate tax imposed by chapter 11 with respect to the estates of any decedents?

A. Section 4981A(d) provides that the estate tax imposed by chapter 11 with respect to the estate of any decedent is increased by an amount equal to 15 percent of the decedent's excess accumulation. See Q&A d-2 through d-7 of this section for rules for determining the decedent's excess accumulation. See Q&A d-8 of this section concerning credits under section 2010 through 2016. See Q&A d-9 of this section for examples illustrating the determination of the increase in estate tax under section 4981A(d).

d-2: Q. How is the amount of an decedent's excess accumulation determined?

A. (a) General rule. A decedent's excess accumulation is the excess of (1) the aggregate value of the decedent's interests in all qualified employer plans and individual retirement plans (decedent's aggregate interest) as of the date of the decedent's death over (2) an amount equal to the present value of a hypothetical life annuity determined under Q&A d-7 of this section. If the personal representative for the individual's estate elects to value the property in the gross estate under section 2032, the applicable valuation date prescribed by section 2032 shall be substituted for the decedent's date of death.

(b) Other rules. See Q&A d-3 and d-4 of this section if the decedent or, where appropriate, the decedent's personal representative validly elects the special grandfather rule and has any unused grandfather benefit as of the date of his death. See Q&A d-5 and d-6 of this section to determine the decedent's aggregate interest.

d-3: Q. Does the special grandfather rule apply for purposes of determining the amount of the decedent's excess accumulation?

A. Yes. If a decedent prior to death (or the decedent's personal representative after death) makes an election that satisfied the procedures in Q&A b-3 of this section, the special grandfather rule applies.

d-4: Q. How is the decedent's excess accumulation determined if the special grandfather rule applies?

A. If the special grandfather rule applies, the decedent's excess accumulation is the excess of (a) the decedent's aggregate interest (determined under Q&A d-5 of this section) over (b) the greater of (1) the decedent's remaining unrecovered grandfather amount as of the date of the decedent's death, or (2) an amount equal to the present value of a hypothetical life annuity under Q&A d-7 of this section.

d-5. Q. How is the value of the decedent's aggregate interest as of the applicable valuation date under Q&A d-2 determined?

A. (a) Method of valuation. The value of the decedent's aggregate interest on the decedent's date of death is determined in a manner consistent with the valuation of such interests for purposes of determining the individual's gross estate for purposes of chapter 11. If the personal representative for an individual's estate subject to estate tax elects to value the property in the gross estate under section 2032, the decedent's aggregate interest is valued in a manner consistent with the rules prescribed by section 2032 (and other relevant estate tax sections). No adjustments provided in chapter 11 in valuing the gross estate are made. Thus, there is no adjustment under section 2057 (relating to the sale of certain employer securities).

(b) Amounts included. Generally, all amounts payable to beneficiaries of the decedent under any qualified employer plan (including amounts payable to a surviving spouse under a qualified joint and survivor annuity or qualified preretirement survivor annuity) or individual retirement plan, whether or not otherwise included in valuing the decedent's gross estate, are considered to be part of the decedent's interest in such plan.

(c) Rollover after death. If any amount is distributed from a qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan within the 60-day period ending on the decedent's date of death and is rolled over to an IRA after such date but within 60 days of the date distributed, the decedent's aggregate interest is increased by the amount rolled over, valued as of the date received by the IRA.

d-6: Q. Are there any reductions in the decedent's aggregate interest?

A. The decedent's aggregate interest is reduced by the following:

(a) Amount payable to alternate payee. The amount of any portion of the deceased individual's interest in a qualified employer plan that is payable to an alternate payee in whose income the amount is includible under a qualified domestic relations order with the meaning of section 414(p) (QDRO). However, such portion must be taken into account in determining the excess distribution or the excess accumulation upon the death of such alternate payee for purposes of determining if there is a tax under section 4981A(a) or an increase in the estate tax under section 4981A(d) with respect to such alternate payee.

(b) Investment in the contract. The amount of the deceased individual's unrecovered investment, within the meaning of section 72(f), in any qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan.

(c) Life insurance proceeds. The excess of any amount payable by reason of the death of the individual under a life insurance contract held under a qualified employer plan over the cash surrender value of such contract immediately before the death of such individual (the amount excludible from income by reason of section 101(a)). Amounts excludible from gross income because of section 101(b) do not reduce the decedent's aggregate interest.

(d) Interest as a beneficiary. The amount of the deceased individual's interest in a qualified retirement plan or individual retirement plan by reason of the death of another individual.

d-7: Q. How is the present value of the hypothetical life annuity determined?

A. (a) General rule. The hypothetical life annuity is a single life annuity contract that provides for equal annual annuity payments commencing on the decedent's date of death for the life of an individual whose age is the same as the decedent's determined as of the date of the decedent's death. The amount of each annual payment is equal to the greater of $150,000 (unindexed) and $112,500 (as indexed until the date of death). If the decedent elected (or the decedent's personal representative elects) the special grandfather rule, the amount of each annual payment is $112,500 (as indexed until the date of death) even if there is no remaining grandfather amount.

(b) Determination of age. The decedent's age as of the decedent's date of death for purposes of valuing the hypothetical life annuity is the decedent's attained age (in whole years) as of the decedent's date of death. For example, if the decedent was born on February 2, 1930, and died on August 3, 1990, the decedent's age for purposes of valuing the hypothetical life annuity is 60.

(c) Interest rate assumptions. The present value of the single life annuity described above must then be calculated using the interest rate and mortality assumptions in §20.2031-7 of the Estate Tax Regulations in effect on the date of death.

d-8: Q. Are any credits, deductions, exclusions, etc. that apply for estate tax purposes allowable as an offset against the excise tax under section 4981A(d) for excess accumulations?

A. No. No credits, deductions, exclusions, etc. that apply for estate tax purposes are allowed to offset the tax imposed under section 4981A(d). Thus, no credits under section 2010 through 2016 or other reductions permitted by Chapter 11 are allowable against the tax under section 4981A(d) for excess accumulations. For example, no credits are allowable for the unified credit against the estate tax, for state death taxes, or for gift taxes.

d-8A. Q. Is the estate liable for the excise tax of 15 percent on the amount of the decedent's excess accumulations?

A. Yes. In all events, the estate is liable for the excise tax of 15 percent on the amount of the decedent's excess accumulations. Transferee liability rules under chapter 11 do apply, however. Similarly, the reimbursement provisions of section 2205 also apply. Additionally, the rules generally applicable for purposes of determining the apportionment of the estate tax apply to the apportionment of the excise tax under section 4981A(d). Thus, the decedent's will or the applicable state apportionment law may provide that the executor is entitled to recover the tax imposed under section 4981A(d) attributable to any property from the beneficiary entitled to receive such property. However, absent such a provision in the decedent's will or in the applicable state apportionment law, the executor is not entitled to recover the tax imposed under section 4981A(d) attributable to any property from the beneficiary entitled to receive such property.

d-9: Q. How is the additional tax computed with respect to a decedent's estate under section 4981A(d)?

A. The determination of the additional tax under section 4981A(d) is illustrated by the following examples:

Example 1. (a) An individual (A) dies on February 1, 199X at age 70 and 9 months. As of A's date of death, A has an interest in a defined benefit plan described in section 401(a) (Plan X). Plan X has never provided for employee contributions. A has no section 72(f) investment in Plan X. A does not have any interest in any other qualified employer plan or individual retirement plan. The alternate valuation date in section 2032 does not apply. A did not elect to have the special grandfather rule apply. A's interest in Plan X is in the form of a qualified joint and survivor annuity. The value of the remaining payments under the joint and survivor annuity as of A's date of death (determined under D-5) is $2,000,000.

(b) Because A is age 70 and 9 months on A's date of death, A's life expectancy as of A'd date of death is calculated using age 70 (A's attained age in whole years on A's date of death). The factor from Table A of §20.2031-7(f) used to determine the present value of a single life annuity for an individual age 70 is 6.0522. The greater of $150,000 or $112,500 indexed for 199X is 150,000. The present value of the hypothetical single life annuity is $907,830 ($150,000 × 6.0522)

(c) The amount of A's excess accumulation is $1,092,170, determined as follows: $2,000,000 (value of A's interest in Plan X) minus $907,830 (value of hypothetical single life annuity contract) equals $1,092,170.

(d) The increase in the estate tax under section 4981A(d) is $163,825 (15 percent of $1,092,170).

Example 2. (a) The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that A's interest in Plan X consists of the following:

(1) $2,000,000, value of employer-provided portion of a qualified joint and survivor annuity determined as of A's date of death using the interest and mortality assumptions in §20.2031-7.

(2) $200,000, proceeds of a term life insurance contract (no cash surrender value before death).

(3) $100,000. amount (employer-provided portion) payable to A's former spouse pursuant to a QDRO.

(4) $100,000, amount of A's investment in Plan X.

(b) The value of A's interest in Plan X for purposes of calculating A's excess accumulation is still $2,000,000. The proceeds of the term life insurance contract, the amount payable under the QDRO, and the amount of A's investment in Plan X are excluded from such value.

Example 3. (a) The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that A elected the special grandfather rule. A's initial grandfather amount was $1,100,000. As of A's date of death, A had received $500,000 in distributions that were treated as a return of A's grandfather amount. Thus, A's unused grandfather amount is $600,000 ($1,100,000 - $500,000). In 199X, assume that $112,500 indexed is still $112,500.

(b) A's excess retirement accumulation is determined as follows: $2,000,000 minus the greater of (1) $600,000 or (2) the present value of a period certain annuity of $112,500 a year for 16 years. The present value of a single life annuity of $112,500 a year for an individual age 70 is determined as follows: $112,500 × 6.0522 = $680,827.25. $680,827.25 is greater than $600,000. Thus the amount of the excess retirement accumulation is $1,319,173 ($2,000,000 minus $680,827).

(c) The additional estate tax under section 4981A(d) is $197,875 (15 percent of $1,319,173).

Example 4. (a) The facts are the same as in Example 3 except that, as of A's date of death, A received $90,000 in distributions that were treated as a return of A's grandfather amount. Thus, A's unused grandfather amount is $1,010,00 ($1,100,000 - $90,000).

(b) A's excess retirement accumulation is determined as follows: $2,000,000 minus the greater of (1) ($1,010,000 (A's unused grandfather amount) or (2) 680,827.25 (the present value of a single life annuity of $112,500 a year for an individual age 70). A's unused grandfather amount is greater than the present value of the hypothetical life annuity. Thus, the amount of the excess retirement accumulation is $990,000 ($2,000,000 - $1,010,000).

(c) The additional estate tax under section 4981A(d) is $148,500 (15 percent of $990,000).

d-10: Q. If a surviving spouse rolls over a distribution from a qualified retirement plan or an individual retirement plan of the decedent to an individual retirement plan (IRA) established in the spouse's own name, is any distribution in a calendar year from the IRA receiving such rollover included in determining the spouse's excess distribution or excess accumulation in such calendar year?

A. (a) General rule. If a surviving spouse rolls over a distribution from a qualified retirement plan or an individual retirement plan of the decedent to an individual retirement plan (IRA) established in the spouse's own name with the rollover contribution and no other contributions or transfers are made to the IRA receiving the rollover contribution, distributions from such IRA will be excluded in determining the spouse's excess distributions and the value of the IRA will be excluded in determining the spouse's excess accumulation. If the surviving spouse rolls over a distribution from a qualified retirement plan or IRA of the decedent to an IRA for which the spouse has prior contributions or makes additional contributions to the IRA receiving the distribution, distributions from the IRA will be included in determining the amount of the excess distributions received by the spouse for the calendar year of the distribution and the value of the IRA at the applicable valuation date will be included in determining the spouse's excess accumulation.

(b) Special rules. The rule in paragraph (a) of this Q&A d-10 also applies if a surviving spouse elects to treat an inherited IRA (described in section 408(d)(3)(C)(ii)) as the spouse's own IRA as long as the surviving spouse makes no further contributions to such IRA

(c) Other beneficiaries. Rules similar to the rules in paragraphs (a) &

(b) shall apply to an individual who elected to treat an IRA as subject to the distribution requirements of section 408(a)(6), prior to amendment by section 521(b) of TRA '84 [1984–3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 373], under §1.408-2(b)(7)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations.

d-11. Q. To what estates does the excise tax under section 4981A(d) apply?

A. The excise tax under section 4981A(d) applies to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1986.

d-12: Q. Is the aggregate interest reduced by distributions described in paragraph (b)(1) of Q&A c-6 of this section (distributions prior to January 1, 1988, made on account of certain terminations of a qualified employer plan) which are made after the individual's death.

A. Yes, the value of the individual's aggregate interest determined under Q&A d-5 of this section is reduced by distributions described in paragraph (b)(1) of Q&A c-6 of this section which are made after the individual's death.

Chapter 45.—Windfall Profit Tax on Domestic Crude Oil
Subchapter C.—Miscellaneous Provisions

Section 4996.—Other Definitions and Special Rules

26 CFR 51.4996-1: Definitions.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 51—EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE CRUDE OIL WINDFALL PROFIT TAX ACT OF 1980

Newly Discovered Oil

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final excise tax regulations relating to the definition of the term "newly discovered oil" for purposes of the windfall profit tax. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, and by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The final regulations provide guidance on the requirements for the qualification of crude oil as newly discovered oil, as well as a definition of production in "commercial quantities" that affects the definition of property, the net income limitation on windfall profit, and the exemption for Alaskan oil.

DATES: The final regulations are effective with respect to all crude oil removed (or deemed removed) from the premises after February 29, 1980.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On November 5, 1982, the FEDERAL REGISTER published proposed amendments to the Excise Tax Regulations Under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (26 CFR Part 51) under sections 4988, 4991, and 4996 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (47 FR 50306). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 101(a)(1) of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (94 Stat. 230). A public hearing was held on April 12, 1983. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

Commercial quantities—in general.

The Conference Committee Report accompanying the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (Rep. No. 817, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 97-8 (1980)) stated that it was the intention of the Committee that the term "newly discovered oil" should include production from a property that did not produce crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978. The report stated that this included production from a property on which oil was produced in 1978 if that 1978 production was incident to the drilling of exploratory or test wells and was not part of continuous or commercial production.

The proposed regulations defined crude oil produced in "commercial quantities" as any crude oil production (1) sold or exchanged or (2) retained for beneficial economic use by the operator or by any producer. However, crude oil produced incident to the drilling of an exploratory well (including a test well) was to be disregarded. The proposed regulations also provided that in no case would crude oil produced from a well after its casing, including the so-called "Christmas tree," had been installed be considered to be crude oil produced incident to such drilling.

Comments submitted with respect to the proposed rule pointed out that the rule did not conform to industry practices. In many instances installation of casing and a flow control device are required in order to comply with environmental and conservation practices, and such installation is not necessarily evidence of the termination of the "exploration" phase. As a result, the final regulations modify the position taken in the proposed regulations by adopting the rule stated in the conference report. Under this rule, the determination of each particular case is based solely on the facts and circumstances of that case.

Commercial quantities—newly discovered oil.

For the purpose of defining the term "newly discovered oil," the Tax Reform Act of 1986 clarifies the "exploratory well" exception described in the Conference Committee Report accompanying the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980. The 1986 Act provides that the term "newly discovered oil" includes production from a property that produced crude oil in calendar year 1978 if (1) not more than 2,200 barrels was produced from the property in that year, and (2) no well on the property was in production for more than 72 hours during that year. For the purpose of this test, it is irrelevant whether or not the 1978 crude oil production was sold or exchanged, or was retained for beneficial economic use. Also, for the purpose of the second requirement of this test, a dual completion well is treated as two separate wells (i.e., one well for each horizon). The final regulations incorporate this test.

New lease.

The proposed regulations provided that crude oil produced from a new lease on the Outer Continental Shelf would qualify as newly discovered oil. The term "new lease" was defined as a lease entered into on or after January 1, 1979, of submerged acreage that did not produce crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978. Consequently, the proposed regulations provided that a lease would be denied new lease status if any portion of its submerged acreage was included at any time during 1978 in a lease on the Outer Continental Shelf whose submerged acreage produced crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978. Some commentators urged that the final regulations should adopt the on-shore property rules and define the term "newly discovered oil" to include crude oil produced from new reservoirs on Outer Continental Shelf leases entered into before 1979.

The final regulations adopt the Outer Continental Shelf rules as proposed in the notice. Section 4991(e)(2) provides that the term "newly discovered oil" has the meaning given to such term by the June 1979 energy regulations. Under the June 1979 energy regulations, the determination of whether or not Outer Continental Shelf production is treated as newly discovered oil is based on the new lease concept. Unlike the commercial quantities rule, the committee reports did not indicate an intention to depart from the June 1979 energy regulations. Indeed, all references in the legislative history to Outer Continental Shelf production assume that the definition of newly discovered oil provided in the June 1979 energy regulations would remain unchanged in that regard. Consequently, the final regulations provide that newly discovered oil produced from the Outer Continental Shelf is classified only on a lease basis.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required because this final rule is not a major rule under Executive Order 12291.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has concluded that this final regulation is interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, this final regulation is a regulation not subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

The amendments to 26 CFR Part 51 are hereby adopted as set forth below:

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 51 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 4997, 7805.

Par. 2. Section 51.4996-1 is amended by redesignating paragraph (m) as paragraph (o) and by inserting immediately after paragraph (l) new paragraphs (m) and (n), to read as follows:

§51.4996-1 Definitions.

* * * * *

(m) Newly discovered oil.—(1) In general. The term "newly discovered oil" means taxable crude oil that either is produced from a newly discovered crude oil property or is imputed newly discovered oil from a unitized property.

(2) Newly discovered crude oil property. The term "newly discovered crude oil property" means—

(i) A new lease on the Outer Continental Shelf; or

(ii) A property (not on the Outer Continental Shelf) that did not produce crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978; or

(iii) Any unitized property that is made up entirely of leases described in paragraph (m)(2)(i) of this section or properties described in paragraph (m)(2)(ii) of this section, or both.

(3) Imputed newly discovered oil. (Reserved)

(4) New lease. The term "new lease" means any lease of submerged acreage that satisfied all of the following three requirements:

(i) It was entered into on or after January 1, 1979;

(ii) Its submerged acreage did not produce crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978; and

(iii) No portion of its submerged acreage was included at any time during 1978 in a lease on the Outer Continental Shelf whose submerged acreage produced crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978.

Determinations under paragraph (m)(4)(i) of this section of the date on which a lease was entered into shall be made without regard to any extension, renewal, modification, assignment, or sublease of the lease. Accordingly, the original date on which that lease was entered into is controlling for purposes of that paragraph.

(5) Outer Continental Shelf. The term "Outer Continental Shelf" means Outer Continental Shelf as defined by section 2(a) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331(a)).

(6) Production in commercial quantities in 1978. A property (or submerged acreage on the Outer Continental Shelf) produced crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978 if any crude oil that was produced in calendar year 1978 (other than crude oil production that is disregarded under paragraph (n) of this section because it was incidental to the drilling of an exploratory well, including a test well, and was not part of continuous or commercial production) from that property (or submerged acreage) ultimately was sold or exchanged or was retained for beneficial economic use. However, a property (or submerged acreage) shall be treated as not producing crude oil in commercial quantities in calendar year 1978 if, during calendar year 1978, both of the following requirements are met:

(i) The aggregate amount of crude oil produced from the property (or submerged acreage) did not exceed 2,200 barrels, and

(ii) No well on the property (or submerged acreage) was in production for a total of more than 72 hours.

For the purposes of paragraph (m)(6)(i) and (ii) of this section, it is irrelevant whether or not the crude oil produced was sold or exchanged or was retained for beneficial economic use. In addition, for the purpose of paragraph (m)(6)(ii) of this section, a dual completion well shall be treated as two separate wells (i.e., one well for each horizon).

(n) Commercial quantities. Crude oil is produced in commercial quantities if any of the crude oil produced is—

(1) Sold or exchanged; or

(2) Retained for beneficial economic use (e.g., to power any production equipment or to inject into a well). However, crude oil production that is incidental to the drilling of an exploratory well (including a test well), and that is not part of continuous or commercial production, shall be disregarded. Whether crude oil production is incidental to such drilling and is not part of continuous or commercial production shall be determined on the basis of all the facts and circumstances of the particular case.

(o) Other.

Par. 3. Paragraph (b) of §51.4991-1 is amended by revising the sixth sentence to read as follows:

§51.4991-1 Taxable crude oil; tiers of oil.

* * * * *

(b) Tiers of oil. The term "newly discovered oil" has the meaning given to that term in §51.4996-1(m).

Par. 4. Section 51.4988-2 is amended by adding at the end of paragraph (b)(3)(iii) a sixth sentence to read as follows:

§51.4988-2 Net income limitation on windfall profit.

* * * * *

(b) Calculation of net income limitation.

(3) Taxable income from the property reduced by cost depletion

* * * * *

(iii) See paragraph (n) of §51.4996-1 for the definition of the term "commercial quantities."

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER F, PART 301—PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION

Procedure and Administration—Notice of Qualification of Trustee or Like Fiduciary in Bankruptcy

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations eliminating a requirement that a bankruptcy trustee, debtor in possession or like fiduciary in a bankruptcy proceeding give notice of appointment or authority to act.

DATES: These regulations are effective as of January 29, 1988.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains an amendment to the Procedure and Administration Regulations (26 CFR Part 301) under section 6036 of the Code. This amendment is issued under the authority contained in sections 6036 and 7805 of the Code (68A Stat. 744; 26 U.S.C. 6036; 68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

Section 6036 provides that every receiver, bankruptcy trustee, or like fiduciary or executor shall give notice of his qualifications to the Secretary of the Treasury as provided by regulations. The Secretary may provide exemptions from this notice requirement as he deems proper.

Section 301.6036-1(a)(1), before amendment by this document, required receivers, bankruptcy trustees, debtors in possession and other like fiduciaries in a bankruptcy proceeding to provide the appropriate district director with notice of appointment within 10 days of the date thereof. Notice was not required, however, if it had been given to the Secretary or other Treasury official under any provision of title 11 of the United States Code.

The amendment adopted by this document eliminates the notice requirement under section 6036 for bankruptcy trustees, debtors in possession and other like fiduciaries in a bankruptcy proceeding. This is because the Internal Revenue Service has determined that the notice requirements contained in the Bankruptcy Rules are sufficient for its purposes.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291 AND REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for final regulations subject to 5 U.S.C. 553(b)(B). Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

LIST OF SUBJECTS IN 26 CFR 301

Administrative practice and procedure, Bankruptcy, Courts, Crime, Employment taxes, Estate taxes, Excise taxes, Gift taxes, Income taxes, Investigations, Law enforcement, Penalties, Pensions, Statistics, Taxes, Disclosure of information, Filing requirements.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations.

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 301 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for part 26 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805;  §301.6036-1 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 6036.

Par. 2. Section 301.6036-1 is amended by revising paragraph (a)(1), so much of paragraph (a)(4)(i) as precedes subdivision (a), and paragraph (e) as follows:

§301.6036-1. Notice required of executor or of receiver or other like fiduciary.

(a) Receivers and other like fiduciaries. (1) Exemption for bankruptcy proceedings. (i) A bankruptcy trustee, debtor in possession or other like fiduciary in a bankruptcy proceeding is not required by this section to give notice of appointment, qualification or authorization to act to the Secretary or his delegate. (However, see the notice requirements under the Bankruptcy Rules.)

(ii) Paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section is effective for appointments, qualifications and authorizations to act made on or after January 29, 1988. For appointments, qualifications and authorizations to act made before the foregoing date, 26 CFR 301.6036-1(a)(1) and (4)(i) (revised as of April 1, 1986) apply.

* * * * *

(4) Contents of Notice—(i) Proceedings other than bankruptcy. The written notice required under paragraph (a)(2) of this section shall contain—

* * * * *

(e) Applicability. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, the provisions of this section shall apply to those persons referred to in this section whose appointments, authorizations, or assignments occur on or after the date of publication of these regulations in the Federal Register as a Treasury decision.

* * * * *

This Treasury decision merely eliminates a requirement that a bankruptcy trustee, debtor in possession, or like fiduciary in a bankruptcy proceeding give notice of appointment or authority to act. For this reason, it is found unnecessary to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Information reporting; rental assistance payments. Rental assistance payments made by public housing agencies to owners of authorized housing projects are subject to information reporting under section 6041 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 88-53

ISSUE

Are rental assistance payments made by public housing agencies to owners of authorized housing projects subject to information reporting under section 6041 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

Under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended (Act), 42 U.S.C. section 1437f (1982), the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) administers a program that provides rental assistance payments for lower-income families. HUD authorizes public housing agencies to administer various aspects of the program. Section 3(6) of the Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. section 1437a(b)(6)(1982), defines the term "public housing agency" to mean any state, county, municipality, or other governmental entity or public body (or agency or instrumentality thereof) that is authorized to engage in or assist in the development or operation of lower income housing. The rental assistance payments are made by HUD to public housing agencies that, in turn, make the payments to the owners of the housing projects. Many of the housing projects are owned by individuals.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6041(a) of the Code (with exceptions not here applicable) provides that all persons engaged in a trade or business and who make payments in the course of such trade or business to another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensation, remuneration, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits and income, of $600 or more in any taxable year must file an information return showing the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient. Section 6041(d) provides that every person required to make a return under section 6041(a) shall furnish a written statement to the payee.

Section 1.6041-1(a)(1)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations requires every person engaged in a trade or business to make an information return reporting payments made in the course of the trade or business to another person of fixed or determinable interest, rents, royalties, annuities, pensions, and other gains, profits, and income aggregating $600 or more in a calendar year unless such payments are specifically excluded from the reporting requirements under section 1.6041-3. Section 1.6041-3(c) specifically excludes from the reporting requirements payments made to most corporations.

Section 1.6041-1(b) of the regulations defines the term "all persons engaged in a trade or business" as used in section 6041(a) of the Code to include not only those so engaged for gain or profit, but also organizations the activities of which are not for the purpose of gain or profit, for example, the organizations referred to in paragraph (g) of section 1.6041-1.

Section 1.6041-1(g) of the regulations requires that information returns on Forms 1099 of payments made by the United States or a state, or political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, shall be made by the officer or employee of the United States, or of such state, or political subdivision, or of the District of Columbia, or of such agency or instrumentality, as the case may be, having control of such payments or by the officer or employee appropriately designated to make such returns.

Under section 3406 of the Code, a payee is subject to backup withholding of 20 percent on payments of a kind required to be shown on a return required under section 6041(a) if the payee fails to furnish the payee's taxpayer identification number (TIN) in the required manner or the Internal Revenue Service notifies the payor that the TIN furnished by the payee is incorrect, and any one of the following three conditions exists: (1) payments to the payee aggregate $600 or more during the calendar year; (2) the payor was required to file a return with respect to payments under section 6041(a) for the preceding calendar year; or (3) the payor was required to impose backup withholding on payments made to the payee during the preceding calendar year. Payments to payees who are not subject to reporting requirements under section 1.6041-3 of the regulations are not subject to backup withholding. Section 3406(b)(3) of the Code. Other payees, such as organizations exempt from taxation under section 501(a), are also not subject to backup withholding. Section 3406(g), and section 35a.9999-3, Q. & A. 13 of the Temporary Employment Tax Regulations.

In the instant case, the public housing agencies as defined in section 3(6) of the Act are organizations described in section 1.6041-1(g) of the Income Tax Regulations. Such public housing agencies are therefore "persons engaged in a trade or business" as defined in section 1.6041-1(b). The payments made by the public housing agencies are payments made in furtherance of the purpose for which the organizations are formed and are therefore payments made in the course of the trade or business of those organizations.

HOLDING

The rental assistance payments that aggregate $600 or more made by the public housing agencies to noncorporate owners of housing projects are subject to information reporting under sections 6041(a) and (d) of the Code. Forms 1099-MISC, Statements for Recipients of Miscellaneous Income, must be filed, and written statement must be furnished to the recipients by the officer or employee of the public housing agency having control of the rental assistance payments or by the officer or employee appropriately designated to make such returns.

In addition, the public housing agencies are required to impose backup withholding under section 3406 of the Code on payments made to payees who are subject to backup withholding and to report amounts withheld on Forms 1099-MISC and on the written statements furnished to the recipients.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.
CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER
DECEMBER 31, 1953

Exemption For Certain Non-Profit Organizations From Filing Information Returns When Paying Awards of $600 or More to Informants

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations that provide an exception for certain non-profit organizations from filing information returns when paying awards of $600 or more to informants.

DATES: The regulations are effective January 1, 1988, and shall apply to information return filing requirements with respect to award payments made after December 31, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains final regulations under section 6041 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide an exemption for certain section 501(c)(3) organizations from the reporting requirements of section 6041. It was determined that no notice and public comment procedure is necessary since this document will not be detrimental to any taxpayer.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 6041 requires a person engaged in a trade or business, who pays compensation of $600 or more to another person, to provide an information return to the Secretary describing the transaction to such extent as may be provided by the Secretary. Section 1.6041-3(n) currently provides that the United States, a State, Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing is exempt from the reporting requirements of section 6041(a) with respect to a payment of a type determined by the Commissioner to be paid as an award to an informer or other payment of a similar character. This exemption allows informants to maintain confidentiality and aids the foregoing governmental entities in obtaining information in connection with law enforcement activities.

Certain non-profit organizations also pay awards to informants who provide information relating to criminal law enforcement. It is felt that the effectiveness of the programs of the non-profit organizations will be enhanced if these organizations are also exempt from the reporting requirements of section 6041(a) with respect to payments of awards.

In order to allow informants to maintain confidentiality and to enhance the effectiveness of informant programs, this Treasury decision amends §1.6041-3(n) to extend the exemption from the reporting requirements of section 6041(a) to certain section 501(c)(3) organizations with respect to payments of awards.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for final regulations subject to 5 U.S.C. 553(b)(B). Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 1.6041-3 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 6041(a).

Par. 2. Section 1.6041-3(n) is revised to read as follows:

(n) A payment for an informer as an award, fee, or reward for information relating to criminal activity, but only if such payment is made by the United States, a State, Territory, or political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, or, with respect to payments made after December 31, 1987, by an organization that is described in section 501(c)(3) and that makes such payments in furtherance of a charitable purpose to lessen the burdens of government within the meaning of §1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2).

Returns Relating to Mortgage Interest Received in a Trade or Business From Individuals

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations and temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final and temporary regulations relating to the reporting of mortgage interest received in a trade or business from individuals. The Tax Reform Acts of 1984 and 1986 changed the applicable law. The final regulations affect a person that is engaged in a trade or business and that, in the course of that trade or business, receives $600 or more of mortgage interest from an individual for a calendar year. The final regulations provide these persons with guidance necessary to comply with the law.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The final regulations are effective on January 1, 1988, and apply to mortgage interest received after December 31, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On August 20, 1985, the Federal Register published temporary regulations (50 FR 33529) [T.D. 8047, 1985-2 C.B. 311] under section 6050H of the Internal Revenue Code relating to the reporting of mortgage interest received in a trade or business from individuals. The text of those temporary regulations also served as a notice of proposed rulemaking published in the Federal Register for the same day (50 FR 33551) [LR-214-84, 1985-2 C.B. 832].

Section 145 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (Pub. L. 98-369, 98 Stat. 685) added section 6050H to the Code. Section 6050H requires a person engaged in a trade or business to report receipt of at least $600 of mortgage interest from an individual for a calendar year if the interest is received in the course of the trade or business. Section 1811(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2832) [1986-3 (Vol.1) C.B. 1, 749] made technical corrections to section 6050H. The final regulations reflect the relevant provisions of the 1984 and 1986 Acts.

After the Internal Revenue Service published temporary and proposed regulations, interest recipients noted their inability to comply with certain provisions. The Service's publication of Announcement 86-3, 1986-3 I.R.B. 42, relaxed several reporting requirements for interest received in 1985. Announcement 86-112, 1986-46 I.R.B. 22, clarified the application of Announcement 86-3 to interest received after 1985. The final regulations reflect the issues addressed in Announcement 86-3.

The Service received public comments on the proposed regulations and held a public hearing on January 7, 1986. After fully considering comments and statements made at the hearing, the Service adopts the proposed regulations as revised by this Treasury decision. Revisions to the proposed regulations are discussed below.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The final regulations are effective only for interest received after December 31, 1987. The temporary regulations and Announcements 86-3 and 86-112 apply to interest received before January 1, 1988.

POINTS AND OTHER PREPAID INTEREST

The proposed regulations prohibited an interest recipient from reporting points and other prepaid interest in the year of receipt but did not address when, if ever, to report those amounts. Announcement 86-3 provided that an interest recipient that received points and other prepaid interest in 1985 can report those amounts as received in 1985 if it was unable to segregate those amounts. Announcement 86-112 stated that the reporting requirement for points and other prepaid interest was relaxed only for 1985. The final regulations prohibit reporting of points and other prepaid interest in the year of prepayment, prohibit reporting of prepaid interest in the form of points in any year, and require reporting of prepaid interest other than points in the proper year of accrual.

Commentators suggested permitting an interest recipient to report in the current calendar year prepaid interest accruing shortly after year-end. For example, an interest payment properly accruing for the period December 6, 1988, through January 5, 1989, contains prepaid interest if received on December 31, 1988. The final regulations permit an interest recipient to report as interest received during the current calendar year prepaid interest properly accruing by the following January 15.

RULE OF 78s METHOD OF ACCOUNTING

The proposed regulations provided no special reporting rule for interest earned under the Rule of 78s method of accounting. Announcement 86-3 allowed an interest recipient that calculates interest earned under the Rule of 78s method of accounting to report interest received under that method provided it met certain notice requirements. The final regulations permit an interest recipient to report interest earned under the Rule of 78s method of accounting as interest received in circumstances identical to those described in Announcement 86-3.

DEFINITION OF MORTGAGE

The proposed regulations defined a mortgage as an obligation secured primarily by real property. Because commentators found difficulty in applying that definition, the final regulations define a mortgage as an obligation all or part of which is secured by real property. Real property includes a manufactured home meeting the definition of section 25(e)(10).

The proposed regulations exempted reporting for interest received on lines of credit or credit card obligations secured primarily by real property. Because the Tax Reform Act of 1986 limits interest deductibility and because payors of record are using these obligations more often, the final regulations remove this exemption.

The final regulations do not address issues arising out of the limitations on qualified residence interest.

The final regulations provide a transitional rule for obligations existing on December 31, 1987, that are not primarily secured by real property. An obligation covered by the transitional rule is not a mortgage subject to reporting after 1987.

INTEREST RECEIVED ON BEHALF OF ANOTHER PERSON

The proposed regulations required interest received on behalf of another person to be reported by the first person to receive it (the initial recipient). Commentators noted difficulty in compliance when the initial recipient did not possess the mortgage reporting information. Announcement 86-3 suspended this reporting rule for 1985 to allow initial recipients time to obtain the reporting information. Announcement 86-112 stated that Announcement 86-3 applied only to 1985 reporting. The final regulations require the initial recipient to report interest received on behalf of another person but except an initial recipient from reporting for any period for which the initial recipient does not possess the mortgage reporting information if the person for which the interest is received is engaged in a trade or business and would receive the interest in the course of its trade or business if it received the interest directly. The exception requires the person for which the interest is received, rather than the initial recipient, to report.

INTEREST RECEIVED BY FOREIGN PERSONS

The proposed regulations provided that a foreign-person interest recipient must report mortgage interest received outside the United States if it is a corporation such that any interest received from it would be from sources within the United States under section 861(a)(1)(C). The final regulations incorporate the criteria described in that section, extend the reporting requirements to noncorporate persons, and clarify that the term "foreign person" means "not a United States person" as defined in section 7701(a)(30).

INTEREST RECEIVED FROM NONRESIDENT ALIEN INDIVIDUALS

The proposed regulations did not exempt an interest recipient from reporting interest received from a nonresident alien individual. Announcement 86-3 provided that for 1985 an interest recipient need not report interest received from a nonresident alien individual. Announcement 86-112 extended this rule to post-1985 reporting. Announcement 86-3 provided documentary evidence rules to determine nonresident alien individual status. The final regulations except an interest recipient from reporting interest received from a nonresident alien individual in circumstances substantially similar to those described in Announcement 86-3.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Therefore, a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

Although the Service issued a notice of proposed rulemaking soliciting public comment, it concluded on issuing the notice that the regulations are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The Service has submitted the collection-of-information requirements contained in these regulations to the Office of Management and Budget in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. OMB has approved these requirements.

§1.6050H-1 Information reporting of mortgage interest received in a trade or business from an individual.

(a) Reporting requirement. Except as otherwise provided in this section and §1.6050H-2, an interest recipient that receives at least $600 of interest on a qualified mortgage for a calendar year must, with respect to that interest—

(1) File an information return with the Internal Revenue Service; and

(2) Furnish a statement to the payor of record on the mortgage.

Paragraph (e) of this section contains rules to determine the amount of interest received on a mortgage for a calendar year. Section 1.6050H-2 contains rules relating to the form, time, and manner of filing information returns and furnishing statements. Paragraph (d) of this section contains additional rules relating to the reporting requirement for foreign persons, cooperative housing corporations, and nonresident alien individuals. An interest recipient may, but is not required to, report its receipt of less than $600 of interest on a qualified mortgage for a calendar year. An interest recipient that chooses, but is not required, to file a return as provided in §1.6050H-2(a) or to furnish a statement as provided in §1.6050H-2(b) is subject to this section and §1.6050H-2.

(b) Qualified mortgage—(1) In general. A mortgage is a qualified mortgage if the payor of record on the mortgage is an individual, including an individual acting in a capacity as a sole proprietor of a business. A mortgage is not a qualified mortgage if the payor of record on the mortgage is not an individual (such as a trust, estate, partnership, association, company, or corporation), even though an individual is a co-borrower on the mortgage and all the trustees, beneficiaries, partners, members, or shareholders of the payor of record are individuals.

(2) Mortgage—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (b)(2)(ii) and (b)(2)(iii) of this section, an obligation is a mortgage if real property (regardless of where located) secures all or part of the obligation. An interest recipient must determine whether real property secures an obligation at the time the obligation is created or, if security is added or removed at a later time, at that later time. Real property includes a manufactured home as defined in section 25(e)(10). An obligation includes a line of credit or a credit card obligation. For purposes of this section and §1.6050H-2, a borrower incurs a line of credit or credit card obligation when the borrower first has the right to borrow against the line of credit or credit card, whether the borrower actually borrows an amount at that time. An obligation will not fail to be treated as a mortgage solely because, under an applicable State or local homestead law or other debtor protection law in effect on August 16, 1986, the security interest is ineffective or the enforceability of the security interest is restricted.

(ii) Transitional rule for certain obligations existing on December 31, 1984—(A) In general. An obligation that existed on December 31, 1984, is not a mortgage if, at the time the payor of record incurred the obligation, the interest recipient reasonably classified the obligation as other than a mortgage, real property loan, real estate loan, or other similar type of obligation. A reasonable classification of an obligation must be consistent with industry practices and determined according to the purpose of the obligation, the property securing the obligation, and any other reasonable factor. For purposes of this paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(A), an obligation was not reasonably classified as other than a mortgage, real property loan, real estate loan, or other similar type of obligation if, at the time the payor of record incurred the obligation, more than one-half of the obligations in the particular class in which the obligation was classified were secured primarily by real property.

(B) Examples. The following examples illustrate the rules of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(A) of this section:

Example (1). B offers an unsecured line of credit and a line of credit secured by real property. B separately markets the two credit lines, and they are governed by different terms and conditions. For accounting purposes, B classifies the two types of loans as a single class. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(A) of this section, the two types of loans are different classes of obligations.

Example (2). B operates a program to make loans to small businesses. Depending on the amount of the loan and the credit history of the borrower, B may or may not require security for the loan. If B requires security, it may consist of real or personal property. For accounting purposes, B classifies all of the loans within this program as a single class. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(A) of this section, all of the loans within this program may be classified as belonging to a single class.

(iii) Transitional rule for certain obligations existing on December 31, 1987. An obligation that was incurred after December 31, 1984, and that existed on December 31, 1987, is not a mortgage if the obligation is not primarily secured by real property.

(3) Payor of record. A payor of record on a mortgage is the person carried on the books and records of the interest recipient as the principal borrower on the mortgage. If the books and records of the interest recipient do not indicate which borrower is the principal borrower, the interest recipient must designate a borrower as the principal borrower.

(c) Interest recipient—(1) Trade or business requirement. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, an interest recipient is a person that is engaged in a trade or business (whether or not the trade or business of lending money) and that, in the course of the trade or business, receives interest on a mortgage. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(1), if a person holds a mortgage which was originated or acquired in the course of a trade or business, the interest on the mortgage is considered to be received in the course of that trade or business. For example, if real estate developer A lends money to individual B to enable B to purchase a house in a subdivision owned and developed by A, and B gives a mortgage to A for the loan, A is an interest recipient for interest received on the mortgage. Alternatively, if C, a person engaged in the trade or business of being a physician, lends money to individual D to enable D to purchase C's home, and D gives a mortgage to C for the loan, C is not an interest recipient for interest received on the mortgage because C will not receive the interest in the course of the trade or business of being a physician.

(2) Interest received or collected on behalf of another person—(i) General rule. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section, a person that, in the course of its trade or business, receives or collects interest on a mortgage on behalf of another person is the interest recipient (the initial recipient) for the mortgage. In this case, the reporting requirement of paragraph (a) of this section does not apply to the transfer of interest from the initial recipient to the person for which the initial recipient receives or collects the interest. For example, if financial institution A collects interest on behalf of financial institution B, A is the initial recipient for the mortgage, and B is not required to report the interest received on the mortgage from A.

(ii) Exception. Paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section does not apply for a period for which—

(A) An initial recipient does not possess the information needed to comply with the reporting requirement of paragraph (a) of this section; and

(B) The person for which the interest is received or collected would receive the interest in the course of its trade or business if the interest were paid directly to that person.

The person for which the interest is received or collected is the interest recipient with respect to interest received or collected on the mortgage during such a period. For purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(B) of this section, if interest is received or collected on behalf of a person other than an individual, that person is presumed to receive interest in a trade or business.

(3) Examples. The following examples illustrate the rules of paragraph (c) of this section:

Example (1). Financial institution F collects mortgage interest on behalf of financial institution G and deposits the amount collected into G's account held with F. F possesses the information needed to comply with the reporting requirement of paragraph (a) of this section. F is the interest recipient for the mortgage. G is not required to report.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that F does not possess the information needed to comply with the reporting requirement. G, the person for which F collects the interest, is the interest recipient for the mortgage. F is not required to report.

Example (3). S, an individual, sells real property to another individual, P, and takes back a mortgage from P to finance the sale. S does not receive the interest in the course of a trade or business. B, a bank, collects P's payments of principal and interest on behalf of S and deposits that amount into an account held at the bank in S's name. B does not possess the information needed to comply with the reporting requirement of paragraph (a) of this section. B is the interest recipient for P's mortgage without regard to paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section, because S would not receive the interest in the course of a trade or business. S is not required to report.

Example (4). X collects mortgage interest on behalf of Y, who would receive the interest in the course of a trade or business. X possesses the information needed to comply with the reporting requirement of paragraph (a) of this section. On July 1. 1988, Z assumes X's interest collection responsibilities. Z does not possess the information needed to comply with the reporting requirement of paragraph (a) of this section. X is the interest recipient for interest received from January 1, 1988, through June 30, 1988. Because Z does not possess the requisite information and Y would receive the interest in the course of a trade or business, Y is the interest recipient for interest received from July 1, 1988, through December 31, 1988.

(4) Governmental unit. A governmental unit or an agency or instrumentality of a governmental unit that receives interest on a mortgage is an interest recipient without regard to the requirement of paragraph (c)(1) of this section that the interest be received in the course of a trade or business. A governmental unit or an agency or instrumentality of a governmental unit that is an interest recipient must designate an officer or employee to satisfy the reporting requirements of paragraph (a) of this section.

(d) Additional rules—(1) Reporting by foreign person. An interest recipient that is not a United States person (as defined in section 7701(a)(30)) must report interest received on a qualified mortgage only if it receives the interest—

(i) At a location in the United States, or

(ii) At a location outside the United States if the interest recipient is—

(A) A controlled foreign corporation (within the meaning of section 957(a)), or

(B) A person, 50 percent or more of the gross income of which, from all sources for the three-year period ending with the close of the taxable year preceding the receipt of interest (or for such part of the period as the person was in existence), was effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

(2) Reporting with respect to nonresident alien individual—(i) In general. The reporting requirement of paragraph (a) of this section does not apply if—

(A) The payor of record is a nonresident alien individual, and

(B) Real property located in the United States does not secure the mortgage.

(ii) Nonresident alien individual status. For purposes of paragraph (d)(2)(i)(A) of this section, an interest recipient must apply the following documentary evidence rules to determine whether a payor of record is a nonresident alien individual:

(A) If interest is paid outside the United States, the interest recipient must satisfy the documentary evidence standard provided in §35a.9999-4T (Q/A-5(iii)) with respect to the payor of record; and

(B) If interest is paid within the United States, the interest recipient must secure from the payor of record a Form W-8 or a substantially similar statement signed by the payor under penalty of perjury as described in §1.6049-5(b)(2)(iv).

For purposes of this paragraph (d)(2)(ii), the place of payment is the place where the payor of record completes the acts necessary to effect payment. An amount paid by transfer to an account maintained by an interest recipient in the United States or by mail to a United States address is considered to be paid within the United States.

(3) Reporting by cooperative housing corporations. For purposes of this section and §1.6050H-2, an amount received by a cooperative housing corporation from an individual tenant-stockholder that represents the tenant-stockholder's proportionate share of interest described in section 216(a)(2) is interest received on a qualified mortgage in the course of the cooperative housing corporation's trade or business. A cooperative housing corporation is an interest recipient with respect to each tenant-stockholder's proportionate share of interest and must report $600 or more of interest received from an individual tenant-stockholder. The terms "cooperative housing corporation," "tenant-stockholder," and "tenant-stockholder's proportionate share" are defined in section 216 and the regulations thereunder.

(e) Amount of interest on mortgage for calendar year—(1) In general. For purposes of this section and §1.6050H-2, interest includes mortgage prepayment penalties and late charges other than late charges for a specific mortgage service. Interest does not include interest prepaid in the form of points, regardless of the payor of record's ability to deduct the points under section 461(g)(2). An interest recipient must not report interest prepaid in the form of points as interest received for any calendar year. For example, although an interest recipient receives $3,400 interest prepaid in the form of points in 1988, it must not report that interest in 1988 or a subsequent year. Whether an interest recipient receives $600 or more of interest on a mortgage for a calendar year is determined on a mortgage-by-mortgage basis. An interest recipient need not aggregate interest received on all of a payor of record's mortgages which it holds to determine if it meets the $600 threshold. Therefore, an interest recipient need not report interest of less than $600 received on a mortgage, even though it receives $600 or more of total interest on all of a payor of record's mortgages for a calendar year.

(2) Calendar year—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (e)(2)(ii) of this section, the calendar year for which interest is received is the later of—

(A) The calendar year in which the interest is received, or

(B) The calendar year in which the interest properly accrues.

For example, if an interest recipient receives a payment on December 20, 1988, that includes interest accruing by December 31, 1988, the interest recipient must report the interest as received for 1988 even if the interest payment is not due until February 1989.

(ii) De minimis rule. An interest recipient may treat interest received during the current calendar year which properly accrues by January 15 of the subsequent calendar year as interest received for the current calendar year. For example, if an interest recipient receives a monthly interest payment on December 31, 1988, which includes interest accruing for the period December 5, 1988, to January 5, 1989, the interest recipient may treat the entire interest payment as received for 1988. If a portion of an interest payment received in a current calendar year accrues after January 15 of the subsequent calendar year, an interest recipient must report as interest received for the current calendar year only the portion that properly accrues by the end of the current calendar year. For example, if an interest recipient receives a monthly payment that includes interest accruing for the period December 20, 1988, through January 20, 1989, the interest recipient may not report as interest received for 1988 any interest accruing after December 31, 1988. The interest recipient must report the interest accruing after December 31, 1988, as received for calendar year 1989.

(3) Certain interest not received on mortgage—(i) Interest received from seller on payor of record's mortgage. Interest received from a seller or a person related to a seller within the meaning of section 267(b) or section 707(b)(1) on a payor of record's mortgage is not interest received on a mortgage. For example, interest is not received on a mortgage if a real estate developer deposits an amount in escrow with an interest recipient and advises it to draw on the account to pay interest on a payor of record's mortgage (e.g., a buy-down mortgage). Similarly, interest is not received on a mortgage if an interest recipient receives a lump sum from a real estate developer for interest on a payor of record's mortgage.

(ii) Interest received from governmental unit. Interest received from a governmental unit or an agency or instrumentality of a governmental unit is not interest received on a mortgage. For example, interest is not received on a mortgage if received as a housing assistance payment from the Department of Housing and Urban Development on a mortgage insured under section 235 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1701-1715z (1982 & Supp. 1983)). Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (e)(1) and (2) of this section, interest received on a mortgage is only the excess of interest received on the mortgage over interest received from a governmental unit or an agency or instrumentality of a governmental unit.

(4) Interest calculated under Rule of 78s method of accounting. An interest recipient permitted by Revenue Procedure 83-40, 1983-1 C.B. 774, (or other revenue procedure) to use the Rule of 78s method of accounting to calculate interest earned on a transaction may report as interest received on a mortgage interest earned on the transaction as calculated under the Rule of 78s method of accounting only if the interest recipient satisfies the notice requirement of §1.6050H-2(c).

(f) [Reserved].

(g) Effective date. This section is effective for mortgage interest received after December 31, 1987. Section 1.6050H-1T contains rules for reporting mortgage interest received after December 31, 1984, and before January 1, 1988.

§1.6050H-2 Time, form, and manner of reporting interest received on qualified mortgage.

(a) Requirement to file return—(1) Form of return. An interest recipient must file a return required by §1.6050H-1(a) on Form 1098 (with Form 1096 as the transmittal form). An interest recipient may use forms containing provisions substantially similar to those in Forms 1098 and 1096 if it complies with applicable revenue procedures relating to substitute Forms 1098 and 1096. An interest recipient must file a separate return for each qualified mortgage for which it receives $600 or more of interest for a calendar year.

(2) Information included on return. An interest recipient must include on Form 1098:

(i) The name, address, and taxpayer identification number (TIN) (as defined in section 7701(a)(41)) of the payor of record;

(ii) The name, address, and TIN of the interest recipient;

(iii) The amount of interest required to be reported with respect to the qualified mortgage for the calendar year; and

(iv) Any other information required by Form 1098 or its instructions.

Section 1.6050H-1(e) contains rules to determine the amount of interest received on a mortgage for a calendar year.

(3) Time and place for filing return. An interest recipient must file a return required by paragraph (a) of this section on or before February 28 of the year following the calendar year for which it receives the mortgage interest. An interest recipient must file the return with the same Internal Revenue Service Center where it files its other returns.

(4) Use of magnetic media. An interest recipient must file the return required by paragraph (a) of this section on magnetic media only if required by section 6011(e) and the regulations thereunder. An interest recipient not required by section 6011(e) to file returns on magnetic media may request permission to do so. Section 301.6011-2 contains rules relating to the use of magnetic media. A failure to file on magnetic media when required constitutes a failure to file an information return under section 6721.

(b) Requirement to furnish statement—(1) In general. An interest recipient that must file a return under paragraph (a) of this section must furnish a statement to the payor of record.

(2) Information included on statement. An interest recipient must include on the statement that it must furnish to a payor of record:

(i) The information required under paragraph (a)(2) of this section;

(ii) A legend identifying the statement as important tax information which is being furnished to the Internal Revenue Service, and notifying the payor of record that if the payor of record is required to file a return, a negligence penalty or other sanction will be imposed on the payor of record if the IRS determines that an underpayment of tax results because the payor of record overstated a deduction for this mortgage interest on the payor of record's return; and

(iii) A legend stating that the payor of record may be unable to deduct the full amount of mortgage interest reported on the statement; that limitations based on the cost and value of the property securing the mortgage may apply; and that the payor of record may only deduct mortgage interest to the extent it was incurred, actually paid by the payor of record, and not reimbursed by another person.

(3) Statement furnished pursuant to Federal mortgage program. An interest recipient that furnishes a statement to a payor of record under a Federal mortgage program will satisfy the requirement of paragraph (b)(1) of this section if the statement contains all the information and legends required by paragraph (b)(2) of this section and is furnished by the time and at the place required by paragraph (b)(6) of this section.

(4) Copy of Form 1098 to payor of record. An interest recipient will satisfy the requirement of paragraph (b)(1) of this section by furnishing to a payor of record a copy of Form 1098 (or a substitute statement that complies with applicable revenue procedures) containing all the information filed with the Internal Revenue Service and all the legends required by paragraph (b)(2) of this section by the time and at the place required by paragraph (b)(6) of this section.

(5) Furnishing statement with other information reports. An interest recipient may transmit the statement required by paragraph (b)(1) of this section to the payor of record with other information, including other information returns, as permitted by applicable revenue procedures.

(6) Time and place for furnishing statement. An interest recipient must furnish a statement required by paragraph (b)(1) of this section to a payor of record on or before January 31 of the year following the calendar year for which it receives the qualified mortgage interest. The interest recipient furnishes the statement to the payor of record if it mails the statement to the payor of record's last known address.

(c) Notice requirement for use of Rule of 78s method of accounting—(1) In general. An interest recipient seeking to report interest received on a mortgage under the Rule of 78s method of accounting as permitted under §1.6050H–1 (e)(4) must notify the payor of record that the Rule of 78s method of accounting was used to calculate interest received on the mortgage and that the payor of record may not deduct as interest the amount calculated under the Rule of 78s method of accounting unless the payor of record properly uses that method to determine interest deductions. The notice must state that the payor of record may use the Rule of 78s method of accounting to determine interest paid for Federal income tax purposes only for a self-amortizing consumer loan requiring level payments at regular intervals (at least annually) over no longer than a five-year period, with no balloon payment at the end of the loan term, and only when the loan agreement provides for use of the Rule of 78s method of accounting to determine interest earned. See Rev. Proc. 83-40, 1983-1 C.B. 774; Rev. Rul. 83-84, 1983-1 C.B. 97.

(2) Time and manner. An interest recipient must provide notice required by paragraph (c)(1) of this section to a payor of record on or with the statement required by paragraph (b) of this section. An interest recipient may provide notice on a separate paper or on the statement required by paragraph (b) of this section.

(d) Reporting by related parties—(1) In general. An interest recipient that receives or collects interest on a mortgage for a qualified person may designate that qualified person to satisfy the reporting requirements of paragraphs (a), (b), and (c) of this section. If a designated qualified person reports as permitted under this paragraph (d), it will satisfy the requirement of paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of this section by including on Form 1098 (and Form 1096) the name, address, and TIN of either the interest recipient or the designated qualified person.

(2) Qualified person. A qualified person is a trade or business with respect to which the interest recipient is under common control within the meaning of §11.414(c)–2.

(3) Designation agreement. An interest recipient that designates a qualified person to satisfy the reporting requirements described in paragraph (d)(1) of this section must so designate in a written designation agreement. The designation agreement must identify the mortgages and calendar years for which the designated qualified person must report. Both the interest recipient and the designated qualified person must sign and retain a copy of the designation agreement, but neither must file the designation agreement with the Internal Revenue Service.

(4) Penalties. A designated qualified person is subject to any applicable penalties (e.g., the section 6723 penalty for failing to include correct information) as if it were an interest recipient. An interest recipient is not relieved from joint and several liability for applicable penalties by designating a qualified person under the provisions of paragraph (d)(3) of this section. Paragraph (e) of this section describes applicable penalties.

(e) Penalty provisions—(1) Failure to file return or to furnish statement. The section 6721 penalty applies to an interest recipient that fails to file a return required by paragraph (a) of this section with respect to a payor of record. The section 6722 penalty applies to an interest recipient that fails to furnish a statement required by paragraph (b) of this section to a payor of record.

(2) Failure to furnish TIN. The section 6676 penalty may apply to an interest recipient that fails to furnish the TIN of a payor of record on a return required by paragraph (a) of this section. The section 6676 penalty may apply to an interest recipient that fails to request and to obtain the TIN of a payor of record under paragraph (f) of this section.

(3) Failure to include correct information. The section 6723 penalty may apply to an interest recipient that fails to include correct information on a return required by paragraph (a) of this section or on a statement required by paragraph (b) of this section to be furnished to a payor of record.

(f) Requirement to request and to obtain TIN—(1) In general. For obligations incurred after December 31, 1987, an interest recipient must make all reasonable efforts to obtain the TIN of a payor of record when the payor of record incurs the obligation. For example, an interest recipient may require a borrower to furnish a TIN during the mortgage approval or application process. If an interest recipient does not maintain the TIN of a payor of record on a mortgage, whenever incurred, it must request the TIN at least annually and must process responses properly and promptly.

(2) Manner of requesting TIN. An interest recipient need not separately mail a request for a TIN. An interest recipient may include a request in its regular mailing of payment coupon booklets or annual statements. If an interest recipient makes no mailing to a payor of record during the year in which the payor of record incurs the obligations, it must request the TIN in a separate mailing. No particular form is required to request a TIN. Nevertheless, an interest recipient must make the request on a separate paper and must clearly notify a payor of record that the Internal Revenue Service requires the payor of record to furnish a TIN in order to verify any mortgage interest deduction. An interest recipient must notify a payor of record that failure to furnish a TIN subjects the payor of record to a $50 penalty imposed by the Internal Revenue Service. A request for a TIN made on Form W-9 satisfies the requirement of this paragraph (f)(2).

(g) Effective date. This section is effective for mortgage interest received after December 31, 1987. Section 1.6050H-1T contains rules for reporting mortgage interest received after December 31, 1984, and before January 1, 1988.

Automatic Extension of Time to File Partnership Return of Income and Trust Income Tax Return

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the automatic extension of time to file partnership returns of income and trust income tax returns. The temporary regulations affect persons filing partnership and trust returns and provide those persons with the guidance necessary to comply with the law. The text of the temporary regulations also serves as the text of the proposed regulations for the notice of proposed rulemaking on this subject  [page 934, this Bulletin].

EFFECTIVE DATE: The regulations apply to partnership and trust returns required to be filed for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Section 6081(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 authorizes the Secretary to grant a reasonable extension of time to file returns. Currently, if a partnership or trust needs an extension of time to file a return, the partnership or trust must request an extension on Form 2758 and include a detailed explanation of the reasons an extension is necessary. The Internal Revenue Service's administrative practice has been to routinely approve these requests. In order to formalize current administrative practice, these temporary regulations provide rules for obtaining an automatic extension of time to file partnership returns of income and trust income tax returns.

In the case of a partnership, an automatic three-month extension may be obtained for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1988, by filing a properly prepared Form 2758 with the words "AUTOMATIC EXTENSION UNDER §1.6081-2T" typed or legibly printed on line 4 of Form 2758. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987, Form 8736 must be used. Form 2758 or 8736 must be filed by the due date for filing the partnership return with the Internal Revenue Service Center where the partnership return is required to be filed.

In the case of a trust, an automatic three-month extension may be obtained for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1988, by filing a properly prepared Form 2758 with the words "AUTOMATIC EXTENSION UNDER §1.6081-3T" typed or legibly printed on line 4 of Form 2758. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987, Form 8736 must be used. Form 2758 or 8736 must be filed by the due date for filing the trust return with the Internal Revenue Service Center where the trust return is required to be filed and must be accompanied by remittance of the full amount of the estimated unpaid tax liability.

An automatic extension of time to file a partnership or trust return does not extend the time for filing a partner's or beneficiary's income tax return. Because the time for filing the income tax return of partners and beneficiaries is not extended when a partnership or trust obtains an extension of time to file its return, the Internal Revenue Service will monitor the new automatic extension procedure to ascertain whether the lack of notice to partners and beneficiaries that the extension has been requested is engendering substantial filing difficulties for the partners and beneficiaries. If it becomes apparent that most partnerships and trusts are routinely requesting an automatic extension and that these requests are unduly delaying the filing of partner and beneficiary returns or causing substantial inconvenience to partners and beneficiaries, the Internal Revenue Service will reconsider the appropriateness of allowing automatic extensions of time to file partnership and trust returns.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Therefore, a regulatory impact analysis is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

For the reasons set forth in the preamble, Title 26, Chapter 1, Subchapter A, Part 1, and Subchapter H, Part 602, of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as set forth below:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * *

Par. 2. The following new §§1.6081-2T and 1.6081-3T shall be added in the appropriate place.

§1.6081-2T Automatic extension of time to file partnership return of income (temporary).

(a) In general. A partnership required to file a return of income on Form 1065 for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, shall be allowed an automatic extension of time to file such return to the fifteenth day of the third month following the month in which falls the date prescribed for filing such return if and only if an application under this section is filed in accordance with paragraph (b) of this section. In the case of a partnership described in §1.6081-2(a)(1), the automatic extension allowed under this section shall run concurrently with an extension of time to file granted pursuant to §1.6081-2(a).

(b) Requirements. In order to satisfy this paragraph (b), an application for an automatic extension under this section must satisfy the following requirements:

(1) The application must be prepared (i) on Form 2758, "Application for Extension of Time to File U.S. Partnership, Fiduciary, and Certain Other Returns," for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1988, by typing or legibly printing on line 4 "AUTOMATIC EXTENSION UNDER §1.6081-2T," and (ii) on Form 8736 for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987;

(2) The application must be signed by a general partner authorized to file the partnership's Form 1065 or other person authorized by such general partner to file the application, but only if such other person is (i) an attorney who is a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of a state, possession, territory, commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, (ii) a certified public accountant duly qualified to practice in a state, possession, territory, commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, or (iii) a person currently enrolled to practice before the Treasury Department; and

(3) The application must be filed on or before the later of (i) the date prescribed for filing the partnership return with the Internal Revenue Service Center where the partnership return is required to be filed (without regard to any extensions of the time for filing such return), and (ii) the expiration of any extension of time to file granted such partnership pursuant to §1.6081-2(a).

(c) Payment of section 7519 amount. An automatic extension of time for filing a partnership return under this section does not extend the time for payment of any amount due under section 7519, relating to required payments for entities electing not to have a required taxable year.

(d) Section 444 election. An automatic extension of time for filing a partnership return shall run concurrently with any extension of time for filing a return allowed because of section 444, relating to the election of a taxable year other than a required taxable year.

(e) Effect of extension on partner. An automatic extension of time for filing a partnership return under this section shall not operate to extend the time for filing a partner's income tax return or the time for the payment of any tax due on such return.

(f) Termination of automatic extension. The district director, including the Director of Foreign Programs, or the director of a service center may, in his or her discretion, terminate at any time an automatic extension by mailing to the partnership, or to the person who requested such extension for the partnership, a notice of termination. The notice shall be mailed at least 10 days prior to the termination date designated in such notice. The notice of termination shall be sufficient for all purposes when mailed to the partnership at its address shown on Form 1065 or to the person who requested such extension for the partnership at his or her last known address or last known place of business, even if such person is deceased or is under a legal disability.

(g) Coordination with §1.6081-1. Except in undue hardship cases, no extension of time for filing a partnership return of income shall be granted under §1.6081-1 until an automatic extension has been granted pursuant to the provisions of this section.

§1.6081-3T Automatic extension of time to file trust income tax return (temporary).

(a) In general. A trust required to file a return of income tax on Form 1041 or on Form 1041S for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, shall be allowed an automatic extension of time to file such return to the fifteenth day of the third month following the month in which falls the date prescribed for filing such return if and only if an application under this section is filed in accordance with paragraph (b) of this section.

(b) Requirements. In order to satisfy this paragraph (b), an application for an automatic extension under this section must satisfy the following requirements:

(c) Effect of extension on beneficiary. An automatic extension of time to file a trust return of income under this section shall not operate to extend the time for filing the income tax return of a beneficiary of the trust or the time for the payment of any tax due on such return.

(d) Termination of automatic extension. The district director, including the Director of Foreign Programs, or the director of a service center may, in his or her discretion, terminate at any time an automatic extension by mailing to the fiduciary authorized to file the trust's Form 1041 or 1041S, or to the person who requested such extension for the trust, a notice of termination. The notice shall be mailed at last 10 days prior to the termination date designated in such notice. The notice of termination shall be sufficient for all purposes when mailed to the fiduciary authorized to file the trust's Form 1041 or 1041S at his or her address shown on Form 1041 or 1041S or to the person who requested such extension for the trust at his or her last known address or last known place of business, even if such person is deceased or is under a legal disability.

Deposits of Estimated Tax Payments of Certain Trusts

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides a final regulatory amendment that requires certain banks and financial institutions to deposit estimated income tax payments with respect to taxable trusts for which they act as fiduciaries through the Federal Tax Deposit (FTD) system instead of forwarding them to an Internal Revenue Service Center. The amendment would affect certain financial institutions which are authorized depositaries for Federal taxes and which act as fiduciaries for at least 200 taxable trusts.

DATE: This amendment is applicable and effective for estimated tax payments required to be made with respect to certain trusts on and after September 15, 1988.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On November 18, 1987, the FEDERAL REGISTER published (52 FR 44139) a notice of proposed rulemaking regarding a proposed amendment to the Income Tax Regulations under section 6302(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 relating to deposits of certain quarterly estimated income tax payments required to be made by estates and trusts under section 6654(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. This document contains final regulations regarding deposits under section 6302(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 of the above-described payments required to be made by certain trusts, effective for such payments required to be made on or after September 15, 1988. The regulations are issued under the authority of sections 6302(c) and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

Several public comments were received in response to the notice of proposed rulemaking, but no hearing was requested with respect to the proposed amendment, and none was held. The public comments discussed several problems that the proposed amendment could cause. After consideration of these comments, it was decided to promulgate the proposed amendment with several modifications to resolve those problems. These revisions are discussed in the public comments section of this regulatory preamble.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

The final regulatory amendment requires certain banks and financial institutions to deposit through the Federal Tax Deposit (FTD) system the quarterly estimated income tax payments relating to certain taxable trusts for which such institutions act as fiduciaries, instead of delivering the payments to an Internal Revenue Service Center as is presently required.

The requirement that quarterly estimated income tax payments to be made for certain trusts and estates was enacted in section 1404(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The Service had required all estimated tax payments for the 1987 taxable year with respect to trusts and estates to be delivered to an Internal Revenue Service Center along with a Form 1041-ES estimated tax voucher. The Service has experienced administrative difficulties in processing a single payment from fiduciaries in payment of estimated tax with respect to a large number of trusts administered by such fiduciaries. The amendment helps to resolve these difficulties by requiring certain financial institutions to pay estimated tax with respect to trusts for which they act as fiduciaries through the FTD system and to make magnetic tape reports of such payments in accordance with Revenue Procedure 87-64 (1987-2 C.B. 828). The institutions subject to this requirement are those that have Treasury Tax & Loan (TT&L) accounts for deposited Federal taxes ("TT&L fiduciaries") and that administer at least 200 trusts required to make estimated tax payments during the current calendar year.

Other fiduciaries that do not have TT&L accounts and TT&L fiduciaries that administer fewer than 200 trusts and that wish to make a single estimated tax payment with respect to a large number of trusts (i.e., at least 50) for which they act as fiduciaries will be permitted to elect to make such payments through the FTD system in accordance with the procedures established in Revenue Procedure 87-64.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Most of the commentators requested that the proposed taxable-years-beginning-on January 1, 1988, effective date for implementing the FTD system with respect to trusts' estimated tax payments be postponed for up to a year to provide fiduciaries time both to adjust to the new payment system and to place all trusts on a calendar year basis as required by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. After consideration of these comments, the Service determined that the lead time from the publication of Revenue Procedure 87-64 in December 1987 until September 15, 1988, would be necessary and sufficient to implement the new estimated tax payment requirement. Therefore, the Treasury decision delays the effective date and requires certain trusts to make estimated tax payments through the FTD system beginning with payments required to be made on and after September 15, 1988.

A commentator contended that requiring every TT&L fiduciary with at least 50 taxable trusts to make estimated tax payments through the FTD system and to report them on magnetic tape would impose an undue burden on a number of small financial institutions that lack in-house magnetic tape capability. After considering this comment, the Service decided to reduce the burdens for small fiduciaries by revising this requirement so that only TT&L fiduciaries that have at least 200 trusts are required to make quarterly estimated tax payments under section 6654(1). However, it should be noted that Revenue Procedure 87-64 provides a procedure whereby fiduciaries with at least 50 taxable trusts and those without a TT&L account may apply for authorization to make estimated tax payments through the FTD system and to report them on a single magnetic tape. Thus, these fiduciaries may elect to make and report such payments in accordance with Revenue Procedure 87-64.

Two commentators objected that requiring fiduciaries to submit a preprinted individual voucher for each trust would be unduly burdensome. After consideration of both the burden of fiduciaries and the Service's requirements in order to process payments accurately, it was determined that Form 1041-ES vouchers would continue to be required in all circumstances in which a fiduciary does not use magnetic tape reporting. Fiduciaries of more than 50 taxable trusts that find use of Form 1041-ES vouchers unduly burdensome may elect to report estimated tax payments on magnetic tape in accordance with the procedures in Revenue Procudure 87-64.

Two commentators contended that requiring fiduciaries to make quarterly estimated tax payments through the FTD system for estates opened for more than 2 years would be unduly burdensome. They explained that estates comprise only a small portion of fiduciary accounts administered by banks and that estates, unlike taxable trusts, have a variety of fiscal years. Therefore, they contended, if this requirement was retained, the Service Centers would, in off-quarter months, receive a large number of magnetic tapes each reporting only a few estimated tax payments of such estates. After considering these comments, the Service decided to exclude estates from the Treasury decision's requirement to make certain estimated tax payments through the FTD system. Thus, all fiduciaries will continue to make and report estimated tax payments of taxable estates on the Form 1041-ES vouchers.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. It has been certified that this rule will not have a significant impact on a substantial number of small entities because the regulations would be applicable only to financial institutions which administer a large number of trusts actually required to make estimated tax payments. A regulatory flexibility analysis, therefore, is not required under the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. The requirements have been approved by OMB under control number 1545-0971.

A bank or other financial institution described in paragraph (b) of this section shall deposit in its Treasury Tax & Loan account described in 31 CFR 203 or with a Federal Reserve bank all payments of estimated tax required to be paid on or after September 15, 1988, under section 6654(1) with respect to trusts for which such institution acts as a fiduciary on or before the date otherwise prescribed for paying such tax.

(b) Banks and financial institutions subject to this requirement. BACKGROUND

This document amends the Administrative Regulations (26 CFR Part 301) under section 6323 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code). These regulations clarify that the term "Form 668" includes a notice of Federal tax lien filed by the use of an electronic or magnetic medium where the law of the state in which a notice of Federal tax lien is filed permits such method of filing.

IN GENERAL

Section 6321 of Code imposes a lien in favor of the United States whenever a person liable for any tax neglects or refuses to pay the tax after demand. For such lien to be valid as against any purchaser, holder of a security interest, mechanic's lienor, or judgment lien creditor, a notice of the lien must be filed which meets the requirements of section 6323(f). Section 6323(f)(3) provides that the form and content of the notice referred to in section 6323(a) shall be prescribed by the Secretary, and that such notice is valid notwithstanding any other provision of law regarding the form or content of a notice of lien.

NOTICE OF LIEN MAY BE FILED BY THE USE OF AN ELECTRONIC OR MAGNETIC MEDIUM

Section 301.6323(f)-1(c) of the regulations provides that notice of a Federal tax lien "shall be filed on Form 668, 'Notice of Federal Tax Lien under Internal Revenue Laws'." These temporary regulations clarify that the term "Form 668" includes both a Form 668 printed on paper and a Form 668 filed by the use of an electronic or magnetic medium if the law of the state in which the notice is filed permits a notice of Federal tax lien to be filed by the use of such medium. The use of a non-paper form will not affect the decision to place a notice of lien on file and will not significantly affect the timing of issuance of a notice of lien. Rather, the use of a non-paper form merely simplifies the manner of transmitting information to a state after a lien is determined to be valid and any remaining issues are resolved. Paper forms will continue to be used in states that do not permit electronic or magnetic filing.

The use of electronic or magnetic media to file a notice of tax lien will enable the Internal Revenue Service to better serve the pulblic by (a) reducing the time it takes to notify the public that a lien exists; (b) reducing the amount of paperwork necessary to file a notice; and (c) in certain cases, eliminating or reducing the cost of filing a notice of lien, which cost is generally billed to the taxpayer involved.

REFILING A NOTICE OF LIEN

Section 6323(g) of the Code and §301.6323(g)-1 of the regulations, which govern the refiling of a notice of Federal tax lien, do not require a particular form to be used in refiling a notice of Federal tax lien. Therefore, an amendment to the regulations is not necessary to allow a notice of Federal tax lien to be refiled by the use of any electronic or magnetic medium permitted by the state in which the notice is refiled.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6) does not apply and no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291, and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly 26 CFR Part 301 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 301 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805  Section 301.6323(f)-1T(c) is also issued under 26 U.S.C. 6323(f)(3).

Par. 2. A new §301.6323(f)-1T(c) is added immediately after §301.6323 (f)-1(c) to read as follows:

§301.6323(f)-1T Place for filing notice; form. (Temporary)

(a) (Reserved)

(b) (Reserved)

(c) Form—(1) In general. The notice referred to in §301.6323(a)-1 shall be filed on Form 668, "Notice of Federal Tax Lien under Internal Revenue Laws". Such notice is valid notwithstanding any other provision of law regarding the form or content of a notice of lien. For example, omission from the notice of lien of a description of the property subject to the lien does not affect the validity thereof even though State law may require that the notice contain a description of the property subject to the lien.

(2) Form 668 defined. The term "Form 668" generally means a paper form. However, if a state in which a notice referred to in §301.6323 (a)-1 is filed permits a notice of Federal tax lien to be filed by the use of an electronic or magnetic medium, the term "Form 668" includes a Form 668 filed by the use of any electronic or magnetic medium permitted by that state. A Form 668 must identify the taxpayer, the tax liability giving rise to the lien, and the date the assessment arose regardless of the method used to file the notice of Federal tax lien.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Chapter 67.—Interest
Subchapter C.—Determination of Interest Rate; Compounding of Interest

Section 6621—Determination of Rate of Interest

26 CFR 301.6621-1: Interest rate.

Interest rates; underpayments and overpayments. The rate of interest determined under section 6621 of the Code for the calendar quarter beginning April 1, 1988, will decrease to 9 percent for overpayments and 10 percent for underpayments.

Rev. Rul. 88-17

Section 6621 of the Internal Revenue Code establishes differential rates for allowance of interest on tax overpayments and assessment of intereston tax underpayments. Under section 6621(a)(1), the overpayment rate is the sum of the short-term federal rate plus 2 percentage points. Under section 6621(a)(2), the underpayment rate is the sum of the short-term federal rate plus 3 percentage points.

Section 6621(b)(1) of the Code provides that the Secretary shall determine the short-term federal rate for the first month in each calendar quarter.

Section 6621(b)(2)(A) of the Code provides that the federal short-term rate determined under section 6621(b)(1) for any month shall apply during the first calendar quarter beginning after such month.

Section 6621(b)(2)(B) of the Code provides that in determining the addition to tax under section 6654 for failure to pay estimated tax for any taxable year the federal short-term rate that applies during the 3rd month following such taxable year shall also apply during the first 15 days of the fourth month following such taxable year.

Section 6621(b)(3) of the Code provides that the federal short-term rate for any month shall be the federal short-term rate determined during such month by the Secretary in accordance with section 1274(d), rounded to the nearest full percent (or, if a multiple of 1/2 of 1 percent, such rate shall be increased to the next highest full percent).

Rounded to the nearest full percent, the federal short-term rate determined during the month of January 1988 is 7 percent. Accordingly, an overpayment rate of 9 percent and an underpayment rate of 10 percent is established for the calendar quarter beginning April 1, 1988. The rates apply to amounts bearing interest during that calendar quarter. Pursuant to section 6621(b)(2)(B) of the Code, the 10 percent rate applicable to individual estimated tax underpayments also applies from April 15, 1988, through June 30, 1988.

Interest factors for daily compound interest for annual rates of 9 percent and 10 percent were published in Tables 39 and 40 of Rev. Proc. 83-7, 1983-1 C.B. 583, 623, 624.

Annual interest rates to be compounded daily pursuant to section 6622 of the Code that apply for prior periods are set forth in the following table:

26 CFR 301.6621-1: Interest rate.

Interest rates; underpayments and overpayments. The rate of interest determined under section 6621 of the Code for the calendar quarter beginning July 1, 1988, will remain at 9 percent for overpayments and 10 percent for underpayments.

Rev. Rul. 88-50[1]

Section 6621 of the Internal Revenue Code establishes differential rates for allowance of interest on tax overpayments and assessment of interest on tax underpayments. Under section 6621(a)(1), the overpayment rate is the sum of the short-term federal rate plus 2 percentage points. Under section 6621(a)(2), the underpayment rate is the sum of the short-term federal rate plus 3 percentage points.

Section 6621(b)(1) of the Code provides that the Secretary shall determine the short-term federal rate for the first month in each calendar quarter.

Section 6621(b)(2)(A) of the Code provides that the federal short-term rate determined under section 6621(b)(1) for any month shall apply during the first calendar quarter beginning after such month.

Section 6621(b)(3) of the Code provides that the federal short-term rate for any month shall be the federal short-term rate determined during such month by the Secretary in accordance with section 1274(d), rounded to the nearest full percent (or, if a multiple of 1/2 of 1 percent, the rate shall be increased to the next highest full percent).

Notice 88-59, page 546, this Bulletin, announced that in determining the quarterly interest rates to be used for overpayments and underpayments of tax under section 6621 of the Code, the Internal Revenue Service will use the federal short-term rate based on daily compounding because that rate is most consistent with section 6621 which, pursuant to section 6622, is subject to daily compounding.

Rounded to the nearest full percent, the federal short-term rate based on daily compounding determined during the month of April 1988 is 7 percent. Accordingly, an overpayment rate of 9 percent and an underpayment rate of 10 percent is established for the calendar quarter beginning July 1, 1988. The rates apply to amounts bearing interest during that calendar quarter.

Interest factors for daily compound interest for annual rates of 9 percent and 10 percent were published in Tables 39 and 40 of Rev. Proc. 83-7, 1983-1 C.B. 583, 623, 624.

Annual interest rates to be compounded daily pursuant to section 6622 of the Code that apply for prior periods are set forth in the accompanying table.

Chapter 77.—Miscellaneous Provisions

Section 7507.—Exemption of Insolvent Banks From Tax

26 CFR 301.7507-1: Banks and trust companies covered.

Insolvent or bankrupt bank or trust company; definition; collection of tax. A savings and loan association and a building and loan association come within the term "bank and trust company" as used in section 7507 of the Code for purposes of the deferral of collection of taxes of bankrupt or insolvent bank and trust companies.

Rev. Rul. 88-18

ISSUE

Does a savings and loan association or a building and loan association come within the meaning of a "bank and trust company" as that term is used in section 7507 of the Internal Revenue Code, relating to the deferral of collection of taxes of bankrupt or insolvent banks and trust companies?

FACTS

The primary purpose of a savings and loan or building and loan association is the solicitation of savings for deposit in share accounts on which dividends are paid and from which loans are made.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 7507(a) of the Code provides that in the case of a bankrupt or insolvent bank or trust company, a substantial portion of whose business consists of receiving deposits and making loans and discounts, no tax shall be assessed or collected that would diminish its assets necessary for full payment of all its depositors. Section 7507(d) provides that section 7507 shall not apply in the case of the employment taxes imposed by Chapters 21 and 23.

Section 301.7507-2(a) of the Regulations on Procedure and Administration provides that section 7507 is intended to assist depositors of a bank that has ceased to do business because of insolvency to recover their deposits, by prohibiting collection of taxes of the bank that would diminish the assets necessary for payment of its depositors and also to assist depositors of banks that are in financial difficulties but continue in business.

The purpose of the statute is only to defer the collection of taxes to the extent the tax money goes to pay depositors. The bank and its owners are not intended to gain, as the taxes remain collectible out of any other part of the earnings not paid to the depositors. Clinton Trust Co. v. United States, 52 F. Supp. 671, (Ct. Cl. 1943).

There are both organizational and operational similarities between the usual banking institution and a savings and loan or building and loan association, such as: (1) the receiving of money deposits from the general public and the permitting of withdrawals therefrom, (2) the payment of interest (even though it may be donominated as dividends) by the institution or association upon funds deposited with it, (3) the insuring of such deposits by an agency of the federal government, and (4) the making of loans. The Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980, Pub. L. No.

96-221, 94 Stat. 132, enlarged the authority of savings and loan associations to provide consumer services previously limited to commercial banks, such as checking accounts, consumer loans and trust services as well as home mortgage loans. See S. Rep. No. 96-368, 96th Cong., 1st Sess. 3 (1980), reprinted in 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News, Vol. 2, 236, 279.

Under various provisions of the Code, savings and loan associations, building and loan associations, and banks or trust companies are accorded different tax treatment. However, for purposes of section 7507 of the Code, no substantial difference exists between deposits in a savings and loan or building and loan association and deposits in a bank or trust company. Generally, the holder of a share account in a savings and loan or building and loan association is no more an investor than is a holder of a deposit account in a bank or trust company. Therefore, depositors in savings and loan associations or building and loan associations are entitled to the protection provided by section 7507.

HOLDING

A savings and loan association and a building and loan association come within the meaning of the term "bank or trust company" as used in section 7507 of the Code.

26 CFR 301.7701-1: Classification of organizations for tax purposes.

Classification of entity organized under foreign law. An entity organized under foreign law is classified for federal tax purposes on the basis of the characteristics set forth in section 301.7701-2 of the regulations.

Rev. Rul. 88-8

ISSUE

Whether an entity organized under foreign law is classified for federal tax purposes on the basis of the characteristics set forth in section 301.7701-2 of the Procedure and Administration Regulations.

FACTS

In 1986, twenty-five United States citizens organized M in Great Britain as an unlimited company by registering M under the Companies Act 1985 (Act), Vol. 8, Halsbury's Statutes of England and Wales, (4th Ed., 1985). M will not be conducting insurance business (and thus is not an insurance company within the meaning of section 7701(a)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code).

Chapter I, Section 1(2) of the Act provides that a company may be:

(a) a company having the liability of its members limited by the [Memorandum of Association] to the amount, if any, unpaid on the shares respectively held by them ("a company limited by shares");

(b) a company having the liability of its members limited by the [Memorandum of Association] to such amount as the members may respectively thereby undertake to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up ("a company limited by guarantee"); or

(c) a company not having any limit on the liability of its members ("an unlimited company").

A company is registered under the Act by delivering to the Registrar of Companies for England (Registrar) the company's Memorandum of Association (Memorandum) and Articles of Association (Articles). After registration, the Registrar provides a certificate which indicates that the company is incorporated. Thus, the Act represents Great Britain's "corporation" statute. The effect of registering a company is that, from the date of incorporation stated in the Certificate of Incorporation, the subscribers of the Memorandum, together with such other persons as may from time to time become members of the company, shall be a body corporate by the name contained in the Memorandum, capable of exercising all the functions of an incorporated company, but with such liability on the part of the members to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up as provided by the Act.

The Memorandum sets forth the company's name, location, business objective, and share capital. The Memorandum also states the degree of liability assumed by the members of the company. The Memorandum of M provides that there will be no limit on the liability of its members.

The Articles contain regulations for the internal management of the company and for the conduct of its business. Under the Act, there are no restrictions on transfer except as imposed by the Articles of Association. The Articles provide that a member may not substitute a person who is not a member of M, unless the member obtains the consent of the other members.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 7701(a)(3) of the Code provides that the term "corporation" includes associations, joint-stock companies, and insurance companies.

Section 301.7701-1(b) of the regulations states that the Code prescribes certain categories or classes into which various organizations fall for purposes of taxation. These categories or classes include associations (which are taxable as corporations), partnerships, and trusts. The tests or standards that are to be applied in determining the classification of an organization are set forth in sections 301.7701-2 through 301.7701-4.

Section 301.7701-2(a)(1) of the regulations sets forth the following basic characteristics of a corporation: (1) associates, (2) an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom, (3) continuity of life, (4) centralization of management, (5) limited liability, and (6) free transferability of interests. Whether a particular organization is to be classified as an association must be determined by taking into account the presence or absence of each of these corporate characteristics.

Section 301.7701-2(a)(2) of the regulations further provides that characteristics common to partnerships and corporations are not material in attempting to distinguish between an association and a partnership. Since associates and an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom are generally common to corporations and partnerships, the determination of whether an organization that has such characteristics is to be treated for tax purposes as a partnership or as an association depends on whether there exists centralization of management, continuity of life, free transferability of interests, and limited liability. Section 301.7701-2(a)(3) provides that an unincorporated organization shall not be classified as an association unless such organization has more corporate characteristics than noncorporate characteristics.

Rev. Rul. 73-254, 1973-1 C.B. 613, holds that the classification of a foreign unincorporated business organization for federal tax purposes will be determined under section 7701 of the Code and the regulations thereunder. However, it is the local law of the foreign jurisdiction that must be applied in determining the legal relationships of the members of the organization among themselves and with the public at large, as well as the interests of the members of the organization in its assets.

An entity organized under foreign law cannot be classified for federal tax purposes solely on the basis of the label attached to the entity by the statute under which it is established, without an inquiry into the legal relationships of the members of the entity as established under applicable local law. Accordingly, the applicable foreign statute and the entity's organization agreements must be examined to determined whether the entity is classified as a corporation for federal tax purposes. In order to ensure uniformity and certainty regarding the classification of an entity organized under foreign law for federal tax purposes, the standards set forth in section 301.7701-2 of the regulations must be applied. All foreign entities are considered to be "unincorporated organizations" for purposes of section 301.7701-2(a)(3) of the regulations. Consequently, no foreign organization or entity is classified as an association unless such organization or entity has more corporate than non-corporate characteristics.

In the present situation, M has associates and an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom and, therefore, is properly classified as either an association or a partnership. M will be classified as a partnership for federal tax purposes unless the organization has a preponderance of the remaining corporate characteristics of continuity of life, centralization of management, limited liability, and free transferability of interests.

Section 301.7701-2(d)(1) of the regulations provides that an organization has the corporate characteristic of limited liability if under local law there is no member who is personally liable for the debts of or claims against the organization. Personal liability means that a creditor of an organization may seek personal satisfaction from a member of the organization to the extent that the assets of such organization are insufficient to satisfy the creditor's claim.

As permitted under the Act, the Memorandum provides that the members' liability to contribute to the payment of M's debts and liabilities is unlimited. Consequently, M lacks the corporate characteristic of limited liability.

Under section 301.7701-2(e)(1) of the regulations, an organization has the corporate characteristic of free transferability of interests if each of the members or those members owning substantially all of the interests in the organization have the power, without the consent of other members, to substitute for themselves in the same organization a person who is not a member of the organization. In order for this power of substitution to exist in the corporate sense, the member must be able, without the consent of the other members, to confer upon the substitute all the attributes of the member's interest in the organization. The characteristic of free transferability does not exist if each member can, without the consent of the other members, assign only the right to share in the profits but cannot assign the rights to participate in the management of the organization.

Under the Articles, no member may transfer any interest in M without the unanimous prior written consent of the other members. Consequently, M lacks the corporate characteristic of free transferability of interests.

HOLDING

An entity organized under foreign law is classified for federal tax purposes on the basis of the characteristics set forth in section 301.7701-2 of the regulations. M has associates and an objective to carry on business and divide the gains therefrom but lacks the corporate characteristics of limited liability and free transferability of interests. Therefore, M is classified as a partnership for federal tax purposes.

84-180, 1984-2, C.B. 314, Rev. Rul. 85-178, 1985-2 C.B. 338, Rev. Rul. 86-30, 1986-1 C.B. 370, and Rev. Rul. 86-112, 1986-2 C.B. 214, the Internal Revenue Service listed several states that revised their limited partnership statutes following the promulgation of the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act. The Service determined that the legislation enacted by those states corresponds to the Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA) for purposes of section 301.7701-2 of the Procedure and Administration Regulations.

The Service has determined that the following additional state has enacted legislation that, as of its effective date, corresponds to the ULPA for purposes of section 301.7701-2 of the regulations:

Florida: Florida Statutes Annotated, Sections 620.101—620.186 (West Supp. 1987), effective January 1, 1987.

Obsolete revenue rulings. Rev. Ruls. 75-132 and 75-142, relating to the treatment of tenancy by the entireties income in the State of Michigan, are declared obsolete.

Rev. Rul. 88-2

Periodically, the Internal Revenue Service has obsoleted revenue rulings which, although not specifically revoked or superseded, are not considered determinative with respect to future transactions because (1) the applicable statutory provisions have been changed or repealed; (2) the ruling position is specifically covered by statute, regulations, or a subsequent published position; or (3) the facts set forth no longer exist or are not sufficient to permit application of the current statute.

The revenue rulings listed below are hereby declared to be obsolete:

Regulated investment companies; series investment companies; treatment of funds as separate corporations. New section 851(q), which provides that each fund of a series investment company is a separate corporation, renders Rev. Rul. 56-246 obsolete.

Rev. Rul. 88-14

The Internal Revenue Service periodically reviews rulings that have been published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. The Service has reviewed Rev. Rul. 56-246, 1956-1 C.B. 316, and determined that it is obsolete.

Rev. Rul. 56-246 holds that a series investment company, organized as a corporation, constitutes one taxpayer for federal income tax purposes. Therefore, each fund maintained by such a company does not realize gain or loss on the transfer of assets from one series fund to another.

A series investment company is an open-end investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (1940 Act) that, in accordance with the provisions of section 18(f)(2) of the 1940 Act, issues two or more classes or series of preferred or special stock, each of which is preferred over all other classes or series with respect to assets specifically allocated to that class or series. See 17 C.F.R. section 270.18f-2(a) (1987).

Part I of subchapter M of the Internal Revenue Code (sections 851-855) provides special tax treatment for certain companies that are subject to regulation by the Securities and Exchange Commission under the 1940 Act. Section 654 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 amended section 851 by adding new section 851(q), which provides that each fund of a series investment company is a separate corporation for purposes of the Code. This amendment, which applies to both incorporated and unincorporated series investment companies, is effective for taxable years of series investment companies beginning after October 22, 1986. Accordingly, Rev. Rul. 56-246 is declared to be obsolete.

The Government of the United States of America and the American Samoa Government desiring to conclude an Agreement (hereinafter referred to as the "Agreement") for the exchange of information and mutual assistance with respect to taxes in order to prevent the evasion or avoidance of United States or American Samoa taxes have agreed as follows:

Article 1

SCOPE OF AGREEMENT

This Agreement is intended to provide for mutual assistance in tax matters, including exchanges of information, for purposes of administering the tax laws of the respective Governments and especially to prevent avoidance or evasion of the Governments' respective fiscal laws. This Agreement is the implementing agreement described in sections 1271 and 1277 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. Law 99-514. The provisions of this Agreement are subject to provisions of the statutes, regulations, and published procedures of the Contracting Governments.

Upon entry into force, this Agreement replaces any and all prior tax coordination agreements and implementing agreements between the respective Governments.

2. This Agreement shall apply also to any identical or substantially similar taxes imposed after the date of signature of the Agreement in addition to or in place of the existing taxes. The competent authority of each Government shall notify the other of significant changes in laws which may affect the obligations of that Government pursuant to this Agreement.

3. This Agreement shall not apply to the extent that an action or proceeding concerning taxes covered by this Agreement is barred by the applicant Government's statute of limitations.

Article 4

EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

1. The competent authorities of the Contracting Governments shall exchange information to administer and enforce the domestic laws of the Contracting Governments concerning taxes covered by this Agreement. Information shall be exchanged to fulfill the purposes of this Agreement without regard to whether the information relates to, or is held by, a taxpayer of a Contracting Government. Procedures for exchange of information are set forth in Appendix A, Limitations on Disclosure of Tax Information, which is incorporated by reference and made a part of this Agreement.

2. The competent authorities of the Contracting Governments shall automatically transmit information to each other for the purposes referred to in paragraph 1. The competent authorities shall determine the items of information to be exchanged pursuant to this paragraph and the procedures to be used to exchange such items of information.

a) It is intended that the United States shall routinely supply to American Samoa the following information, to the extent available and subject to the tolerances and criteria to be agreed upon by the competent authorities:

(i) copies of reports of individual, partnership, corporate, and employment audit changes (with associated reports of experts) that disclose information relevant to American Samoa;

(ii) copies of Forms 5335 (Income Subject to Withholding under Chapter 3, Internal Revenue Code, as reported on Form 1042S, and any successor or comparable forms) that disclose information relevant to American Samoa;

(iii) copies of Schedule K-1 of Form 1065 (U.S. Partnership Return of Income) and audit results, when the partnership return is examined and it appears the examination will affect returns of American Samoa taxpayers;

(iv) copies of responses to Forms 4901, 4902, and 4903, Requests for Information About Tax Forms, where such reply indicates that the taxpayer has filed a return with American Samoa;

(v) copies of Forms 1099 and all other information returns where the recipient of income is an American Samoa resident or lists an American Samoa address or the income is from American Samoa sources;

(vi) copies of the W-2 combined wage reporting tape summarizing Forms W-2AS (American Samoa Wage and Tax Statement) and Forms W-3SS (Transmittal of Wage and Tax Statements) filed with the Social Security Administration by employers in American Samoa, which tape is provided annually to the Internal Revenue Service by the Social Security Administration; and

(vii) copies of Forms 8279 (Election to be Treated as a FSC or as a Small FSC) that indicate creation or organization of any Foreign Sales Corporation (as defined in Section 922 of the Code) in American Samoa.

b) It is intended that American Samoa shall routinely supply to the United States the following information, to the extent available and subject to the tolerances and criteria to be agreed upon by the competent authorities:,

(i) copies of reports of individual, partnership, corporate, and employment audit changes (with associated reports of experts) that disclose information relevant to the United States;

(ii) information about any taxpayer who (1) is a citizen of the United States or has been a resident alien of the United States; (2) files an income tax return with American Samoa that discloses non-American Samoa source income; and (3) claims for the first time to be an American Samoa resident;

(iii) all corporate information about ownership interests in any Foreign Sales Corporation (as defined in section 922 of the Code) established in American Samoa; and

(iv) such information about corporations electing application of section 936 of the Code as may be agreed upon by the competent authorities.

c) The competent authorities of the Contracting Governments may agree to expand or limit the information to be routinely exchanged.

3. In the event American Samoa institutes a system of rebates, subsidies or reductions of tax on non-American Samoa source income, American Samoa will inform the United States, and the competent authorities will adopt and implement a program for exchange of information about such rebates, subsidies or reductions of tax and ownership interests of corporations receiving such rebates, subsidies or reductions of tax.

4. The competent authority of a Contracting Government shall spontaneously transmit to the competent authority of the other Government information which has come to the attention of the first-mentioned Government and which is likely to be relevant to, and bear significantly on, administration and enforcement of the domestic laws concerning taxes of the second-mentioned Government. The competent authorities shall determine the information to be exchanged pursuant to this paragraph and take such measures and implement such procedures as are necessary to ensure that the information is forwarded to the competent authority of the other Government.

5. The competent authority of the requested Government shall endeavor to provide information upon request by the competent authority of the applicant Government for the administration and enforcement of the domestic laws of the Contracting Governments concerning taxes. If the information available in the tax files of the requested Government is not sufficient to enable compliance with the request, that Government shall take the necessary measures to provide the applicant Government with the information requested. If information is requested by a Contracting Government in accordance with this Article, the other Contracting Government shall obtain the information to which the request relates in the same manner (including issuance and enforcement of administrative summonses) and to the same extent as if the tax of the first-mentioned Government were the tax of that other Government and were being imposed by that other Government. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the United States may exercise its rights under section 7602 et seq. of the Code to obtain information in American Samoa without resorting to the procedures set forth in this Agreement. However, in the event the United States so exercises its rights within the territory of American Samoa, it shall notify the competent authority of American Samoa prior to taking action or as soon as practicable, unless the competent authorities agree to limit notification with respect to certain classes of cases.

6. The provisions of the preceding paragraphs shall not be construed so as to impose on a Contracting Government the obligation:

a) to supply particular items of information which are not obtainable under the laws of that Government or of the other Contracting Government;
b) to supply information which would disclose any trade, business, industrial, commercial or professional secret or trade process;
c) to supply information, the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy; or
d) to disclose information if such disclosure would identify a confidential informant or seriously impair a civil or criminal tax investigation.

7. Any information received by a Contracting Government shall be subject to Appendix A, Limitations on Disclosure of Tax Information.

Article 5

MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE AND COSTS

1. The competent authorities of the Contracting Governments shall implement a program to carry out the purposes of this Agreement. In particular, the competent authorities of the Contracting Governments may amend Appendix A, by mutual agreement, as they deem necessary within the limitations of this Agreement and the Code.

2. The competent authorities of the Contracting Governments shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the interpretation or application of this Agreement and may communicate directly for this purpose. In particular, the competent authorities may agree to the common meaning of a term and may determine when costs are extraordinary for purposes of this Article.

3. Unless the competent authorities of the Contracting Governments otherwise agree, ordinary costs incurred in providing assistance shall be borne by the requested Government and extraordinary costs incurred in providing assistance shall be borne by the applicant Government. The competent authorities of the Contracting Governments may agree not to charge each other for the costs of reproduction of information routinely exchanged.

MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE ON POTENTIAL DOUBLE TAXATION

1. When by reason of inconsistent positions taken by the Contracting Governments, a taxpayer is or would be subject to inconsistent tax treatment by the two jurisdictions, the competent authorities of the Contracting Governments shall endeavor to agree upon the facts and circumstances necessary to achieve consistent application of the tax laws of the respective Governments. In particular, but not by way of limitation, the competent authorities of the Contracting Governments may consult together to endeavor to agree:

a) To the same allocation of income under section 482 of the Code;
b) To the same determination of residency of a particular taxpayer; or
c) To the same determination of the source of particular items of income.

Article 7

OTHER APPLICATIONS OF AGREEMENT

1. The Contracting Governments agree that when they have knowledge that a taxpayer has changed residence from one taxing jurisdiction to the other and seeks to change methods of accounting (or to make an initial election), no such change or election shall be permitted until the competent authorities have consulted and determined that such change or election will not lead to the evasion or avoidance of taxes imposed by either of the Contracting Governments. This paragraph includes initial adoption of an accounting method or an election inconsistent with a method or election previously utilized in the other jurisdiction by the taxpayer.

2. The Contracting Governments agree that an American Samoa corporation owned or controlled directly or indirectly by a person whose beneficial ownership is undisclosed (such as through bearer shares) shall be treated as owned or controlled to that extent by a foreign person for purposes of the respective Governments' tax laws.

3. The Contracting Governments agree that for purposes of determining whether a person qualifies as a bona fide resident of American Samoa under section 931 of the Code the definition to be used shall be the definition contained in the then-applicable regulations promulgated by the United States.

4. The Contracting Governments agree that the United States may use its regulatory authority over sourcing rules under section 931(d)(2) and 7654(e) of the Code to determine that certain income is U.S.-source income.

5. Any taxpayer information disclosed to the United States shall become "taxpayer return information" as defined by section 6103(b)(3) of the Code and may be redisclosed only in accordance with provisions of the Code or an applicable treaty.

6. Subject to the restrictions and other provisions of this Agreement and the availability of enforcement resources, the competent authorities will develop a cooperative return selection and examination program with the objective of avoiding unnecessary duplication of examination coverage.

7. Subject to the restrictions and other provisions of this Agreement, the Contracting Governments will develop a simultaneous examination program for both civil and criminal investigations.

8. To the extent permitted by law and subject to the availability of enforcement resources, the United States will assist in collecting taxes, together with interest and additions to tax, owed to American Samoa by American Samoa taxpayers present in the United States. The competent authorities will discuss appropriate procedures for facilitating such collections. Any taxes collected shall be remitted to American Samoa, less the reasonable expenses incurred in collection.

9. In addition to the exchange of tax and other information, the competent authorities will, to the extent feasible, extend to each other assistance in other tax administration matters. This may include such activities as taxpayer assistance, stocking tax forms for the public, training of personnel, preparing special statistical studies and compilations of data, lending of skilled personnel for limited periods, conducting public education programs with regard to tax law changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and subsequent legislative revisions, and development and improvement of tax administration systems and procedures, as well as such other activities as may improve tax administration.

Article 8

ENTRY INTO FORCE

For purposes of section 1271(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. Law 99-514, to the extent applicable, this Agreement shall be effective as of January 1, 1987, but for all other purposes this Agreement shall enter into force on January 1, 1988.

Article 9

AMENDMENT AND TERMINATION

1. This Agreement may be modified or amended by mutual consent of the Contracting Governments.

2. This Agreement shall remain in force until terminated by one of the Contracting Governments. Either Contracting Government may terminate the Agreement at any time after the Agreement enters into force provided that at least 6 months' prior notice of termination has been given.

3. Any unauthorized use or disclosure of Federal returns or Federal return information as defined by section 6103(b)(1) and (2) of the Code furnished pursuant to this Agreement or inadequate procedures for safeguarding the confidentiality of such returns and return information, constitutes grounds for immediate termination of this Agreement and the exchange of information thereunder, subject to the rights of administrative appeal as provided by regulations prescribed by section 6103(p)(7) of the Code.

Federal returns, and Federal return information (whether originals, paper copy, photocopy, microfilm, magnetic media, or any other form) received from the IRS will be used for the purpose of, and only to the extent necessary in, Possession tax administration.

2.2 This Agreement and Appendix constitute the requisite authorization pursuant to section 6103(d)(1) of the Code for the IRS to disclose to, and permit inspection by, a Bureau Representative of Federal returns and Federal return information relating to taxes imposed by chapters one, two, six, eleven, twelve, twenty-one, twenty-three, twenty-four, thirty-one, thirty-two, forty-four, forty-five, fifty-one, fifty-two, and subchapter D of chapter thirty-six of the Code.

2.3 Upon the occurrence of any change in employment, duties, or other revelant matters affecting a Bureau Representative's right to access to Federal returns and Federal return information or status as a Bureau Representative, the head of the Bureau shall promptly adivse in writing the Assistant Commissioner (International) at Washington, D.C. and the Service Center Director at Philadelphia, PA, that such individual is no longer a Bureau Representative.

2.6 Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the IRS will not disclose a Federal return or Federal return information under this section if such disclosure would identify a confidential informant or seriously impair a Federal civil or criminal tax investigation. The Bureau agrees that neither it nor its legal representatives will make any further use or disclosure of a Federal return or Federal return information disclosed to a Bureau Representative by the IRS if the IRs notifies the head of the Bureau in writing that such further use or disclosure would identify a confidential informant or seriously impair a Federal civil or criminal tax investigation. The Bureau further agrees that prior to the disclosure of any Federal return or Federal return information in a Possession judicial proceeding or to any party other than the taxpayer or his/her designee in a Possession administrative proceeding if the return or return information satisfies one or more of the criteria established in section 6103(h)(4)(A), (B) or (C) of the Code, the head or legal representative of the Bureau will notify in writing the Service Center Director or

2.7 Additionally, the Bureau agrees that it will notify the Assistant Commissioner (International) when, during an audit of the Bureau by the Possession Audit Agency, Federal returns and Federal return information are disclosed to the Possession Audit Agency and such information is made part of the Possession Audit Agency's workpapers.

SECTION 3. Disclosure of Possession Returns and Possession Return Information

3.1 This Agreement and Appendix constitute the requisite authorization for the Bureau to disclose to, and permit inspection by, IRS Representatives of Possession returns and Possession return information for the purpose of, and only to the extent necessary in the administration of the internal revenue laws, or related statutes, of the United States. 4.3 Processing of Federal returns and Federal return information received by the Bureau from the IRS in the form of microfilms, photoimpressions, magnetic media or other format (including reformatting or reproduction, or conversion to magnetic media, punch cards, or hard copy printout) and transmission and storage of such Federal returns or Federal return information by or on behalf of the Bureau may be performed by Bureau owned and/or operated computer facilities, facilities shared by the Bureau with other Possession agencies, or by any other person described in section 6103(n) of the Code. Similar publicity will be provided by the IRS for Possession tax information furnished to the IRS pursuant to Possession law.

3. ARTICLE 5

1. For the purposes of this Agreement, the term "permanent establishment" means a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

2. The term "permanent establishment" includes especially:

(a) a place of management;

(b) a branch;

(c) an office;

(d) a factory;

(e) a workshop; and

(f) a mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry or any other place of extraction of natural resources.

3. The term "permanent establishment" also includes:

(a) a building site, a construction, assembly or installation project, or supervisory activities in connection therewith, but only where such site, project or activities continue for a period of more than six months;

(b) an installation, drilling rig or ship used for the exploration or exploitation of natural resources, but only if so used for a period of more than three months; and

(c) the furnishing of services, including consultancy services, by an enterprise through employees or other personnel engaged by the enterprise for such purpose, but only where such activities continue (for the same or a connected project) within the country for a period or periods aggregating more than six months within any twelve month period.

4. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs 1 through 3, the term "permanent establishment" shall be deemed not to include:

(a) the use of facilities solely for the purpose of storage, display or delivery of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise;

(b) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of storage, display or delivery;

(c) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of processing by another enterprise;

(f) the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for any combination of the activities mentioned in subparagraphs (a) through (e), provided that the overall activity of the fixed place of business resulting from this combination is of a preparatory or auxiliary character.

5. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2, where a person, other than an agent of an independent status to whom paragraph 6 applies, is acting on behalf of an enterprise and has and habitually exercises in a Contracting State an authority to conclude contracts in the name of the enterprise, that enterprise shall be deemed to have a permanent establishment in that Contracting State in respect of any activities which that person undertakes for the enterprise, unless the activities of such person are limited to those mentioned in paragraph 4 which, if exercised through a fixed place of business, would not make this fixed place of business a permanent establishment under the provisions of that paragraph.

6. An enterprise of a Contracting State shall not be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State merely because it carries on business in that other Contracting State through a broker, general commission agent or any other agent of an independent status, provided that such persons are acting in the ordinary course of their business. However, when the activities of such an agent are devoted wholly or almost wholly on behalf of that enterprise, he will not be considered an agent of an independent status within the meaning of this paragraph if it is shown that the transactions between the agent and the enterprise were not made under arm's-length conditions.

7. The fact that a company which is a resident of a Contracting State controls or is controlled by a company which is a resident of the other Contracting State, or which carries on business in that other Contracting State (whether through a permanent establishment or otherwise), shall not of itself constitute either company a permanent establishment of the other.

1. Income derived by a resident of a Contracting State from real property situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other Contracting State.

2. The term "real property" shall have the meaning which it has under the laws of the Contracting State in which the property in question is situated. The term shall in any case include property accessory to real property, livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry, rights to which the provisions of general law respecting landed property apply, usufruct of real property and rights to variable or fixed payments as consideration for the working of, or the right to work, mineral deposits, sources and other natural resources; ships and aircraft shall not be regarded as real property.

3. The provisions of paragraph 1 shall apply to income derived from the direct use, letting or use in any other form of real property.

4. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 3 shall also apply to the income from real property of an enterprise and to income from real property used for the performance of independent personal services.

ARTICLE 7

1. The profits of an enterprise of a Contracting State shall be taxable only in that Contracting State unless the enterprise carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein. If the enterprise carries on business as aforesaid, the profits of the enterprise may be taxed in the other Contracting State but only so much of them as is attributable to that permanent establishment.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, where an enterprise of a Contracting State carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein, there shall in each Contracting State be attributed to that permanent establishment the profits which it might be expected to make if it were a distinct and separate enterprise engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing wholly independently with the enterprise of which it is a permanent establishment.

3. In the determination of the profits of a permanent establishment, there shall be allowed as deductions expenses which are incurred for the purposes of the permanent establishment, including executive and general administrative expenses so incurred, whether in the State in which the permanent establishment is situated or elsewhere. However, no such deduction shall be allowed in respect of amounts, if any, paid (otherwise than towards reimbursement of actual expenses) by the permanent establishment to the head office of the enterprise or any of its other offices, by way of royalties or other similar payments or by way of interest on money lent to the permanent establishment. Likewise, no account shall be taken, in the determination of the profits of a permanent establishment, for amounts charged (otherwise than towards reimbursement of actual expenses), by the permanent establishment to the head office of the enterprise or any of its other offices, by way of royalties or other similar payments or by way of interest on money lent to the head office of the enterprise or any of its other offices.

4. Insofar as the tax law of a Contracting State provides with respect to a specific industry that the profits to be attributed to a permanent establishment are to be determined on the basis of a deemed profit, nothing in paragraph 2 shall preclude that Contracting State from applying those provisions of its law, provided that the result is in accordance with the principles contained in this Article.

5. No profits shall be attributed to a permanent establishment by reason of the mere purchase by that permanent establishment of goods or merchandise for the enterprise.

6. For the purpose of paragraphs 1 through 5, the profits to be attributed to the permanent establishment shall be determined by the same method year by year unless there is good and sufficient reason to the contrary.

7. Where profits include items of income which are dealt with separately in other Articles of this Agreement, then the provisions of those Articles shall not be affected by the provisions of this Article.

ARTICLE 8

1. Where

(a) an enterprise of a Contracting State participates directly or indirectly in the management, control or capital of an enterprise of the other Contracting State; or

(b) the same persons participate directly or indirectly in the management, control or capital of an enterprise of a Contracting State and an enterprise of the other Contracting State, and in either case the relationship between the two enterprises in their commercial or financial relations differs from that which would exist between independent enterprises, then any profits which, but for those conditions would have accrued to one of the enterprises, but by reason of those conditions have not so accrued, may be included in the profits of that enterprise and taxed accordingly.

2. Where a Contracting State includes in the profits of an enterprise of that Contracting State—and taxes accordingly—profits on which an enterprise of the other Contracting State has been charged to tax in that other Contracting State, and the profits so included are profits which would have accrued to the enterprise of the first-mentioned State if the conditions made between the two enterprises had been those which would have been made between independent enterprises, then that other Contracting State shall make an appropriate adjustment to the amount of the tax charged therein on those profits. In determining such adjustment, due regard shall be paid to the other provisions of this Agreement and the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall if necessary consult each other.

1. Dividends paid by a company which is a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other Contracting State.

2. However, such dividends may also be taxed in the Contracting State of which the company paying the dividends is a resident, and according to the laws of that Contracting State, but if the recipient is the beneficial owner of the dividends the tax so charged shall not exceed 10 percent of the gross amount of the dividends.

This paragraph shall not affect the taxation of the company in respect of the profits out of which the dividends are paid.

3. The term "dividends" as used in this Article means income from shares or other rights, not being debt-claims, participating in profits, as well as income from other corporate rights which is subjected to the same taxation treatment as income from shares by the taxation laws of the Contracting State of which the company making the distribution is a resident.

4. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 shall not apply if the beneficial owner of the dividends, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State, of which the company paying the dividends is a resident, through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other Contracting State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the holding or other corporate rights in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such case the provisions of Article 7 or 13, as the case may be, shall apply.

5. Where a company which is a resident of a Contracting State derives profits or income from the other Contracting State, that other Contracting State may not impose any tax on the dividends paid by the company, except insofar as such dividends are paid to a resident of that other Contracting State or insofar as the holding or other corporate rights in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base situated in that other Contracting State, nor subject the company's undistributed profits to a tax on the company's undistributed profits, even if the dividends paid or the undistributed profits consist wholly or partly of profits or income arising in that other Contracting State.

1. Interest arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other Contracting State.

2. However, such interest may also be taxed in the contracting State in which it arises and according to the laws of that Contracting State, but if the recipient is the beneficial owner of the interest, the tax so charged shall not exceed 10 percent of the gross amount of the interest.

3. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 2, interest arising in a Contracting State and derived by the government of the other Contracting State, a political subdivision or local authority thereof, the Central Bank of that other Contracting State or any financial institution wholly owned by that government, or by any resident of the other Contracting State with respect to debt-claims indirectly financed by the government of that other Contracting State, a political subdivision or local authority thereof, the Central Bank of that other Contracting State or any financial institution wholly owned by that government, shall be exempt from tax in the first-mentioned Contracting State.

4. The term "interest" as used in this Article means income from debt-claims of every kind, whether or not secured by mortgage, and whether or not carrying a right to participate in the debtor's profits, and in particular, income from government securities, and income from bonds or debentures, including premiums or prizes attaching to such securities, bonds, or debentures.

5. The provisions of paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 shall not apply if the beneficial owner of the interest, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State in which the interest arises, through a permanent establishment situated therein, or performs in that other Contracting State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the debt-claim in respect of which the interest is paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such case the provisions of Article 7 or 13, as the case may be, shall apply.

6. Interest shall be deemed to arise in a Contracting State when the payer is the government of that Contracting State itself, a political subdivision, a local authority or a resident of that Contracting State. Where, however, the person paying the interest, whether he is a resident of a Contracting State or not, has in a Contracting State a permanent establishment or a fixed base in connection with which the indebtedness on which the interest is paid was incurred, and such interest is borne by such permanent establishment or fixed base, then such interest shall be deemed to arise in the Contracting State in which the permanent establishment or fixed base is situated.

7. Where, by reason of a special relationship between the payer and the beneficial owner or between both of them and some other person, the amount of the interest, having regard to the debt-claim for which it is paid, exceeds the amount which would have been agreed upon by the payer and the beneficial owner in the absence of such relationship, the provisions of this Article shall apply only to the last-mentioned amount. In such case the excess part of the payments shall remain taxable according to the laws of each Contracting State, due regard being had to the other provisions of this Agreement..

1. Royalties arising in a Contracting State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other Contracting State.

2. However, such royalties may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which they arise and according to the laws of that Contracting State, but if the recipient is the beneficial owner of the royalties, the tax so charged shall not exceed 10 percent of the gross amount of the royalties.

3. The term "royalties" as used in this Article means payments of any kind received as a consideration for the use of, or the right to use, any copyright of literary, artistic or scientific work, including cinematographic films or films or tapes used for radio or television broadcasting, any patent, technical know-how, trademark, design or model, plan, secret formula or process, or for the use of, or the right to use, industrial, commercial or scientific equipment, or for information concerning industrial, commercial or scientific experience.

4. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 shall not apply if the beneficial owner of the royalties, being a resident of a Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State in which the royalties arise, through a permanent establishment situated therein; or performs in that other Contracting State independent personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the right or property in respect of which the royalties are paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such case the provisions of Article 7 or 13, as the case may be, shall apply.

5. (a) Royalties will be deemed to arise in a Contracting State when the payer is the government of that Contracting State itself, a political subdivision, a local authority or a resident of that Contracting State. Where, however, the person paying the royalties, whether he is a resident of a Contracting State or not, has in a Contracting State a permanent establishment or a fixed base in connection with which the liability to pay the royalties was incurred, and such royalties are borne by such permanent establishment or fixed base, then such royalties shall be deemed to arise in the Contracting State in which the permanent establishment or fixed base is situated.

(b) Where under subparagraph (a) royalties do not arise in one of the Contracting States, and the royalties related to the use of, or the right to use, the right or property in one of the Contracting States, the royalties shall be deemed to arise in that Contracting State.

6. Where, by reason of a special relationship between the payer and the beneficial owner or between both of them and some other person, the amount of the royalties, having regard to the use, right, or information for which they are paid, exceeds the amount which would have been agreed upon by the payer and the beneficial owner in the absence of such relationship, the provisions of this Article shall apply only to the last-mentioned amount. In such case the excess part of the payments shall remain taxable according to the laws of each Contracting State, due regard being had to the other provisions of this Agreement.

1. Gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of real property referred to in Article 6 and situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in that other Contracting State.

2. Gains from the alienation of movable (personal) property forming part of the business assets of a permanent establishment which an enterprise of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State, or of movable (personal) property pertaining to a fixed base available to a resident of a Contracting State in the other Contracting State for the purpose of performing independent personal services, including such gains from the alienation of such a permanent establishment (alone or together with the whole enterprise) or such a fixed base, may be taxed in that other Contracting State.

3. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2, items of income of a resident of a Contracting State not dealt with in the foregoing Articles of this Agreement and arising in the other Contracting State may also be taxed in that other Contracting State.

1. In the People's Republic of China, double taxation shall be eliminated as follows:

(a) Where a resident of China derives income from the United States, the amount of the United States income tax payable in respect of that income in accordance with the provisions of this Agreement shall be allowed as a credit against the Chinese tax imposed on that resident. The amount of credit, however, shall not exceed the amount of the Chinese tax computed with respect to that income in accordance with the taxation laws and regulations of China.

(b) Where the income derived from the United States is a dividend paid by a company which is a resident of the United States to a company which is a resident of China and which owns not less than 10 percent of the shares of the company paying the dividend, the credit shall take into account the United States income tax payable by the company paying the dividend in respect of the profits out of which the dividends are paid.

2. In the United States of America, in accordance with the provisions of the law of the United States, the United States shall allow to a resident or citizen of the United States as a credit against the United States tax on income:

(a) the income tax paid to China by or on behalf of such resident or citizen; and

(b) in the case of a United States company owning at least 10 percent of the voting rights in a company which is a resident of China and from which the United States company receives dividends, the income tax paid to China by or on behalf of the distributing company with respect to the profits out of which the dividends are paid.

For the purposes of this paragraph of this Agreement, the taxes referred to in paragraphs 1(a) and 2 of Article 2 shall be considered income taxes.

3. Income derived by a resident of a Contracting State which may be taxed in the other Contracting State in accordance with this Agreement shall be deemed to arise in that other Contracting State

ARTICLE 23

1. Nationals of a Contracting State shall not be subjected in the other Contracting State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which nationals of that other Contracting State in the same circumstances are or may be subjected. This provision shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Article 1, apply to persons who are not residents of one or both of the Contracting States.

2. The taxation on a permanent establishment which an enterprise of a Contracting State has in the other Contracting State shall not be less favorably levied in that other Contracting State than the taxation levied on enterprises of that other Contracting State carrying on the same activities. This provision shall not be construed as obliging a Contracting State to grant to residents of the other Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs and reductions for taxation purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents.

3. Except where the provisions of Article 8, paragraph 7 of Article 10 or paragraph 6 of Article 11 apply, interest, royalties and other disbursements paid by a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State shall, for the purposes of determining the taxable profits of the first-mentioned resident, be deductible under the same conditions as if they had been paid to a resident of the first-mentioned Contracting State.

4. Enterprises of a Contracting State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of the other Contracting State, shall not be subjected in the first-mentioned Contracting State to any taxation or any requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements to which other similar enterprises of the first-mentioned Contracting State are or may be subjected.

1. Where a person considers that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States result or will result for him in taxation not in accordance with the provisions of this Agreement, he may, irrespective of the remedies provided by the domestic law of those Contracting States, present his case to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which he is a resident or, if his case comes under paragraph 1 of Article 23, to that of the Contracting State of which he is a national. The case must be presented within three years from the first notification of the action resulting in taxation not in accordance with the provisions of this Agreement.

2. The competent authority shall endeavor, if the objection appears to it to be justified and if it is not itself able to arrive at a satisfactory solution, to resolve the case through consultation with the competent authority of the other Contracting State, with a view to the avoidance of taxation which is not in accordance with this Agreement. Any agreement reached shall be implemented notwithstanding any time limits in the domestic law of the Contracting States.

3. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the interpretation or application of this Agreement. They may also consult together for the elimination of double taxation in cases not provided for in this Agreement.

4. The competent authorities of the Contracting States may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching an agreement in the sense of paragraphs 2 and 3. To facilitate reaching a mutual agreement, the competent authorities of both Contracting States may meet for an oral exchange of opinions.

1. The competent authorities of the Contracting States shall exchange such information as is necessary for carrying out the provisions of this Agreement or of the domestic laws of the Contracting States concerning taxes covered by this Agreement insofar as the taxation thereunder is not contrary to this Agreement, in particular for the prevention of fraud or evasion of such taxes. The exchange of information is not restricted by Article 1. Any information received by a Contracting State shall be treated as secret and shall be disclosed only to persons or authorities (including courts and administrative bodies) involved in the assessment, collection, or administration of, the enforcement or prosecution in respect of, or the determination of appeals in relation to, the taxes covered by this Agreement. Such persons or Authorities shall use the information only for such purposes. They may disclose the information in public court proceedings or in judicial decisions.

2. In no case shall the provisions of paragraph 1 be construed so as to impose on a Contracting State the obligation:

(a) to carry out administrative measures at variance with the laws and administrative practice of that or of the other Contracting State;

(b) to supply information which is not obtainable under the laws or in the normal course of the administration of that or of the other Contracting State;

(c) to supply information which would disclose any trade, business, industrial, commercial or professional secret or trade process, or information the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy.

ARTICLE 26

Nothing in this Agreement shall affect the fiscal privileges of diplomatic agents or consular officers under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements.

ARTICLE 27

Each of the Contracting States shall notify the other Contracting State in writing, through diplomatic channels, upon the completion of their respective legal procedures to bring this Agreement into force. The Agreement shall enter into force on the thirtieth day after the date of the latter of such notifications and shall take effect as respects income derived during taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January next following the date on which this Agreement enters into force.

ARTICLE 28

This Agreement shall remain in force indefinitely, but either Contracting State may terminate the Agreement by giving notice to the other Contracting State in writing through diplomatic channels on or before June 30 in any calendar year after five years from the date on which this Agreement enters into force. In such event, the Agreement shall cease to have effect with respect to income derived during taxable years beginning on or after the first day of January of the year following that in which the notice of termination is given.

TO THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION AND THE PREVENTION OF TAX EVASION WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON INCOME

At the signing of the Agreement between the Government of the Untied States of America and the Government of the People's Republic of China for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Tax Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income (hereinafter referred to as "the Agreement"), both sides have agreed upon the following provisions which form an integral part of the Agreement:

1. This Agreement shall not restrict in any manner any tax benefit which is or may hereafter be accorded in a Contracting State by the laws of that Contracting State or by any Agreement between the governments of the Contracting States.

2. Notwithstanding any provision of the Agreement, the United States may tax its citizens. Except as provided in paragraph 2 of Article 8, paragraph 2 of Article 17, and Articles 18, 19, 20, 22, 23, 24 and 26 of this Agreement, the United States may tax its residents (as determined under Article 4).

3. The United States may impose its social security tax, its personal holding company tax and its accumulated earnings tax notwithstanding any provision of this Agreement. However, a Chinese company shall be exempt from the personal holding company tax or the accumulated earnings tax in the United States during a taxable year if during that taxable year the company is wholly-owned, directly or indirectly, either by one or more individuals who are residents of China (and who are not citizens of the United States) or by the Government of China or any wholly-owned agency thereof.

4. The term "person" as defined in Article 3 of the Agreement shall include an estate or a trust.

5. In applying paragraph 2 of Article 4 of this Agreement, the competent authorities of both Contracting States shall be guided by the rules contained in paragraph 2 of Article 4 of the United Nations Model Double Taxation Convention between Developed and Developing Countries.

6. For purposes of paragraph 3 of Article 11 of this Agreement, it is agreed by both sides that, in the case of royalties paid for the rental of industrial, commercial or scientific equipment, the tax shall be imposed on 70 percent of the gross amount of such royalties.

7. It is agreed by both sides that the competent authorities of the Contracting States may through consultation deny the benefits of Articles 9, 10 and 11 to a company of a third country if the company becomes a resident of a Contracting State for the principal purpose of enjoying benefits under this Agreement.

8. This Agreement shall not affect the application of the agreement between the two governments with respect to mutual exemption from taxation of transportation income of shipping and air transport enterprises, signed at Beijing on March 5, 1982.

PROTOCOL

CONCERNING THE INTERPRETATION OF PARAGRAPH 7 OF THE PROTOCOL TO THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION AND THE PREVENTION OF TAX EVASION WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON INCOME, SIGNED AT BEIJING ON APRIL 30, 1984.

The Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the United States of America, desiring to conclude a Protocol in addition to the Agreement between them for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of tax evasion, and the supplementary Protocol attached thereto, have agreed as follows:

Both sides have agreed, with respect to the interpretation of Paragraph 7 of the Protocol to the Agreement, that their understanding is as follows:

1. A person (other than an individual) which is a resident of a Contracting State shall not be entitled under this Agreement to relief from taxation in the other Contracting State unless:

(a)(i) more than 50 percent of the beneficial interest in such person (or in the case of a company more than 50 percent of the number of shares of each class of the company's shares) is owned, directly or indirectly, by any combination of one or more of:

(A) individuals who are residents of one of the Contracting States;

(B) citizens of the United States;

(C) companies as described in subparagraph 1(b) of this protocol; and

(D) one of the Contracting States, its political subdivisions or local authorities; and

(ii) in the case of relief from taxation under Articles 9 (dividends), 10 (interest), and 11 (royalties), not more than 50 percent of the gross income of such person is used to make payments of interest to persons who are other than persons described in clauses (A) through (D) of subparagraph (a)(i), whether directly or indirectly; or

(b) it is a company which is a resident of a Contracting State and in whose principal class of shares there is substantial and regular trading on a recognized stock exchange.

2. Paragraph 1 shall not apply if the establishment, acquisition and maintenance of such person and the conduct of its operations did not have as a principal purpose the purpose of obtaining benefits under the Agreement.

3. For the purposes of paragraph 1(b), the term "a recognized stock exchange" means:

(a) the NASDAQ System owned by the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. and any stock exchange registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission as a national securities exchange for the purposes of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; and

(b) any national securities exchange approved to be established by the Government of the People's Republic of China or its authorized institution; and

(c) any other stock exchange agreed upon by the competent authorities of the Contracting States.

4. Before a resident of a Contracting State is denied relief from taxation in the other Contracting State by reason of paragraph 1, 2 and/or 3, the competent authorities of the Contracting States shall consult each other.

This Protocol is certified for addition to the Agreement and its supplemental Protocol by the undersigned.

SENATE EXECUTIVE REPORT NO. 99-7

INCOME TAX AGREEMENT (AND PROTOCOL) WITH THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

DECEMBER 11 (legislative day, DECEMBER 9), 1985.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. EVANS, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, submitted the following report to accompany Treaty Doc. 98-30.

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the People's Republic of China for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Tax Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income, together with a Supplementary Protocol and Exchange of Notes, signed at Beijing on April 30, 1984, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon and recommends that the Senate give its advice and consent to ratification thereof.

I. PURPOSE

The principal purposes of the proposed income tax treaty between the United States and the Government of the People's Republic of China are to reduce or eliminate double taxation of income earned by citizens and residents of either country from sources within the other country, and to prevent avoidance or evasion of the income taxes of the two countries. The proposed treaty is intended to continue to promote close economic cooperation between the two countries and to eliminate possible barriers to trade caused by overlapping taxing jurisdictions of the two countries. It is intended to enable the countries to cooperate in preventing avoidance and evasion of taxes.

II. BACKGROUND

The proposed treaty and protocol were both signed on April 30, 1984. The proposed treaty was amplified by an exchange of notes signed the same day.

The proposed treaty is the first comprehensive income tax treaty between the United States and the People's Republic of China. An agreement between the two countries governing the taxation of shipping and aircraft income only was signed on March 5, 1982, and is currently in force. The proposed treaty does not alter the tax rules for shipping and aircraft income set forth in that prior agreement.

The treaty was transmitted to the Senate for advice and consent to its ratification on August 10, 1984. The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations held a public hearing on the proposed treaty and protocol on July 30, 1985.

III. SUMMARY OF TREATY (AND PROTOCOL)

The proposed treaty is similar to other recent U.S. income tax treaties, the 1981 proposed U.S. model income tax treaty ("U.S. model treaty"), and the model income tax treaty of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development ("OECD model treaty"). However, there are certain deviations from those documents.

As in other U.S. tax treaties, the objectives of the treaty are principally achieved by each country agreeing to limit, in certain specified situations, its right to tax income derived from its territory by residents of the other. For example, the treaty provides that neither country will tax business income derived from sources within that country by residents of the other unless the business activities in the taxing country are substantial enough to constitute a permanent establishment or fixed base (Articles 7 and 13). Similarly, the treaty contains "commercial visitor" exemptions under which residents of one country performing personal services in the other will not be required to pay tax in the other unless their contact with the other exceeds specified minimums (Articles 13, 14, and 16). The proposed treaty provides that dividends, interest, royalties, capital gains, and certain other income derived by a resident of either country from sources within the other country generally may be taxed by both countries (Articles 9, 10, 11 and 12). Generally, however, dividends, interest, and royalties received by a resident of one country from sources within the other country are to be taxed by the source country on a restricted basis (Articles 9, 10, and 11).

In situations where the country of source retains the right under the proposed treaty to tax income derived by residents of the other country, the treaty generally provides for the relief of the potential double taxation by the country of residence allowing a foreign tax credit.

Like other U.S. tax treaties, the proposed protocol contains a "saving clause." Under this provision, the United States retains the right to tax its citizens and residents as if the treaty had not come into effect. In addition, the protocol contains the standard provision that the treaty will not be applied to deny any taxpayer any benefits he would be entitled to under the domestic law of the country or under any other agreement between the two countries; that is, the treaty will only be applied to the benefit of taxpayers.

The proposed treaty differs in certain respects from other U.S. income tax treaties and from the U.S. model treaty. Some of these differences are as follows:

(1) At China's request, the proposed treaty has been designated an "agreement." Generally, tax treaties rendered in English are designated "conventions." This difference in terminology does not have any substantive significance.

(2) U.S. citizens who are not also U.S. residents are not generally covered by the treaty. The U.S. model does cover such U.S. citizens. However, the United States has rarely been able to negotiate coverage for nonresident citizens.

(3) Under the proposed treaty, the competent authorities of the United States and China are, through consultations, to determine a single residence for a company that is a resident of both countries under local law. The treaty does not specify criteria for the competent authorities to follow in making the determination. If the competent authorities are unable to determine a single residence, the company will not be considered a resident of either country and, thus, will be ineligible for treaty benefits. In addition, a company that is both a U.S. resident, under U.S. law, and a third-country resident, under a tax agreement between a third country and China (because, for example, the company is considered to be managed in the third country), will not be considered a U.S. resident for purposes of enjoying the benefits of the proposed treaty. Thus, such a company will be entitled to benefits granted by China in its agreement with the third country. The U.S. model treaty contains different rules for dual resident corporations. Under the U.S. model, a corporation that is a resident of both the United States and its treaty partner under local law is automatically considered a resident of the country under whose laws it was first created and is thus entitled to the same treaty benefits that other corporate residents of that country receive. Further, a U.S.-incorporated company that is a resident of another treaty partner of the United States' treaty partner is not denied U.S. treaty benefits.

The first of the proposed treaty's two dual corporate resident rules technically permits determinations of a single corporate residence that would be inconsistent with the U.S. tax policy of not restricting, by treaty, U.S. taxation of U.S. corporations. The competent authorities of the two countries are free, for example, to decide that a company incorporated in the United States and, therefore, resident in the United States under U.S. law, and resident in China under Chinese law should be treated as a Chinese resident for treaty purposes. In the event of such a determination, the United States would be obligated to extend treaty reductions in U.S. tax to the U.S.-incorporated company. Such a determination would also deprive the U.S. corporation of the treaty reductions in Chinese tax otherwise available to U.S. corporations. The Committee understands, however, that the U.S. competent authority has never agreed to treat a U.S.-incorporated company as a resident of another country under existing treaties, and does not intend to agree to such treatment in the future. The Treasury Department's Technical Explanation is in accord with this understanding.

The first dual corporate resident rule also might result in the denial of treaty benefits to a company resident in both China and the United States under local law. This is the result in several other U.S. tax treaties. It might tend to encourage such a company to establish a single residence in one of the countries in order to ensure treaty coverage.

The second dual corporate resident rule does not appear in any existing U.S. income tax treaty. It may complicate the planning of U.S. multinationals in certain cases. For example, it is possible that a U.S. corporation operating in China might inadvertently lose its benefits under the proposed treaty if it opens a branch in a third country where it is then treated as a resident under a treaty between that country and China. The rule might encourage a U.S. corporation considered to be managed in and, therefore, a resident of another Chinese treaty partner to establish a single residence in the United States in cases where the benefits provided to the U.S. corporation under the third-country treaty with China fall short of the benefits available to U.S. corporate residents under the proposed treaty.

(4) The proposed treaty does not have an article governing the taxation of shipping and aircraft income. Rules for shipping and aircraft income are provided in a separate shipping and aircraft income tax agreement between the two countries signed on March 5, 1982, and currently in force.

(5) The definition of a permanent establishment in the proposed treaty is somewhat broader than that in the U.S. model and in many existing U.S. treaties. The principal areas in which the proposed treaty departs from the U.S. model are the inclusion as a permanent establishment of a building site or construction, assembly, or installation project that continues for more than six months, and the inclusion as a permanent establishment of an installation, drilling rig, or ship that is used for more than three months for the exploration or exploitation of natural resources (rather than, in each case, the U.S. model's 12 months). In addition, engaging in supervisory activities in connection with building sites, etc. for more than six months, or furnishing services, including consultancy services, through personnel engaged for that purpose, for more than six months in any twelve-month period (even without a fixed place of business), would create permanent establishment status under the proposed treaty but not under the U.S. model. An independent agent of an enterprise will constitute a permanent establishment under the proposed treaty if the agent's activities are devoted wholly or almost wholly on behalf of that enterprise and the transactions between the agent and the enterprise are not made under arm's-length conditions; the U.S. model does not contain this rule though a few U.S. tax treaties with developing countries do.

(6) The proposed treaty differs from the U.S. model in not providing investors in real property in the country not of their residence with an election to be taxed on such investments on a net basis. However, current U.S. law provides foreign persons with such an election.

(7) The proposed treaty does not contain a definition of "business profits," although certain categories of business profits are defined in various articles. This leaves to local law the definition of that term in some cases. Business profits must be attributed to a permanent establishment before they can be taxed by the country where the permanent establishment is located.

Many U.S. treaties, and the U.S. model, define business profits to include income from rental of tangible personal property and income from rental or licensing of films or tapes. The absence of such an inclusion in the proposed treaty means that persons who earn such rental or licensing income could be subject to tax in the source country on a gross basis rather than on a net basis unless they maintain a permanent establishment there.

(8) The proposed treaty contains rules not specifically found in business profits of a permanent establishment. For example, the proposed treaty disallows any deduction for interest paid (other than in reimbursement of actual expenses) by a permanent establishment to its head office on money lent to the permanent establishment. These rules are patterned after rules contained in the United Nations model treaty; however, the United Nations model exempts branch banks from the prohibition on the deduction of interest paid to a permanent establishment's head office. Rules similar to those of the proposed treaty are specifically included in certain other U.S. income tax treaties with developing countries, and generally the same result is reached by the U.S. model treaty.

The proposed treaty also provides that a country may determine profits attributable to a permanent establishment on a deemed basis if, under its internal law, it does so with respect to other entities in that permanent establishment's industry and if the result is in accordance with the principles contained in the business profits article. Most recent U.S. income tax treaties and the U.S. model treaty do not contain this provision. The Committee understands that it is generally China's practice to deem as taxable profits 10 percent of the Chinese source gross receipts of U.S. subcontractors from offshore oil operations. The Committee also understands that China deems as taxable profits 10 percent of the Chinese source gross receipts with respect to outgoing traffic received by operators of ships and aircraft in international traffic. In both cases, a 50-percent tax is imposed on the deemed profits. However, under the agreement currently in force between the United States and China governing the taxation of shipping and aircraft income, income earned by a U.S. enterprise from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic is exempt from Chinese tax.

(9) The limit on the gross dividend tax that the country of source may impose is 10 percent, in contrast with the five percent limit for direct dividends and 15 percent limit for portfolio dividends in the U.S. model.

(10) The U.S. model treaty allows one country to tax dividends paid by a resident company of the other country from profits of its permanent establishment in the first country constituting 50 percent or more of the company's worldwide income. The proposed treaty allows one country to tax dividends paid by a resident company of the other only when the dividends are (a) paid to a resident of the first country of (b) with respect to a stock holding or other corporate right effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base in the first country. This variation from the U.S. model has the effect of prohibiting the United States from imposing its "second tier" withholding tax on dividends (see Code sec. 861(a)(2)(B)) paid by any Chinese company that in the future earns significant business profits in the United States. The proposed treaty, unlike the U.S. model, also expressly prohibits a country from taxing the undistributed profits of a company resident in the other country.

(11) The proposed protocol prohibits the United States from imposing its personal holding company and accumulated earnings taxes on Chinese companies that are wholly owned by either the Chinese government or individual residents of China (who are not U.S. citizens). The personal holding company and accumulated earnings taxes are not covered taxes under the U.S. model treaty and, thus, their imposition is not limited by the model.

(12) The proposed treaty generally limits the tax at source on gross interest to 10 percent; interest derived by the governments of the countries, by certain government financial institutions, and by individuals on debt-claims indirectly financed by the foregoing entities is exempt from source country tax. Under the U.S. model, all interest, by contrast, generally is exempt from source country withholding tax. The U.S. model position is rarely achieved.

Because of the recent repeal (in the Tax Reform Act of 1984) of the U.S. gross withholding tax on interest paid on portfolio indebtedness held by foreign persons, Chinese residents generally will receive U.S. source interest on portfolio indebtedness free of U.S. tax in any event. However, U.S. residents generally will be subject to Chinese tax (limited to 10 percent by the treaty) on Chinese source interest on similar indebtedness, subject to certain exemptions.

(13) The proposed treaty generally limits the tax at source on gross royalties, including movie royalties, to 10 percent. In the case of royalties paid for the rental of industrial, commercial, or scientific equipment, the proposed protocol further reduces the maximum rate to seven percent. The U.S. model exempts royalties from source country tax.

(14) The proposed treaty limitations on source country withholding tax on dividends, interest, and royalties paid to residents of the other country apply, by their terms, only if the recipient of the income is also its beneficial owner. Under the U.S. model treaty, by contrast, these limitations on source country withholding tax generally apply so long as the beneficial owner of the income resides in the nonsource country; in that case, initial receipt of the income by an intermediary that is not the beneficial owner is irrelevant.

The proposed treaty language is similar to that of the OECD model treaty. The commentaries on the OECD model indicate that this language should not be interpreted to deny the reduced source country withholding tax rates to dividend, interest, or royalty payments received by a nominee or other agent of the beneficial owner when the beneficial owner is a resident of the nonsource country. The Committee understands that the countries intend the language to be interpreted in a manner consistent with the OECD commentaries, and recommends approval of the treaty only on that basis.

(15) The proposed treaty allows source country taxation of most capital gains, including gains on the disposition of real estate. The treaty's rules preserve U.S. tax under the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980. The U.S. model generally permits source country taxation of real estate gains and gains from the alienation of personal property attributable to a permanent establishment or fixed base in the source country, but prohibits other source country taxation of capital gains.

(16) The proposed treaty allows source country taxation of independent professional services income on the basis of presence in the source country for more than 183 days in a calendar year. The U.S. model treaty does not allow taxation of such income on the basis of days of presence. Under the U.S. model, independent personal services income of a nonresident is taxable only if the nonresident has available a fixed base in the source country.

(17) The proposed treaty allows directors' fees derived by a resident of one country in his capacity as a member of the board of directors of a company which is a resident of the other country to be taxed in that other country. The U.S. model treaty, on the other hand, treats directors' fees as personal service income or as a distribution of profits. Under the U.S. model treaty (and the proposed treaty), the country where the recipient resides generally has primary taxing jurisdiction over personal service income and the source country tax on distributed profits is limited.

(18) Under the proposed treaty, source country taxation of income derived by entertainers and athletes from their activities as such is not permitted if the income is derived in accordance with a special program for cultural exchange agreed upon by the U.S. and Chinese Governments. The Committee understands that U.S. entertainers and athletes presently perform in China (and Chinese entertainers and athletes presently perform in the United States) only in accordance with such special programs. Under the U.S. model treaty, entertainers and athletes may not be taxed in the source country unless they earn more than $20,000 there during a taxable year. Most U.S. income tax treaties follow the U.S. model approach, with a lower annual income threshold for taxation than the U.S. model contains.

(19) The proposed treaty does not limit taxation of annuities, alimony, or child support payments. The U.S. model treaty allows taxation of annuities and alimony payments only in the country of residence of the recipient, and taxation of child support payments only in the country of residence of the payor.

(20) Under the proposed treaty, the salaries of visiting teachers and researchers are exempt from tax in the source country for three years. Under the U.S. model, these salaries are subject to the standard rules, ordinarily resulting in full source country taxation. A number of existing U.S. income tax treaties provide visiting teachers and researchers with a two-year exemption from source country taxation.

(21) The exemption from source country taxation provided to visiting students and trainees is broader than that provided in the U.S. model. The U.S. model exemption applies only to payments received from outside the source country for maintenance, education, study, research, or training. The proposed treaty exemption extends to, among other things, grants and awards from governmental and other tax-exempt organizations and $5,000 per year of personal services income. The proposed treaty exemption is similar to that incorporated in some other U.S. income tax treaties with developing countries; it differs, however, from the exemptions provided in those treaties in not terminating after a fixed number of years (typically five).

(22) The proposed treaty allows the source country to tax any income not otherwise specifically dealt with under the treaty. The U.S. model treaty, by contrast, gives the residence country the sole right to tax income not otherwise specifically dealt with under the treaty, unless the income is attributable to a permanent establishment or a fixed base in the other country. The rule of the proposed treaty is contained in a number of existing U.S. income tax treaties.

(23) The proposed treaty's nondiscrimination provision differs from the U.S. model treaty's in protecting all legal persons deriving their status as such from the United States, not U.S. citizens alone. The rule of the proposed treaty is contained in a number of existing U.S. income tax treaties.

(24) The proposed treaty's exchange of information provision generally follows that of the U.S. model, but is somewhat narrower in scope. The U.S. model treaty provides for the exchange of information relating to taxes of every kind imposed by the two countries. The proposed treaty provides for the exchange of information relating only to taxes it covers. The U.S. model treaty requires that, upon an appropriate request for information, the requested country obtain the information to which the request relates in the same manner and to the same extent as if its tax were at issue. It also requires that, where specifically requested by the competent authority of one country, the competent authority of the other country provide the information in the form requested. The proposed treaty does not include these requirements. In addition, the U.S. model treaty provides that each country will collect taxes for the other country to the extent necessary to insure that benefits of the treaty are not going to persons not entitled to those benefits. The proposed treaty does not contain this collection rule.

The proposed treaty, like the U.S. model, makes it clear that the appropriate Congressional Committees and the General Accounting Office are to have access to information exchanged under the treaty where appropriate.

(25) The "saving clause" (added by the proposed protocol) differs in certain respects from that found in the U.S. model treaty and those found in most recent U.S. income tax treaties. The principal differences are: Under the U.S. model treaty, both countries generally reserve the right to tax their citizens and residents as if the treaty had not come into effect; under the proposed protocol, only the United States does. Under the U.S. model treaty, there are several exceptions to this reservation of taxing rights; under the proposed protocol, the United States reserves the right to tax its citizens without exception. The U.S. model contains a provision specifically retaining a country's right to tax former citizens who renounced citizenship to avoid income tax; the proposed treaty does not, but no difference in meaning is intended.

(26) The proposed treaty's anti-treaty shopping provision (added by the proposed protocol) is considerably less comprehensive than that of the U.S. model treaty and most recent U.S. income tax treaties. (See discussion under "Committee Comments," below.)

(27) In notes exchanged at the signing of the proposed treaty and protocol, the United States and China agreed that a tax sparing credit would not be provided at the present time. However, the countries agreed that the proposed treaty would be promptly amended to incorporate a tax sparing credit provision if, in the future, the United States amended its laws concerning the provision of tax sparing credits, or the United States reached agreement on the provision of a tax sparing credit with any other country. This agreement is similar to, but goes somewhat beyond, existing agreements between the United States and certain developing countries regarding the reduction of conflicts between the U.S. tax system and the developing country's foreign investment tax incentives. The existing agreements do not refer explicitly to a tax sparing credit and do not include a promise by the Untied States to allow such a credit upon allowing it to any other country, i.e., they do not confer most favored nation status on the U.S. treaty partner in connection with the tax sparing credit. Generally, the existing agreements commit the United States only to resume discussions, when circumstances permit, with a view to incorporating provisions in the treaty that will minimize interference with incentives offered by the other country and be consistent with U.S. income tax policy vis a vis other developing countries. Any future amendment of the proposed treaty to provide a tax sparing credit, like any treaty amendment, would be subject in any event to the full negotiation and Senate ratification processes that apply to treaties generally.

(28) Income derived by a resident of one country that may be taxed in the other country under the proposed treaty is deemed to arise in that other country for purposes of the proposed treaty. However, the proposed treaty omits the U.S. model provision stating that this source rule does not apply in determining foreign tax credits for foreign taxes paid by U.S. residents to third countries.

IV. DATE OF ENTRY INTO FORCE AND TERMINATION

Entry into force

The countries are to notify each other in writing, through diplomatic channels, upon the completion of their respective legal procedures to bring the proposed treaty into force. The proposed treaty and protocol will enter into force on the 30th day after the latter of the notifications.

The proposed treaty and protocol will be effective for income derived in taxable years beginning on or after the January 1st next following the date on which the treaty and protocol enter into force.

Termination

This proposed treaty will remain in force indefinitely, but either country may terminate it by giving notice in writing through diplomatic channels on or before June 30th in any calendar year after five years from the date on which the treaty enters into force. If a termination occurs, it will be effective with respect to income derived during taxable years beginning on or after the January 1st of the year following that in which the notice of termination is given.

V. COMMITTEE ACTION

The Committee on Foreign Relations held public hearings, chaired by Senator Evans, on the proposed Chinese income tax treaty and protocol, and on other proposed tax treaties, on July 30, 1985. The Committee considered the proposed treaty and protocol on December 4, and December 11, 1985, and ordered them favorably reported on December 11, 1985, by voice vote.

VI. COMMITTEE COMMENTS

The Committee on Foreign Relations approved the treaty without reservation, but expressed its understanding of the effect of the treaty on the U.S. foreign tax credit limitation as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1984. In addition, the Committee expressed its concern with respect to three other issues raised by the proposed treaty.

Resourcing rule of the Tax Reform Act of 1984

The Tax Reform Act of 1984 amended the foreign tax credit limitation rules to prevent U.S. persons from treating as foreign source income dividends, interest, and certain other income that they derived through a foreign corporation a significant part of whose income arose in the United States. The proposed treaty provides that the United States need credit taxes paid to China only "in accordance with the provisions of the law of the United States" (Article 22, paragraph 2). The proposed treaty also provides that income derived by a resident of one country which may be taxed in the other country under the treaty is deemed to arise in that other country (Article 22, paragraph 3).

Some have questioned whether the proposed treaty allows the 1984 change to the foreign tax credit limitation rules to operate as Congress intended. The proposed treaty would prevent operation of the 1984 change if that change were viewed as a source rule for purposes of the treaty. However, the Committee believes that the 1984 change is a limitation on the foreign tax credit (for the purpose of the treaty provisions listed above), and therefore paragraph 2 of Article 22 controls. Thus, the proposed treaty does not prevent operation of the change, since the treaty credit is to be granted only "in accordance with the provisions" of U.S. law. The Committee believes that because the 1984 Act amended a Code section (sec. 904) that deals only with the foreign tax credit limitation, that amendment should be viewed as a foreign tax credit limitation rule and not a source rule.

The chairmen and ranking minority members of the tax law writing committees of Congress emphasized in letters to this Committee the importance of clarifying that the proposed treaty does not override the 1984 changes to the foreign tax credit limitation. Therefore, to make it clear that no such override is accomplished by Article 23 of the proposed treaty, the Committee states that it has recommended approval of the treaty based on its understanding that nothing in Article 23 will be interpreted to prevent the United States from determining the source of income (for purposes of the foreign tax credit limitation) in accordance with the provisions of section 904(g) of the Internal Revenue Code. The Committee would not recommend approval of this treaty if it overrode the 1984 Act in this respect.

The Committee thus intends that payments from a U.S.-owned Chinese corporation will be treated as U.S.-source for U.S. foreign tax credit purposes if the income of the corporation is from U.S. sources, in accordance with section 904(g) of the Code. The Committee stresses, however, that its clarification in this manner of a newly ratified treaty does not support a contrary reading of any previously ratified treaty. In enacting the 1984 Act, Congress intended that the credit article of any existing treaty be applied subject to the limitations imposed by the Act.

Developing country concessions

The proposed treaty contains a number of developing country concessions. Many of these concessions are found in the United Nations model income tax treaty between developed and developing countries and in other U.S. tax treaties with developing countries.

Developing country concessions generally

The proposed treaty departs significantly from the U.S. and OECD model treaties in providing for relatively broad source basis taxation. The proposed treaty's permanent establishment clause, for instance, permits the country in which business activities are carried on to tax the activities sooner, in certain cases, than it would be able to under the U.S. or OECD model treaty. Under the proposed treaty, the use of a drilling rig in a country for more than three months creates a permanent establishment there; under the U.S. model, drilling rigs must be present for at least one year. Thus, under the proposed treaty, business profits attributable to a U.S. drilling rig located in Chinese waters in the South China Sea, for example, will be taxable by China if the rig stays there for more than three months. Certain construction activities create a permanent establishment under the proposed treaty if they continue in a country for more than six months, in contrast with the 12-month threshold in the U.S. model. Also, under the proposed treaty, unlike the U.S. model, the performance of certain supervisory services in connection with building sites, etc., or the performance of certain consulting and other services though personnel engaged by an enterprise for that purpose (even if the enterprise has no fixed place of business in the country of performance) can, by itself, create a permanent establishment. The practical effect of these rules could be greater Chinese taxation of U.S. mineral exploration activities, construction activities, and consulting services than would be the case if the model treaty rules were used.

Other concessions to source basis taxation in the proposed treaty include maximum rates of source country tax on direct dividends, interest, and royalties that, while in line with those provided in some other treaties with developing countries, are higher than those provided in the U.S. model treaty and some U.S. treaties; allowing taxing jurisdiction on the part of the source country as well as the residence country with respect to income not otherwise specifically dealt with by the treaty; and broader source country taxation of independent personal services income, directors' fees, and entertainers' income than that allowed by the U.S. model.

The Committee expressed its concern that such provisions not be viewed as the starting point for future negotiations with developing countries. It must be clearly recognized that several of the rules of the proposed treaty represent substantial concessions by the United States, and that such concessions must be met (as they are in this case) with substantial concessions by the treaty partner. Thus, future negotiations with developing countries should not assume, for example, that the definition of a permanent establishment provided in this treaty will necessarily be available in every case; rather, such a definition will only be adopted in the context of an agreement that satisfactorily addresses the concerns of the United States.

Different permanent establishment rules for drilling and construction activities

As indicated above, the proposed treaty defines a permanent establishment to include a drilling rig used for the exploration or exploitation of natural resources in a country if it is so used for more than three months. This treatment contrasts with the treaty's six-month permanent establishment rule for construction activities. In its 1984 report on the income tax treaty with Canada, the Committee expressed its view that the offshore activities of contract drillers are, as a general matter, closely analogous to construction activities.[1] The Committee indicated its strong belief that the permanent establishment threshold for drilling contractors should be the same as that provided for enterprises engaged in construction activities.[2] The proposed treaty once again presents the issue whether unequal treatment for drilling rigs and construction activities is acceptable. The Committee believes that the United States should not generally make concessions of this kind, especially in light of the Committee's comments just over a year ago. On the other hand, the proposed treaty with China was signed before the Committee made the comments described above. Therefore, the Committee will accept unequal treatment in this unusual case. However, the Committee wishes to make it clear that a future treaty provision containing different permanent establishment thresholds for drilling rigs and construction activities will bear a substantial risk of Committee disapproval.

Treaty shopping

The proposed treaty, like a number of U.S. income tax treaties, generally limits source country withholding tax on interest paid to residents of the other country. Although this treaty tax reduction (like other tax reductions and tax exemptions provided in the proposed treaty) is intended to benefit residents of China and the United States only, residents of third countries sometimes attempt to use a treaty to obtain treaty benefits. This is known as treaty shopping. Investors from countries that do not have tax treaties with the Untied States, or from countries that have not agreed in their tax treaties with the United States to limit source country taxation of interest to the same extent that it is limited in another treaty may, for example, attempt to secure a lower rate of U.S. tax on interest by lending money to a U.S. person indirectly through a country whose treaty with the United States provides for a lower rate. The third-country investor may do this by establishing a subsidiary, trust, or other investing entity in that treaty country, which then makes the loan to the U.S. person and claims the treaty reduction for the interest it receives.

By repealing the U.S. gross withholding tax on interest paid to foreigners on certain portfolio indebtedness, the Tax Reform Act of 1984 limited treaty shopping incentives dramatically. Opportunities for treaty shopping remain, however, where the United States still imposes tax on interest paid to foreigners or with respect to other types of payments. For example, the United States taxes interest paid to parties related to the payor, interest on pre-July 19, 1984, debt, and certain interest paid to banks.

[2] Id.

The anti-treaty shopping provision of the proposed treaty (added by the proposed protocol) is much less detailed than the anti-treaty shopping provision of the current (1981) U.S. model treaty, or the provisions found in most recent U.S. treaties. It is considerably less strict than the anti-treaty shopping provision of the current U.S. model. While the U.S. model provision is only one of several approaches that the Treasury Department considers satisfactory to prevent treaty shopping abuses, the model provision is nonetheless a standard against which to compare the proposed treaty's anti-treaty shopping provision.

Under the proposed treaty provision, only treaty benefits provided under the dividend, interest, and royalty articles (chiefly reduced source country withholding tax rates) may be denied; under the U.S. model provision, all treaty benefits may be denied. The proposed treaty provision applies to companies only; the U.S. model treaty provision applies to all persons except individuals, that is, all business organizations. The proposed treaty provides that the competent authorities of the two countries "may through consultation deny" treaty benefits. The U.S. model's anti-treaty shopping provision does not contain language referring to consultations by the competent authorities. The Committee is aware that some have argued that, under this language, if the Chinese competent authority, for example, fails to cooperate, the United States will be unable to prevent third-country residents from obtaining treaty reductions in U.S. tax through the use of an investing entity set up in China. However, the Committee concurs with the Treasury Department's view that treaty benefits could be denied under the anti-treaty shopping rules without prior consultations by the competent authorities. Under the proposed treaty, sanctions against treaty shopping may be imposed only if a company formed in a third country becomes a resident of one of the countries for the principal purpose of enjoying the proposed treaty's benefits; under the U.S. model, sanctions may be imposed, in addition, if certain objective tests concerning stock ownership and the use of funds are not satisfied.

Under the U.S. model "safe harbor" tests, treaty benefits will be denied to a business organization unless it is owned 75 percent or more by individuals residing in the country of which it is a resident, and its income is not used in substantial part to meet liabilities to persons residing in third countries who are not U.S. citizens. The proposed treaty does not apply such a safe harbor test; it provides no standard for denying treaty benefits other than the rule that benefits may be denied if a company becomes a resident for the principal purpose of obtaining them. The safe harbor test of the U.S. model has the advantage of providing both business organizations and the countries with relative certainty as to who will be denied treaty benefits. On the other hand, the safe harbor test may limit the countries' flexibility in attacking treaty shopping uses. Thus, the omission of the test from the anti-treaty shopping provision of the proposed treaty may, in this respect, benefit the countries' taxing authorities.

Finally, unlike the U.S. model, the proposed treaty does not limit treaty benefits with respect to foreign source income of a country's residents that bears a significantly lower tax in the residents' home country, under its laws, than similar domestic source income.

The Committee is therefore concerned that the proposed treaty's anti-treaty shopping provision may not prevent all potential unintended uses of the treaty by third-country investors. On the other hand, the Committee recognizes that treaty shopping possibilities in China appear insignificant at present. In general, Chinese taxes on foreign investors are relatively high (though tax holidays to encourage investment are available). Interest and dividend payments to foreign enterprises are subject to withholding tax. With certain exceptions, interest and dividend payments to foreign individuals are subject to the individual income tax.[3] The Committee has been informed that foreign entities in China are subject to registration requirements that, as they are presently administered, effectively preclude the establishment of entities that would function primarily as passive investment vehicles. In addition, foreign exchange controls presently in place make it difficult for third-country investors to channel investment income from the United States through China.

However, there is no guarantee that the present impediments to use of the proposed treaty by third-country investors will continue in the future. Changes in Chinese law and administrative practice with respect to foreign investors have been occurring at a rapid pace in recent years, and could continue to do so. Thus, the Committee emphasizes that any such changes in Chinese law would require the United States to carefully reexamine the adequacy of the treaty's anti-treaty shopping provision, and to take whatever steps are necessary to ensure that the treaty does not provide opportunities for treaty shopping.

China has announced its intention to resume the exercise of sovereignty over Hong Kong in 1997 and has concluded an agreement with Britain governing the resumption of sovereign control. Based on the terms of that agreement as they related to the treaty definition of "China," the proposed treaty will not apply to Hong Kong. (See discussion under Article 3.) The exclusion of Hong Kong from treaty coverage is important because treaty shopping possibilities in Hong Kong, in contrast with China, could be significant. As an international finance center seeking to attract foreign investment, Hong Kong generally imposes low income taxes. Profits earned overseas (for example, in the United States) generally are not included in arriving at taxable profits. Also, dividends paid by Hong Kong companies, income derived from trusts, and interest paid on Hong Kong bank deposits generally are exempt from Hong Kong tax. Hong

[3] It should be noted, however, that apparently no withholding mechanism for collecting the tax is presently in place. Also, the treaty substantially limits the tax; gross dividends, for example, are subject to a maximum tax of 10 percent, an unusually low treaty limit for portfolio dividends.

Kong has no exchange controls or other rules that would restrict the movement of capital or the repatriation of profits, and places few restrictions on foreign ownership. Therefore, the Committee emphasizes that it is recommending Senate approval of the treaty based on its understanding that Hong Kong is excluded from treaty coverage. Inclusion of Hong Kong would render the treaty unacceptable, given the present form of the treaty's anti-treaty shopping rule.

Coordination with tax reform proposals

The Committee is concerned about possible conflicts between the treaty and the Administration's tax reform proposals. In particular, the proposed branch-level tax and dividends paid deduction could conflict with provisions of the treaty.

The United States does not now impose a branch-level tax, but the Administration's May 1985 tax reform proposal asks Congress to enact one. The proposed treaty does not expressly prohibit the United States from imposing a branch-level tax. However, the non-discrimination rule protecting permanent establishments that is found in the proposed treaty and in most U.S. income tax treaties may forbid the imposition of a branch-level-type tax on permanent establishment. The Administration has proposed that any such treaty protection not be overridden by Congress. On enactment, the Administration would instead seek to renegotiate treaties to allow the United States to impose the branch-level tax in particular countries where current treaties prohibit its imposition. The House Committee on Ways and Means (H.R. 3838, H. Rept. No. 99-426, Dec. 7, 1985) has approved a branch-level tax similar to the Administration proposal. That provision would generally defer to existing treaties that prohibit a branch-level tax, except in the case of a treaty-country corporation controlled by residents of a third country.

A similar issue is presented by the Administration's proposal to allow a 10-percent dividends paid deduction to U.S. corporations. The purpose of this deduction is to reduce the burden of the two-tiered taxation of corporate profits under the "classical" system of present law, which imposes a tax at the corporate and shareholder levels. The dividends paid deduction would extend to some dividends paid to foreign shareholders. Absent treaty protection, however, the proposal would impose on such dividends a compensatory withholding tax designed to prevent elimination of all tax on 10 percent of corporate profits where shareholders are not U.S. taxpayers. The proposed treaty with China would prevent U.S. imposition of this compensatory withholding tax. The Administration proposal would not initially impose a compensatory tax on dividends paid to protected treaty country recipients, including Chinese recipients. However, it would delegate to the Secretary of the Treasury the authority to override treaties to impose a compensatory dividend withholding tax on a country-by-country basis. The purpose of this delegation is, in part, to seek similar relief from treaty partner countries. The House Committee on Ways and Means (H.R. 3838) has approved a similar dividends paid deduction and a compensatory withholding tax that would override treaties in certain cases.

Under the Administration tax reform proposal, the Secretary of the Treasury could impose the compensatory withholding tax on a dividend paid to a treaty country recipient if the home country of the recipient indicated an unwillingness to extend its own credit benefits to dividends paid by local companies to U.S. shareholders or if there were treaty shopping concerns. The House Committee on Ways and Means provision (H.R. 3838) would similarly override treaties to impose the compensatory withholding tax if the treaty country continued to deny equivalent- relief (or if the treaty failed to place satisfactory limits on treaty shopping).

The Committee therefore wishes to make it clear that, in recommending Senate approval of the proposed treaty at a time when Congressional efforts to achieve major tax reforms are underway, the Committee expects that Congress' flexibility in the tax reform process will not be restricted by the treaty. The chairmen and ranking minority members of the tax-law writing Committees of the Congress emphasized in letters to this Committee the importance of clarifying that in the context of the reform effort now under way, Congress may find it necessary to exercise its prerogative to override some provisions of treaties, including those recently ratified, that are in conflict with the reforms. Therefore, the Committee wishes to emphasize to our prospective treaty partners that if Congress decides to enact a branch-level tax or dividends paid deduction, Congress may not defer to the contrary provisions of any treaty in doing so.

VII. BUDGET IMPACT

The Committee estimates that the effect of the proposed treaty on budget receipts will be negligible.

In accordance with the objectives of section 403 of the Budget Act, the Committee advises that the Director of the Congressional Budget Office has examined the Committee's budget estimate and agrees that the effect on budget receipts will be negligible. In keeping with the spirit of section 308(a) of the Budget Act, and after consultation with the Director of the of the Congressional Budget Office, the Committee states that the treaty does not provide any new budget authority or any new or increase tax expenditures.

VIII. EXPLANATION OF TREATY PROVISIONS

A detailed article-by-article explanation of the proposed income tax treaty between the United States and the People's Republic of China ("China"), as modified by the proposed protocol, is presented below, followed by separate explanations of the proposed protocol and the notes exchanged when the proposed treaty was signed.

The proposed protocol is unusual in that its signing occurred at the same time as the signing of the proposed treaty. Some of the provisions of the proposed protocol amend specific articles of the proposed treaty, while others do not. The proposed treaty and the proposed protocol, upon entry into force, will operate as one document, and it is of no consequence that some provisions appear in the proposed protocol while others appear in the body of the proposed treaty.

Article 1. (Personal scope)

Article 1 describes the persons who may claim the benefits of the treaty.

The proposed treaty applies to residents of the United States and to residents of China. Specific exceptions are designated in other articles and in the proposed protocol. This application follows other U.S. income tax treaties, the U.S. model treaty, and the OECD model treaty. The treaty also applies, in limited cases designated in other articles, to persons who are residents of neither China nor the United States. Article 4 defines the term "resident".

Article 2. (Taxes covered)

In general, in the case of the United States, the proposed treaty applies to the Federal income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code (the "Code").

The proposed protocol provides that the United States may, with one exception, impose its personal holding company and accumulated earnings taxes notwithstanding the treaty; the protocol exempts Chinese companies from these two taxes if they are wholly owned, directly or indirectly, by the Chinese Government (or any wholly owned agency thereof) or one or more individual Chinese residents (who are not U.S. citizens). The proposed protocol also provides that the United States may impose its social security tax notwithstanding the treaty.

Because the proposed treaty applies to the Federal income taxes only, it does not cover the U.S. excise tax on insurance premiums imposed under section 4371 of the Code. Accordingly, the United States may impose this tax without restriction.

In the case of China, the proposed treaty applies to the individual income tax, the income tax concerning joint ventures with Chinese and foreign investment, the income tax concerning foreign enterprises, and the local income tax.

The proposed treaty also contains a provision generally found in U.S. income tax treaties to the effect that it will apply to substantially similar taxes that either country may subsequently impose.

The proposed treaty obligates the competent authority of each country to notify the competent authority of the other country, within an appropriate time period, of any substantial changes in the tax laws of its country.

Article 3. (General definitions)

The proposed treaty contains certain of the standard definitions found in most U.S. income tax treaties.

The term "the People's Republic of China" means all of the territory of the People's Republic of China, including its territorial sea, in which China's internal tax laws are in force. The term also includes all the area beyond China's territorial sea, including the sea-bed and subsoil, over which China has jurisdiction in accordance with international law and in which China's internal tax laws are in force. Therefore, income earned on the Chinese continental shelf is covered.

The Chinese Government has consistently taken the view that Hong Kong is Chinese territory. However, the New Territories of Hong Kong (comprising 92 percent of the total land area of Hong Kong) have been leased to Britain since 1898 under a 99-year lease and the remaining portions of Hong Kong were ceded in perpetuity to Britain earlier in the 19th Century. China has announced its intention to resume the exercise of sovereignty over all of Hong Kong upon the expiration of the 99-year lease in 1997 and has concluded an agreement with Britain governing that resumption of sovereign control (the Agreement between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of the People's Republic of China on the Future of Hong Kong, hereinafter referred to as the "Hong Kong Agreement"). The proposed treaty does not address directly the question of whether it will cover Hong Kong once Chinese sovereignty is resumed. However, based on the terms of the Hong Kong Agreement as they relate to the treaty definition of China, the Committee concludes that the treaty will not apply to Hong Kong, and recommends approval of the treaty on that basis.

Under the Hong Kong Agreement, China will establish a Hong Kong Special Administrative Region upon resuming the exercise of sovereignty over Hong Kong. The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region will be directly under the authority of the Central People's Government of China. However, the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region will enjoy a high degree of autonomy, except in foreign and defense affairs, and will be vested with executive, legislative, and independent judicial power under the terms of the Hong Kong Agreement. The laws currently in force in Hong Kong will remain basically unchanged for 50 years. The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region will have independent finances and the Central People's Government will not levy taxes in it. Thus, China's internal tax laws will not be "in force" in Hong Kong even after sovereign control is resumed under the terms of the Hong Kong Agreement for a 50-year period. As a result, Hong Kong will not be considered part of China for treaty purposes under the treaty definition of China.

The exclusion of Hong Kong from treaty coverage is important because treaty coverage could create opportunities for third-country residents to use a Hong Kong entity to obtain the treaty reductions in U.S. tax: as indicated in the discussion of treaty shopping issues above, the anti-treaty shopping provisions of the proposed treaty are very limited and Hong Kong has low tax rates and other tax and non-tax rules that make it highly attractive to foreign investors.

The proposed treaty defines "the United States" to mean all of the territory of the United States of America, including its territorial sea, in which the United States' internal tax laws are in force. The term also includes all the area beyond the United States' territorial sea, including the sea-bed and subsoil, over which the United States has jurisdiction in accordance with international law and in which the United States' internal tax laws are in force. This definition of the United States differs somewhat in form from the U.S. model definition but its meaning is intended to be the same. The definition is intended to cover the U.S. continental shelf consistent with the definition of continental shelf contained in section 638 of the Code.

The term "Contracting State" means the People's Republic of China or the United States, as the context requires.

The term "tax" means the covered Chinese taxes or the covered U.S. taxes, as the context requires.

The term "person" is defined to include an individual, a company, a partnership, and any other body of persons. The proposed protocol provides that the term also includes an estate or a trust. A "company" is any body corporate or any other entity which is treated as a body corporate for tax purposes.

An enterprise of a country is defined as an enterprise carried on by a resident of that country. Although the treaty does not define the term "enterprise," it will have the same meaning that it has in other U.S. tax treaties—the trade or business activities undertaken by an individual, company, partnership, or other entity.

The term "nationals" means all individuals having U.S. or Chinese nationality and all legal persons, partnerships, and other bodies of persons deriving their status as such from the laws in force in the United States or China.

The U.S. competent authority is the Secretary of the Treasury or his authorized representative. In fact, the U.S. competent authority function has been delegated to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who has redelegated the authority to the Associate Commissioner (Operations). The Assistant Commissioner (Examination) has been delegated the authority to administer programs for simultaneous, spontaneous, and industry-wide exchanges of information. The Director, Foreign Operations District, has been delegated the authority to administer programs for routine and specific exchanges of information and mutual assistance in collection.

The Chinese competent authority is the Ministry of Finance, or its authorized representative.

The treaty provides that any term not defined in the treaty is to have the meaning it has under the applicable tax laws of the country applying the treaty, unless the context requires otherwise. This provision differs from the standard U.S. treaty provision, which authorizes the two countries, in addition, to establish a common meaning for an undefined term by mutual agreement. It is the view of the Committee (as well as the countries' negotiators), however, that the countries are authorized under the mutual agreement article (Article 24) to establish a common meaning for an undefined term, this variation in treaty language notwithstanding.

Article 4. (Fiscal residence)

The assignment of a country of residence is important because the benefits of the proposed treaty generally are available only to a resident of one of the countries as that term is defined in the treaty. Furthermore, double taxation is often avoided by the treaty assigning one of the countries as the country of residence where, under the laws of the countries, a person is a resident of both.

Under U.S. law, residence of an individual is important because a resident alien is taxed on his worldwide income, while a nonresident alien is taxed only on U.S. source income and on his income that is effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. Under the standards for determining residence provided in the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (which were generally effective on January 1, 1985), an individual who spends substantial time in the United States in any year or over a three-year period generally is a U.S. resident. A permanent resident for immigration purposes also is a U.S. resident. The standards for determining residence provided in the 1984 Act do not apply in determining residence of a U.S. citizen for the purpose of any U.S. tax treaty (such as a treaty that benefits residents, rather than citizens, of the United States). A company is a resident of the United States if it is organized in the United States.

Under the proposed treaty, a person (either an individual or an entity such as a corporation or a partnership) is considered to be a resident of a country if, under the laws of that country, the person is liable to taxation by that country because it is his country of domicile, residence, place of head office, place of incorporation, or by reason of other criteria of a similar nature.

This provision of the proposed treaty is generally based on the fiscal domicile article of the U.S. and OECD model treaties and is similar to the provisions found in other U.S. tax treaties. However, the provision differs in certain respects from those found in the other treaties. For example, it does not explicitly exclude from treaty coverage persons who are taxable in one of the countries only with respect to income from sources in that country or capital situated in that country. Despite this omission, the Committee intends that third-country residents liable to tax in China or the United States only with respect to income from sources in (or capital situated in) China or the United States will not be eligible for benefits under the treaty.

Consistent with most U.S. income tax treaties, citizenship alone does not establish residence. As a result, U.S. citizens residing over-seas are not entitled to the benefits of the treaty as U.S. residents. This result is contrary to U.S. treaty policy as expressed in the U.S. model, but the U.S. model result has been achieved in very few treaties.

In the case of a dual resident individual, residence for treaty purposes is to be determined by the competent authorities of the two countries through consultations. In determining the treaty residence of a dual residence individual, the competent authorities are, under the protocol, to be guided by the "tie-breaker" rules contained in the corresponding article of the United Nations model treaty. Under these rules, if one criterion does not determine a single residence, the second criterion comes into consideration, and so on. The tie-breaker rules of the United Nations model treaty are identical to those of the U.S. model treaty. However, the U.S. model treaty and most recent U.S. income tax treaties differ from the proposed treaty in permitting the application of the tie-breaker rules by one country without consultation with the competent authority of the other country. Resolution of an issue under the competent authority mechanism may take a substantial amount of time.

In the case of a dual resident company, residence for treaty purposes, again, is to be determined by the competent authorities of the two countries through consultations. If the competent authorities are unable to reach a determination, the company will not be considered a resident of either country under the treaty. This rule differs from that of the U.S. model, but is contained in several other U.S. tax treaties. Under the U.S. model, a dual resident company that is created under the laws of one of the countries is deemed a resident of that country for treaty purposes.

A company that is both a U.S. resident under the general rule of this article and a resident of a third country under a tax agreement between that third country and China will not be considered a U.S. resident for purposes of enjoying the benefits of the proposed treaty. This rule could disqualify the U.S.-incorporated companies doing business in China that are considered to be managed in, and therefore, residents of, other Chinese treaty partners, from the reductions in Chinese tax provided by the proposed treaty. Such companies could, however, be entitled to the Chinese tax benefits granted by the other agreement. This rule is not contained in the U.S. model or in recent U.S. income tax treaties.

Article 5. (Permanent establishment)

The proposed treaty contains a definition of the term "permanent establishment" that, with certain exceptions, follows the pattern of other recent U.S. income tax treaties, the U.S. model and the OECD model. Certain aspects of the definition are modeled after the permanent establishment definition of the United Nations model treaty.

The permanent establishment concept is one of the basic devices used in income tax treaties to avoid double taxation. Generally, an enterprise that is a resident of one country is not taxable by the other country on its business profits unless those profits are attributable to a permanent establishment of the resident in the other country. In addition, the permanent establishment concept is used to determine whether the reduced rates of, or exemptions from, tax provided for dividends, interest, and royalties will apply, or whether those amounts will be taxed as business profits. U.S. taxation of business profits is discussed under Article 7.

In general, under the proposed treaty, a permanent establishment is a fixed place of business through which a resident of one country engages in business in the other country. A permanent establishment includes a place of management, a branch, an office, a factory, a workshop, and a mine, an oil or gas well, a quarry, or other place of extraction of natural resources.

A permanent establishment also includes any building site, construction, assembly, or installation project, or supervisory activities performed in connection therewith, if the site, project, or activities continue for a period of more than six months. This provision is modeled upon the corresponding provision of the United Nations model treaty. The U.S. model treaty contains a somewhat similar provision. However, the U.S. model provision utilizes a twelve-month rule rather than a six-month rule. Also, the U.S. model treaty does not treat supervisory activities performed in connection with a building site, etc., by themselves, as a permanent establishment.

An installation, drilling rig, or ship used for the exploration or exploitation of natural resources will constitute a permanent establishment if it is used for those purposes in one of the countries (as they are defined in the treaty) for a period of more than three months. This three-month rule differs from the twelve-month rule of the U.S. model treaty.

The furnishing of services by an enterprise, including consultancy services, through employees or other personnel engaged by the enterprise for that purpose will give rise to a permanent establishment if the activities continued (for the same or a connected project) within a country for a period or periods aggregating more than six months within any twelve-month period. This provision, which does not require a fixed place of business for there to be a permanent establishment, is similar to one included in the United Nations model treaty. It is not found in the U.S. model treaty but has been included, in roughly similar form, in some recent U.S. income tax treaties with developing countries (e.g., Jamaica and the Philippines).

The general permanent establishment rule is modified to provide that a fixed place of business that is used for any of a number of specified activities will not constitute a permanent establishment. These activities include the use of facilities solely for storing, displaying, or delivering merchandise belonging to the enterprise and the maintenance of a stock of goods belonging to the enterprise solely for storage, display, or delivery, or solely for processing by another enterprise. These activities also include the maintenance of a fixed place of business solely for the purchase of goods or merchandise or for the collection of information, or solely for the purpose of carrying on, for the enterprise, any other preparatory or auxiliary activity. Under the proposed treaty, a fixed place of business used solely for any combination of the above-mentioned activities will not constitute a permanent establishment provided that the overall activity of the fixed place of business is of a preparatory or auxiliary character.

If a person has, and habitually exercises, the authority to conclude contracts in a country on behalf of an enterprise of the other country, then the enterprise will be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the first country. This rule does not apply where the contracting authority is limited to those activities, such as storage, display, or delivery of merchandise (described above), that are excluded from the definition of permanent establishment. The proposed treaty contains the usual provision that the agency rule will not apply if the agent is a broker, general commission agent, or other agent of independent status acting in the ordinary course of its business. However, the proposed treaty adds the limitation that, when the activities of an agent are devoted wholly or almost wholly on behalf of one enterprise, the agent will not be considered an independent agent if the transactions between it and that enterprise were not made under arm's-length conditions.

The determination whether a company of one country has a permanent establishment in the other country is to be made without regard to the fact that the company may be related to a company that is a resident of the other country or to a company that engages in business in that other country. Any such relationship is thus not relevant; only the activities of the company being tested are relevant.

Article 6. (Income from real property)

This article covers income from real property. The rules governing gains from the sale of real property are in Article 12.

Under the proposed treaty, income derived by a resident of one country from real property situated in the other country may be taxed in the country where the real property is located.

The term "real property" has the meaning which it has under the law of the country in which the property in question is situated. The term in any case includes property accessory to real property, livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry, rights to which the provisions of general law respecting landed property apply, usufruct of real property, and rights to variable or fixed payments as consideration for the working of, or the right to work, mineral deposits, sources and other natural resources. Thus, income from real property will include royalties and other payments in respect of the exploitation of natural resources (e.g., oil). It does not include interest on loans secured by real property. Ships and aircraft are not real property.

The source country may tax income derived from the direct use, letting, or use in any other form of real property. These rules allowing source country taxation also apply to the income from real property of an enterprise and to income from real property used for the performance of independent personal services.

The U.S. model treaty and certain other U.S. income tax treaties permit a resident of one country to elect to be taxed on a net basis by the other country on income from real property in that other country. The proposed treaty does not contain that election, but such an election is provided for U.S. real property income under the Code (secs. 871(d) and 882(d)).

Article 7. (Business profits)

U.S. Code rules

U.S. law distinguishes between the business income and the investment income of a nonresident alien or foreign corporation. A nonresident alien or foreign corporation is subject to a flat 30 percent rate (or lower treaty rate) of tax on certain U.S. source income if that income is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States. The regular individual or corporate rates apply to income (from any source) which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

The taxation of income as business or investment income varies depending upon whether the income is U.S. or foreign. In general, U.S. source periodic income (such as interest, dividends, rents, and wages), and U.S. source capital gains are effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States only if the asset generating the income is used in or held for use in the conduct of the trade or business, or if the activities of the trade or businesses were a material factor in the realization of the income. All other U.S. source income of a person engaged in a trade or business in the United States is treated as effectively connected income.

Foreign source income is effectively connected income only if the foreign person has an office or other fixed place of business in the United States and the income is attributable to that place of business. Only three types of foreign source income can be effectively connected income: rents and royalties derived from the active conduct of a licensing business; dividends, interest, or gain from stock or debt derived in the active conduct of a banking, financing or similar business in the United States; and certain sales income attributable to a U.S. sales office.

Except in the case of a dealer, trading in stocks, securities, or commodities in the United States for one's own account does not constitute a trade or business in the United States and accordingly income from those activities is not taxed by the United States as business income. This concept includes trading through a U.S.-based employee, a resident broker, commission agent, custodian, or other agent or trading by a foreign person physically present in the United State.

Proposed treaty rules

Under the proposed treaty, business profits of an enterprise of one country are taxable in the other country only to the extent they are attributable to a permanent establishment in the other country through which the enterprise carries on business. This is one of the basic limitations on a country's right to tax income of a resident of the other country.

The taxation of business profits under the proposed treaty differs from U.S. rules for taxing business profits primarily by requiring more than merely being engaged in a trade or business before a country can tax business profits, and by substituting an "attributable to" standard for the Code's "effectively connected" standard. Under the Code, all that is necessary for effectively connected business profits to be taxed is that a trade or business be carried on in the United States. Under the proposed treaty, on the other hand, some level of fixed place of business must be present and the business profits must be attributable to that fixed place of business.

Unlike many U.S. treaties and the U.S. model treaty, the proposed treaty does not define the term "business profits." To the extent not dealt with in other articles, the term either will be defined under the law of the country applying the treaty or by mutual agreement of the two countries. The proposed treaty would thus leave it to Chinese law, for example, to determine whether an item of income not dealt with elsewhere in the treaty that is earned by a U.S. company through a permanent establishment in China constitutes business profits and, therefore, is taxable by China under this treaty article.

The business profits of a permanent establishment are determined on an arm's-length basis. Thus, there is to be attributed to a permanent establishment the business profits that would reasonably be expected to have been derived by it if it were a distinct and independent entity engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing wholly independently with the enterprise of which it is a permanent establishment. For example, this arm's-length rule applies to transactions between a permanent establishment and an office of the resident enterprise located in a third-country. Amounts may be attributed whether they are from sources within or without the country in which the permanent establishment is located.

In computing taxable business profits, deductions generally are allowed for expenses, wherever incurred, that are incurred for the purposes of the permanent establishment. These deductions include executive and general administrative expenses. However, no deduction will be allowed for amounts paid (other than in reimbursement of actual expenses) by the permanent establishment to the head office of the enterprise or to any of its other offices, by way of royalties or other similar payments or by way of interest on money lent to the permanent establishment. Similarly, no account will be taken, in the determination of the profits of a permanent establishment, for amounts charged (otherwise than towards reimbursement of actual expenses) by the permanent establishment to the head office of the enterprise or to any of its other offices, by way of royalties or other similar payments or by way of interest on money lent to the head office of the enterprise or to any of its other offices. These rules limiting deductions, which are not found in the U.S. or OECD model treaty, are patterned after rules contained in the United Nations model treaty. Similar rules are contained in certain other U.S. income tax treaties with developing countries. The same result would, in general, be reached under the U.S. model treaty and other U.S. tax treaties not containing such specific language.

The treaty expressly reserves to each country the right to determine taxable profits in a specific industry on a deemed basis where the country's internal law provides for the determination of taxable profits in that industry on a deemed basis and the result is in accordance with the principles of this article. The Committee understands that it is generally China's practice to deem as taxable profits 10 percent of the Chinese source gross receipts of U.S. subcontractors from offshore oil operations. The Committee also understands that China deems as taxable profits 10 percent of the Chinese source gross receipts with respect to outgoing traffic received by operators of ships and aircraft in international traffic. In both cases, a 50-percent tax is imposed on the deemed profits. Thus, the treaty, for example, will permit China to collect a tax from a U.S. oil driller equal to five percent of the gross receipts, if any, attributable to a drilling rig of the driller that is situated in, and remains for more than three months in, the South China Sea, provided this tax is in accordance with the principles of this article. Under the agreement currently in force between the United States and China governing the taxation of shipping and aircraft income, income earned by a U.S. enterprise from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic is exempt from Chinese tax. The U.S. model treaty does not reserve to a country the right to determine profits on a deemed basis.

Business profits will not be attributed to a permanent establishment merely by reason of the purchase of merchandise by the permanent establishment for the account of the enterprise. Thus, where a permanent establishment purchases goods for its head office, the business profits attributed to the permanent establishment with respect to its other activities will not be increased by a profit element in its purchasing activities. The amount of profits attributable to a permanent establishment must be determined by the same method each year unless there is good and sufficient reason to change the method.

Where business profits include items of income that are dealt with separately in other articles of the treaty, those other articles, and not this business profits article, generally will govern the treatment of those items of income. Thus, for example, dividends generally are taxed under the provisions of Article 9 and not as business profits.

Article 8. (Related persons)

The proposed treaty, like most other U.S. tax treaties, contains an arm's-length pricing provision similar to section 482 of the Code that recognizes the right of each country to make an allocation of income to that country in the case of transactions between related enterprises, if an allocation is necessary to reflect the conditions and arrangements that would have been made between independent enterprises.

For purposes of the proposed treaty an enterprise of one country is related to an enterprise of the other country if one of the enterprises participates directly or indirectly in the management, control, or capital of the other enterprise. The enterprises are also related if the same persons participate directly or indirectly in the management, control, or capital of both enterprises.

When a redetermination of tax liability has been properly made by one country, the other country will make an appropriate adjustment to the amount of tax paid in that country on the redetermined income. In making that adjustment, due regard is to be paid to other provisions of the treaty and the competent authorities of the two countries will consult with each other if necessary.

The proposed treaty omits the usual provision stating that this article is not intended to limit any law in either country which permits the distribution, apportionment, or allocation of income, deductions, credits, or allowances between non-independent persons when such law is necessary to prevent evasion of taxes or to reflect clearly the income of those persons. That provision makes it clear that the United States retains the right to apply its inter-company pricing rules (Code sec. 482) and its rules relating to the allocation of deductions (Code secs. 861, 862, and 863, and Treas. Reg. sec. 1.861-8). Notwithstanding the omission of this provision, the Committee understands that the United States retains the right under the proposed treaty to apply its inter-company pricing and deduction allocation rules, and recommends approval of the treaty on that basis.

Article 9. (Dividends)

The United States imposes a 30-percent withholding tax on the gross amount of U.S. source dividends paid to nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations. The 30-percent tax does not apply if the foreign recipient is engaged in a trade or business in the United States and the dividends are effectively connected with that trade or business. In such a case, the foreign recipient is subject to U.S. tax like a U.S. person at the standard graduated rates, on a net basis. U.S. source dividends, for purposes of the 30-percent tax, are dividends paid by a U.S. corporation (other than an "80/20 company" described in Code sec. 861(a)(2)(A)). Also treated as U.S. source dividends for this purpose are certain dividends paid by a foreign corporation, if at least 50 percent of the gross income of the foreign corporation, in the prior three-year period, was effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business of that foreign corporation. The tax imposed on the latter dividends is often referred to as the "second tier" withholding tax.

Under the proposed treaty, each country may tax dividends paid by its resident companies but the tax is generally limited to 10 percent of the gross amount of the dividends if the recipient of the dividends is a resident of the other country and is the beneficial owner of the dividends. This rule does not restrict the right of a country to tax the profits out of which dividends are paid. Under the U.S. model, source country tax is limited to five percent on dividends paid to "direct" investors (i.e., companies which own at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the company paying the dividends) and to 15 percent on dividends paid to "portfolio" investors (i.e., investors other than direct investors).

Like the U.S. model treaty, the proposed treaty defines "dividends" as income from shares or other rights which participate in profits and which are not debt claims. Dividends also include income from other corporate rights which is subjected to the same tax treatment by the country in which the distributing corporation is resident as income from shares. Under this provision, each country may apply its rules for determining when a payment by a resident company is on a debt obligation or an equity interest.

The treaty limitation on source country dividend tax will not apply if the beneficial owner of the dividend has a permanent establishment (or fixed base in the case of an individual performing independent personal services) in the source country and the shareholding or other corporate right with respect to which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with the permanent establishment (or fixed base). Dividends paid on shareholdings or other corporate rights effectively connected with a permanent establishment are to be taxed as business profits (Article 7). Dividends paid on shareholdings or other corporate rights effectively connected with a fixed base are to be taxed as income from independent personal services (Article 13).

The proposed treaty limits the right of a country to tax dividends paid by a company resident in the other country that derives profits or income in the first country. The country in which the company is not resident may tax dividends paid by the company only if they are paid to a resident of that country or if the shareholding or other corporate rights with respect to which the dividends are paid are effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base maintained in that country. Unlike the U.S. model treaty, the proposed treaty does not allow one country to tax dividends paid by a resident company of the other country on the basis that the dividends are from gross income of its permanent establishment in the first country constituting 50 percent or more of its worldwide income. The effect of this departure from the U.S. model is to waive the United States' second tier witholding tax on dividends paid by Chinese companies earning 50 percent or more of their income from U.S. business. This provision follows the OECD and United Nations model treaties.

The proposed treaty also exempts the undistributed profits of a company resident in one country that derives profits or income in the other country from the second country's tax on undistributed profits. The exemption applies even if the undistributed profits consist wholly or partly of profits or income arising in the second country. The U.S. model treaty does not include the specific exemption; the OECD and United Nations model treaties do.

Article 10. (Interest)

In general, the United States imposes a 30-percent tax on U.S. source interest paid to foreign persons under the same rules that apply to dividends. However, the Tax Reform Act of 1984 repealed the tax for interest paid on certain portfolio indebtedness to nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations. (This change was effective for interest paid on portfolio indebtedness issued after July 18, 1984, the date of enactment of the 1984 Act.) U.S. source interest, for purposes of the 30-percent tax, generally is interest on debt obligations of U.S. persons, but not interest on deposits in banks. U.S. source interest for this purpose also includes interest paid by a foreign corporation if at least 50 percent of the gross income of the foreign corporation, in the prior three-year period, was effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business of that corporation. The tax imposed on the latter interest is often referred to as the "second tier" withholding tax.

Under the proposed treaty, each country may tax interest arising within that country, but the tax is generally limited to 10 percent of the gross amount of the interest if its recipient is a resident of the other country and is the beneficial owner of the interest. This limitation on source country tax does not apply if the recipient of the interest is a nominee for a nonresident (see Part III for a discussion of this rule). (The protocol provides additional rules intended to prevent treaty shopping.) The 10-percent limitation contrasts with the U.S. model position, not generally achieved, that interest generally should be exempt from tax at source.

In certain cases, interest will be exempt from tax at source under the proposed treaty. These are where the interest is derived by the government of the other country, or a political subdivision or local authority in that other country; the interest is derived by the Central Bank of the other country; the interest is derived by any financial institution wholly owned by the government of the other country; or the interest is derived by any resident of the other country with respect to debt-claims indirectly financed by any of the entities just described. The effect of this treatment will be to exempt certain interest paid to Chinese recipients from U.S. tax without a general reciprocal exemption.

Neither the 10 percent limitation nor the exemptions will apply if the beneficial owner of the interest has a permanent establishment or fixed base in the source country and the debt-claim is effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. In the event, the interest will be taxed as business profits (Article 7) or income from the performance of independent personal services (Article 13).

The proposed treaty provides source rules for interest. Interest generally will be considered to arise within a country if the payor is the government of that country, including political subdivisions and local authorities, or a resident of that country. Generally, this rule is consistent with U.S. source rules which provide that interest (other than certain interest paid by foreign corporation) is sourced in the country in which the payor is resident. The treaty also provides, however, that if interest is borne by a permanent establishment (or fixed base) that the payor has in one of the countries and the indebtedness was incurred with respect to that permanent establishment (or fixed base), the then interest will be sourced in that country, regardless of the residence of the payor.

These source rules effectively prohibit one country from taxing interest paid by a resident company of the other country on the basis that the interest is from profits of its permanent establishment in the first country constituting 50 percent or more of its worldwide income. The effect of this departure from the U.S. model is to waive the United States' second tier withholding tax on interest paid by foreign companies earning 50 percent or more of their income from U.S. business.

The proposed treaty addresses the issue of non-arm's-length interest charges between related parties (or parties having an otherwise special relationship) by holding that the amount of interest for purposes of applying this article will be the amount of arm's-length interest. Any amount of interest paid in excess of the arm's-length interest, for whatever reason, will be taxable according to the laws of each country, taking into account the other provisions of the proposed treaty. For example, excess interest paid to a parent corporation may be treated as a dividend under local law and thus be entitled to the benefits of Article 9 of the proposed treaty.

The proposed treaty defines "interest" as income from debt-claims of every kind, whether or not secured and whether or not carrying a right to participate in profits. In particular, it includes income from government securities and from bonds or debentures, including premiums or prizes attaching to bonds or debentures.

Article 11. (Royalties)

Under the same system that applies to dividends and interest, the United States imposes a 30-percent tax on U.S. source royalties paid to foreign persons. Royalties are from U.S. sources if they are for the use of property located in the United States. U.S. source royalties include royalties for the use of or the right to use intangibles in the United States. Such royalties include motion picture royalties.

Under the proposed treaty. each country may tax royalties arising within that country, but the tax is generally limited to 10 percent of the gross amount of the royalties if their recipient is a resident of the other country and is the beneficial owner of the royalties. In the case of royalties paid for the rental of industrial, commercial, or scientific equipment, the proposed protocol provides that source country tax may be imposed on 70 percent of the gross amount of the royalties only. This protocol provision effectively limits to seven percent the maximum source country tax on these types of royalties. The U.S. model treaty exempts royalties from tax at source.

The 10- and seven-percent tax limitations will not apply if the recipient of the royalty is a nominee for a nonresident (see introductory material for a discussion of this rule). They also will not apply if the recipient is an enterprise with a permanent establishment in the source country or an individual performing personal services in an independent capacity through a fixed base in the source country, and the property giving rise to the royalty is effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. In that event, the royalties will be taxed as business profits (Article 7) or as income from the performance of independent personal services (Article 13).

The proposed treaty defines "royalties" as payments of any kind received as consideration for the use of, or the right to use, any copyright of literary, artistic, or scientific work including cinematographic films, films or tapes used for radio or television broadcasting, any patent, technical know-how, trade mark, design or model, plan, secret formula, or process. Royalties are also payments of any kind received as consideration for the use of or the right to use industrial, commercial, or scientific equipment, or for information concerning such equipment. The treaty's royalty definition follows that the OECD and United Nations models.

The proposed treaty provides special source rules for royalties that differ somewhat from the U.S. source rules for royalties. Generally, as indicated above, under U.S. tax rules (Code secs. 861-62), royalty income is sourced where the property or right is being used. Under the proposed treaty, if a royalty is paid by the government of one of the countries, including political subdivisions and local authorities, or by a resident of one of the countries, then the royalty generally will be sourced in the country of residence of the payor. However, if the payor has a permanent establishment or fixed base in one of the countries in connection with which the obligation to pay the royalty was incurred, and if the royalty is borne by that permanent establishment or fixed base, then the royalty arises in the country in which the permanent establishment or fixed base is situated. If these rules do not result in the sourcing of the royalty in the United States or China, and if the royalty relates to the use of or the right to use the right or property in one of the two countries, then the royalty is treated as arising in that country.

The treaty source rules for royalties derive primarily from notes accompanying the United Nations model treaty. The U.S.-New Zealand income tax treaty, ratified in 1983, contains similar source rules for royalties.

The proposed protocol addresses the issue of non-arm's-length royalties between related parties (or parties having an otherwise special relationship) by holding that the amount of royalties for purposes of applying this article will be the amount of arm's-length royalties. Any amount of royalties paid in excess of the arm's-length royalty will be taxable according to the laws of each country, taking into account the other provisions of the proposed treaty. For example, excess royalties paid to a parent corporation may be treated as a dividend under local law and thus be entitled to the benefits of Article 9 of the proposed treaty.

Article 12. (Gains)

Generally, gain realized by a nonresident alien or a foreign corporation from the sale of a capital asset is not subject to U.S. tax unless the gain is effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business or, in the case of a nonresident alien, he or she is physically present in the United States for at least 183 days in the taxable year. However, under the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980, as amended ("FIRPTA"), a nonresident alien or foreign corporation is taxed by the United States on gain from the sale of a U.S. real property interest as if the gain were effectively connected with a trade or business conducted in the United States. "U.S. real property interest" include interests in certain corporations holding U.S. real property.

Under the proposed treaty, gains from the disposition of movable (personal) property that forms part of the business property of a permanent establishment that an enterprise of one country has or had in the other country, or gains from the alienation of movable (personal) property pertaining to a fixed base available to a resident of one country in the other country for the purpose of performing independent personal services, including gains from the disposition of such a permanent establishment (alone or together with the whole enterprise) or of such a fixed base, may be taxed in that other country.

Gains derived by a resident of one country from, the disposition of ships or aircraft operated in international traffic, and from the disposition of movable (personal) property pertaining to the operation of such ships or aircraft are taxable only in that country.

Gains from the disposition of real property may be taxed in the country where the real property is situated. Real property for this purpose is defined as it is under the article governing taxation of income from real property (Article 6). In addition, gains frm the dispositon of shares of the capital stock of a company whose property consists (directly or indirectly) principally of real property situated in a country may be taxed in the situs country. Unlike the U.S., OECD, and United Nations model treaties, the proposed treaty provides that gains arising in one country from the disposition by a resident of the other country of any property not referred to elsewhere in the gains article may be taxed in the first country. Taken together, these rules are intended to allow the United States to tax any transaction of a Chinese resident otherwise taxable under FIRPTA. While the treaty definition of real property under Article 6 may not encompass all "U.S. real property interests" whose disposition is taxable under FIRPTA, assigning the source country a right to tax any property gains not referred to elsewhere in the article safeguards the U.S. tax. The latter rule is understood to allow the United States to tax, among other real property gains, gains from the disposition of interests in partnerships, trusts, and estates to the extent attributable to U.S. real property interests, since such gains are considered under FIRPTA to be deried from the disposition in the United States of such property. (See Code sec. 897(g).)

Gains from the disposition of shares (other than shares in a company whose property is principally real property, as discussed above) representing a 25-percent (or greater) participation in a company resident in a country may be taxed in that country. This provision is taken from the United Nations model treaty; neither the U.S. model nor the OECD model includes it.

Article 13. (Independent personal services)

The United States taxes the income of a nonresident alien at the regular graduated rates if the income is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by the individual. (See discussion of U.S. taxation of business profits under Article 7.) The performance of personal services within the United States can be a trade or business within the United States (Code sec. 864(b)).

The proposed treaty limits the right of a country to tax income from the performance of personal services by a resident of the other country. Under the proposed treaty, income from the performance of independent personal services is treated separately from salaries, wages, and similar remuneration received by employees.

Under the proposed treaty, income derived by an individual resident in one country from professional services or other activities of an independent character may be taxed in the other country in two cases only. The nonresident country may tax the income if the individual has a fixed base regularly available to him or her in the nonresident country for the purpose of performing his or her activities. Only that portion of the individual's income attributable to the fixed base may be taxed in the nonresident country. The nonresident country also may tax the individual's independent personal services income if the individual is present in the nonresident country for more than 183 days during the calendar year concerned. In that case, only that portion of the individual's income derived in the nonresident country while the individual was present there may be taxed in the nonresident country.

This partial exemption from tax parallels that provided for independent personal services income under the United Nations model treaty. The U.S. model treaty provides a broader tax exemption for such income: the U.S. model does not contain a 183-day rule; it allows taxation in the nonresident country only on the basis of a fixed base regularly available there to the individaul performing the independent personal services.

The term "professional services" includes independent scientific, literary, artistic, educational, and teaching activities, as well as the independent activities of physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, dentists, and acccountants.

Article 14. (Dependent personal services)

Under the Code, the income of a nonresident alien from the performance of personal services in the United States is not taxed if the individual is not in the United States for at least 90 days during a taxable year, the compensation does not exceed $3,000, and the services are performed as an employee of a foreign person not engaged in a trade or business in the United States or they are performed for a foreign office or place of business of a U.S. person.

Under the proposed treaty, income from services performed as an employee in one country (the source country) by a resident of the other country will be taxable only in the residence country if three requirements are met: (1) the recipient is present in the source country for fewer than 184 days during the calendar year concerned; (2) the employer of the recipient is not a resident of the source country; and (33) the compensation is not borne by a permanent establishment or fixed base of the employer in th source country. Under the U.S. model, the fewer-than-184-day-test is computed on the basis of the tax year, not on the basis of the calendar year. However, because most individual U.S. taxpayers use the calendar year as their tax year, this dpeparture from the U.S. model is of little significance.

This article is modified in some respects for directors' fees (Article 15), pensions (article 17), compensation of government employees (Article 18), remuneration for teaching, lectures, and research (Article 19), and income of students, business apprentices, and trainees (Article 20). In addition, income derived as an entertainer or athlete is taxed in accordance with special rules (Article 16).

Article 15. (Directors' fees)

Under the proposed treaty, directors' fees and similar payments derived by a resident of one country in his or her capacity as a member of the board of directors of a company that is a resident of the other country may be taxed in that other country.

This rule for directors' fees follows the OECD model. It differs from the rule of the U.S. model treaty. The U.S. model treats directors' fees as personal services income or distributed profits, primary taxing jurisdiction over which generally belongs to the country where the recipient resides.

Article 16. (Entertainers and atheletes)

The proposed treaty contains a separate set of rules that apply to the taxation of income earned by entertainers (such as theater, motion picture, radio, or television "artistes" or musicians) and athletes. These rules apply notwithstanding the other provisions dealing with the taxation of income from personal services (Articles 13 adnd 14), and are intended, in part, to prevent entertainers and athletes from using the treaty to avoid paying any tax on their income earned in one of the countries.

Under the proposed treaty, income derived by entertainers and athletes resident in one country from their personal activities as such exercised in the other country generally may be taxed in that other country. However, such income will be exempt from tax in the source country if the personal activities are exercised in accordance with a special program for cultural exchange agreed upon by the governments of the United States and China. This exemption from source country taxation differs from that provided by the U.S. model treaty and most U.S. income tax treaties for entertainers' and athletes' income. Under the U.S. model treaty, entertainers' and athletes' income from their activities as such is exempt from tax in the source country if the gross receipts from those activities derived in the source country are $20,000 or less for the year. (The dollar amount is lower in most U.S. income tax treaties). There is no separate rule in the U.S. model for income derived in connection with participation in a cultural exchange program.

The Committee is informed that U.S. entertainers and athletes presently perform in China (and Chinese entertainers and athletes presently perform in the United States) only in accordance with cultural exchange programs approved by the two countries. So long as this practice continues, the proposed treaty rule, as a practical matter, will exempt entertainers' and athletes' income from tax at source.

The proposed treaty provides that where income in respect of personal activities performed by an entertainer or athlete in his capacity as such accrues not to the entertainer or athlete, but to another person, that income may be taxed by the country in which the activities are exercised. (This provision applies notwithstanding the business profits and personal services articles (Articles 7, 13 and 14). This provision is intended to prevent highly paid performers and athletes from avoiding tax in the country in which they perform by routing the compensation for their services through a third person such as a personal holding company or a trust located in a country that would not tax the income. The provision does not apply to income otherwise exempt from source country taxation under this article (i.e., income derived by an entertainer or athlete in connection with participation in a special program for cultural exchange). The corresponding provision of the U.S. model treaty, by contrast, does apply to income that would otherwise be exempt from source country taxation under this article.

Article 17. (Pensions)

Under the proposed treaty, pensions and other similar remuneration paid to a resident of either country in consideration of past employment generally are subject to tax only in the recipient's country of residence.

The above rule does not apply to pension paid to a resident of one country attributable to services performed for governmental entities of the other unless the recipient is also a national of the first country (see Article 18). The general rule also does not apply to pensions and other payments from the government or a political subdivision or local authority of a country under its social security system or public welfare plan; such pensions and other payments may be taxed in that country only. For example, only the United States may tax U.S. social security payments to U.S. persons residing in China. The article thus safeguards the Untied States' right under the Social Security Amendments of 1983 to tax a portion of U.S. social security benefits received by nonresident individuals, while protecting any such individuals residing in China from double taxation.

The corresponding article of the U.S. model treaty contains rules for annuities, alimony payments, and child support payments that the proposed treaty does not contain. Under the U.S. model treaty, annuities and alimony payments (and other maintenance payments other than child support payments) are taxable only by the country of residence of the recipient, while child support payments are taxable only by the country of the payor. The child support rule in the U.S. model is not subject to the saving clause. Under the proposed treaty, annuities, alimony payments, and child support payments are covered under Article 21: under that aritcle, they may be taxed in both the country of residence of the recipient and the country where they arise.

Article 18. (Government service)

The proposed treaty generally exempts the wages of employees of one of the countries from tax in the other country.

Under the proposed treaty, remuneration, other than a pension, paid by the government of a country or one of the country's political subdivisions or local authorities to an individual for services rendered to the government (or subdivision or authority) generally will be taxable in that country only. However, such remuneration will be taxable only in the other country (the country not the payor) if the services are rendered in that other country and the individual is a resident of that other country who either (1) is a national of that country or (2) did not become a resident of that country solely for the purpose of rendering the services. Thus, for example, China would not tax the compensation of a U.S. national and resident who is in China to perform services for the U.S. Government. The United States would not tax the compensation of a Chinese national and resident who performs services for the U.S. Government in China.

Any pension paid by, or out of funds created by, the government of a country or one of the country's political subdivisions or local authorities to an individual for services rendered to the government (or subdivision or authority) generally will be taxable only in that country. However, such a pension will be taxable only in the other country if the individual is both a resident and a national of that other country.

The above rules follow those of the OECD and United Nations model treaties. In the situations described above, the U.S. model treaty assigns exclusive taxing jurisdiction to the paying country, but only in the case of payments to one of its citizens.

If the government of a country or one of the country's political subdivisions or local authorities is carrying on a business (as opposed to functions of a governmental nature), the provisions of Articles 14, 15, 16, and 17 will apply to remuneration and pensions for services rendered in connection with that business.

The saving clause (discussed under the proposed protocol below) overrides this article in the case of U.S. citizens, but not in the case of U.S. residents who are not U.S. citizens.

Article 19. (Teachers and researchers)

An individual temporarily present in one country for the primary purpose of teaching, giving lectures, or conducting research at a university, college, school, or other accredited educational institution or scientific research institution in that country will be exempt from tax in that country for three years on remuneration for the teaching, lecturing, or research if he or she is a resident of the other country or was such a resident immediately before visiting the host country. Under this provision, a U.S. professor, for example, who visits China for nine months for the primary purpose of teaching at a Chinese university will be exempt from Chinese tax on remuneration the professor receives for the teaching. However, the professor may be taxed by China under the 183-day-presence-rule of Article 13 on any other independent personal services income (e.g., income from consulting) that the professor may earn while in China.

A number of U.S. income tax treaties provide a similar exemption for visiting teachers and researchers. However, the exemption provided in other U.S. treaties typically is for two years, not three. Unlike the proposed treaty, some U.S. treaties expressly limit the exemption, in the case of income from research, to income from research undertaken in the public interest rather than primarily for private benefit. Treasury's Technical Explanation states that this limitation is understood to apply in this treaty as well.

The U.S., OECD, and United Nations model treaties do not contain a special exemption for visiting teachers and researchers.

Article 20. (Students, apprentices, and trainees)

A student, business apprentice, or trainee who is present in one of the countries solely for the purrpose of his or her education or training or obtaining special technical experience will be exempt from tax in that country with respect to certain income if he or she is a resident of the other country, or was such a resident immediately before visiting the host country. The host country tax exemption applies to (1) payments received from abroad for the purpose of the individual's maintenance, education, study, research, or training; (2) grants and awards from governmental, scientfic, educational, or other tax-exempt organizations, and (3) $5,000 per taxable year of income from personal services performed in the host country. The exemption extends only for as long as is reasonably necessary to complete the education or training.

This exemption for visiting students, apprentices, and trainees is broader than that provided in the U.S. and OECD model treaties. Among other differences, the exemption in the model treaties applies only to the first of the three categories of income eligible for the exemption under the proposed treaty. The exemption provided in the proposed treaty is similar to that incorporated in some other U.S. income tax treaties with developing countries. It differs, however, from the exemption provided in most of these other treaties in not terminating after a fixed number years (typically five) and in applying to $5,000 per year of personal services income rather than $2,000 or $3,000.

Article 21. (Other income)

This article is a catch-all provision intended to cover items of income not specifically covered in other articles, and to assign the right to tax income from third countries to either the United States or China. Thus, it applies to income from third countries as well as to income from the United States and China.

As a general rule, items of income not otherwise dealt with in the proposed treaty that are derived by residents of either country will be taxable only in the country of residence. This rule, for example, gives the United States the sole right under the treaty to tax income sourced in a third country and paid to a resident of the United States. This article is subject to the saving clause (included in the proposed protocol) in the case of U.S. citizens, so U.S. citizens who are Chinese residents will continue to be taxable by the United States on their third-country income, with a foreign tax credit provided for income taxes paid to China.

The general rule just stated does not apply if the recipient of the income (other than income from real property (Article 6)) is a resident of one country and carries on business in the other country through a permanent establishment or a fixed base, and the right or property in respect of which the income is paid is effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. In such a case, the provisions of Article 7 (business profits) or Article 13 (independent personal services), as the case may be, will apply.

Moreover, notwithstanding either of the above two rules, if a resident of one country receives income not dealt with elsewhere in the treaty that arises in the other country, the income may be taxed in that other (source) country. A number of existing U.S. income tax treaties apply this rule, but it is not included in the U.S. and OECD model treaties, which generally give the sole right to tax "other income" to the country of residence.

This article is substantially identical to the corresponding article of the Untied Nations model treaty.

Article 22. (Relief from double taxation)

Background

One of the two principal purpses for entering into an income tax treaty is to limit double taxation of income earned by a resident of one of the countries that may be taxed by the other country. The United States seeks unilaterally to mitigate double taxation by generally allowing U.S. taxpayers to credit the foreign income taxes that they pay against the U.S. tax imposed on their foreign source income. A fundamental premise of the foreign tax credit is that it may not offset the U.S. tax on U.S. source income. Therefore, the foreign tax credit provisions contain a limitation that ensures that the foreign tax credit offsets U.S. tax on foreign source income only. This limitation is generally computed on a worldwide consolidated basis. Hence, all income taxes paid to all foreign countries are combined to offset U.S. taxes on all foreign income. Separate limitations on the foreign tax credit are provided for oil extraction income, DISC dividends, FSC dividends, taxable income of a FSC attributable to foreign trade income, and certain interest.

A U.S. corporation that owns 10 percent or more of the voting stock of a foreign corporation may credit foreign taxes paid or deemed paid by that foreign corporation on earnings that are received as dividends (deemed paid credit) (Code sec. 902). These deemed paid taxes are included in the U.S. shareholder's total foreign taxes paid for the year the dividend is received and go into the general pool of taxes to be credited.

Unilateral efforts to limit double taxation are imperfect. Because of differences in rules as to when a person may be taxed on business income, a business may be taxed by two countries as if it were engaged in business in both countries. Also, a corporation or individual may be treated as a resident of more than one country and be taxed on a worldwide basis by both.

Part of the double tax problem is dealt with in other articles that limit the right of a source country to tax income and that coordinate the source rules. This article provides further relief where both China and the United States will still tax the same item of income. China waives its overriding taxing jurisdiction to the extent that this article applies; the United States does the same with respect to U.S. residents who are not U.S. citizens.

The proposed treaty provides separate rules for relief from double taxation for the Untied States and China.

United States

Under the proposed treaty, the United States will allow a foreign tax credit to a U.S. resident or U.S. citizen for income tax paid to China by or on behalf of the U.S. resident or citizen. The proposed treaty further provides that the United States will allow a deemed paid credit to a U.S. corporate shareholder of a Chinese company receiving a dividend from the Chinese company if the U.S. corporate shareholder owns 10 percent or more of the voting rights in the Chinese company. This credit will be allowed for the income tax paid to China, by or on behalf of the distributing Chinese company, on the profits out of which the dividends are paid. Both the regular and deemed paid foreign tax credits are to be determined in accordance with the provisions of U.S. law.

The proposed treaty provides that all Chinese taxes covered by the treaty (Article 2) are considered income taxes for purposes of the U.S. foreign tax credit. Accordingly, all such Chinese taxes will be eligible for the U.S. foreign tax credit under the proposed treaty. These taxes probably would be creditable in the absence of the proposed treaty under U.S. Treasury Department regulations. The Internal Revenue Service has ruled favorably on the creditability of the individual income tax, the income tax concerning foreign enterprises, and the local income tax in private letter rulings issued under an earlier version of the Treasury regulations. The Service has not ruled on the creditability of the income tax on joint ventures.

The proposed treaty provision governing the U.S. foreign tax credit is similar to that found in the U.S. model treaty and in many U.S. income tax treaties.

China

The proposed treaty provides that China is to credit against the Chinese tax imposed on a Chinese resident any U.S. income tax payable under the treaty on the Chinese resident's U.S. source income. The amount of the credit may not exceed the amount of the Chinese tax (computed in accordance with the tax laws and regulations of China) on the U.S. source income. The proposed treaty further provides that China is to allow a credit to a Chinese company receiving a dividend from a U.S. resident company whose shares are owned 10 percent or more by the Chinese company. The credit is to take into account the U.S. income tax payable by the distributing U.S. company on the profits out of which the dividends are paid. All U.S. taxes covered by the treaty (Article 2) are considered income taxes for purposes of the Chinese foreign tax credit.

Source rule

The double taxation article contains a special source rule. Income derived by a resident of one country that may be taxed in the other country under the proposed treaty is deemed to arise in that other country. This source rule is not expressly limited to the double tax relief article, as the corresponding source rule of the U.S. model is. The proposed treaty also omits the U.S. model provision stating that this source rule does not apply in determining foreign tax credits for foreign taxes paid by U.S. residents to third countries, although Treasury's Technical Explanation states that this limitation does apply. In accordance with the understanding expressed by the Committee, this special source rule will not prevent the United States from limiting the availability of a foreign tax credit pursuant to the provisions of section 904(g).

Article 23. (Nondiscrimination)

The proposed treaty contains a nondiscrimination article relating to the taxes covered by the treaty. It is similar to the nondiscrimination article in the U.S. model treaty and to nondiscrimination articles that have been embodied in other recent U.S. income tax treaties.

In general, under the proposed treaty, one country cannot discriminate by imposing other or more burdensome taxes (or requirements connected with taxes) on nationals of the other country than it would impose on its nationals in the same circumstances. Under both the proposed treaty and the U.S. model, this provision applies whether or not the nationals in question are residents of one or both of the countries. This rule of application is qualified in the U.S. model by the rule that a U.S. national residing outside the United States and a national of the U.S. treaty partner residing outside the United States are not in the same circumstances for U.S. tax purposes. The proposed treaty omits this qualifying language but the Committee does not intend the omission to imply a change of meaning from the U.S. model. Treasury's Technical Explanation is in accord with this view.

As indicated above (under Article 3), "nationals" are defined as individuals having the nationality of the United States or China and all legal persons, partnerships, and other bodies of persons deriving their status as such from the laws in force in the United States or China. This definition corresponds closely to that contained in the OECD and United Nations model treaties. Under the U.S. model treaty, by comparison, only U.S. citizens qualify as U.S. nationals for purposes of obtaining nondiscrimination benefits.

Under the proposed treaty, neither country may tax a permanent establishment of an enterprise of the other country less favorably than it taxes its own enterprise carrying on the same activities. Consistent with the U.S., OECD, and United Nations model treaties, however, a country is not obligated to grant residents of the other country any personal allowances, reliefs, or reductions for tax purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents.

Each country is required (subject to the arm's-length pricing rules of Articles 8 (related persons), 10(7) (interest), and 11(6) (royalties)) to allow its residents to deduct interest, royalties, and other disbursements paid by them to residents of the other country under the same conditions that it allows deductions for such amounts paid to residents of the same country as the payor. The term "other disbursements" is understood to include a reasonable allocation of executive and administrative expenses, research and development expenses, and other expenses incurred for the benefit of a gorup or related enterprises.

The rule of nondiscrimination also applies to corporations of one country that are owned in whole or in part by residents of the other country. Enterprises resident in one country, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one of more residents of the other country, will not be subjected in the first country to any taxation or any connected requirement that is other or more burdensome than the taxation and connected requirements that the first country imposes or may impose on its similar enterprises.

The nondiscrimination article does not override the right of the United States to tax foreign corporations on their dispositions of U.S. real property interests because the effect of the provisions imposing such tax is not discriminatory. The election to be treated as a U.S. corporation under Code section 897(i) precludes the possibility of discrimination.

The saving clause (see discussion of the protocol below) applies to this nondiscrimination article in the case of U.S. citizens. It does not apply in the case of U.S. residents who are not U.S. citizens.

Article 24. (Mutual agreement procedure)

The proposed treaty contains a mutual agreement provision that authorizes the competent authorities of the United States and China to consult together to attempt to alleviate individual cases of double taxation not in accordance with the proposed treaty. The application of this provision may result in waiver (otherwise mandated by the proposed treaty) of taxing jurisdiction by China and, in the case of U.S. residents who are not U.S. citizens, by the United States. The mutual agreement provision of the proposed treaty follows the standard provision of the U.S. model, with a few differences.

Under the proposed treaty, a person who considers that the actions of one or both of the countries will cause him or her to pay a tax not in accordance with the treaty may present his or her case to the competent authority of the country of which he or she is a resident. The person also may present his or her case to the competent authority of the country of which he or she is a national (but not a resident), but only if the case comes under the nondiscrimination article. The latter rule follows the United Nations model treaty; under the U.S. model treaty, a person may present his or her case to the country of which he or she is a national (but not a resident) without any restriction as to the treaty article under which the case arises.

A person must present his or her case to the competent authority within three years from the first notification of the action that will cause the person to pay tax not in accordance with the treaty. This three-year time limit is taken from the United Nations model; the U.S. model treaty does not impose a time limit on the presentation of a person's case.

Upon the timely presentation of a person's case, the competent authority will make a determination as to whether the objection appears justified. If the objection appears to the competent authority to be justified and if it is not itself able to arrive at a satisfactory solution, then the competent authority will endeavor to resolve the case by mutual agreement with the competent authority of the other country, with a view to the avoidance of taxation that is not in accordance with the treaty. This provision requires the waiver of the internal statute of limitations of either country so as to permit the issuance of a refund or credit notwithstanding that statute of limitations. However, the provision does not authorize the imposition of additional taxes after the statute of limitations has run.

The competent authorities of the countries are to endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the interpretation or application of the treaty. They may also consult together for the elimination of double taxation in cases not provided for in the treaty. Unlike the U.S. model treaty, the proposed treaty does not enumerate particular matters to which the competent authorities might agree. However, the Committee intends that, as under the U.S. model, the competent authorities be authorized to agree to the allocation of income, deductions, credits, or allowances, to the determination of the source of income, and to the common meaning of terms.

The proposed treaty authorizes the competent authorities to communicate with each other directly for purposes of reaching an agreement in the sense of this mutual agreement article. It also authorizes them to meet together for an oral exchange of opinions in order to facilitate reaching an agreement. These provisions make clear that it is not necessary to go through diplomatic channels in order to discuss problems arising in the application of the treaty. They also remove any doubt as to restrictions that might otherwise arise by reason of the confidentiality rules of the United States or China.

Article 25. (Exchange of information)

This article forms the basis for cooperation between the two countries in their attempts to deal with avoidance or evasion of their respective taxes and to obtain information so that they can properly administer the treaty. It follows the exchange of information article of the U.S. model treaty, with some significant modifications. It is also similar to the exchange of information articles found in the United Nations and OECD model treaties.

The proposed treaty provides for the exchange of information that is necessary to carry out the provisions of the proposed treaty or the provisions of the domestic laws of the two countries concerning taxes to which the treaty applies insofar as the taxation under those domestic laws is not contrary to the treaty. Following the United Nations model treaty rather than the U.S. model, the proposed treaty states that such exchange of information will be, in particular, for the prevention of fraud or evasion of the covered taxes.

The exchange of information under the proposed treaty is not restricted by Article 1; thus, third-country residents are covered. The U.S. model treaty provides for the exchange of inforamation regarding all taxes imposed by either country (whether or not otherwise covered by the treaty). The exchange of information provided for in the proposed treaty is more limited: the proposed treaty authorizes the exchange only of information regarding taxes generally covered by the treaty (Article 2).

Any information exchanged is to be treated as secret. Exchanged information may be disclosed only to persons or authorities (including courts and administrative bodies) involved in assessment, collection, or administration of, the enforcement or prosecution in respect of, or the determination of appeals in relation to, the taxes to which the treaty applies. Such persons or authorities can use the information for such purposes only. They may disclose the information in public court proceedings or in judicial decisions. Persons involved in the administration of taxes include legislative bodies involved in oversight of the administration of taxes, including their agents such as, for example, the U.S. General Accounting Office, with respect to such information as they consider necessary to carry out their oversight responsibilities.

The proposed treaty contains limitation on the obligations of the countries to supply information. A country is not required to carry out administrative measures at variance with the law and administrative practice of either country, or to supply information which is not obtainable under the laws or in the normal course of the administration of either country, or to supply information that would disclose any trade, business, industrial, commercial, or professional secret or trade process, or information the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy.

The U.S. model treaty requires that, upon an appropriate request for information, the requested country obtain the information to which the request relates in the same manner and to the same extent as if its tax were at issue. It also requires that, where specifically requested by the competent authority of one country, the competent authority of the other country provide the information in the form requested. The proposed treaty does not contain these requirements.

The U.S. model treaty also provides that each country will collect taxes for the other country to the extent necessary to insure that benefits of the treaty are not going to persons not entitled to those benefits. The proposed treaty does not contain such a collection provision.

Article 26. (Diplomatic agents and consular officers)

The proposed treaty contains the rule found in other U.S. tax treaties that its provisions are not to affect the privileges of diplomatic agents or consular officials under the general rules of international law or the provisions of special agreements. Accordingly, the treaty will not defeat the exemption from tax which a host country may grant to the salary of diplomatic officials of the other country. Because the saving clause does not apply to Chinese taxes at all, U.S. diplomats who are considered Chinese residents will not be subject to Chinese tax on their diplomatic salaries. Because the saving clause does not apply to U.S. taxes under this article in the case of U.S. residents (who are not U.S. citizens), Chinese diplomats who are considered U.S. residents similarly will not be subject to U.S. tax on their diplomatic salaries.

Article 27. (Entry into force)

The countries are to notify each other in writing, through diplomatic channels, upon the completion of their respective legal procedures to bring the proposed treaty into force. The proposed treaty and proposed protocol will enter into force on the 30th day after the latter of the notifications.

These entry-into-force rules differ from those of the U.S. model treaty which require the countries to exchange instruments of ratification as soon as possible and provide for entry into force upon that exchange.

The proposed treaty and protocol will be effective for income derived in taxable years beginning on or after the January 1st next following the date on which the treaty and protocol enter into force.

Article 28. (Termination)

This proposed treaty will remain in force indefinitely, but either country may terminate it by giving notice in writing through diplomatic channels on or before June 30th in any calendar year after five years from the date on which the treaty enters into force. If a termination occurs, it will be effective with respect to income derived during taxable years beginning on or after the January 1st of the year following that in which the notice of termination is given.

Protocol

At the signing of the proposed treaty on April 30, 1984, a proposed protocol modifying the proposed treaty also was signed. The protocol's provisions, which are discussed below, form an integral part of the proposed treaty.

Paragraph 1. (Scope)

The proposed protocol provides that the treaty does not restrict any tax benefits accorded by the internal laws of, or by an agreement between, the two countries. Thus, the treaty will apply only where it benefits taxpayers. This is a standard U.S. tax treaty provision.

Paragraph 2. (Saving clause)

The proposed protocol adds a "saving clause" to the proposed treaty. Under this clause, the United States reserves the right to tax its citizens, notwithstanding any provision of the treaty. By reason of the saving clause, the United States will continue to tax its citizens who are residents of China as if the treaty were not in force. Under the saving clause, the United States also reserves the right to tax its residents who are not U.S. citizens as if the treaty were not in force, except where this taxation would be inconsistent with certain provisions of the articles dealing with related persons (Article 8), pensions (Article 17), government service (Article 18), teachers and researchers (Article 19), students and trainees (Article 20), double taxation (Article 22), nondiscrimination (Article 23), mutual agreement procedures (Article 24), and diplomatic agents and consular officials (Article 26). For purposes of the treaty (and, thus, for purposes of the saving clause), "residents" include corporations and other entities as well as individuals (Article 4).

The saving clause contained in the proposed protocol differs in certain respects from that contained in the U.S. model treaty and those found in most recent U.S. income tax treaties. Under the U.S. model treaty, both countries generally reserve the right to tax their citizens and residents as if the treaty had not come into effect; under the proposed protocol, only the United States does. Under the U.S. model treaty, there are several exceptions to the rule that a country may tax its citizens notwithstanding any provision of the treaty. The principal exceptions involve the benefits conferred under the treaty with respect to pensions, the foreign tax credit, and nondiscrimination. Under the proposed protocol, the United States reserves the right to tax its citizens without exception. The U.S. model also contains certain exceptions to the saving clause for U.S. residents who are neither U.S. citizens nor have U.S. immigrant status (for example, an exception covering the benefits conferred by the students and trainees article). Similar exceptions are contained in the protocol, but they generally apply to all U.S. residents who are not U.S. citizens, even those with U.S. immigrant status. Under section 877 of the Code, a former U.S. citizen whose loss of citizenship had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of U.S. income, estate, or gift taxes will, in certain cases, be subject to tax for a period of 10 years following the loss of citizenship; the saving clause of the U.S. model specifically reserves the United States' right to tax former citizens. Although the saving clause provided in the proposed protocol does not contain such a provision, the Committee does not intend the treaty to impose any limitation on the United States' right to tax former citizens. This view is consistent with the Treasury Department's Technical Explanation of the proposed treaty.

Paragraph 3. (U.S. social security, personal holding company, and accumulated earnings taxes)

The proposed protocol provides that the United States generally may impose its social security, personal holding company, and acccumulated earnings taxes notwithstanding any provision of the treaty. However, in a manner similar to certain other U.S. tax treaties, the proposed protocol limits the right of the United States to impose its personal holding company and accumulated earnings taxes with respect to certain companies of the other country. The protocol exempts a Chinese company from the personal holding company and accumulated earnings taxes during a taxable year if, during that taxable year, the company is wholly owned, directly or indirectly, either by one or more individuals who are residents of China (and who are not citizens of the United States) or by the Government of China or any wholly owned agency of that government. In addition, under U.S. law, a Chinese company is subject to the accumulated earnings tax only with respect to income from sources within the United States (Treas. Reg. sec. 1.532-1(c)).

Paragraph 4. (Treaty definition of "person")

The proposed protocol amends the proposed treaty's definition of "person" (Article 3) to include, as the U.S. model's definition does, an estate or trust.

Paragraph 5. ("Tie-breaker" rules)

In assigning (under Article 4) a single country of residence for treaty purposes to an otherwise dual residence individual, the protocol states that the competent authorities of the two countries are to be guided by the "tie-breaker" rules of the U.N. model income tax treaty between developed and developing countries. This provision is discussed in greater detail under Article 4 above.

Paragraph 6. (Reduction of royalty withholding tax)

In general, Article 11 of the proposed treaty limits the tax that the source country may impose on royalties paid to a resident of the other country to 10 percent of the gross amount of the royalties. In the case of royalties paid for the rental of industrial, commercial, or scientific equipment, the proposed protocol provides that the tax allowed under the treaty is to be imposed on 70 percent of the gross amount of the royalties only. The effect of this protocol provision is to reduce to seven percent the maximum source country tax on these types of royalties. This provision is discussed further under Article 11 above.

Paragraph 7. (Limitation on benefits)

The proposed treaty is intended to limit double taxation caused by the interaction of the tax systems of the United States and China as they apply to residents of the two countries. At times, however, residents of third countries attempt to use a treaty. This use is known as "treaty shopping." Under certain circumstances, and without appropriate safeguards, the nonresident is able to secure these benefits by establishing a corporation (or other entity) in one of the countreies which, as a resident of that country, is entitled to the benefits of the treaty. Additionally, it may be possible for the third-country resident to repatriate funds to that third country from the entity under favorable conditions (i.e., it may be possible to reduce or eliminate taxes on the repatriation) either through relaxed tax provisions in the distributing country or by passing the funds through other treaty countries (essentially, continuing to treaty shop), until the funds can be repatriated under favorable terms.

The proposed protocol contains a provision intended to prevent third-country companies that are not bona fide residents of the United States or China from using the treaty to secure certain treaty benefits. The protocol provides that the competent authorities of the United States and China may through consultation deny the benefits of the dividend, interest, and royalty articles (Articles 9, 10, and 11) to a company of a third country if the company becomes a resident of one of the countries for the principal purpose of enjoying benefits under the treaty. The principal benefits provided under the dividend, interest, and royalty articles are reduced source country withholding tax rates. This anti-treaty shopping provision is much less detailed than that of the U.S. model treaty and those of most recent U.S. income tax treaties. It is considerably less strict than the anti-treaty shopping provision of the U.S. model. See discussion under "Committee Comments," above.

Paragraph 8. (Existing shipping and aircraft tax agreement)

An agreement between the United States and the People's Republic of China governing the taxation of shipping and aircraft income was signed on March 5, 1982, and is currently in force. The proposed protocol makes clear that the proposed treaty will not alter the tax rules for shipping and aircraft income set forth in that prior agreement.

Exchange of Notes

At the signing of the proposed treaty and protocol, notes were exchanged dealing with the issue of "tax sparing" credits.

In the notes, the United States and China agreed that a tax sparing credit would not be included in the proposed treaty's double taxation relief article (Article 22) at the present time. However, the countries further agreed that the proposed treaty would be promptly amended to incorporate a tax sparing credit provision in the event that the United States amended its laws concerning the provision of tax sparing credits, or the United States reached agreement on the provision of a tax sparing credit with any other country.

This provision reflects the desire of China and other developing countries to have the United States adopt a tax sparing credit. Many developed countries provide a tax sparing credit in order to avoid what, in the view of some, is a conflict with the foreign investment incentive policies of developing countries. A tax sparing credit is an incomee tax credit provided by a country (typically a developed country) against its own tax on income from a developing country. The credit equals the full amount of the developing country's nominal tax on the income, notwithstanding the developing country's reduction or elimination of the tax as part of an investment incentive program. Many developing countries, for example, provide "tax holidays" to residents of other countries who invest in the developing country. Generally, under these tax holidays, the developing countries forego tax on the profits from the foreign-owned business for a period of time. Absent a tax sparing credit, those profits typically would be taxed in full by the country of residence of the business' foreign owner upon repatriation in dividend form. The United States has declined to give tax sparing credits.

This provision is similar to, but goes somewhat beyond, provisions included in certain other U.S. income tax treaties with developing countries. The provisions in the other treaties do not make explicit reference to a tax sparing credit and do not include a specific promise by the United States to allow such a credit upon allowing it to another country. Instead, they commit the United States to resuming discussions, when circumstances permit, with a view to incorporating provisions in the treaty that will minimize interference with incentives offered by the other country and will be consistent with U.S. income tax policy vis a vis other developing countries.

IX. TEXT OF THE RESOLUTION OF RATIFICATION

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Agreement between the Government of the United States and the Government of the People's Republic of China for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Tax Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income, together with a supplementary protocol and exchange of notes, signed at Beijing on April 30, 1984.

SENATE EXECUTIVE REPORT NO. 99-15

PROTOCOL TO CHINA TAX TREATY

Mr. LUGAR, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, submitted the following report to accompany Treaty Doc. 99-26.

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the protocol, signed at Beijing on May 10, 1986, concerning the interpretation of paragraph 7 of the protocol to the agreement between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the People's Republic of China for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of tax evasion with respect to taxes on income, signed at Beijing on April 30, 1984, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon without amendment and recommends that the Senate give its advice and consent to ratification thereof.

PURPOSE

The Protocol amends the China tax treaty (Treaty Doc. 98-30) to insure that only bona fide residents of the contracting states may benefit from the treaty's provisions.

SUMMARY

The Department of the Treasury has provided the following technical explanation of the protocol:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT TECHNICAL EXPLANATION OF THE PROTOCOL SIGNED AT BEIJING ON MAY 10, 1986 CONCERNING THE INTERPRETATION OF PARAGRAPH 7 OF THE PROTOCOL TO THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION AND THE PREVENTION OF TAX EVASION WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON INCOME, SIGNED AT BEIJING ON APRIL 30, 1984

The Protocol signed at Beijing on May 10, 1986 (hereafter referred to as "the Protocol") amends the Agreement and accompanying Protocol and Exchange of Letters which were signed at Beijing on April 30, 1984 (hereafter referred to as "the Agreement"). The Protocol contains only one article, which limits the benefits of the Agreement to bona fide residents of the Contracting States. It is intended to prevent residents of third countries from inappropriately using a company which is a resident of one of the Contracting States as a conduit or similar vehicle to obtain tax benefits provided by the Agreement.

The Protocol provides that a person (other than an individual) which is a resident of one of the Contracting States is entitled to relief from taxation by the other Contracting State only under certain conditions. Paragraph 1 provides two alternative conditions of eligibility for benefits under the Agreement. The first condition involves two parts, both objective tests relating to the person deriving the income. The first test is that more than 50 percent of the beneficial interest in such person (or in the case of a company, more than 50 percent of the number of shares of each class of the company's shares) must be owned, directly or indirectly, by any combination of: individuals who are residents of the Contracting States, citizens of the United States, the Contracting States themselves or political subdivisions thereof, or publicly traded companies which are residents of one of the Contracting States. In addition, in the case of reduced taxation at source of dividends, interest, or royalties, not more than 50 percent of the gross income of such person may be used, directly or indirectly, to pay interest to persons other than those enumerated in the ownership test. These ownership and "base erosion" tests are intended to serve as safe harbors for persons which can establish satisfaction of such mechanical tests.

The second condition, which is an alternative to the first two-part condition described above, is met if the person deriving the income is a company which is a resident of a Contracting State and its principal class of shares is the subject of regular and substantial trading on a recognized stock exchange, as defined in paragraph 3. A publicly traded company that is a resident of the United States or the People's Republic of China is considered to have a sufficient nexus with that country, respectively, to entitle it to the benefits of the Agreement.

Paragraph 2 provides a third alternative, under which the benefits of the Agreement are available to a person if the establishment, acquisition and maintenance of the person and the conduct of its operations did not have as a principal purpose the purpose of obtaining the benefits of the Agreement. This condition recognizes that persons resident in third countreis may own an entity that is a resident of the United States or China for valid business reasons, and that granting benefits to such an entity may be consistent with the goals of the Agreement. This condition would be met, for example, if a Chinese company owned by third country residents conducts business operations in China and its U.S. investments are related or incidental to those business activities, or if the aggregate tax burden in China equals or exceeds the tax reduction claimed under the Agreement. It could also be met in other situations.

Paragraph 3 defines a "recognized stock exchange" for the purposes of paragraph 1(b). A recognized stock exchange means U.S. registered stock exchanges, the NASDAQ system in the United States, any national securities exchange approved and established by the People's Republic of China, and any other stock exchange agreed upon by the competent authorities.

Paragraph 4 provides that the competent authorities shall consult each other before benefits are denied under this Article. This consultation obligation is intended to benefit the governments of the two Contracting States. The denial of benefits requires consultation, but is not dependent on the prior agreement of the competent authorities.

The Protocol is an integral part of the Agreement. Thus, its entry into force and duration are covered by Articles 27 and 28, respectively, of the Agreement.

COMMITTEE ACTION

The Committee approved the Protocol by a vote of 16-0 at its June 12, 1986 business meeting. Voting in the affirmative were Senators Lugar, Mathias, Kassebaum, Boschwitz, Pressler, Murkowski, Trible, Evans, Pell, Biden, Sarbanes, Zorinsky, Cranston, Dodd, Eagleston and Kerry.

COMMITTEE COMMENTS

As Senator Lugar indicated at the business meeting, the Protocol will be considered together with the treaty on the Senate floor. The resolution of ratification to this Protocol incorporates the China tax treaty and a supplementary protocol submitted with the treaty. Accordingly, approval of this resolution by the Senate will result in Senate consent to the treaty, the supplementary protocol that accompanied the treaty and this protocol.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Sentate advise and consent to the ratification of the Agreement between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the People's Republic of China for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Tax Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income, together with a supplementary protocol and exchange of notes, signed at Beijing on April 30, 1984, and a protocol concerning the interpretation of paragraph 7 of the supplementary protocol, signed at Beijing on May 10, 1986.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT TECHNICAL EXPLANATION OF THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION AND THE PREVENTION OF TAX EVASION WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON INCOME

The Agreement, an accompanying Protocol, and an exchange of letters were signed in Beijing on April 30, 1984. Hereafter, the term "Agreement" refers to the three documents. The term "Agreement" has the same meaning as "Treaty" or "Convention", and the Agreement is subject to the same ratification requirements and has the same force as a Convention or Treaty.

The Agreement is based on the model income tax conventions published by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in 1977, the United Nations in 1980, and the U.S. Treasury Department in 1981.

This technical explanation is an official guide to the Agreement. It reflects policies behind particular provisions as well as understandings reached with respect to the interpretation and application of the Agreement.

Article 1.

This article states the general rule that the persons affected by the Agreement are residents of the United States or China or of both countries. The term "resident" is defined in Article 4. Certain articles may also apply to nonresidents; see, for example, Article 23, which concerns nondiscrimination, and Article 25, concerning exchanges of information. Article 1 is supplemented by Articles 1 and 2 of the Protocol.

Article 1 of the Protocol provides that the Agreement does not restrict any benefits provided by the laws of either Contracting State or by any other agreement between the Contracting States. This rule reflects the principle that a double taxation agreement should not increase the overall tax burden which would result in the absence of the Agreement. For example, if the Agreement permits a Contracting State to tax an item of income which under the law of that State is exempt from tax, the statutory exemption applies. A U.S. taxpayer, however, may not make inconsistent choices between the rules of the Internal Revenue Code ("the Code") and the rules of the Agreement.

Article 2 of the Protocol is a simplified version of the traditional "saving clause" which preserves the right of the United States to tax its citizens and residents under its domestic law. The rule is drafted unilaterally, as China does not tax on the basis of citizenship and does not consider such a provision necessary to preserve its taxation of, and implement the Agreement with respect to, Chinese residents. The reference to "citizens" of the United States is understood by the parties to include former citizens whose loss of citizenship had as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of U.S. tax. Such former citizens are taxable in accordance with section 877 of the Code. Certain benefits of the Agreement are available to U.S. residents, as defined in Article 4 of the Agreement. Those benefits are the right to a correlative adjustment of tax liability as provided in paragraph 2 of Article 8, the exemption from U.S. tax of Chinese social security benefits provided in paragraph 2 of Article 17, the provisions concerning government employees, teachers and students of Articles 18, 19 and 20, and the benefits of Articles 22, 23, 24 and 26 concerning, respectively, relief from double taxation, nondiscrimination, the mutual agreement procedure, and diplomats. Further, it is understood that the benefits of the provisions concerning relief from double taxation, nondiscrimination, and the mutual agreement procedure will also be available to nonresident U.S. citizens to the extent applicable under the specific terms of those articles.

Article 2.

Paragraph 1 of this article enumerates the existing taxes to which the Agreement applies in each Contracting State. In the United States, these are the Federal income taxes imposed by the Code. As explained in Article 3 of the Protocol, U.S. social security taxes are not covered by the Agreement. The personal holding company tax and the accumulated earnings tax are also not covered by the Agreement, except that they will not apply to a Chinese company which is wholly owned, directly or indirectly, by individual residents of China who are not U.S. citizens or by the Government of China or a wholly owned agency thereof.

The Chinese taxes covered by the Agreement are the individual income tax, the income tax concerning joint ventures with Chinese and foreign investment, the income tax concerning foreign enterprises, and the local income tax.

Paragraph 2 provides that the Agreement shall also apply to taxes imposed after the date of signature of the Agreement, provided that they are substantially similar to those enumerated in paragraph 1. The competent authorities agree to notify each other of substantial changes in their respective income tax laws.

Article 3.

Article 3 defines some of the principal terms used throughout the Agreement. Unless the context otherwise requires, the terms defined in this article have a uniform meaning throughout the Agreement. A number of important terms are defined in other articles. For example, the term "resident of a Contracting State" is defined in Article 4, and the term "permanent establishment" is defined in Article 5. The terms "dividends," "interest," and "royalties" are defined in Articles 9, 10, and 11, respectively.

The geographical territory of the two Contracting States is defined to include their continental shelf areas to the extent consistent with international law and their respective domestic laws. Thus, for example, activities taking place on the seabed or subsoil beyond the territorial sea of the United States will be considered to take place within the United States for purposes of the Agreement, provided that the United States has jurisdiction over such areas in accordance with international law and U.S. domestic law. The United States will interpret this definition in accordance with section 638 of the Internal Revenue Code and the regulations thereunder. The "United States" does not include Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, or any U.S. territory or possession. The "People's Republic of China" does not include Hong Kong, as Chinese tax laws are not in effect there. Moreover, in accordance with the Agreement between the United Kingdom and China on the future of Hong Kong, the taxes imposed by the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region will continue to be independent of the tax laws of the Central People's Government, and therefore the Agreement will not apply to Hong Kong even after 1997.

The term "person" includes an individual, a company, a partnership, and any other body of persons. It also includes, as provided in Article 4 of the Protocol, an estate or a trust. The term "person" is important because the Agreement applies to "persons" who are residents of one or both Contracting States and residence in a State is defined in terms of "persons" meeting certain criteria. A "company" is any entity treated as a corporation for tax purposes.

The term "nationals" means individuals having the nationality of a Contracting State and legal entities deriving their status as such from the law in force in a State.

The competent authority in the case of China is the Ministry of Finance or its authorized representative and in the case of the United States is the Secretary of the Treasury or his authorized representative.

Paragraph 2 provides that, in the case of a term not defined in the Agreement, the domestic tax law of the State applying the Agreement shall control, unless the context requires a different interpretation or unless the competent authorities agree on a common meaning in accordance with paragraph 3 of Article 24 (concerning the mutual agreement procedure).

The Agreement does not include a definition of the term "international traffic" because that definition, as well as the substantive rules concerning the taxation of international shipping and air transport income, is contained in the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the People's Republic of China with Respect to Mutual Exemption From Taxation of Transportation Income of Shipping and Air Transport Enterprises, which was signed on March 5, 1982 and entered into force on September 23, 1983.

Article 4.

This article defines those persons who are residents of a Contracting State and thus entitled to the benefits of the Agreement. The definition begins with a person's liability to tax under domestic law. Paragraph 1 lists several criteria which may be used in domestic law to determine residence for tax purposes. Citizenship is not one of the criteria; thus a U.S. citizen resident in a third country is not treated as a U.S. resident for purposes of this Agreement. The reference to persons "liable to tax" is not meant to exclude organizations of either country which are tax-exempt under special provisions of its domestic law, such as charities. However, it would not include a person liable to tax only in respect of income from sources in the taxing country, such as a resident of a third country subject to tax in the United States or China only on a source basis. A U.S. partnership, estate or trust is a resident only to the extent that the income it derives is subject to tax either in the hands of the entity or of its partners or beneficiaries.

Paragraph 2 provides that, where an individual is considered to be a resident of both Contracting States under their respective domestic laws, the competent authorities shall consult together to determine of which State the individual shall be a resident for purposes of the Agreement. In making that determination, the competent authorities will be guided by the rules of paragraph 2 of Article 4 of the United Nation's Model Double Taxation Convention between Developed and Developing Countries. (See Article 5 of the Protocol.) Those rules are the same as the rules contained in the corresponding paragraph of the OECD and U.S. Models. The first test is where the individual has his permanent home. If he has a permanent home in both countries, the second test is where his personal and economic ties are closer (center of vital interests). If that test is inconclusive, or if the individual does not have a permanent home in either State, the next test is his place of habitual abode. The fourth test is nationality. If the individual is a national of both States or of neither of them, the competent authorties are instructed to settle the issue so as to assign a single State of residence. Once established under this article, the residence of the individual remains the same for all purposes of the Agreement.

For U.S. tax purposes, a company is a resident of the United States if it is created or organized under the laws of a state or the District of Columbia. For Chinese tax purposes, a company is a resident of China if its place of management (head office) is in China. Under paragraph 3, where a company is a resident of both Contracting States under their respective domestic laws, the competent authorities will attempt to determine a single State of residence through consultations. However, it would not be the policy of the U.S. competent authority to agree to treat an entity incorporated in the United States as not a U.S. resident. If the competent authorities are unable to reach Agreement, the company will not be considered a resident of either State for purposes of enjoying benefits under the Agreement. Thus, for example, dividends paid to a resident of China by a dual resident company would be eligible for the reduced U.S. withholding rate of 10 percent. However, if a dual resident corporation paid a dividend to a U.S. resident, the statutory U.S. tax would apply with respect to that dividend. Dividends, interest or royalties arising in either Contracting State and paid to a dual resident corporation are not entitled to the reduced rates provided for in the Agreement.

Paragraph 4 deals with a case where a company is a resident of the United States for purposes of the Agreement, but is also a resident of a third country under another tax treaty between China and the third country (e.g. a corporation created under U.S. law but having its head office in Japan). Instead, the Agreement between China and the third country will prevail, and the company will be considered a resident of the third country and not of the United States for purposes of this Agreement. Thus, the company will receive the benefits of the other Agreement between China and the third country.

Article 5.

The rules for taxation by a Contracting State of business income derived by a resident of the other State utilize the concept of a "permanent establishment." This article illustrates that concept.

Paragraph 1 defines a permanent establishment in general terms as a fixed place of business through which the business of an enterprise is wholly or partly carried on.

Paragraph 2 contains an illustrative list of permanent establishments. These illustrations are the same as those in the U.S. Model. They are a place of management, a branch, an office, a factory, a workshop, and a place of extraction of natural resources, such as a mine, well, or quarry.

Subparagraph 3(a) provides that a construction site, assembly or installation project, or supervisory activities in connection with such a site or project, constitutes a permanent establishment if the site, project, or activities continue for more than six months. In such a case, a permanent establishment exists from the first day when work physically begins within the territory of the other Contracting State, including preparatory work. Each site or project and each enterprise is considered separately. A series of contracts or projects which are interdependent both commercially and geographically are to be treated as a single project for the purpose of applying the six month test. For example, a "turn-key" project in which a facility is constructed and equipment installed in it would be a single project. However, it is possible that a project which constitutes a permanent establishment for the general contractor may not be a permanent establishment for a subcontractor if the latter performs services there for less than six months. For example, a subcontractor could install equipment at one site for four months and provide supervisory services at a separate site for an unrelated contractor for three months without itself having a permanetn establishment.

Subparagraph 3(b) provides that an installation, drilling rig or ship used to explore for or exploit natural resources constitutes a permanent establishment if it continues for more than three months. A series of projects or contracts will be interpreted in the same manner as in the case of construction sites.

Subparagraph 3(c) provides that the furnishing of servicces by an enterprise through employees or other personnel will constitute a permanent establishment of the enterprise in that other State when the activities in the other Contracting State continue for more than six months within a twelve month period.

Paragraph 4 identifies activities which may be carried on in a Contracting State which will not constitute a permanent establishment even if conducted through a fixed place of business. The activities enumerated are the same as in the U.S. Model. The use of facilities solely to store, display, or deliver goods belonging to an enterprise does not constitute a permanent establishment. Nor does the maintenance of a stock of goods belonging to the enterprise solely for the purpose of storage, display, delivery, or processing by another enterprise. An enterprise may maintain a fixed place of business solely to purchase goods or collect information or to carry on any other preparatory or auxiliary activity for the enterprise without being considered to have a permanent establishment. Any combination of the enumerated activities also does not constitute a permanent establishment, subject to the condition that the combined activity is of a preparatory or auxiliary character for the enterprise.

Paragraphs 5 and 6 concern the use of agents. Under paragraph 5, which is the same as in the U.S. Model, a dependent agent who acts on behalf of an enterprise and habitually exerceises an authority to conclude contracts in the name of that enterprise is deemed to be a permanent establishment of that enterprise (whether or not there is a fixed place of business) unless the activities of the agent are limited to activities which would not constitute a permanent establishment under paragraph 4 if carried on directly by the enterprise. Paragraph 6 provides that an enterprise will not be considered to have a permanent establishment in the other State merely because it uses in that other State the services of an independent agent acting in the ordinary course of his business. However, an agent will not be considered independent if he acts wholly or almost wholly on behalf of that enterprise and it is shown that the transactions between the agent and the enterprise were not at arm's length.

Paragraph 7 states that control of one company by another does not, in and of itself, constitute either company a permanent establishment of the other. The determination whether a subsidiary is a permanent establishment of its parent corporation or conversely, or whether two or more subsidiaries of the same corporation are permanent establishments of the parent or of each other is made by reference to the tests set out in paragraphs 1 through 6.

Article 6.

Paragraph 1 provides that income derived by a resident of a Contracting State from real property situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed in the State where the property is situated. The United States may also tax such income of its citizens and residents in accordance with paragraph 3 of Article 1 (General Scope) of the Protocol.

Paragraph 2 provides that "real property" is defined in accordance with the law of the Contracting State where the property is situated. It, in any case, includes property acccessory to real property, such as livestock and equipment used in agriculture and forestry, and payments for the use of natural resource deposits. It does not include ships and aircraft.

Paragraph 3 elaborates that income from immovable property includes income from the direct use, letting, or use in any other form of such property.

Paragraph 4 further elaborates that real property of an enterprise and real property used for performing independent personal services are also covered by this article.

Article 7.

This article provides rules governing the taxation by a Contracting State of incoem from business activity carried on in that State by a resident of the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 1 provides that business profits of an enterprise of one Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State except to the extent that such profits are attributable to a permanent establishment through which the enterprise carries on business activities in the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 2 provides that the profits to be attributed to a permanent establishment are those which it might be expected to make if it were an independent enterprise engaged in similar activities under similar conditions and dealing at arm's length with the enterprise of which it is a permanent establishment and all other related persons.

Paragraph 3 provides that deductions shall be allowed for expenses incurred for the purposes of the permanent establishment, including a reasonable allocation of executive and administrative expenses, without regard to where such expenses are incurred. However, the profits of the permanent establishment are not to be reduced by deductions for interest or royalties paid to the head office other than as reimbursements of costs incurred.

Paragraph 4 provides that, where the tax law of a Contracting State uses a deemed profit basis to determine the net income of a specific industry, the provisions of paragraph 2 do not preclude the use of that method provided that the results are consistent with the principles of this article. For example, for administrative reasons, China deems the profit of foreign shipping, airline, and oil drilling companies attributable to their Chinese operations to be a percentage of their gross receipts from China. Currently, the taxable income in such cases is deemed to be 10 percent of the gross income and that amount is subject to tax at the ordinary rates unless exempt under another provision of the Agreement. Such an approach is acceptable as long as its results are consistent with arm's length principles.

Paragraph 5 states that the mere purchase by a permanent establishment of goods or merchandise for the enterprise shall not result in profits being attributed to the permanent establishment.

Paragraph 6 provides that, unless there is good and sufficient reason to the contrary, the same method of determining profits attributable to the permanent establishment shall be used each year. In the United States, such a change may be a change in accounting method requiring the approval of the Internal Revenue Service.

Paragraph 7 provides that, where business profits include items of income dealt with in other articles of the Agreement, the provisions of those other articles govern. For example, the taxation of dividends, interest, and royalties is controlled by Articles 9, 10, and 11, respectively; however, the terms of those articles provide that where dividends, interest, or royalties derived by a resident of a Contracting State are effectively connected with (attributable to) a permanent establishment in the other State, the provisions of this article apply and the item of income is taxed as business profits.

Article 8.

This article provides that, where related persons engage in transactions which are not at arm's length, the Contracting States may make appropriate adjustments to their taxable income and tax liability.

Paragraph 1 states the general rule that, where an enterprise of one Contracting State and an enterprise of the other State are related through management, control, or capital and their commercial or financial relations differ from those which would prevail between independent enterprises, the profits of the enterprises may be adjusted to reflect the profits which would have accrued if the two enterprises were independent.

Paragraph 2 provides that, where one of the Contracting States increases the profits of an enterprise of that State to the amount that would have accrued to the enterprise had it been independent of an enterprise of the other Contracting State, the second State shall, to the extent it agrees that the redetermination accurately reflects arm's length conditions, make a correlative adjustment, decreasing the amount of tax which it has already imposed on those profits. In determining such adjustments, due regard is to be paid to the other provisions of the convention. The competent authorities of the two States may consult each other in implementing this provision.

It is understood that each Contracting State may apply its internal law in determining liability for its tax. For example, although paragraphs 1 and 2 refer to allocations of "profits" and "taxes," it is understood that such terms also include the components of the tax base and of the tax liability, such as income, deductions, credits, and allowances. The Untied States will apply its rules and procedures under Code section 482.

Article 9.

This article limits the tax which a Contracting State may impose on dividends paid by a company which is a resident of that State to a resident of the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 1 confirms that such dividends may be taxed in the State of residence of the shareholder.

Paragraph 2 provides that the dividends may also be taxed in the Contracting State of which the paying company is a resident. However, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other Contracting State, the tax may not exceed 10 percent of the gross dividend. Although the language used, which is taken from the OECD and U.N. Models, refers to the recipient being the beneficial owner, it is understood (consistent with the OECD commentary) that the intended meaning is that the reduced rate will apply when the beneficial owner is a resident of the other Contracting State, even when the recipient of the dividend may be a nominee for such resident.

Paragraph 3 defines the term "dividends" for purposes of this article. The definition, which is the same as that in the U.S. Model, is relevant only for determining the appropriate taxation at source. It does not govern for purposes of the country of residence of the shareholder, which applies its own law to the extent that characterizing an item of income is relevant.

Paragraph 4 provides that, where a resident of a Contracting State derives dividends from the other Contracting State and the holding is effectively connected with (the dividends are attributable to) a permanent establishment or fixed base through which the owner of the dividends carries on business in that other State, the dividends are taxable in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 or Article 13 rather than under this article. This paragraph does not automatically attribute dividends derived by a company having a permanent establishment in the source country to that permanent establishment (the "force of attraction" rule found in some early tax treaties).

Paragraph 5 provides that a Contracting State may not tax dividends paid by a company which is not a resident of that State except to the extent permitted under paragraph 2 or 4 of this article, i.e. to the extent that the dividends are paid to a resident of that State (or, in the case of the United States, a U.S. citizen residing in a third State) or the dividends are attributable to a permanent establishment or fixed base in that State. Thus, the United States will not tax dividends which are considered to be from U.S. sources under Code section 861(a)(2)(B) if paid by a Chinese corporation. China does not impose a tax on distributions of a foreign corporation out of the profits of its Chinese permanent establishment or a supplementary tax on the profits of a Chinese branch of a foreign corporation.

In accordance with the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may in any event tax dividends derived by U.S. citizens.

Article 10.

This article limits the tax which a Contracting State may impose on interest arising in that State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 1 confirms that such interest may be taxed in the State of residence of the recipient.

Paragraph 2 provides that such interest may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which it arises. However, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other Contracting State, the tax may not exceed 10 percent of the gross interest. (See also the discussion of the corresponding provision in Article 9.)

Paragraph 3 provides, as an exception to paragraph 2, that interest arising in a Contracting State which is derived by the government of the other Contracting State, a political subdivision or local authority thereof, or the Central Bank or any financial institution wholly owned by the government of that other State or by any resident of that other State with respect to debt indirectly financed by any of the above (e.g. loans indirectly financed by Eximbank) is exempt from tax in the State in which it arises.

Paragraph 4 defines "interest" for purposes of this article. It includes income from debt-claims of all kinds, including mortgage interest and original issue discount. The definition, which is relevant only for determining the appropriate taxation at source, permits the United States to apply its rules regarding the distinction between interest and dividends pursuant to section 385 of the Code. It is understood that penalties for late payment are not interest.

Paragraph 5 provides that, where a resident of one Contracting State derives interest which arises in the other Contracting State and the debt claim is effectively connected with (i.e. the interest is attributable to) a permanent establishment or fixed base through which the owner of the interest carries on business in that other State, that interest is taxable in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 or Article 13 rather than under this article. Thus, interest derived by a resident of China which arises in the United States and is attributable to a U.S. permanent establishment of that resident may be taxed by the United States in accordance with Article 7.

Paragraph 6 provides a source rule for interest payments. Generally, interest is deemed to arise in the state of residence of the payer. However, where the interst is attributable to debt incurred by or for a permanent establishment or fixed base in one of the Contracting States and is borne (deducted from taxable income) by that permanent establishment or fixed base, the interest is deemed to arise where the permanent establishment or fixed base is located.

Paragraph 7 states that this article does not apply to interest payments between related persons in excess of the amount which would have been agreed upon at arm's length. Such excess amount shall be taxable according to the laws of each Contracting State, with regard also to the other provisions of this Agreement. For example, if the excess amount is taxable as a dividend, the tax imposed will be subject to the provisions of Article 10 (Dividends).

In accordance with the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may in any event tax interest derived by U.S. citizens.

Article 11.

This article limits the tax which a Contracting State may impose on royalites arising in that State and paid to a resident of the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 1 confirms that such royalties may be taxed in the State of residence of the recipient.

Paragraph 2 provides that such royalties may also be taxed in the Contracting State in which they arise. However, if the beneficial owner is a resident of the other Contracting State, the tax may not exceed 10 percent of the gross royalty. (See also the discussion of the corresponding provision in Article 9.) In recognition of the expenses associated with the leasing of industrial, commercial, and scientific equipment, paragraph 6 of the Protocol provides that in such cases the tax shall be imposed on 70 percent of the gross amount, i.e. the tax may not exceed 7 percent of the gross rental payment.

Paragraph 3 defines the term "royalties" for purposes of this article. The definition includes payments for the right to use a copyright, trademark, patent, design, models, secret formula or process, know-how, or similar property or rights. Payments for film rentals and for the leasing of equipment are also included, and it is understood that the definition includes royalties contingent on the sale or use of the property or right.

Paragraph 4 provides that, where a resident of one Contracting State derives royalties which arise in the other Contracting State and the right or property is effectively connected with (i.e. the royalties are attributable to) a permanent establishment or fixed base through which the owner of the royalties carries on business in that other State, the royalties are taxable in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 or Article 13 rather than under this article.

Paragraph 5 provides a source of rule for royalty payments. In general, a royalty is considered to arise in a Contracting State if paid by the government or a resident of that State. However, if a permanent establishment or fixed base of the payor in one of the States incurs the liability to pay the royalties and bears the payment (deducts it in arriving at taxable income) the royalty is considered to arise in the State where the permanent establishment or fixed base is located. Moreover, if under these rules a royalty is not considered to arise in either State, but it relates to the use of, or the right to use, property in a State, the royalty is considered to arise in the State where the property is used (or where there is a right to use it). Thus, for example, if a resident of China were to license a patent to a third country company, which in turn sublicensed it for use in the United States, the United States would tax the license payment by the third country company to the resident of China, subject to the limitation in paragraph 2. The sublicense payment by the U.S. user to the third country resident would not be covered by the Agreement and would be subject to U.S. tax under U.S. law or the provisions of a U.S. tax treaty with that third country, if applicable.

Paragraph 6 states that this article does not apply to royalties paid between related persons in excess of the amount which would have been agreed upon at arm's length. Such excess amount shall be taxable according to the law of each Contracting State, with regard also to the other provisions of this Agreement. For example, if the excess royalty is taxable as a dividend, it will be subject to the provisions of Article 9.

In accordance with the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may in any event tax royalties derived by U.S. citizens.

Article 12.

This article specifies the situations in which a Contracting State may tax gains derived by a resident of the other Contracting State. The term "gains" includes amounts treated as capital gains and as ordinary income.

Paragraph 1 provides that gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of real property situated in the other Contracting State may be taxed by the State where the property is located.

Paragraph 2 provides that gains derived by a resident of a Contracting State with respect to movable property forming part of a permanent establishment or a fixed base maintained by that resident in the other Contracting State and gains from the alienation of such a permanent establishment or fixed base may be taxed where the permanent establishment or fixed base is located.

Paragraph 3 reserves to the State of residence the exclusive right to tax gains of a resident of a Contracting State from the alienation of ships, aircraft, operated in international traffic, and related personal property, such as containers.

Paragraph 4 provides that gains derived from the alienation of shares of a company the assets of which directly or indirectly consist principally of real property situated in a Contracting State may be taxed in the State where the real proeprty is situated.

Paragraph 5 provides that gains derived from the alienation of shares, other than those covered by paragraph 4, which represent a participating of 25 percent or more in a company which is a resident of a Contracting State may be taxed in that State. For example, China may tax the gain derived by a U.S. company from the alienation of its 25 percent or greater participation in a Chinese corporate joint venture.

Paragraph 6 provides that gains from the alienation of any property not referred to in paragraphs 1 through 5 may be taxed in the State in which they arise. Thus, gains on the disposition of a U.S. real property interest, to the extent not taxable under the preceding paragraphs, are taxable under this paragraph in accordance with the provisions of the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act, as amended.

The gains covered in this article may also be taxed in the State of residence of the alienator, subject to the provisions of Article 22 concerning the avoidance of double taxation.

In accordance with paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may also tax its citizens.

Article 13.

This article provides that income derived by an individual resident of a Contracting State from performing independent personal services may be taxed in the other Contracting State only if the individual is present in that other State for more than 183 days in the calendar year or has a fixed base regularly available to him in that other State. In such a case, that other State may tax the income attributable to the services performed there or to that fixed base, as the case may be.

The concept of a "fixed base" is analogous to that of a "permanent establishment" as defined in Article 5. Thus, a fixed base means a fixed place of business used with some continuity for performing independent services. It would not include a hotel room unless used as an office or work site on a continuing basis. The rules of Article 7 should also be applied in taxing the profits attributable to a fixed base, e.g. taxation on a net basis using arm's-length principles.

Independent personal services are, in general, services performed by an individual for his own account where he receives the income and bears the losses arising from such services. They include services of professional persons, such as doctors and lawyers, but also other services performed by sole proprietors or partners.

In accordance with paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may in any event tax its citizens.

Article 14.

This article specifies when personal service income earned by an employee who is a resident of a Contracting State may be taxed by the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 1 provides the basic rule that such employment income may be taxed only in the employee's State of residence, unless the services are performed in the other Contracting State.

Paragraph 2 provides that, even where the services are performed in the other Contracting State, the income derived may not be taxed by that other State if three conditions are met: (1) the recipient is present in that other State for not more than 183 days in the calendar year; (2) the remuneration is paid by or on behalf of an employer who is not a resident of that other State; and (3) the remuneration is not borne by (deducted from the taxable income of) a permanent establishment or a fixed base of that employer in that other State. If any one of the three conditions is not met, e.g., if the remuneration is borne by a permanent establishment of the employer in the State where the services are performed, the income may be taxed by that State. In any such case, the right of the source State to tax is limited to the income attributable to services performed in that State.

In accordance with paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may in any event tax its citizens.

Article 15.

This article provides that a Contracting State may tax a resident of the other Contracting State with respect to payments for his services as a director of a company which is a resident of the first-mentioned State. Payments for services as an officer or employee of such a company are covered under Article 13 or 14.

In accordance with paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may in any event tax its citizens.

Article 16.

This article specifies when a Contracting State may tax the remuneration of entertainers and athletes who are residents of the other Contracting State. It provides certain exceptions to the provisions of Articles 13 and 14. However, income from services rendered by producers, directors, technicians and others who are not artistes and athletes is taxable in accordance with Article 13 or 14, as the case may be.

Paragraph 1 provides that a Contracting State may tax income derived by a resident of the other Contracting State from the performance of services in the first State as an entertainer or athlete, unless the activities are exercised in accordance with a cultural exchange program agreed upon by the two Governments, in which case the host State agrees to exempt such income from tax. The exception for cultural exchange programs is expected to cover most, if not all, such exchanges at the present time.

Paragraph 2 provides that, where income for services performed by an entertainer or athlete accrues to another person, it may be taxed in the State where the activities are performed, without regard to the other provisions of the Agreement. Although this provision is drafted broadly, it is understood that it will be interpreted in accordance with the policy of the U.S. model and the commentary to the OECD model provision; i.e. the intent is to prevent abuse of the Convention by diverting income to a person, other than the individual performing the services (for example, by having the remuneration paid to a corporation which does not have a permanent establishment in the State where the services are performed). The paragraph is not intended to impose tax in cases where there is no tax avoidance motive, for example, when a payment is made to an orchestra on behalf of its members who performed in a concert.

In accordance with paragraph 2 of the Protocol, the United States may in any event tax its citizens.

Article 17.

This article deals with the taxation of private pensions and social security benefits. Pensions in consideration of government employment are covered under Article 18. Paragraph 1 provides that pensions in respect of private employment derived by a resident of a Contracting State may be taxed only in that State. On the other hand, public payments, such as social security benefits or public welfare payments, paid by a Contracting State may be taxed only in the paying State. This provision is excepted from the "saving" clause of paragraph 2 of the Protocol, so the United States will not tax its residents on social security benefits paid to them by the People's Republic of China.

Article 18.

This article deals with the taxation of remuneration and pensions paid by the government of a Contracting State with respect to the performance of governmental functions for that State. It is based on the corresponding article in the OECD and UN model draft conventions.

Paragraph 1 provides that remuneration paid by the government of a Contracting State or a political subdivision or local authority thereof to an individual for services rendered may be taxed only in that State unless the services are performed in the other State and the individual is either a national of that other State or became a resident of that other State other than solely for the purpose of rendering such services. In the latter case, the remuneration may be taxed only in that other State. For example, the United States may tax the remuneration of an employee of the Embassy of the People's Republic of China if the individual is a U.S. citizen or was a U.S. resident prior to being hired by the Embassy, but it may not tax an employee who was a nonresident alien of the United States when assigned to work at the Embassy.

Paragraph 2 provides that a pension paid by or out of funds created by the government of a Contracting State or a political subdivision or lcoal authority thereof to an individual for services rendered may be taxed only in that State unless the individual is both a resident and a national of the other Contracting State. Thus, the United States may tax such a pension paid by the People's Republic of China to a U.S. resident citizen but not to a resident alien. In the latter case, the exemption from U.S. tax is preserved by paragraph 3 of the Protocol.

The exemptions provided in this article are limited to remuneration and pensions with respect to services of a governmental nature. Paragraph 3 explains that services and pensions in government owned business are covered by Article 14, 15, 16, or 17 as the case may be. Whether functions are of a governmental nature is determined by reference to the concept of a governmental function in the State in which the income arises. For example, in the United States, employment by a government-owned airline does not constitute employment of a governmental nature.

Article 19.

This article provides that a resident of a Contracting State who goes to the other Contracting State for the primary purpose of teaching, lecturing, or conducting research at an accredited educational institution or scientific research institution in that other State will be exempt from tax in that other State on the remuneration for such activities for a period of up to three years in the aggregate. Thus, for example, a resident of China who visits the United States to conduct research at the National Institute of Health (NIH) for two years, 1986 and 1987, returns to China for a year, and the comes back for another year of research at NIH in 1989 would be exempt from tax on his NIH remuneration for each of the three years. However, if he stayed at NIH in 1990 or returned at a later time the exemption would no longer be available. The exemption provided in this article is not available if the research is not undertaken in the public interest, but for the private gain of a specific person or persons.

This article is excepted from the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of the Protocol, so its benefits are available to persons who otherwise qualify even if they become U.S. residents.

Article 20.

This article provides that a resident of a Contracting State who goes to the other Contracting State for the purpose of education, training or obtaining technical experience shall be exempt from tax in that other State on payments received from abroad for the purpose of his maintenance, education, or training, grants from a tax-exempt organization, and up to $5,000 per year of income for personal services performed in that other State. These exemptions may be claimed only for the period reasonalby necessary to complete the education or training. In some cases, the course of study or training may last less than year. For most undergraduate college or university degrees the appropriate period will be four years. For some advanced degrees, such as in medicine, the required period may be longer, e.g. seven years.

This article is excepted from the "saving clause" of paragraph 2 of the Protocol, so its benefits are available to persons who otherwise qualify even if they become U.S. residents.

Article 21.

Paragraph 1 provides that any income of a resident of a Contracting State which is not covered by other articles of the Agreement may be taxed only in that State. Prizes or winnings would be taxable under this article. (However, see also paragraph 3, which permits taxation at source).

Paragraph 2 provides an exception for income (other than income from real property) which is attributable to a permanent establishment or fixed base which the resident maintains in the other Contracting State. Such income, which includes dividends, interest and royalties derived by a resident of a Contracting State from third States which are attributable to a permanent establishment or fixed base of that resident in the other Contracting State, is taxable under the provisions of the Article 7 13. The exception for income from real property means that income of a resident of a Contracting State from real property which is situated in a third State may not be taxed by the other Contracting State even if attributable to a permanent establishment of the resident in that other State.

Paragraph 3 overrides paragraphs 1 and 2 to permit a Contracting State to tax income derived by a resident of the other Contracting State and not dealt with in the preceding articles, if it arises in that first-mentioned State.

Article 22.

This article describes the manner in which each country will undertake to avoid double taxation of its residents, and in the case of the United States, its citizens.

Paragraph 1 provides that China shall allow a foreign tax credit for income taxes paid to the United States up to the amount of Chinese tax on that income. A credit is also granted for U.S. income tax paid with respect to the profits of a U.S. company out of which dividends are paid to a Chinese company which owns at least 10 percent of the shares of the company paying the dividend.

Paragraph 2 provides that the United States, in accordance with its law, shall allow a foreign tax credit for income taxes paid to China by or on behalf of a U.S. resident or citizen and for Chinese income tax paid with respect to the profits of a Chinese company out of which dividends are paid to a U.S. company owning at least 10 percent of the voting rights of the company paying the dividends. For this purpose, the Chinese taxes referred to in Article 2 (paragraph 1(a) and 2) are considered income taxes. The guarantee of a foreign tax credit provided in this paragraph is independent of the statutory grant of a credit under sections 901–903 of the Code, but the amount of the credit to be allowed is determined in accordance with the limitations provided in the Code, (e.g., section 904(g)).

For purposes of applying the foreign tax credit for Chinese taxes provided in this Article, paragraph 3 provides that income derived by a resident of a Contracting State will be deemed to arise in the other Contracting State if such income may be taxed in the other State in accordance with this Agreement. Thus, for example, dividends, interest and royalties which may be taxed by China in accordance with Article 10, 11 or 12 will be considered Chinese source income.

This article is not affected by the saving clause. Thus, the benefits may be claimed by a U.S. resident or citizen. Alternatively, a U.S. resident or citizen may rely on the rules of the Code. However, the taxpayer may not make inconsistent choices between the rules of the Code and the Agreement.

Article 23.

This article prohibits discriminatory application of the taxes covered by the Agreement.

Paragraph 1 prohibits discrimination based solely on nationality. It provides that nationals of a Contracting State, wherever resident, shall not be taxed less favorably or subjected to more burdensome requirements connected with taxation, in the other Contracting State than nationals of that other State who are in the same circumstances. U.S. citizens who are not residents of the United States are not in the same circumstances as citizens of China who are not residents of the United States, because nonresident U.S. citizens generally are subject to U.S. tax on their worldwide income whereas nonresident aliens of the United States generally are subject to U.S. tax only on their U.S. income.

Paragraph 2 provides that a Contracting State may not impose more burdensome taxes or related requirements on a permanent establishment of an enterprise of the other Contracting State than it imposes on its own enterprises carrying on the same activities. However, when the permanent establishment is maintained by an individual resident of the other State, the State in which the permanent establishment is maintained is not obligated to grant to that individual the same personal allowances it grants to its own residents to reflect differing family responsibilities.

Paragraph 3 prohibits discrimination in the matter of deductions. Interest, royalties, and other disbursements by a resident of a Contracting State to a resident of the other Contracting State must be deductible for determining taxable profits in that other State under the same conditions as if they had been paid to a resident of the first-mentioned State. The term "other disbursements" is understood to include a reasonable allocation of executive and administrative expenses incurred for the benefit of a group of related enterprises.

Paragraph 4 requires that a Contracting State not impose more burdensome taxation on a subsidiary corporation owned by residents of the other State than it imposes on similar corporations which are locally owned.

Article 24.

This Article provides for cooperation between the competent authorities to resolve problems of double taxation.

Paragraph 1 provides that a taxpayer who considers that the actions of one or both of the Contracting States may result in taxation not in accordance with the Agreement may present his case to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which he is a resident or, in the case of claims concerning discrimination on the basis of nationality, to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which he is a national. In either case, the claim must be made within three years from the first notification of the action resulting in taxation not in accordance with the Agreement.

Paragraph 2 provides that the competent authority to which the case is presented, if it considers the objection to be justified and if it is not itself able to arrive at a solution, shall endeavor to resolve the case through consultation with the competent authority of the other Contracting State. Any agreement reached shall be implemented without regard to any statutory time limits of the Contracting States. Thus, if a Contracting State agrees that its tax was overstated, a refund of the excess tax paid will be made, even though the statute of limitations under domestic law may have expired. The waiver of the statute of limitations applies only for refunds and not for the imposition of additional taxes.

Paragraph 3 provides that the competent authorities shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts which may arise in the interpretation or application of the Agreement. For example, the competent authorities may agree on the same allocation of income, deductions, credits, or allowances, on the same characterization of items of income, and on a common meaning of terms used in the Agreement. The competent authorities also may consult together to eliminate double taxation in cases not provided for in the Agreement. The authority to consider cases not covered in the Agreement is not a broad grant of authority to expand the scope of the Agreement, but is intended to permit the competent authorities to apply the principles of the Agreement to settle specific cases of double taxation which are not expressly addressed.

Paragraph 4 provides that the competent authorities may communicate with each other directly for the purpose of reaching agreements in accordance with this article.

Article 25.

This article provides for exchanges of information between the tax authorities of the two Contracting States to avoid double taxation and prevent fiscal evasion.

Paragraph 1 provides that the competent authorities shall exchange such information as is necessary for carrying out the provisions of the Agreement or of their domestic laws concerning taxes covered by the Agreement, in particular with the objective of preventing tax evasion. Such information may be provided whether or not the requested Contracting State has a tax interest in the case in question. It also provides assurances that information so exchanged will be protected in the same manner as information obtained under domestic laws with respect to secrecy and disclosure. Persons involved in the administration of taxes covered by the Agreement include legislative bodies involved in the administration of taxes and their agents such as, for example, the U.S. General Accounting Office. Information may be disclosed to such persons, subject to the limitations of this article and the domestic law of the respective Contracting State.

Paragraph 2 explains that the obligation undertaken in paragraph 1 to exchange information does not require a Contracting State to carry out measures contrary to the laws and administrative practice of either Contracting State, to supply information not obtainable under its laws or in the normal course of its administration, or to supply information which would disclose trade secrets or other information the disclosure of which would be contrary to public policy.

Article 26.

This article clarifies that the Agreement does not affect taxation privileges of diplomatic or consular officials under other special agreements or under international law.

Article 27.

The Agreement is subject to approval in each Contracting State according to its legal requirements. Each State will notify the other, in writing, through diplomatic channels when those requirements have been completed.

The Agreement enters into force on the thirtieth day after the date of the later of such notification. Once it enters into force, its provisions will take effect for income derived during taxable periods of the recipient beginning on or after January 1 of the year following the entry into force.

Article 28.

The Agreement remains in force indefinitely unless terminated by one of the Contracting States. Either Contracting State may terminate the Agreement after five years from the date on which it enters into force by giving at least six months prior notice through diplomatic channels prior to June 30. In that event, the Agreement will cease to have effect with respect to income derived during taxable years of the recipient beginning on or after January 1 following the termination date.

Protocol

A protocol accompanies and forms part of the Agreement.

The provisions of paragraphs 1 through 6 of the Protocol are discussed above in connection with Articles 1, 2, 3, 4 and 11 of the Agreement.

Paragraph 7 of the Protocol contains a protection against "treaty shopping." It provides that the competent authorities may through consultation deny the benefits of Articles 9, 10, and 11, concerning dividends, interest and royalities, to a company of a third country if that company becomes a resident of one of the Contracting States for the principal purpose of enjoying benefits under the Agreement. This consultation obligation is intended to benefit both governments. The denial of benefits requires consultation, but is not dependent on the prior agreement of the competent authorities.

This provision is stated in more general and limited terms than the corresponding provision in other recent U.S. tax treaties, not because of a lesser interest in the principle of limiting treaty benefits to residents of the other Contracting State, but because it is not anticipated that this Agreement will be used for treaty shopping purposes. In particular, Chinese currency and investment controls and their limited network of treaties make it unlikely that third country residents would use China as a conduit for investing in the United States.

Paragraph 8 confirms that the taxation of international transportation income is governed by the agreement of March 5, 1982 with respect to mutual exemption from taxation of transportation income of shipping and air transport enterprsies.

Exchange of letters

In letters signed at the same time as the rest of the Agreement, President Reagan and Premier Zhao confirm the understanding of the two governments with respect to the United States position on tax sparing credits. It is agreed that, if the United States amends its laws to authorizes such credits or grants such a credit in a tax treaty with another country, the Agreement will be amended to incorporate such a credit. The amended Agreement would be subject to ratification.

ARGENTINA

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
WASHINGTON
DECEMBER 30, 1987

Excellency:

I have the honor to refer to the agreement signed on July 20, 1950, to exempt from income tax, on a reciprocal basis, income derived from international operation of ships and aircraft. The Government of the United States proposes that the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Argentine Republic modify the terms of the agreement. The terms of the modified agreement are as follows:

Article 1

(b) in the case of a United States enterprise, an enterprise owned by the Government of the United States—or a political subdivision of local authority thereof, individuals who are citizens or residents of the United States and not residents of Argentina, or companies created under the laws of the United States and not having their place of effective management in Argentina.

(c) it is understood that for a corporation to claim the benefits of this Agreement as an enterprise of a Party, it must satisfy the requirements of the law of the other Party designed to limit such benefits to corporations owned by residents of the first-mentioned Party.

4. The term "gross income" means all income derived from the international operation of ships or aircraft, including income from the rental of ships or aircraft on a full (time or voyage) basis and from the rental on a bareboat basis of ships or aircraft if the ships or aircraft are used in international transport or the rental income is incidental to income from the international operation of ships or aircraft. It also includes income from the rental of containers and related equipment used in international transport, and gains from the alienation of ships or aircraft or containers operated in internal transport, provided that such activity of rental or alienation is incidental to the international operation of ships or aircraft.

1. Gross income from the international operation of ships or aircraft derived by an enterprise of a Party shall be exempt from tax in the other Party.

2. Capital represented by ships or aircraft operated in international transport and by movable or immovable property pertaining exclusively to the operation of such ships or aircraft shall be taxable only in the Party in which the enterprise that operates such ships or aircraft is subject to tax in accordance with the preceding provisions.

3. The provisions of this article shall also apply to gross income from participation in a pool, a joint business, or an international operating agency.

Article 3

The competent authorities of the Parties shall endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulty or doubt arising as to the interpretation and application of this Agreement.

Article 4

The competent authorities of the Parties will endeavor to ensure that the tax benefits provided in this Agreement are not enjoyed by enterprises of third Parties.

Article 5

The Parties shall notify each other through diplomatic channels when their respective constitutional requirements for the entry into force of this Agreement have been satisfied. The Agreement shall enter into force on the date of the later of these notifications and shall have effect with respect to taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987. The Agreement shall be applied provisionally as of the date of signature.

Article 6

This agreement may be terminated by either Party giving written notice through diplomatic channels.

The Government of the United States of America considers that this note, together with your Government's reply note confirming that the Government of Argentine Republic agrees to these terms, constitutes an agreement between the two Governments modifying the agreement of July 20, 1950.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

Embassy of the Argentine Republic

Washington, D.C. 30 December 1987

Mr. Secretary of State:

BAHAMAS

Department of State
Washington,D.C.
June 26, 1987

The Department of State acknowledges receipt of note No. 52/87, dated May 18, 1987, from the Embassy of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas regarding the reciprocal exemption from income tax of income derived from the international operation of ships and aircraft.

Through the above-mentioned note, the Government of Bahamas, conveyed its favorable consideration of the Department of State's December 5, 1986 proposal for an exchange of notes establishing a reciprocal exemption of shipping and aircraft income tax. The Department of State proposes to the Embassy of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas that the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas now conclude an agreement to exempt from income tax, on a reciprocal basis, income derived by residents of the other country from the international operation of ships and aircraft. The terms of the agreement are as follows:

The Government of the United States of America, in accordance with sections 872(b) and 883(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, agrees to exempt from tax gross income derived from the international operation of ships or aircraft by individuals who are residents of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas (other than U.S. citizens) and corporations organized in the Commonwealth of The Bahamas. This exemption is granted on the basis of equivalent exemptions granted by the Government of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas to citizens of the United States (who are not residents of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas) and to corporations organized in the United States (which are not subject to tax by the Government of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas on the basis of residence).

In the case of a corporation, the exemption shall apply only if the corporation meets either of the following conditions:

(1) more than fifty percent of the value of the corporation's stock is owned, directly or indirectly, by individuals who are residents of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas or of another country which grants a reciprocal exemption to U.S. citizens and corporations; or

(2) the corporation's stock is primarily and regularly traded on an established securities market in the Commonwealth of The Bahamas, or is wholly owned by a corporation whose stock is so traded and which is also organized in the Commonwealth of The Bahamas. For purposes of the exemption from U.S. tax, subparagraph (1) will be considered to be satisfied if the corporation is a "controlled foreign corporation" under the Internal Revenue Code.

Gross income includes all income derived from the international operation of ships or aircraft, including income from the rental of ships or aircraft on a full (time or voyage) basis and income from the rental of containers and related equipment which is incidental to the international operation of ships or aircraft. It also includes income from the rental on a bareboat basis of ships and aircraft used for international transport.

The Department of State considers that this note, together with the Embassy's reply note confirming that the Government of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas agrees to these terms, constitutes an agreement between the two Governments. This agreement shall enter into force on the date of the Embassy's reply note and shall have effect with respect to taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

Either Government may terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination through diplomatic channels.

The Department of State calls the Government of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas' attention to a slight change between the above-proposed agreement and the agreement set out in the December 5, 1986 proposal. In the conditions necessary for the exemption to apply to a corporation, the ownership requirement concerning "fifty percent or more of the value of the corporation's stock" has been changed to "more than fifty percent of the corporation's stock." This change is necessary to make the agreement conform to revelent U.S. legislation.

SINGAPORE

Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Singapore

February 11, 1988

The Embassy of the United States of America presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Singapore and has the honor to inform the Ministry that the Embassy wishes to replace the text of its Note No. 425/87 dated December 24, 1987, with the revised language below. This Note, therefore, proposes that the two Governments conclude an agreement to exempt from income tax, on a reciprocal basis, income derived by residents of the other country from the international operation of aircraft. The terms of the agreement are as follows:

The Government of the United States of America, in accordance with sections 872(b) and 883(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, agrees to exempt from tax gross income derived from the international operation of aircraft by individuals who are residents of the Republic of Singapore (other than U.S. citizens) and corporations which are controlled and managed in the Republic of Singapore (other than corporations organized in the United States). This exemption is granted on the basis of equivalent exemptions granted by the Republic of Singapore to citizens of the United States (who are not residents of the Republic of Singapore) and to corporations organized in the United States (which are not subject to tax by the Republic of Singapore on the basis of residence).

In the case of a corporation, the exemption shall apply only if the corporation meets either of the following conditions:

(I) More than 50 percent of the value of the corporation's stock is owned, directly or indirectly, by individuals who are residents of the Republic of Singapore or of another country which grants a reciprocal exemption to U.S. citizens and corporations; or

(II) The corporation's stock is primarily and regularly traded on an established securities market in the Republic of Singapore, or is wholly-owned by a corporation whose stock is so traded and which is also organized in the Republic of Singapore.

For the purpose of sub-paragraph (I), the Government of the Republic of Singapore will be treated as an individual resident of the Republic of Singapore. For purposes of the exemption from U.S. tax, sub-paragraph (I) will be considered to be satisfied if the corporation is a "controlled foreign corporation" under the Internal Revenue Code.

Gross income includes all income derived from the operation of aircraft, including:

(I) Income from the rental of aircraft used in international transport on a full (time or voyage) or bareboat basis;

(II) Income from the rental of containers and related equipment used in international transport which is incidental to income from the international operation of aircraft;

(III) Income from the participation in air transport pools which engage in international operation of aircraft; and

(IV) Gains from the alienation of aircraft by a person whose predominant activity is the international operation of aircraft.

The Embassy of the United States of America considers that this note, together with the Ministry's reply note confirming that the Government of the Republic of Singapore agrees to these terms, constitutes an agreement amending the agreement of 30 September 1985. This agreement shall enter into force on the date of the Ministry's reply note and shall have effect with respect to taxable years beginning on or after 1 January 1987.

If any difficulty or doubt as to the interpretation or application of this agreement should arise, the competent authorities of the two countries shall seek to resolve such difficulty or doubt by mutual agreement. For this purpose, the competent authorities are:

(A) In the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury or his authorized representative; and

(B) In Singapore, the Minister for Finance or his authorized representative.

Either government may terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination through diplomatic channels.

The Embassy of the United States of America takes this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Singapore the assurances of its highest consideration.

Embassy of the United States of America
Singapore

March 24, 1988

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Singapore presents its compliments to the Embassy of the United States of America and has the honor to acknowledge receipt of the Embassy's note No. 064/88, dated 11 February 1988, proposing the terms of the reciprocal exemption from income tax of income derived from the international operation of aircraft.

The Government of the Republic of Singapore agrees to exempt from tax gross income derived from the international operation of aircraft by U.S. citizens (who are not residents of the Republic of Singapore) and corporations organized in the United States (other than corporations which are subject to tax by the Republic of Singapore on the basis of residence). This exemption is granted on the basis of equivalent exemptions granted by the United States to individuals who are residents of the Republic of Singapore (other than U.S. citizens) and corporations which are controlled and managed in the Republic of Singapore (other than corporations organized in the United States).

In the case of a corporation, the exemption shall apply only if the corporation meets either of the following conditions:

(I) More than 50 percent of the value of the corporation's stock is owned, directly or indirectly, by individuals who are citizens of the United States or of another country which grants a reciprocal exemption to residents (both individuals and corporations) of the Republic of Singapore; or

(II) The corporation's stock is primarily and regularly traded on an established securities market in the United States, or is wholly-owned by a corporation whose stock is so traded and which is also organized in the United States. For the purposes of sub-paragraph (I), the Government of the United States of America will be treated as an individual resident of the United States of America.

Gross income includes all income derived from the operation of aircraft, including:

(I) Income from the rental of aircraft used in international transport on a full (time or voyage) or bareboat basis;

(II) Income from the rental of containers and related equipment used in international transport which is incidental to income from the international operation of aircraft;

(III) Income from the participation in air transport pools which engage in international operation of aircraft; and

(IV) Gains from the alienation of aircraft by a person whose predominant activity is the international operation of aircraft.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs is pleased to confirm that the Embassy's note and this reply note constitute an agreement amending the agreement of 30 September 1985. This agreement shall enter into force on the date of the Ministry's reply note and shall have effect with respect to taxable years beginning on or after 1 January 1987.

If any difficulty or doubt as to the interpretation or application of this agreement should arise, the competent authorities of the two countries shall seek to resolve such difficulty or doubt by mutual agreement. For this purpose, the competent authorities are:

(A) In the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury or his authorized representative; and

(B) In Singapore, the Minister for Finance or his authorized representative.

Either government may terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination through diplomatic channels.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Singapore avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of the United States of America the assurances of its highest consideration.

[Note of December 3, 1986, not published]

Department of State
Washington, D.C.

May 8, 1987

The Swedish Embassy presents its compliments to the Department of State and has the honor to refer to the Department's note of December 3, 1986, regarding an amendment to the exchange of notes between the Government of Sweden and the Government of the United States of America relating to relief from double income tax on shipping profits, signed at Washington, March 31, 1938.

The Embassy wishes to inform the Department of State that the Government of Sweden accepts the proposal to amend the existing arrangement in the manner proposed by the Department with, however, the following amendment:

The sentence "It also includes income from the rental on a bareboat basis of ships and aircraft used for international transport." is replaced by "It also includes income from the rental on a bareboat basis of ships and aircraft used for international transport if it is an occasional source of income for an enterprise engaged in the international operation of ships or aircraft."

The Government of Sweden desires to make the exchange of notes, with the indicated amendment, as soon as possible.

The Swedish Embassy avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Department of State the assurances of its highest consideration.

Swedish Embassy
Washington, D.C.

June 26, 1987

The Department of State acknowledges receipt of note No. 33, dated May 8, 1987, from the Embassy of Sweden.

The Department of State proposes to the Embassy of Sweden that the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Sweden conclude an agreement amending the agreement of March 31, 1938 to exempt from income tax, on a reciprocal basis, income derived by residents of the other country from the international operation of ships and aircraft. The terms of the agreement are as follows:

The Government of the United States of America, in accordance with sections 872(b) and 883(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, agrees to exempt from tax gross income derived from the international operation of ships or aircraft by individuals who are residents of Sweden (other than U.S. citizens) and corporations organized in Sweden. This exemption is granted on the basis of equivalent exemptions granted by Sweden to citizens of the United States (who are not residents of Sweden) and to corporations organized in the United States (which are not subject to tax by Sweden on the basis of residence).

In the case of a corporation, the exemption shall apply only if the corporation meets either of the following conditions:

(1) more than 50 percent of the value of the corporation's stock is owned, directly or indirectly, by individuals who are residents of Sweden or of another country which grants a reciprocal exemption to U.S. citizens and corporations; or

(2) the corporation's stock is primarily and regularly traded on an established securities market in Sweden, or is wholly owned by a corporation whose stock is so traded and which is also organized in Sweden.

For purposes of the exemption from U.S. tax, subparagraph (1) will be considered to be satisfied if the corporation is a "controlled foreign corporation" under the Internal Revenue Code.

Gross income includes all income derived from the international operation of ships or aircraft, including income from the rental of ships or aircraft on a full (time or voyage) basis and income from the rental of containers and related equipment which is incidental to the international operation of ships or aircraft. It also includes income from the rental on a bareboat basis of ships and aircraft used for international transport if it is an occasional source of income for an enterprise engaged in the international operation of ships or aircraft.

The Department of State considers that this note, together with the Embassy's reply note confirming that the Government of Sweden agrees to these terms, constitutes an agreement amending the agreement of March 31, 1938. This agreement shall enter into force on the date of the Embassy's reply note and shall have effect with respect to taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

Either Government may terminate this agreement by giving written notice of termination through diplomatic channels.

In the case of a corporation, the exemption shall apply only if the corporation meets either of the following conditions:

(1) 50 percent or more of the value of the corporation's stock is owned, directly or indirectly, by individuals who are citizens of United States or of another country which grants a reciprocal exemption to Swedish residents and corporations; or

(2) the corporation's stock is primarily and regularly traded on an established securities market in the United States, or is wholly owned by a corporation whose stock is so traded and which is also organized in the United States.

Gross income includes all income derived from the international operation of ships or aircraft, including income from the rental of ships or aircraft on a full (time or voyage) basis and income from the rental of containers and related equipment which is incidental to the international operation of ships or aircraft. The Agreement shall enter into force on the date of the later of these notifications and shall have effect with respect to taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

Continuation of Code Section 897(i) Elections by Netherlands Antilles Companies; Anti-Treaty Shopping Rules; Retroactive Section 897(i) Elections

This notice provides guidance on the status of elections by Netherlands Antilles companies and certain other treaty country corporations under section 897(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Such elections provide that a foreign corporation will be treated as a domestic corporation for purposes of sections 897, 1445, and 6039C of the Code. A section 897(i) election can be made only if the foreign corporation is entitled to nondiscriminatory treatment under any treaty obligation of the United States.

The rules set forth herein provide guidance concerning: (a) the impact of the termination of the income tax treaty between the United States and the Netherlands Antilles on section 897(i) elections made by Netherlands Antilles companies; (b) the application of the anti-treaty shopping provision of the Friendship, Commerce and Navigation treaty between the United States and the Netherlands Antilles and similar treaties; and (c) retroactive elections under section 897(i). This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is used in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. Taxpayers may rely on this notice until section 1.897-3 of the Income Tax Regulations is amended to reflect the guidance contained herein. Any modification of the rules contained herein will be prospective only.

1. Termination of the Protocol to the U.S.—Netherlands Income Tax Convention

The United States is a party to the United States-Netherlands Income Tax Convention, TIAS 1855, T.D. 5778, 1950-1 C.B. 92, as supplemented by the Protocol of June 15, 1955, extending the Convention to the Netherlands Antilles, TIAS 3366, 1956-2 C.B. 1116 and as modified by the 1963 Protocol of October 23, 1963, TIAS 5665, 1965-1 C.B. 624

(the "Antilles Convention"). A notice delivered by the United States to the Kingdom of the Netherlands on June 29, 1987, and modified on July 10, 1987, terminates all provisions of the Antilles Convention other than Article VIII and such other ancillary provisions in the Antilles Convention as apply to effectuate, modify, or limit the exemption from tax provided in Article VIII for interest described therein.

Section 897(i) elections based on the nondiscrimination provision of the Antilles Convention can be made by a Netherlands Antilles company on or before December 31, 1987. Netherlands Antilles corporations which have made such a section 897(i) election on or before December 31, 1987, will be treated as having also made the election under the Friendship, Commerce and Navigation treaty between the United States and the Netherlands Antilles, infra, and will be bound by, and receive the benefits of, that election after December 31, 1987, to the extent provided in sections 2 and 3 below. Elections under the Antilles Convention will otherwise terminate as of January 1, 1988.

2. Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation

The legislative history of section 897 specifically states that the discrimination protection granted by friendship, commerce and navigation treaties may support a section 897(i) election. See Conf. Comm. Report No. 176, 97th Cong., 1st Sess. 277-78 (1981). The United States is a party to the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation with the Kingdom of the Netherlands, extended to the Netherlands Antilles under Article XXIV thereof (8 UST 2043; TIAS 3942 (1957)) (the "Antilles FCN Treaty"). Article XI of the Antilles FCN Treaty grants nondiscriminatory treatment to companies of either country engaged in trade or other gainful pursuit in the other country. However, Article XXII(1)(e) of the Antilles FCN Treaty (referred to herein as the "anti-treaty shopping provision") provides that the Antilles FCN Treaty does not preclude either country from denying the advantages of the Antilles FCN Treaty to any company controlled, directly or indirectly, by nationals of third countries.

The Internal Revenue Service hereby announces that companies formed under the laws of the Netherlands Antilles which are controlled, directly or indirectly, by nationals of third countries may not rely on the nondiscrimination provisions of the Antilles FCN Treaty as the basis for making a section 897(i) election after May 2, 1988. Such companies will be considered controlled by nationals of a third country if 50% or more of the voting power of any class of stock entitled to vote, or 50% or more of the value of any class of stock, is held directly or indirectly by nationals of third countries. The attribution rules of section 883(c)(4) of the Code will apply to determine control. A corporation meeting the requirements of section 884(e)(4)(B) (relating to certain publicly traded corporations) will not be treated as controlled by nationals of third countries. In addition, companies entitled to the benefits of the nondiscrimination provisions contained in any other friendship, commerce and navigation treaty (an "FCN treaty") which contains an anti-treaty shopping provision similar to Article XXII(1)(e) of the Antilles FCN Treaty may not rely on such nondiscrimination provision if the company is controlled, directly or indirectly, by nationals of third countries.

A company which makes a section 897(i) election on or before May 2, 1988, in reliance on an FCN treaty's nondiscrimination provision, but which does not conform to the anti-treaty shopping provision of the FCN treaty, will be bound by, and receive the benefits of, that election only as provided in section 3 below. A company will be considered not to conform to the anti-treaty shopping provisions of an FCN treaty if it does not satisfy the anti-treaty shopping provision of an FCN treaty at either the time the election is made or the time of an acquisition or disposition of a U.S. real property interest. Any such company will be referred to herein as having made an "FCN treaty-shopping election."

A section 897(i) election based on the Antilles Convention, pursuant to section 1.897-3(c)(1)(ii), will be treated as having been made under the Antilles FCN Treaty for purposes of transactions occurring on or after January 1, 1988, and for purposes of section 3 of this Notice. Accordingly, a Netherlands Antilles company's section 897(i) election which would otherwise terminate on January 1, 1988, will continue to be in effect to the extent that the election would continue to be in effect after January 1, 1988 if the election had originally been made under the Antilles FCN Treaty. Thus, a section 897(i) election that is not an Antilles FCN treaty-shopping election will remain fully in force without regard to the provisions of section 3, below. A section 897(i) election which is an FCN treaty-shopping election will be subject to the rules set forth in section 3, below.

3. FCN Treaty-Shopping Section 897(i) Elections

The provisions of this section 3 apply to any company which on or before May 2, 1988, makes an FCN treaty-shopping election. This section 3 does not apply to a valid section 897(i) election made under any income tax convention in effect after December 31, 1987. A section 897(i) election can only be made under the nondiscrimination provisions of most income tax treaties to which the United States is a party if the company has a permanent establishment in the United States. See, e.g., Article 24(3) of the U.S. Treasury Department's Model Income Tax Treaty dated June 16, 1981.

A. Effect of Elections Made on or before May 2, 1988 for the Period January 1, 1988 to May 2, 1988

For the period January 1, 1988, through May 2, 1988, an FCN treaty-shopping election made on or before May 2, 1988, is effective with respect to transactions occurring during that period, except that in no event shall such election apply to property acquired or disposed of by the electing corporation for which it has a section 1223 holding period commencing on or after January 1, 1988.

B. Effect of Elections Made on or before May 2, 1988 for the Period Beginning after May 2, 1988

After May 2, 1988, the stock of a company which has made an FCN treaty-shopping election will be treated as a United States real property interest if (a) the company acquired or disposed of a U.S. real property interest prior to May 3, 1988, and (b) the section 897(i) election affects the tax consequences to the transferor or transferee in the acquisition or disposition of such U.S. real property interest, not including withholding tax consequences under section 1445. If a transaction described in the preceding sentence does not occur on or before May 2, 1988, then the election will be treated as terminating on May 3, 1988.

If the stock of the electing company is treated as a U.S. real property interest after May 2, 1988 pursuant to the provisions of the preceding paragraph, then the election will continue to apply to dispositions of stock in that company by a shareholder after May 2, 1988, until the company has disposed of all U.S. real property interests (or property described in section 1.897-3(c)(3)(ii) for which the company has a section 1223 holding period commencing before January 1, 1988. As long as the company's section 897(i) election is in effect pursuant to this section 3, the election will continue to apply to the disposition by the electing company of all U.S. real property interests (or property described in section 1.897-3(c)(3)(ii)) for which it has a section 1223 holding period commencing before January 1, 1988. The section 897(i) election will in no event apply after May 2, 1988, to any disposition by the electing company of a U.S. real property interest for which the electing company has a section 1223 holding period commencing on or after January 1, 1988, or to any acquisition by the company of a U.S. real property interest in a transaction described in the nonrecognition provisions of the Code. For example, if after May 2, 1988, a foreign shareholder transfers a U.S. real property interest to an electing corporation in a transaction described in section 351, the stock in the electing corporation will not be treated as a U.S. real property interest in the hands of the foreign shareholder for purposes of applying section 897(e) to the exchange.

4. Retroactive Elections under Section 897(i)

Except as provided below, a foreign corporation entitled to nondiscrimination protection can make a retroactive section 897(i) election, as provided in section 1.897-3(d)(2). Normally, a section 897(i) election is made prior to the disposition of a U.S. real property interest by a foreign corporation, including dispositions pursuant to the liquidation of the foreign corporation. Questions have been raised as to whether the election had to be made by a foreign corporation prior to a disposition of a U.S. real property interest which would be taxable but for the election (e.g., transfers in certain reorganizations).

A retroactive section 897(i) election can be made after such a real property interest disposition by a foreign corporation entitled to nondiscrimination treatment provided the conditions of section 1.897-3(d)(2) are satisfied, i.e., (a) payment has been made in an amount equal to the sum of all federal income taxes (plus interest thereon) which would have been due on dispositions of interests in the foreign corporation (or a disposition described in section 1.897-3(e)) during the period set forth in section 1.897-3(c)(5) if the section 897(i) election were in effect during that period, or (b) all such dispositions took place under circumstances in which the transferee's basis was the same as the transferor's basis, increased by any gain recognized by the transferor and any tax paid by the transferor under chapter 1 of the Code. In addition, if there has been a prior disposition of a United States real property interest by such corporation, payment must be made of a sum equal to all federal income taxes (including interest and penalties), if any, which would be due upon such a disposition by a domestic corporation. Such a retroactive election can establish the tax free status of a liquidation or reorganization under section 897(d)(2) or section 897(e). In the case of a corporation no longer in existence, a retroactive election can be made by any successor-in-interest to such corporation which is liable for the payment of the corporation's federal income tax liability, or by any person who was an officer of such corporation who was liable for the payment of any tax liability of such corporation under sections 6672(a) and 6671(b).

Retroactive section 897(i) elections based on the Antilles Convention may not be made after December 31, 1987. Retroactive FCN treaty-shopping elections may not be made after May 2, 1988. A section 897(i) election may be revoked prospectively, in accordance with the procedures of section 1.897-3(f).

Transitional Rule for Registered Gasohol Blenders to Purchase Gasoline and Pay the Reduced Tax Rate

The purpose of this notice is to notify taxpayers and other affected persons that for the first quarter of 1988, the Internal Revenue Service ("Service") will provide a transitional rule that under certain conditions will allow all registered gasohol blenders to purchase gasoline and pay the reduced rate of tax on the gasohol mixture under section 4081(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 ("Code"). The transition period will allow the Service to consider and address the concerns of the industry and others as to the manner in which the refund procedure provided by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 in section 6427(i)(3) of the Code, when fully implemented, should apply when gasoline used in producing gasohol is purchased at 9.1 cents a gallon.

For now, in lieu of using the refund procedure provided in sections 6427(f) and (i)(3) of the Code and §48.6427-3(f) of the proposed regulations that were published in the Federal Register on November 18, 1987 (52 FR 44141), any registered blender of gasohol is allowed to purchase gasoline at the reduced rate of tax (3 1/3 cents a gallon plus the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate), provided the registered gasohol blender files a Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return (Form 720) for the first quarter of 1988, in accordance with the instructions for that Form. Those instructions will provide that such return must report the total volume of gasoline purchased at the reduced rate and the total volume of gasohol produced by the blender for the first quarter of 1988, in addition to any excise tax liability.

Under section 4081(c)(2) of the Code, gasohol blenders that purchase gasoline at the reduced rate of tax will be liable for an excise tax liability of 5 2/3 cents for each gallon, in addition to the 3 1/3 cents tax already imposed on each gallon of gasoline under section 4081(c)(1) of the Code, if they (1) fail to blend such gasoline with alcohol to produce gasohol, or (2) having blended the gasoline to produce gasohol, separate such gasoline.

In addition, all gasohol blenders purchasing gasoline at the reduced rate during the first quarter of 1988, must maintain records as provided in regulation §48.4081-2(h)(3) (relating to records of producer of gasohol).

The Service announced on December 9, 1987 (I.R.S. Notice 87-83), that when the proposed regulations on the gasoline excise tax are issued in temporary or final form, they will provide that Certificates of Registry issued under section 4101 of the Code as in effect prior to January 1, 1988, will be revoked on March 31, 1988, rather than on December 31, 1987. In addition, the bond requirements in the regulations will be effective April 1, 1988, instead of January 1, 1988. Therefore, until April 1, 1988, taxpayers may rely on registrations currently in effect for all purposes for which registration is relevant under the proposed regulations, including determination of whether a gasohol blender is registered for purposes of proposed regulation §48.4081-1(a)(3). A gasohol blender that wishes to qualify for the reduced rate of tax on purchases of gasoline to be used in the production of gasohol, but that does not currently hold a Certificate of Registry, will be required to register. Application for registration by a gasohol blender should be made on new Form 637 (Rev. October 1987), if that form is available at the appropriate IRS district office. If that form is unavailable, application for registration should be made as a producer of gasohol on Form 637 as in use under section 4101 of the Code as in effect prior to January 1, 1988 ("old Form 637"). In either case, the applicant must mark "Priority—new gasoline excise tax registrant" on the top of the Form 637 and on any envelope used for mailing the Form. Due to the time constraints in processing new Certificates of Registry, new registrants are encouraged to submit a Form 637 to the appropriate district director as soon as possible. No bond (Form 928) is required for these registrations (until the new registration and bond requirements take effect). Any registration on the old Form 637 will be revoked as of the close of business on March 31, 1988. Any registrant using the new Form 637 to register as a gasohol blender may be required to provide the Service with additional information to maintain a valid registration effective April 1, 1988, if different procedures are provided by the Service for purchasing gasoline at the reduced tax rate.

Exclusion Limit for Employer-Provided Dependent Care Assistance Payments

Section 1163(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 427, amended section 129(a) of the Internal Revenue Code by imposing a specific dollar limit on the exclusion of dependent care expenses. This amendment applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Section 129(a)(2) of the Code provides, in general, that a taxpayer may exclude from gross income a maximum of $5,000 of employer-provided dependent care assistance in any taxable year. The maximum exclusion for a married individual filing a separate return is $2,500.

Cafeteria plans established by employers under section 125 of the Code often offer dependent care assistance coverage as a benefit to employees. For this assistance to be a qualified benefit, dependent care expenses must be incurred in the plan year for which coverage thereof is elected. Q&A18 of section 1.125-1 of the Proposed Income Tax Regulations provides that dependent care expenses are treated as incurred when the dependent care is provided and not when the employee is billed or charged, or pays for the dependent care.

Example:

Under a cafeteria plan an employee is provided dependent care assistance. In 1985, the employee irrevocably elects to be reimbursed $9,600 for dependent care assistance in 1986. In 1986, the employee incurs expenses in the amount elected but is reimbursed $8,800. As a result of the time necessary to process reimbrusements, the employee receives the $800 balance in 1987. The employee may exclude the entire $9,600 in 1986, regardless of the fact that $800 was reimbursed in 1987, because (1) all the dependent care expenses are treated as incurred in 1986 when the services were provided and (2) there is no limitation on the amount of exclusion for 1986 (other than the earned income limitation set forth in section 129(b) of the Code). Also, the $800 balance received by the employee in 1987 is not counted against the employee's new limit ($5,000 or $2,500) available for 1987.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Calculation of the Excise Tax on Regulated Investment Companies

This notice addresses two issues relating to the application in 1987 of section 4982 of the Internal Revenue Code. As amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the "Act"), section 4982 of the Code imposes a nondeductible excise tax on any regulated investment company ("RIC"). The excise tax is effective for calendar years beginning after December 31, 1986. The excise tax is equal to 4 percent of the excess, if any, of the RIC's "required distribution" for any calendar year over the RIC's "distributed amount" (as defined in section 4982(c)) for such calendar year.

The required distribution of a RIC for a calendar year is defined in section 4982(b)(1) to mean 97 percent of the RIC's ordinary income for such calendar year plus 90 percent of the RIC's capital gain net income for the one-year period ending on October 31 of such calendar year. (Under legislation pending at the time of the release of this notice, the distribution percentage of capital gain net income is increased to 98 percent.) Under section 4982(b)(2), the required distribution for a calendar year is increased by the excess of the "grossed up required distribution" (as defined in section 4982(b)(3)) for the preceding calendar year over the distributed amount for the preceding calendar year.

Effective Dates Applicable for Purposes of Section 4982

For purposes of calculating the excise tax under section 4982, a RIC is required to calculate its capital gain net income by treating the one-year period ending on October 31 as its taxable year and is required to calculate its ordinary income by treating the calendar year as its taxable year. Questions have been raised regarding the effective date, for purposes of section 4982, of those provisions of the 1986 Act that are effective with reference to the taxable year of the taxpayer. Specifically, the issue is whether the applicability of these provisions, for purposes of section 4982, is to be based upon the taxable year the RIC is treated as having under section 4982 or upon the actual taxable year of the RIC.

When issued, regulations under section 4982 will provide that the treatment of a RIC as having a calendar year or a year ending October 31 as its taxable year for purposes of section 4982 will not apply for the purpose of determining the applicability of provisions the effective date of which is determined with reference to the taxable year of the taxpayer. Rather, the actual taxable year of the RIC will be used to determine the applicability of such provisions.

Example. RIC M has a taxable year ending June 30. During 1987, M enters into numerous "section 988 transactions," as defined in section 988(c)(1) of the Code (determined without regard to the effective date of section 988). Section 988 generally applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. The effective date of section 988, for purposes of determining M's excise tax liability under section 4982, is determined based upon M's actual taxable year. Accordingly, for purposes of section 4982, section 988 will apply to transactions closed after June 30, 1987, and will not apply to transactions closed before July 1, 1987.

Although section 4982 is effective for calendar years beginning after December 31, 1986, the required distribution of a RIC for calendar year 1987 is, under section 4982, increased by the excess, if any, of (a) the "grossed up required distribution" for calendar year 1986 over (b) the distributed amount for calendar year 1986. The grossed up required distribution of a RIC for calendar year 1986 is an amount equal to the sum of (a) 100 percent of the RIC's ordinary income for calendar year 1986, (b) 100 percent of the RIC's capital gain net income for the period beginning November 1, 1985 and ending October 31, 1986, and (c) any prior year shortfall. Generally, such prior year shortfall may be derived from amounts reported in prior taxable years.

Under these rules, for purposes of determining the required distribution for calendar year 1987, RICs with taxable years not ending on October 31, 1986 are required to determine separately the amount of their capital gain net income for the portion of their taxable year ending before November 1, 1986 and for the portion beginning after October 31, 1986. The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that, in light of the fact that no excise tax was imposed in calendar year 1986, it is inappropriate to subject RICs to the increased accounting costs and, in certain cases, increased distribution requirements that would result from a separate determination of pre-November 1, 1986 and post-October 31, 1986 capital gain net income. Accordingly, when issued, regulations under section 4982 will provide that, in lieu of separately calculating capital gain net income for the pre-November 1 and post-October 31 portions of a taxable year that includes October 31, 1986, a RIC may (but is not required to) treat all of its capital gains and losses for the taxable year as attributable to the pre-November 1 portion of the taxable year for purposes of calculating its grossed up required distribution for calendar year 1986.

Example 1. RIC N is a calendar taxpayer. During calendar year 1986, N has capital gain net income of $100. In order to avoid the cost of closing its books as of October 31, 1986 to determine its pre-November 1, 1986 and post-October 31, 1986 capital gain net income, N may treat all of the capital gain net income as attributable to the pre-November 1, 1986 portion of its taxable year. In calculating N's required distribution for calendar year 1987, under section 4982(b)(2)(A), the $100 will be included in N's grossed up required distribution for 1986. The $100 will not be included in N's capital gain net income for the one-year period ending on October 31, 1987, under section 4982(b)(1)(B).

Example 2. RIC O has a taxable year ending March 31. During its taxable year ending March 31, 1987, O has capital gain net income of $60, consisting of capital gain income of $100 for the pre-November 1 portion of the taxable year and a capital loss of $40 for the post-October 31 portion of the taxable year. O may treat its pre-November 1 capital gain net income as equal to $60. In calculating O's required distribution for calendar year 1987, under section 4982(b)(2)(A), O may include the $60 in its grossed up required distribution for 1986. In that case, the $40 loss will not be included in O's capital gain net income for the one-year period ending on October 31, 1987, under section 4982(b)(1)(B).

A RIC is not required to file an election with the Internal Revenue Service indicating the manner in which it calculates its grossed up required distribution for calendar year 1986. If, however, in determining its liability for the tax imposed by section 4982 for any period, a RIC takes an item of gain or loss attributable to the post-October 31, 1986 portion of a taxable year into account in a manner inconsistent with the optional method allowed by this notice, the treatment provided for such item in this notice is not allowed.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Treaty-Based Equivalent Exemptions for Shipping and Aircraft Income

The Tax Reform Act of 1986, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1, modified sections 872(b) and 883 of the Internal Revenue Code. Those sections now provide that a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation may generally exclude from gross income amounts derived from the operation of ships and aircraft if the individual's country of residence or the corporation's country of incorporation grants an equivalent exemption to United States taxpayers. Section 883(c) generally denies the exclusion to a foreign corporation if 50 percent or more of the value of its stock is owned by individuals who are not residents of its country of incorporation, or of another country that grants an equivalent exemption.

The equivalent exemption may be based on the foreign country's domestic law or on income tax treaties. Most income tax treaties to which the United States is a party provide for reciprocal shipping and aircraft income exemptions. Under some of these treaties, the exemption is available only if the taxpayer's ships or aircraft are registered in its country of residence or incorporation. This notice informs taxpayers that if a foreign corporation deriving income from the operation of ships or aircraft and claiming benefits under section 883(a) of the Code is owned by residents of a third country that has a tax treaty with the United States, section 883(c) will not apply only if the foreign shareholders meet the requirements (including registry limitations) of the reciprocal exemption article of the treaty.

For example, Country X's domestic law provides United States corporations a full exemption from tax on shipping income, but Country Y's does not. A tax treaty between the United States and Country Y exempts shipping income of residents of the other country only if the ships are registered in the taxpayer's country of residence. If a shipping corporation organized in Country X is owned by residents of Country Y, therefore, section 883(c) of the Code will not bar an exclusion under section 883(a) for income earned by ships registered in Country Y, but will bar an exclusion for income earned by ships registered elsewhere.

In December of 1986, the United States sent notice of the changes in sections 872(b) and 883(a) of the Code to foreign governments whose tax treaties contain the registry or "flag" limitation on shipping and aircraft income exemptions, and expressed an interest in modifying those provisions to conform to the new statutory rules. These modifications could provide reciprocal exemptions retroactive to January 1, 1987. Otherwise, the exclusion that section 883(a) of the Code provides for shipping and aircraft income earned on or after that date will be limited as described in this notice.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is used in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied on to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287.

Amendment of Plans to Comply with Proposed Regulations Sections 1.401(a)-4 and 1.411(d)-4 on Alternative Benefits—Effective Dates

The effective dates for existing plans provided in Proposed Regulation sections 1.401(a)-4 and 1.411(d)-4 (51 FR 3798, January 30, 1986) will be extended in the forthcoming Treasury decision with respect to these regulations. In no event will the effective dates for existing plans, as defined in such regulations, be earlier than ninety days after the earlier of (i) the publication of a subsequent notice setting forth revised effective date rules, or (ii) the publication of the Treasury decision with respect to such regulations.

Taxpayers may rely on this notice for guidance pending the issuance of a subsequent notice or final regulations. Thus, taxpayers with existing plans as defined in the proposed regulations, who otherwise qualify for the amendment alternatives provided for in the transitional rules of such regulations but for the effective dates applicable to such rules, may continue to make the amendments provided for in the transitional rules until the later of the effective date for such plan as provided in the proposed regulations or the extended effective date described above.

This notice does not extend the effective date for making retroactive amendments required by Notice 87-46, 1987-1 C.B. 502, with respect to certain impermissible amendments. Furthermore, this notice does not extend the effective date with respect to those alternative benefit provisions and provisions for consent, discretion or other conditions on availability which are subject to the effective date rules applicable to new plans pursuant to the terms of Proposed Regulation sections 1.401 (f)-4 A-6(c) and 1.411(d)-4 A-8(c).

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Application of Section 382(l)(5)(D) to Certain Transactions in which the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation establishes a Federal Mutual Domestic Building and Loan Association

The Internal Revenue Service intends to promulgate regulations clarifying the effect of section 382 (l)(5)(D) on certain transactions in which the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation ("FSLIC") places defaulted thrift institutions into receivership as part of its Management Consignment Program ("MCP"). The program is operated by FSLIC pursuant to its authority under section 1729(a) and (b) of title 12, United States Code.

Under the current MCP, a stock or mutual savings and loan association ("S&L") that is in default is placed in receivership, an interim mutual S&L (the "interim association") is established, and the assets and liabilities of the defaulted institution are transferred to the interim association, which continues the business of the transferor corporation. The interim association remains in existence only until FSLIC is able to transfer the assets and liabilities of the association to a qualified purchaser. This manner of liquidating a defaulted S&L is generally referred to as a "passthrough receivership".

Section 382(l)(5)(A) provides that the section 382 limitation on the utilization of net operating losses will not apply in the case of an ownership change with respect to certain financially distressed corporations. In general, such relief is available if (i) the loss corporation is under the jurisdiction of the court in a title 11 proceeding or a similar case and (ii) the shareholders and qualified creditors of the loss corporation, immediately before an ownership change, own at least 50 percent of the loss corporation stock immediately after the ownership change. A more liberal exception to the application of the section 382 limitation is available for certain financial institutions that undergo a reorganization described in section 368(a)(3)(D)(ii). Section 382(l)(5)(D) provides, however, that such relief with respect to an ownership change is made inapplicable if there is a subsequent ownership change within a two year period.

The regulations to be promulgated will address the treatment of a pass through receivership in which, immediately before the defaulted association is placed into receivership, the depositors of a stock S&L (or the members of a mutual S&L) own, in substance, the entire equity interest in the association and continue to own the entire equity interest in the interim association until its liquidation. The regulations will provide that the transfer of the defaulted loss corporation's assets and liabilities to the interim association, pursuant to section 1729(a) and (b) of title 12, United States Code, will not constitute an event described in section 1.382-2T(a)(2)(i). Accordingly, the transfer will not result in an ownership change.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Guidance on Application of Section 457 to Nonelective, Vacation, Sick Leave and Other Plans

Notice 88-8

Section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986, provides that amounts of compensation deferred under certain "eligible deferred compensation plans" maintained by state and local governments and tax-exempt organizations are only included in a participant's, or beneficiary's, gross income in the taxable year in which the compensation is paid or otherwise made available to that individual. In general, where the plan is not an "eligible deferred compensation plan", the amounts deferred are included in the individual's gross income in the first taxable year of the individual for which there is no substantial risk of forfeiture. Question and answer 26 in Notice 87-13 published in 1987-1 C.B. 432 clarifies that section 457 applies to all deferred compensation plans of such employers, which may include nonelective deferred compensation plans as well as certain vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, severance pay, disability pay, and death benefit plans.

The Service understands that prior to the publication of Notice 87-13 certain state and local governments and tax-exempt organizations believed that section 457 was not applicable to any nonelective deferred compensation, vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, severance pay, disability pay, or death benefit plans. The Service is attempting to develop rules clarifying the extent to which section 457 applies to such plans.

In the meantime, the Service has determined that a nonelective deferred compensation plan maintained by a state or local government, or tax-exempt organization, will not be subject to the provisions of section 457 for taxable years of employees beginning before January 1, 1988.

In addition, the Service has determined that a bona fide vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, severance pay, disability pay, or death benefit plan maintained by a state or local government or a tax-exempt organization will not be subject to the provisions of section 457 for taxable years of employees beginning before the issuance of guidance describing the extent to which these forms of compensation are subject to section 457. The exemption applies to such plans whether they are elective or nonelective.

No inference should be drawn from this notice as to the future treatment of such plans under section 457. The Service is currently studying a number of issues raised under section 457. Further guidance will be provided on these issues.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Plan Amendments Required under Rev. Rul. 86-74 May Be Deferred

Notice 88-9

The guidelines for integrating pension, annuity, profit-sharing and stock bonus plans with benefits provided by the Social Security Act were modified by Rev. Rul. 86-74, 1986-1 C.B. 205, to reflect changes made by the Social Security Amendments of 1983, Pub. L. 98-21, 1983-2 C.B. 309. See also Rev. Rul. 71-446, 1971-2 C.B. 187. The Social Security Amendments of 1983 (1) amended the Code to include certain items of deferred compensation in the definition of taxable wages and (2) changed the age at which unreduced old-age insurance benefits commence under the Social Security Act for those born after January 1, 1938.

If a plan in existence on May 27, 1986, was in compliance with the qualification requirements for integrated plans prior to the modifications provided in Rev. Rul. 86-74, then it was required to adopt any plan amendments necessary to comply with such modifications by the last day of the first plan year beginning after December 31, 1986. The amendments were required to be effective as of the first day of such plan year with respect to any plan participant having any service after December 31, 1986. For plans other than those described above, the modifications in the revenue ruling were effective as of the first day of the first plan year beginning after May 27, 1986.

This notice provides that, subject to certain conditions, the adoption date for plan amendments required under Rev. Rul. 86-74 may be deferred until the earlier of (1) the date by which the plan is required to be amended to comply with the provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (TRA '86), 1986-3 C.B. Volume 1, as determined under section 1140 of such Act (in general, the last day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1989), or (2) the date the plan is amended to comply with TRA '86.

Notice 87-57, 1987-2 C.B. 368, states that certain amendments to comply with TRA '86 must be made at the time of a plan's termination in order for the plan to retain qualified status. Accordingly, plans that terminate after the effective date specified for the plan in section 6 of Rev. Rul. 86-74 but prior to the date amendments are required under section 1140 of TRA '86 must satisfy the requirements stated below and must adopt the amendments required under Rev. Rul. 86-74 on or before the date of plan termination.

The deferred amendment date is available only to plans that (1) were in existence on May 27, 1986, (2) do not satisfy the integration requirements as modified by Rev. Rul. 86-74, and (3) received a favorable determination letter for TEFRA, DEFRA and REA. Until further notice any determination letter issued with respect to such an ongoing plan prior to the date amendments are required under section 1140 of TRA '86 will not consider whether or not the plan satisfies the requirements of Rev. Rul. 86-74. However, if specifically requested by the taxpayer to do so, the Service will consider such requirements as part of the determination process. Such a request should be clearly stated across the top of the first page of the appropriate form in the 5300 series (or Form 6406 if appropriate). In this case, the determination letter which is issued will state that the requirements of Rev. Rul. 86-74 were considered in determining the qualified status of the plan.

The availability of the deferred amendment date is also conditioned on satisfaction of the following requirements: (1) The plan must be operated in compliance with the requirements for integrated plans specified in Rev. Rul. 71-446, as modified by Rev. Rul. 86-74, beginning on the effective date specified for the plan in section 6 of Rev. Rul. 86-74 as described above; (2) the plan must be amended in a manner which is consistent with its method of operation under (1) by the deferred amendment date described above and such amendment must be made retroactively effective to the effective date applicable to the plan under Rev. Rul. 86-74; and (3) in accordance with Code section 411(d)(6) neither the amendments under (2) nor the plan's method of operational compliance under (1) may reduce any plan participant's accrued benefit as of the later of the effective date specified for the plan in Rev. Rul. 86-74 or the date on which operational compliance began in accordance with this notice.

Election of Taxable Years by Certain Partnerships, S Corporations and Personal Service Corporations

Notice 88-10

The Internal Revenue Service has received many inquiries regarding section 10206 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987. That section allows certain partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations to elect the use of a particular taxable year for Federal income tax purposes. The purpose of this notice is to provide guidance with respect to certain issues that are of immediate concern to taxpayers.

I. Background

Sections 441(i), 706(b), and 1378 of the Internal Revenue Code (the "Code"), as amended by section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514) [1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 279] (the "1986 Act") generally requires personal service corporations, partnerships, and S corporations, respectively, to conform their taxable years to the taxable years of their owners. These sections are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

New section 444 of the Code, as added by section 10206 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (Pub. L. 100-203) (the "1987 Act") enacted into law on December 22, 1987, allows certain partnerships, S corporations and personal service corporations to elect the use of a taxable year that is different from the taxable year that such entities would otherwise be required to use under section 806 of the 1986 Act (the "required taxable year"). Section 444 is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Under the 1987 Act, partnerships and S corporations may elect the use of a taxable year that is different from their required taxable year if those partnerships and S corporations follow the procedures established under sections 444 and 7519 of the Code. Under those procedures, electing partnerships and S corporations are required to make payments ("required payments") to the Federal government that are intended to represent the value of the tax deferral obtained by the owners of those entites through the use of a taxable year different from the required taxable year.

Similarly, under the 1987 Act, personal service corporations may elect the use of a taxable year that is different from their required taxable year if those corporations follow the procedures established under sections 444 and 280H of the Code. Under those procedures, electing personal service corporations failing to distribute certain amounts to employee-owners by December 31 of any taxable year may be required to defer certain deductions for amounts paid to employee-owners.

II. Application of Elective Procedures in General

The Service has received many questions concerning the effect of section 10206 of the 1987 Act on taxable years for which the taxpayer has established a business purpose to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that partnerships, S corporations and personal service corporations which have a taxable year for which such entity establishes a business purpose to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, as provided under law, are not required to use a section 444 election and are not required to make payments under section 7519(b) of the Code in order to use such taxable year. Thus, for example, a partnership which has a taxable year for which it has established a business purpose to the satisfaction of the Secretary, as provided under section 706(b)(1)(C) of the Code, may use such year.

III. Due Dates For Election to Use Taxable Year and Required Payment

Section 10206(d)(3) of the 1987 Act provides that any election made under section 444 of the Code (a "section 444 election") shall not be required to be made before the 90th day after the enactment of the 1987 Act (i.e., March 21, 1988). Furthermore, section 7519(f)(2) of the Code requires that any required payment made by a partnership or S corporation making a section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning in 1987 shall be made on or before April 15, 1988 (or such later date as may be prescribed by the Secretary).

Under forthcoming temporary regulations, a section 444 election shall not be required to be made before the later of (i) April 30, 1988, or (ii) 60 days after publication of those temporary regulations in the Federal Register. Guidance will be provided in the temporary regulations regarding the procedures for making a section 444 election, including the filing of a new election form which is expected to be available by March 1988. Prior to the publication of those regulations, taxpayers should not attempt to make section 444 elections.

In addition, the forthcoming temporary regulations will (i) describe the procedures for making payments, including the filing of any supporting calculations and tax return, and (ii) provide general guidance with respect to section 10206 of the 1987 Act. Under those regulations, required payments for the first election year will be due no earlier than the due date of the section 444 election.

IV. Period During Which a Taxable Year May Be Retained Under Section 444(b)(3)

Section 444(b)(3) of the Code provides that "[i]n the case of an entity's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, an entity may elect a taxable year under subsection (a) which is the same as the entity's last taxable year beginning in 1986." Several taxpayers have interpreted this language, in conjunction with section 444(a), as only allowing an entity to retain its taxable year for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, but then requiring the entity to change to a taxable year with a deferral period of no more than three months for the entity's taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that an entity electing a taxable year under section 444(b)(3) of the Code may continue the use of that taxable year (if otherwise allowed under section 444 and any other provision of law) for all subsequent taxable years.

V. Definition of Employee-Owner and Personal Service Corporation

Section 280H(f)(2) of the Code defines the term "employee-owner" as the meaning given to such term by "section 269A(b)(2)" (sic). Pending the enactment of clarifying legislation, the Service will treat the term "employee-owner" in section 280H(f)(2) as having the meaning given such term in section 269a(b)(2), as modified by section 441(i)(2) of the Code.

Moreover, the forthcoming temporary regulations will define the term "personal service corporation" in sections 444 and 280H of the Code to be a personal service corporation as defined in section 441(i)(2) and the regulations thereunder.

VI. Corporations Electing S Status

A. Corporations Electing S Status for a Taxable Year Beginning in 1987

The Service has received many questions concerning corporations that elected S status after September 18, 1986 and before January 1, 1988 for their taxable year beginning in 1987. Specifically, taxpayers are uncertain whether such corporations may elect, pursuant to section 444(b)(3) of the Code, a taxable year which is the same as the corporation's last taxable year beginning in 1986. The uncertainty results because the Conference Report to the 1987 Act can be read to conclude that such corporations are limited to a taxable year that results in no more than a three-month deferral period.

Based upon the express language of section 444(b)(3) of the Code, forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that section 444(b)(3) applies to a corporation electing S status for its taxable year beginning in 1987. Thus, for example, assume that a C corporation with a taxable year ending June 30, 1987, properly elects to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Under section 444(b)(3), that corporation may elect to retain its taxable year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning in 1987, assuming that such election is otherwise allowed under section 444 and any other provision of law. This conclusion will result notwithstanding the fact that such corporation may have agreed to change its taxable year to a calendar year as a condition of making its S election with the Service.

The forthcoming temporary regulations will also provide that a corporation which elects S status for a taxable year beginning in 1987, but does not elect to retain its existing taxable year under section 444(b)(3) of the Code may use the provisions of section 444(b)(2) to change its taxable year.

B. Corporations Electing S Status for a Taxable Year Beginning in 1986 and Ending December 31, 1986

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that the provisions of section 444(b)(3) of the Code do not apply to corporations that elected S status for taxable years beginning in 1986 and ending December 31, 1986. This conclusion results because section 444(b)(3) only applies to taxable years beginning in 1987.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will also provide that corporations that elected S status for a taxable year beginning in 1986 and ending on December 31, 1986, however, are allowed to change their taxable year under section 444(b)(2) of the Code by treating the deferral period of the taxable year being changed as the same as the deferral period of the last taxable year of the corporation when it was a C corporation. See section 10206(d)(4) of the 1987 Act.

For example, assume a C corporation with a taxable year ending July 31 elects on October 1, 1986 to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning August 1, 1986 and ending December 31, 1986. Further assume the corporation is otherwise qualified to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning in 1987 and desires to use a September 30 taxable year for such year. Given these facts, the S corporation will have a short period income tax return for the period January 1 to September 30, 1987 (see section XI of this notice for an extension of the due date of such return).

In addition, pursuant to section 10206(d)(4) of the 1987 Act, forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that such S corporation may, at its option, retain its calendar year for 1987 and then change to a September 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1988.

VII. Tiered Structures

Section 444(d)(3) of the Code provides that any entity which is part of a tiered structure cannot make a section 444 election, unless the tiered structure is comprised of one or more partnerships or S corporations all of which have the same taxable year.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that the initial determination of whether an entity is part of a tiered structure will be made as of the day that entity makes a section 444 election. In addition, the forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that if an entity that has made a section 444 election subsequently becomes part of a disqualifying tiered structure, such entity will be required to change to its required taxable year. Finally, the forthcoming regulations will address the meaning of the term "tiered structure."

VIII. Calculation of Required Payment

Section 7519(b) of the Code defines the amount of payment required of a partnership or S corporation making a section 444 election. Under section 7519(b), the required payment with respect to an applicable election year is an amount equal to the excess of a product specified in section 7519(b)(1) over "the amount of the required payment for the preceding applicable election year" specified in section 7519(b)(2).

Forthcoming temporary regulations will define the required payment with respect to an applicable election year as the amount equal to the excess of (a) the product specified in section 7519(b)(1) for such year over (b) the cumulative amount of required payments for all preceding applicable election years (reduced by the cumulative amount of payments refunded under section 7519(c) for all such preceding years). Such an interpretation is necessary in order to effectuate the intent of Congress regarding this provision. Absent this clarifying interpretation, the amount of required payments made by electing partnerships and S corporations under section 7519(b) could be significantly greater than the amount of such payments contemplated by Congress as representing the value of the tax deferrals obtained by those entities through the use of a taxable year that is different from their required taxable year.

IX. Refund of Required Payments

Section 7519(c) of the Code effectively provides that any partnership or S corporation is entitled to a refund of the required payment if the amount of the required payment for the preceding applicable election year as specified in section 7519(b)(2) exceeds the amount of a product specified in section 7519(b)(1). (See section VIII of this notice regarding the determination of the amount of the required payment for the preceding applicable election year as specified in section 7519(b)(2)).

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that an entity is entitled to a refund of the required payment if (i) the entity terminates its section 444 election; or (ii) the entity liquidates. In addition, a continuing entity that maintains its section 444 election is also entitled to a refund for any applicable election year if the required payment for such year is less than the required payment for the preceding year, as specified in section 7519(b)(2) of the Code (see section VIII of this notice).

X. Treatment of Required Payment

Partnerships and S corporations making a section 444 election are required to make payments to the Federal government under section 7519(b) of the Code. These required payments are not deductible by the partnership or S corporation (or by any other person) for Federal income tax purposes. Rather, these required payments are in the nature of refundable deposits, which do not earn interest. Furthermore, the payments are not passed through to partners or S shareholders. Thus, for example, the required payments made by a partnership are not creditable against the Federal income tax liabilities of partners for any taxable year.

XI. Late Filing of Returns Resulting from a Section 444 Election

A. Returns Resulting from Section 444 Election

Forthcoming temporary regulations will extend the original due date for filing an income tax return that results from making a section 444 election for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986. The due date will be the later of (i) the original due date, or (ii) the due date of the section 444 election. For example, assume a corporation that elected S status for a taxable year beginning in 1986 and ending December 31, 1986, makes a section 444 election to use a September 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. The income tax return for the period January 1 through September 30, 1987, would normally be due December 15, 1987. The forthcoming temporary regulations will extend the original due date of such return to the due date of the section 444 election; therefore, the S corporation should not file a request for extending the original due date of its return.

B. Returns That Must Be Filed if Section 444 Election is Not Made

In many cases, partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations will not know whether they qualify or desire to file a section 444 election until forthcoming temporary regulations are issued clarifying various issues. In the event a section 444 election is not made, such partnership, S corporation or personal service corporation will be required to file an income tax return pursuant to section 441(i), 706(b), or 1378 of the Code, whichever applies. In certain cases, such returns may be due prior to the issuance of the forthcoming temporary regulations.

Under forthcoming temporary regulations, the due date for such returns will be the later of (i) the original due date, or (ii) the due date of the section 444 election. No separate extension request need be filed. However, as provided in forthcoming temporary regulations, notification that such extended due date was used will be required with the return.

XII. Administrative Pronouncement

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

New Form 8582-CR, Passive Activity Credit Limitations, and Supplemental Instructions for Form 8582, Passive Activity Loss Limitations, will soon be available

Notice 88-11

Two important new items will be issued for use by certain taxpayers who have losses or credits from passive activities.

Form 8582-CR, Passive Activity Credit Limitations, is to be used to compute the amount of credits allowed from a passive activity under section 469 of the Code. The form's separate instructions also contain special rules for computing credits, passed through to partners in publicly traded partnerships.

Supplemental Instructions will be issued for Form 8582, Passive Activity Loss Limitations. They should be used by all affected taxpayers in conjunction with the existing Form 8582 and related instructions. The new instructions will specifically address a number of important issues, including:

(1) How to determine "material participation" as defined in regulations section 1.469-5T;

(2) How to offset gains and losses from the same activity when different forms or schedules are used to report those gains and losses;

(3) How to treat income and loss passed through to partners in publicly traded partnerships;

(4) How to determine modified adjusted gross income for purposes of line 6 of Form 8582 when the taxpayer is subject to the investment interest expense limitation; and

(5) How to apply the passive activity loss phase-in rule in determining investment interest expense when both rental real estate and other passive activities acquired before October 23, 1986, are involved.

Form 8582-CR and the Supplemental Instructions for Form 8582 will soon be printed and will be available in late February from Internal Revenue Service offices. They may be ordered from forms distribution centers at the addresses appearing in the Form 1040 instruction booklet.

Extension of Filing Date for Gasoline Floor Stocks Taxes

Notice 88-12

The due date for reporting the one-time floor stocks tax on gasoline and gasohol has been extended for dealers that have no other excise tax liability during the first quarter of 1988. These dealers now have until April 30, 1988, to report the floor stocks tax on Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return. All other dealers have until April 30 or May 31, on whichever date the return is due, to file Form 720.

This notice supersedes the portions of Proposed Regulations section 48.4081-1(g)(5)(iii) and Notice 813 that stated that dealers having only a floor stocks excise tax liability for the first quarter of 1988 must report the tax on Form 720 by February 16, 1988.

Regardless of when the return is due, all dealers must deposit the floor stocks tax by February 16, 1988, using Form 8109, Federal Tax Deposit Coupon.

The tax is a one-time tax imposed on gasoline and gasohol that was held by dealers on January 1, 1988, and on which no tax under section 4081 of the Internal Revenue Code had previously been paid. It is imposed on dealers who are wholesalers, jobbers, distributors, or retailers. The tax rate is 9 cents a gallon on gasoline and 3 cents a gallon on gasohol.

Under the Technical Corrections Bill of 1987, it is proposed that the additional Leaking Underground Storage Tank (LUST) tax be imposed on floor stocks held by dealers on January 1, 1988, at the rate of 0.1 (1/10) cent a gallon. At this time the Technical Corrections Bill has not been enacted. In the event the Bill is not passed and the tax is paid with the February 16, 1988, remittance, a credit or refund of the LUST tax on floor stocks can be obtained. If no payment of this tax is made and the Technical Corrections Bill is enacted, payment of this tax will be required.

In addition, registered gasohol blenders are reminded that they are eligible to purchase gasoline at a reduced rate of tax (3.33 (3 1/3) cents a gallon plus the LUST tax rate of 0.11 (1/9) cent a gallon) under section 4081(c)(1) of the Code during the first quarter of 1988 only if the gasoline purchased is to be blended with alcohol to produce gasohol. See Notice 88-2, page 473, this Bulletin. Use of registration to purchase gasoline at the reduced rate that is not to be used for blending with alcohol to produce gasohol is misuse of the registration and may lead to revocation of the registration.

Gasoline Credits and Refunds

This notice is a reminder that the procedures provided in section 6416 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code), relating to credits or refunds of excise tax paid on gasoline, remain in effect. The procedures were not changed by section 1703 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 277 [1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 691]. This notice only discusses the procedures provided in section 6416 as they relate to the gasoline excise tax imposed under Code section 4081. This notice does not discuss the section 6416 procedures as they relate to other taxes, such as the tax on diesel fuel.

Under section 6416, the person that pays gasoline excise tax to the government under section 4081 may receive a credit or refund of the amount of such tax if the gasoline is later sold or used by any person for any purposes specified in section 6416(b)(2), such as sale for export or a sale to a State or local government for the exclusive use of a State or local government.

Under §48.6416(a)-3(b) of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations, this credit or refund is conditioned upon a showing that the person that paid the tax (1) has not included the tax in the price of the gasoline with respect to which it was imposed and has not collected the amount of the tax from the person that purchased such gasoline; (2) has repaid, or agreed to repay, the amount of the tax to the ultimate vendor of the gasoline; or (3) has obtained the written consent of such ultimate vendor to the allowance of the credit or the making of the refund. See §48.6416(b)(2)-3 of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations for procedures to be followed and supporting evidence required for obtaining such credit or refund.

These procedures serve as an alternative to those provided in the proposed regulations relating to the gasoline excise tax that were published in the Federal Register on November 18, 1987 (52 FR 44141). Under the proposed regulations, if gasoline is sold at a tax-included price to any person for any purpose described in section 4221(a)(2) (relating to exportation), (a)(3) (relating to vessel or aircraft supplies), (a)(4) (relating to State or local government use), or (a)(5) (relating to nonprofit educational use), a credit or a payment with respect to the gasoline shall be allowed or made to the ultimate purchaser of the gasoline. See §48.6421-3 of the proposed regulations for rules relating to credits or payments to ultimate purchasers of gasoline used for certain exempt purposes.

For any particular transaction, only one of the two procedures described above can be used for the purposes described in the proposed regulations. For example, if a credit or refund is allowed to a taxpayer under section 6416 as to a particular sale of gasoline to a State, then the State cannot also claim a refund under section 6421 as to that purchase of gasoline. The Service anticipates that the regulations under section 6416 will be amended to clarify this point by providing that the person that paid the tax may not receive a credit or refund unless it has received from the ultimate vendor a certification that the ultimate purchaser has agreed not to claim a refund under section 6421.

In order to comply with the mandate of section 999(a)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, the Department of the Treasury is publishing a current list of countries which may require participation in, or cooperation with, an international boycott (within the meaning of section 999(b)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986). Estimated Taxes—Payments by Trusts and Certain Estates

Notice 88-15

On April 27, 1987, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) published Notice 87-32 in 1987-1 C.B. 477. That notice informed taxpayers that the IRS will, under certain circumstances, waive the addition to tax for underpayments of estimated tax by trusts and estates. This notice informs taxpayers of the procedure to be used to obtain such a waiver.

Taxpayers whose underpayments, prior to July 1987, resulted from changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 should file Form 2210, Underpayment of Estimated Tax by Individuals and Fiduciaries, with their return or amended return. The trustee or executor should write the word "waiver" in the left hand margin of Form 2210 and attach a statement explaining that no penalty should be assessed because the underpayment is due to changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Gasoline Excise Tax — Regulations

Notice 88-16

The purpose of this notice is to inform taxpayers and other affected persons of changes that the Internal Revenue Service intends to make in regulations ("the proposed regulations") recently proposed under sections 4081-4083, 4101, 6421, and 6427 of the Internal Revenue Code ("the Code"). The proposed regulations would implement amendments to these provisions enacted by section 1703 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2774) [1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 691] ("the Act"). The proposed regulations were published in the Federal Register on November 18, 1987 (52 FR 44141). The amendments made by section 1703 of the Act were effective on January 1, 1988.

As amended by the Act, section 4081 of the Code generally provides that the gasoline excise tax is imposed on the earlier of the removal or sale of gasoline by the refiner or importer thereof or the terminal operator. Section 4082 of the Code provides that the term gasoline includes, to the extent prescribed in regulations, gasoline blend stocks ("blend stocks") and products commonly used as additives in gasoline ("additives").

Except as specifically provided otherwise in this Notice, all of the anticipated changes in the proposed regulations described in this Notice will be effective January 1, 1988.

I. Bulk Transfers

Paragraph 48.4081-1(a)(1) of the proposed regulations provides that tax is not imposed "on a removal or sale of gasoline pursuant to a bulk transfer of gasoline between a registered taxpayer and another registered taxpayer . . . " Paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(2) defines bulk transfer as "any transfer of gasoline from one location to another by pipeline tender or marine delivery (i.e., transfer by barge or tanker) of no less than 10,000 barrels."

Final regulations will provide that a transfer of any volume of gasoline will qualify as a bulk transfer if such transfer is by pipeline or marine gasoline transporting vessel from a refinery, customs custody, or terminal to a refinery or terminal. For purposes of determining whether a transfer is a bulk transfer, a facility will qualify as a terminal only if it has a storage capacity of at least 10,000 barrels. The term marine gasoline transporting vessel will include a tanker, inland tanker barge, or offshore loadline barge having cargo compartments in which gasoline is transported.

Final regulations also will clarify that the reference in paragraph 48.4081-1(a)(1) of the proposed regulations to a "bulk transfer of gasoline between a registered taxpayer and another taxpayer" does not mean that tax is imposed on a removal pursuant to a bulk transfer (as defined in the preceding paragraph) of gasoline between facilities of the same registered taxpayer. No tax is imposed on a removal pursuant to such a bulk transfer.

II. Exchanges Made Simultaneously with Removals

Paragraph 48.4081-1(a)(1) of the proposed regulations provides that tax is not imposed on a "qualified sale." Paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(9) of the proposed regulations defines "qualified sale" as > any transfer of title to or possession of gasoline between persons registered under section 4101, including exchanges or consignments of gasoline, when the gasoline is not transferred from one location to another (such as an exchange of title while the gasoline remains stored in a terminal).

The Service is concerned that this definition may not cover exchanges in which title is transferred simultaneously with a removal of the gasoline by the person receiving title in the exchange or by that person's customer. Therefore, final regulations will provide that a "qualified sale" includes an exchange of title to gasoline in a terminal between registered taxpayers that takes place simultaneously with a removal of the gasoline by the taxpayer receiving title to the gasoline or by a customer of that taxpayer, provided that such exchange is in accordance with normal industry practice, and provided that the party transferring title to the gasoline maintains records of the identity and registration number of the party receiving the gasoline, the date of the exchange, and the volume and type of gasoline exchanged. It is normal industry practice that exchanges are made in-kind, and that not more than an insubstantial portion of the exchange be settled in cash or property other than gasoline.

The treatment of exchanges as qualified sales may be illustrated by the following example. Assume that registered refiner A owns previously untaxed gasoline stored in a terminal in California, while registered refiner B owns previously untaxed gasoline stored in a terminal in Maryland. Assume that A wishes to sell a truckload of gasoline to wholesale distributor X located in Maryland. Pursuant to an exchange agreement with A and in accordance with normal industry practice, B permits X to withdraw a truckload of gasoline owned by B from the terminal in Maryland. X pays or will pay A for the gasoline. Pursuant to the exchange agreement, B receives the right to receive (or to transfer to B's customer) an equal volume of gasoline owned by A. B maintains records showing the identity and registration number of A, the date and place of the exchange, and the volume and type of gasoline exchanged. On these facts, B is not required to pay tax on the transfer of title to gasoline to A; however, A must pay tax on the sale of the gasoline to its customer X.

III. Blend Stocks and Additives

A. Products Requiring Further Processing

Final regulations will clarify that the term "blend stocks" as defined in paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(5) of the proposed regulations does not include any product that cannot be blended into gasoline without further processing or fractionation. Thus, no tax is imposed on a sale or removal of a mixed hydrocarbon stream produced by a natural gas plant that cannot be blended into gasoline in the stream's form at the time of sale or removal, even though further processing of the stream may produce products, such as butane, that can be blended into gasoline.

Similarly, the term "additives" as defined in paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(8) of the proposed regulations does not include any product that cannot be used as an additive without further processing. Thus no tax is imposed on the sale of a chemical that cannot itself be used as a gasoline additive, even though such chemical can be used to make another product that can be used as a gasoline additive.

B. Products to be Listed in Forthcoming Revenue Ruling

The Service is concerned that the definitions of the terms "blend stock" and "additives" contained in the proposed regulations do not permit taxpayers to determine with certainty whether certain products fit within these definitions. Therefore, the Service intends to list by revenue ruling (or other administrative pronouncement) specific products that will, and specific products that will not, be considered to be blend stocks or additives.

Until the issuance of this revenue ruling, taxpayers may rely on the rules described below in sections C and D of this part III of this Notice to treat as tax-free certain sales and removals of any product that might be considered a blend stock or additive under the definitions included in the proposed regulations. Such rules will continue to apply after issuance of this revenue ruling to permit tax-free treatment of certain sales and removals of products that are specifically listed as blend stocks or additives in this revenue ruling, or that are not listed in this revenue ruling. Final regulations will include rules identical to or similar to these rules to permit tax-free sales of such products.

Whether a product that is not specifically listed in this revenue ruling will be considered a blend stock or additive will be determined under definitions provided in regulations.

C. Purchases and Removals of Blend Stocks and Additives by Certain Registered Persons

No tax will be imposed on any sale of blend stocks or additives to, or removal of blend stocks or additives by, a registered person, provided the transferor is registered and maintains records of the identity and registration number of the transferee, the date and location of the transfer, and the volume and type of product transferred. Such a sale or removal will be tax-free regardless of the means by which the blend stock or additive is transferred and regardless of the volume transferred. Thus, a transfer by tank car or truck may be tax-free under this rule. This rule applies only to blend stocks and additives. It does not apply to any product that constitutes gasoline within the meaning of paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(4)(i) of the proposed regulations.

Final regulations will provide that an industrial user may register as a terminal operator to purchase gasoline blend stocks or additives tax-free, even if such purchase would not constitute a bulk transfer. (The references to "bulk quantities" in the last sentence of paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(15) of the proposed regulations, to "bulk transfer" in the second sentence of paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(7) of the proposed regulations, and to "bulk quantities" in the next to the last sentence of paragraph 48.4101-1(a)(1) of the proposed regulations will be revised to reflect this change.) Therefore, an industrial user as defined in the first sentence of paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(7) of the proposed regulations that has registered as a terminal operator may purchase blend stocks and additives tax-free regardless of the quantity of product involved and regardless of the means of transportation by which such industrial user receives such blend stocks or additives.

D. Purchases and Removals of Blend Stocks and Additives by Certain Other Persons

A registered person may sell a blend stock or additive tax-free to any person, whether or not registered, provided that (1) the registered person in the normal course of its business maintains on file copies, for at least three years from the date of the transaction, of invoices of sales of blend stocks and additives showing the name of the purchaser, the date of purchase, and the type and volume of product purchased, (2) the registered person obtains from the purchaser a certification, in the form provided below, regarding the use of the product, (3) the certification is either attached to or appears on the invoice for the sale, (4) the registered person provides a disclosure statement to the purchaser in the form provided below, (5) the district director has not determined that the registered person may not make tax-free sales of additives or blend stocks under this rule, and (6) such blend stock or additive is not listed in a revenue ruling (or other administrative pronouncement) as ineligible for tax-free sale under this rule. No such revenue ruling has yet been issued. Therefore, at this time any blend stock or additive may be sold tax-free under the rule of this section D, provided that the required certification is obtained. The effect of any revenue ruling making any product ineligible for sales tax-free under the rule of this paragraph will be prospective only.

A registered person is not required to obtain any certification from a registered purchaser, since a registered person may purchase blend stocks or additives tax-free under section C of this part III. An unregistered person that purchases blend stocks and additives tax-free under the rule of this section D must agree that, if the products are resold to an unregistered person, a certification in the form provided below will be obtained from the purchaser. The certification is to be attached to or appear on the invoice for the resale. No certification need be obtained, however, if the product (1) is resold with the expectation that it will not be used for blending with or adding to gasoline subject to tax under section 4081, and (2) is resold in packages of drum quantity (55 gallons) or less (if the product is a gasoline blend stock), or in packages of gallon quantities or less (if the product is an additive).

The rule of this section D applies only to blend stocks and additives and does not apply to any product that constitutes gasoline within the meaning of paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(4)(i) of the proposed regulations.

A district director has the authority to deny to any registered person the right to sell blend stocks and additives tax-free under the rule of this section D if the district director determines that the district director cannot verify the accuracy of, or compliance with the terms of, any certificate obtained by such registered person, or by any person purchasing tax-free any product that was originally sold by such registered person. Any action by the district director under this paragraph shall be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on any previous sale.

The certification shall take the following form:

"The undersigned purchaser ("I" or "me") hereby certifies that the product shown on this invoice will not be used by me for blending with or adding to gasoline (other than to produce a fuel taxable under section 4041(b)(2) or (m)).

"I have received a disclosure statement from the seller describing my legal obligations under this certification. I have read the disclosure statement and agree to the terms described in it.

"I understand that any fraudulent use of this certification to purchase any product free of tax will subject me to penalties of perjury, which may include fine and imprisonment.

"Signature of purchaser________

Date______________

Taxpayer identification number of purchaser_________________

Address of purchaser__________

The disclosure statement shall take the following form.

"If you are an unregistered person who buys a blend stock or additive tax-free based on a certification that you will not use the product for blending with or adding to gasoline, and you then use the product for that purpose, you may be subject to penalties if you do not satisfy applicable registration requirements before incurring any liability for tax resulting from such use.

"You must be prepared to establish by satisfactory evidence the purpose for which you used a blend stock or additive purchased tax-free.

"You can purchase a blend stock or additive tax-free for resale only if you maintain on file, for at least three years from the date of the transaction, in the normal course of business, copies of invoices showing the names of purchasers, the date of purchase, and the type and volume of product sold. If you resell the product to an unregistered person, you must obtain on, or attached to, the invoice for any resale a certification from the purchaser in the same form as the certification you signed when you bought the product tax-free, and you must also give the purchaser a disclosure statement in the same form as this disclosure statement. No certification need be obtained and no disclosure statement need be provided, however, if the product (1) is resold with the expectation that it will not be used for blending with or addint to gasoline subject to tax under section 4081 of the Internal Revenue Code, and(2) is resold in packages of drum quantity (55 gallons) or less (if the product is a gasoline blend stock within the meaning of section 4082(a)(1)), or, in packages of gallon quantity or less (if the product is an additive to gasoline within the meaning of section 4082(a)(2)).

"If you resell the product that you bought tax-free to a registered person, you must obtain, attached to or on the invoice, a statement signed by the purchaser under penalties of perjury that the purchaser possesses a valid Certificate of Registry (Form 637), and giving the number of such Certificate."

IV. Fuels Described in Section 4041

Final regulations will clarify that the term "gasoline", as defined in paragraph 48.4081-1(e)(4) of the proposed regulations, does not include any methanol or ethanol fuel described in section 4041(b)(2) or (m).

V. Registration and Bond

As provided in I.R.S. Notice 87-83, 1987-2 C.B. 393, Certificates of Registry issued prior to January 1, 1988, and Certificates of Registry issued after January 1, 1988, to registrants that used old Form 637 to register, will be revoked on March 31, 1988. Therefore, all such persons that are subject to the registration requirements contained in the proposed regulations and this Notice will be required to reregister. Under Notice 87-83, the effective date of the bond requirements was delayed until April 1, 1988. The bond requirement applies to all persons required to register under section 4101 of the Code, including any person that registered on new Form 637 (Rev. October 1987) for the first quarter of 1988 that was not required to give a bond at the time of such registration.

Paragraph 48.4101-1(b)(2) of the proposed regulations requires that applications for registry include evidence of financial responsibility. In order to satisfy this requirement, the district director will determine whether the applicant has a satisfactory filing, deposit, and payment history. The district director will examine the applicant's filing, deposit, and payment history in all areas of federal taxation, including income, employment, and excise taxes for either the preceding eight quarters (for taxes due on a quarterly basis) or the preceding two years (for taxes due on an annual basis) to determine if the applicant has filed tax returns and made deposits and payments of tax in a timely manner. Generally, if the district director is satisfied with the applicant's filing, deposit, and payment history, no bond will be required of the applicant under sections 4081 and 4101. If the district director is not satisfied with the filing, deposit, and payment history of the applicant, or no such history exists (e.g., in the case of a newly created business), a bond will be required. Under extenuating circumstances however (e.g., bankruptcy of the applicant), the district director may waive the bond requirement and accept an alternative form of security.

If a bond is required, the amount of the bond will be equal to the lesser of (1) $1,000,000 or (2) the amount of tax that would be imposed under section 4081 on the expected volume of gasoline that will be removed or sold by the applicant during an average 1-month period (as determined by the district director) as if all such removals or sales are taxable. This may require a bond from some persons that do not expect to incur any tax liability under section 4081, and therefore would not have been required to give a bond (other than the minimum amount) under the proposed regulations. This portion of the proposed regulations will be issued in proposed form before being issued in fianl form.

If a bond is required of a for-hire terminal operator (i.e., a terminal operator that does not own any gasoline in its terminal), the bond will be equal to the lesser of (1) $500,000 or (2) the amount of tax that would be imposed under section 4081 on the expected volume of gasoline that will flow through the terminal operator's equipment or facility (as if the terminal operator were the owner of all such gasoline) during an average 1-month period (as determined by the district director).

If a bond is required, the surety on the bond must be a company approved for inclusion on the Department of the Treasury Circular 570 as an acceptable surety or reinsurer on Federal bonds. Any other company or individual cannot be a surety for purposes of a bond required under sections 4081 and 4101.

The final regulations will provide that a registrant that is required to give a bond may apply to the district director for the release of the bond, based on a showing of satisfactory filing, deposit, and payment history.

VI. No Tax Imposed on Sales of Previously-Taxed Gasoline

The final regulations will clarify that no tax is imposed on the removal or sale of gasoline previously subject to tax. However, gasoline will not be considered "previously subject to tax" if a refund is claimed with respect to such gasoline.

VII. Transition Rule for Sales Before Date of This Notice

A credit or refund may be claimed for a removal or sale of gasoline between January 1, 1988, and January 29, 1988, that is taxable under the proposed regulations but is not taxable pursuant to this notice, and on which tax was paid, such as a sale of 8500 barrels of gasoline by pipeline.

VIII. Verification of Registration

The Service will provide by revenue procedure (or other administrative pronouncement), a verification procedure whereby a transferor of gasoline or a terminal operator will be able to ascertain whether a registration number is current and valid. Until such time, the procedures provided in Notice 87-83, 1987-2 C.B. 393, remain in effect.

Clarification as to the Applicable Dollar Limitation For the Use of the Vehicle Cents-Per-Mile Rule For 1987 Under Section 61

Notice 88-17

Under section 61(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, gross income includes fringe benefits provided to individuals as compensation for services. Income Tax Regulation §1.61-2T sets forth the general rules on the taxation of fringe benefits to individuals as well as the available methods of valuation of such fringe benefits. Section 1.61-2T(e) of the Income Tax Regulations discusses the availability of the vehicle cents-per-mile valuation rule for the valuation of the use of an employer-provided vehicle. The regulations provide that the vehicle cents-per-mile valuation rule may not be used for a vehicle whose fair market value exceeds the dollar limitation determined under §1.61-2T(e)(1)(iii). That limitation is currently defined in the regulation as "the sum of the maximum recovery deductions allowable under section 280F(a)(2) for the first three taxable years in the recovery period for an automobile first placed in service during that calendar year." For 1985 and 1986, that value was $12,800. Section 201(d)(4)(A)(i) and (ii) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, however, revised the maximum recovery deductions allowable under section 280F(a)(2) (relating to the limitations on the depreciation allowance for luxury automobiles) to reflect the change in the classification of automobiles from 3-year property to 5-year property, effective for property placed in service after December 31, 1986, in tax years ending after such date. Giving effect to the amendments to section 280F(a)(2) in applying the provisions of §1.61-2T(e)(1)(iii) would result in a dollar limitation of $9,110 for the use of the vehicle-cents-per-mile rule in 1987.

Because the statutory change to section 280F(a)(2) was not intended to affect the applicable dollar limitation provided in Income Tax Regulation §1.61-2T(e)(1)(iii), the final fringe benefit regulations will provide that the applicable dollar limitation for 1987 is $12,060. This figure would result if §1.61-2T(e)(1)(iii) had been amended for 1987 to reflect a five year, rather than a three year, recovery period.

The Service will issue further guidance with respect to the appropriate dollar limitations for years after 1987.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Taxable Year of Trusts—Annualization Required for Short Taxable Years

Notice 88-18

Under section 1403 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the Act) all trusts are required to report income on a calendar year basis for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. Any trust that, pursuant to section 1403 of the Act, has a short taxable year in 1987 must annualize income earned in the short year. Section 443 and the regulations thereunder provide guidance for annualizing income. Those rules are applicable for purposes of annualizing the income earned by the trust in the short year.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Application of General Utilities Repeal Regulatory Authority to RICs and REITs

Notice 88-19

The Internal Revenue Service intends to promulgate regulations under the authority of section 337(d) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to the net built-in gain of C corporation assets in connection with transactions or events that result in the ownership of such assets by a regulated investment company (a "RIC") or a real estate investment trust (a "REIT") with a basis determined by reference to the C corporation's basis (a "carryover basis").

Background

Section 337(d)(1) of the Code provides, in part, that the Secretary shall prescribe regulations to prevent circumvention of the purposes of the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine through the use of any provision of law or regulations, specifically including the consolidated return regulations and the tax-free reorganization provisions of the Code (part III of subchapter C). The grant of authority includes the authority to issue, or to amend, regulations to ensure that the purposes of the provisions implementing the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine (including section 1374, relating to tax imposed on certain built-in gains of S corporations) are not avoided through the use of entities that are not fully subject to corporate taxation, such as RICs and REITs.

Description of Regulations

The regulations will apply with respect to the net built-in gain of C corporation assets that become assets of a RIC or REIT by the qualification of a C corporation as a RIC or REIT or by the transfer of assets of a C corporation to a RIC or REIT in a carryover basis transaction. In cases to which the regulations apply, unless the election described below is made, the C corporation will be treated, for all purposes, as if it had sold all of its assets at their respective fair market values on the relevant date described below and immediately liquidated. Generally, if a corporation is subject to corporate-level taxation under these provisions, the basis of the assets in the hands of the RIC or REIT will be adjusted to their respective fair market values.

In the case of a C corporation that qualifies to be taxed as a RIC or REIT, the regulations will require the C corporation to recognize any net built-in gain (the excess of aggregate gains (including items of income) over aggregate losses) that would have been realized if the corporation had liquidated at the end of its last taxable year before the taxable year in which it qualifies to be taxed as a RIC or REIT. In the case of a C corporation that transfers property to a RIC or REIT in a carryover basis transaction, the regulations will require the transferor C corporation to recognize any net built-in gain that would have been realized if the corporation had liquidated on the day before the date of the transfer. In either case, the regulations will not apply to permit the C corporation to recognize a net built-in loss.

The regulations will permit the transferee RIC or REIT to elect, in lieu of the treatment described above, to be subject to rules similar to the rules of section 1374 of the Code. Section 1374 is currently the subject of proposed technical corrections. The regulations will take into account amendments to section 1374, as appropriate, but will not necessarily include similar effective date provisions. Generally, section 1374 subjects an S corporation to corporate-level taxation on built-in gains recognized within a ten-year period on assets formerly held by a C corporation. The built-in gains of electing RICs and REITs, and the corporate-level tax imposed on such gains, will be subject to rules similar to the rules relating to net income from foreclosure property of REITs. See sections 857(a)(1)(A)(ii) and 857(b)(2)(B), (D), and (E).

Transitional Relief

The regulations will take into account the provisions of section 633(d) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, which provide transitional rules for certain small corporations with respect to the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine. The regulations will also provide for appropriate basis adjustments, and other modifications as necessary, if the result of taking such transitional rules into account is the partial recognition of gain.

Scope of Regulations

Except to the extent described in this Notice, the regulations will not affect the characterization for tax purposes of, or the tax treatment of parties to, any transactions to which they apply. For example, shareholders of a C corporation who receive RIC shares in a transaction that qualifies as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code will not recognize gain or loss solely because under the regulations the C corporation is subject to corporate-level taxation.

Effective Dates

In the case of carryover basis transactions involving the transfer of property of a C corporation to a RIC or REIT, the regulations will apply to transactions occurring on or after June 10, 1987. In the case of a C corporation that qualifies to be taxed as a RIC or REIT, the regulations will apply to such qualifications that are effective for taxable years beginning on or after June 10, 1987, unless the provisions of subchapter M (relating to RICs or REITs as the case may be) apply to such corporation for the taxable year including June 9, 1987.

These effective dates correspond to the introduction in Congress of legislation to effect technical corrections to the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The Technical Corrections Act of 1987 (introduced June 10, 1987 as H.R. 2636 and S. 1350) would amend section 337(d) of the Code to clarify that the authority of the Secretary to promulgate regulations to prevent the circumvention of the purposes of the provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 that implement the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine includes the authority to prevent avoidance of such purposes through the use of RICs or REITs.

Administrative Pronouncement

Allocation of Interest Expense in Connection with Passthrough Entities; Modifications of 1.163-8T

Notice 88-20

BACKGROUND

This notice provides temporary guidance with respect to the allocation of interest expense in connection with certain transactions involving partnerships and S corporations ("passthrough entities") and the allocation of interest expense on debt proceeds received in cash or deposited in a commingled account. Section 1.163-8T of the Income Tax Regulations (T.D. 8145, 52 FR 24,996 [1987-2 C.B. 47] provides rules for allocating interest expense for purposes of applying sections 469 and 163(d) and (h). The regulation provides, in general, that debt is allocated by tracing disbursements of the debt proceeds to specific expenditures and that interest expense on such debt is allocated in the same manner as the debt to which such interest expense relates. Section 1.163-8T does not address the treatment of debt allocated to expenditures for interests in passthrough entities and debt of passthrough entities allocated to distributions by such entities.

EFFECTIVE DATES

In the case of allocations of interest expense on debt allocated to expenditures for contributions to or purchases of interests in passthrough entities, owners of such entities may rely on this guidance for taxable years of such owners ending on or before December 31, 1987. In the case of allocations of interest expense on debt allocated to distributions by passthrough entities, taxpayers may rely on this guidance for taxable years of such entities ending on or before December 31, 1987.

The Internal Revenue Service intends to issue regulations concerning the allocation of interest expense in connection with debt-financed contributions, purchases, and distributions. For taxable years ending after December 31, 1987, such regulations may require the allocation of interest expense in connection with such transactions in a manner different from the manner provided in this notice, without regard to when the debt was incurred.

Section 1.163-8T provides certain rules for tracing debt proceeds received in cash or deposited in a commingled account (i.e., an account containing both debt proceeds and unborrowed funds, or the proceeds of two or more debts). This notice modifies those rules with respect to debt proceeds deposited in an account of the taxpayer or received in cash on or before December 31, 1987.

TREATMENT OF DEBT OF OWNERS OF PASSTHROUGH ENTITIES ALLOCATED TO EXPENDITURES FOR CONTRIBUTIONS TO OR PURCHASES OF INTERESTS IN SUCH ENTITIES

In the case of debt proceeds allocated under §1.163-8T to the purchase of an interest in a passthrough entity (other than a purchase in which the entity receives proceeds from the purchase), the debt proceeds and the associated interest expense shall be allocated among the assets of the entity using any reasonable method. Reasonable methods of allocating debt among the assets of a passthrough entity would ordinarily include a pro-rata allocation based on the fair market value, book value, or adjusted basis of the assets, reduced by any debt of the passthrough entity or the owner allocated to such assets.

Interest expense on debt proceeds allocated under §1.163-8T to a contribution to the capital of a passthrough entity may be allocated using any reasonable method. Reasonable methods would ordinarily include allocating the debt among the assets of the entity or tracing the debt proceeds to the expenditures of the entity under the rules of §1.163-8T as if the contributed debt proceeds were the proceeds of a debt incurred by the entity. For purposes of this notice, a purchase of an interest in a passthrough entity will be treated as a contribution to the capital of the entity to the extent that the entity receives proceeds from the purchase.

TREATMENT OF DEBT OF PASSTHROUGH ENTITIES ALLOCATED TO DISTRIBUTIONS BY SUCH ENTITIES

Debt of passthrough entities and the associated interest expense is generally allocated under the rules of §1.163-8T. In the case of debt proceeds of passthrough entities used to make distributions to the owners of the entity, the debt proceeds and associated interest expense may, at the option of the entity, be allocated among the expenditures (other than distributions) of the entity during the taxable year, to the extent that debt proceeds have not otherwise been allocated to such expenditures.

If, notwithstanding the optional allocation authorized in the preceding paragraph, debt proceeds of a passthrough entity are allocated to distributions to owners of the entity, each owner's share of the associated interest expense shall be allocated, under the rules of §1.163-8T, in accordance with the use of the debt proceeds distributed to such owner. To the extent that an owner's share of such interest expense exceeds the passthrough entity's interest expense on debt proceeds distributed to such owner, any reasonable method may be used to allocate the excess interest expense.

Paragraph (d) of §1.163-8T provides rules governing the treatment of debt repayments. Any repayment of debt of a passthrough entity allocated to distributions and to one or more other expenditures may be treated first as a repayment of the portion of the debt allocated to such distributions.

MODIFICATION OF SINGLE ACCOUNT AND 15-DAY RULES

Paragraph (c)(4)(iii)(B) of §1.163-8T provides, among other things, that a taxpayer may treat any expenditure made from an account within 15 days after debt proceeds are deposited in such account as made from such proceeds to the extent thereof. Paragraph (c)(5)(i) of §1.163-8T provides a similar rule with respect to debt proceeds received in cash. Paragraph (n)(2) of §1.163-8T provides that in the case of expenditures made before August 4, 1987, these rules are applied by substituting 90 days for 15 days.

The Internal Revenue Service intends to issue regulations providing that for debt proceeds deposited in an account on or before December 31, 1987, taxpayers may treat any expenditure made from any account of the taxpayer or from cash within 30 days before or 30 days after (90 days after in the case of expenditures made before August 4, 1987) debt proceeds are deposited in such account or any other account of the taxpayer as made from such proceeds to the extent thereof. Similarly, such regulations will provide that for debt proceeds received in cash on or before December 31, 1987, taxpayers may treat any expenditure made from any account of the taxpayer or from cash within 30 days before or 30 days after (90 days after in the case of expenditures made before August 4, 1987) debt proceeds are received in cash as made from such proceeds to the extent thereof.

Leaking Underground Storage Tank Tax on Fuel Used on Inland Waterways

This notice addresses the tax liability imposed on liquid used as fuel in commercial transportation on inland waterways under section 4042 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

Section 521(a)(3) of the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986 (the Superfund Act) amended section 4042 of the Code to add to the tax already imposed on any liquid used as a fuel in a vessel in commercial waterway transportation a 0.1 cent a gallon tax to be credited to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank (LUST) Trust Fund. The Superfund Act was signed on October 17, 1986, to be effective January 1, 1987.

Section 1404 of the Harbor Maintenance Act of 1986, signed on November 17, 1986, to be effective January 1, 1987, also amended section 4042 to increase the rate of tax. It sets forth a table that gradually increases the inland waterways tax from 10 cents a gallon before 1990 to 20 cents a gallon after 1994. Because it was expected that the Harbor Maintenance Act would be signed into law before the Superfund Act, section 4042, as amended by the Harbor Maintenance Act, does not contain a LUST tax provision.

Congress is considering a Technical Corrections Bill that would correct the inadvertent omission of the LUST tax provision in section 4042 by providing that, for this purpose, the Superfund Act is to be treated as enacted after the Harbor Maintenance Act. Accordingly, the Bill would reinstate the additional 0.1 cent a gallon tax under section 4042, effective January 1, 1987.

Since legislation under consideration would correct this omission retroactive to January 1, 1987, taxpayers should pay the additional 0.1 cent tax to avoid the possibility of interest payments or the necessity of filing amended returns. If the technical correction as presently proposed is not enacted, a claim may be filed for credit or refund of the LUST tax paid, provided such claim is filed in a timely manner.

Passive Foreign Investment Company Provisions Operation of the Definitional Tests under Section 1296

The Internal Revenue Service will issue regulations under the passive foreign investment company provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 concerning, among other things, the operation of the asset and income tests under section 1296(a) of the Code.

The Internal Revenue Service recognizes the need for taxpayer guidance under the passive foreign investment company provisions, effective for taxable years beginning after 1986, in advance of the publication of the regulations. In particular, taxpayers require guidance concerning the operation of the definitional tests in section 1296(a) of the Code in order to determine whether the foreign corporations in which they hold stock are passive foreign investment companies. A foreign corporation determined to be a passive foreign investment company under section 1296(a) may elect under section 1295 to be a qualified electing fund for its taxable year beginning in 1987. If a foreign corporation makes the section 1295 election and is later determined not to have qualified as a passive foreign investment company during the year for which the election was made, the election will have no effect for federal income tax purposes.

The section 1295 election may be revoked by the PFIC but only with the consent of the Commissioner. The Commissioner's determination will take into account any enactment of technical corrections to the Tax Reform Act of 1986 after the PFIC made the election, as well as provisions of any PFIC regulations published after the PFIC made the election.

Foreign corporations that are calendar year taxpayers must make the section 1295 election before March 15, 1988, in accordance with section 1295(b)(2), to be qualified electing funds for their 1987 taxable years. See the temporary regulations issued under section 1295 for the requirements for making, and the effect of, that election.

The absence of guidance in this document on particular aspects of the definitional tests in section 1296 should not be construed as implying that the regulation will not contain guidance on such matters.

Asset Test

Section 1296(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue code provides that a foreign corporation is a passive foreign investment company if the average percentage of the assets (by value) held by the corporation during the taxable year which produce passive income or are held for the production of passive income ("passive assets") is at least 50 percent of all assets (by value) held by the corporation during the taxable year.

Basis for Asset Test. The regulations will provide that the asset test will be applied on a gross basis. No liabilities, whether secured by particular assets or otherwise traceable to particular assets, will be taken into account.

Average Value of Assets. The average value of assets for the taxable year of the foreign corporation will be the average of the fair market values of the assets determined as of the end of each quarterly period during the taxable year of the corporation. The regulations, in general, will not require that the fair market value of the assets be determined by independent appraisal.

Characterization of Assets. The regulations will establish rules for the characterization of assets as either passive or nonpassive assets. In general, an asset will be characterized as passive if it has generated (or is reasonably expected to generate in the reasonably foreseeable future) passive income as defined in section 1296(b) in the hands of the foreign corporation. Assets held by foreign corporations described in section 1296(b)(2)(A) and (B) that are utilized to produce income in the active conduct of a banking or insurance business will be treated as nonpassive assets. Assets which generate both passive and nonpassive income in a taxable year shall be treated as partly passive and partly nonpassive assets in proportion to the relative amounts of income generated by those assets in that year. The regulations will give specific guidance with respect to certain kinds of assets, including those described below.

Depreciable property used in a trade or business. Any asset that constitutes "property used in the trade or business" within the meaning of section 1231(b) will be considered a nonpassive asset, provided that the trade or business in question is one that does not produce passive income as defined in section 1296(b).

Trade or service receivable. A trade or service receivable will be characterized as a passive or nonpassive asset based on the character of the income derived by the corporation from the transaction that generated the receivable. Accordingly, a trade or service receivable derived from sales or services provided by the corporation in the ordinary course of its trade or business which produce nonpassive income will be treated as a nonpassive asset for purposes of the asset test. The regulations will provide that interest incidentally received on a trade or service receivable that is otherwise treated as a nonpassive asset will not affect the characterization of the receivable.

Intangible assets. Subject to further consideration in prospectively applied regulations, the regulations will provide for the inclusion of intangible assets in testing for passive foreign investment company status. Generally, intangible assets that produce identifiable amounts of income, such as patents and licenses, will be characterized on the basis of the income derived from the intangible assets. Goodwill or going concern value must be identified with a specific income-producing activity of the corporation and characterized as a passive or nonpassive asset based on the income derived from the activity. For purposes of applying the asset test under section 1296(a)(2), intangible assets must be valued according to the guidelines provided in Rev. Rul. 59-60, 1959-1 C.B. 237, as amplified by subsequent revenue rulings published by the Internal Revenue Service.

Working capital. Cash and other current assets readily convertible into cash, including assets which may be characterized as the working capital of an active business, produce passive income, as defined in section 904(d)(2)(A). These assets are, therefore, passive assets for purposes of the section 1296(a)(2) asset test.

Dealer inventory and investment assets. Trading in stock or securities by a foreign corporation for its own account produces passive income. Therefore, under the regulations, stock, securities and other assets related to trading and similar investment activities of a foreign corporation conducted for its own account will be considered passive assets for purposes of the asset test.

The regulations will distinguish the assets of regular dealers in stock and securities held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of their business from the assets held for investment purposes. Any dividend or interest income earned on stock and securities designated as inventory will not affect the characterization of such assets as nonpassive assets.

A foreign corporate dealer's inventory of stock and securities held for sale to customers will be treated as nonpassive assets provided the dealer specifically identifies in its books and records the stock and securities that it holds for sale to customers in the ordinary course of its trade or business and the stock and securities that it holds for investment on its own account. The dealer may not change the initial designation of any share of stock or security as an inventory or an investment asset. Starting 90 days after the publication of this notice, the dealer must specifically identify the inventory and investment assets on the date of acquisition of such assets. If the invesntory assets and investment assets are not properly identified or the corporation changes the characterization of a share of stock or a security, all stock and securities will be treated as passive assets. The quantity of stock and securities identified by the dealer as inventory will be treated as inventory only to the extent it does not exceed the reasonable needs of the dealer's trade or business.

Tax-exempt assets. Securities which produce tax-exempt income, such as municipal bonds, will be characterized as passive assets unless: (1) they represent an appropriately identified inventory asset in the hands of a regular dealer in such securities, or (2) the active banking and insurance exception of section 1296(b)(2) applies.

Income test

Section 1296(a)(2) of the Code provides that a foreign corporation is a passive foreign investment company if 75 percent or more of the gross income of the foreign corporation for the taxable year is passive income. Pursuant to section 1296(b)(1), the term passive income has the same meaning given the term in section 904(d)(2)(A), but without regard to the exceptions provided in section 904(d)(2)(A)(iii). The regulations will provide that the look-through rules of section 904(d)(3) and the regulations issued under that section and section 904(d)(5) will apply to characterize payments received or accrued by the foreign corporation from related controlled foreign corporations and certain related U.S. corporations.

Assets and Income of Subsidiaries

Section 1296(c) of the Code provides that, for purposes of determining whether a foreign corporation is a passive foreign investment company, the foreign corporation is deemed to hold its proportionate share of the assets and to receive directly its proportionate share of the income of its subsidiaries in which it owns 25 percent or more of the stock (determined by value). The regulations will apply this rule to the income and assets of a corporation directly or indirectly owned by the foreign corporation. The rule will apply in the case of an indirectly owned corporation provided the foreign corporation's indirect interest in the lower tier company is at least 25 percent (determined by value).

Effective Date

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is used in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287. Taxpayers may rely on this notice until the regulations are published. The regulations, described in this notice, generally will be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. However, any modification of the rules contained in this notice will be prospective.

Ordering Rules for Changes in Methods of Accounting For Purposes of Section 263A

Notice 88-23

The purpose of this notice is to advise taxpayers of an anticipated change in the regulations under section 263A of the Code relating to the ordering rules applicable to changes in methods of accounting for taxable years beginning in 1987. This notice applies only with respect to a taxpayer changing its method of accounting in order to comply with the requirements of section 263A for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, if, for the same taxable year, the taxpayer also wishes to discontinue its use of the last-in, first-out ("LIFO") method of accounting for inventories.

ORDERING RULES

In general, as provided in section 1.263A-1T(e)(11)(v) of the Income Tax Regulations, the change in method of accounting required by section 263A of the Code shall be deemed to occur (including the computation of the adjustment under section 481(a) of the Code) before any other change in method of accounting is deemed to occur for the year of change. However, forthcoming regulations interpreting section 263A of the Code will modify this rule and provide that, in the case of a taxpayer that wishes to terminate the use of the LIFO method of accounting for inventories, the change from the LIFO method may, if the taxpayer chooses, be made before the change in method of accounting for inventories (and the computation of the corresponding adjustment under section 481(a) of the Code) required by section 263A of the Code is made. In addition, a taxpayer making such change in method of accounting may be permitted to use the expeditious procedure for discontinuing the use of the LIFO method of accounting for inventories contained in Rev. Proc. 88-15, page 683, this Bulletin.

Taxpayers that are required to change their method of accounting for inventories under section 263A, and

(i) are not eligible to utilize the provisions of Rev. Proc. 88-15, or

(ii) have filed a Federal income tax return for the first year beginning after December 31, 1986, before 30 days after the publication of this notice in the Internal Revenue Bulletin, shall be treated as having timely filed for a change in method of accounting to discontinue the use of the LIFO method for their first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, if a Form 3115 is filed with the National Office by the later of: (a) the 180th day of the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, or (b) May 6, 1988, 60 days after the publication of this notice in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Any such request for change in method of accounting shall be considered by the Service under the provisions of Rev. Proc. 84-74, 1984-2 C.B. 736. Reference to this notice and Rev. Proc. 84-74 should be made by either typing or legibly printing the following statement at the top of page 1 of Form 3115: "FILED UNDER NOTICE 88-23 AND REV. PROC. 84-74".

PROCEDURAL INFORMATION

This notice serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Uniform Capitalization Rules as Applied to Farmers

Notice 88-24

This notice provides guidance to taxpayers regarding the application of the uniform capitalization rules to property produced in the trade or business of farming. In addition to a discussion of the general application of the rules, this notice provides safe-harbor values that are available to certain taxpayers with respect to cattle produced in a farming business.

BACKGROUND

Section 263A of the Internal Revenue Code, enacted by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514) (the "1986 Act"), provides uniform capitalization rules that apply to the production of property and the acquisition of property for resale. Under those rules, all direct and indirect costs that are allocated to production and resale activities are required to be capitalized by the taxpayer. Capitalized costs are then accounted for by the taxpayer under the various rules contained in the Code regarding the recovery of costs (depreciation, cost of goods sold, etc).

Section 263A generally applies to the production, growing or raising of property in the trade or business of farming if such property (i) has a preproductive period of more than 2 years ("2-year property"); or (ii) is produced by a corporation, partnership, or tax shelter required to use an accrual method of accounting under section 447 or 448 of the Code. (See section 1.263A-1T(c) of the regulations for further guidance regarding these rules). Section 263A generally applies to costs incurred by the taxpayer after December 31, 1986, in taxable years ending after such date.

Section 1.263A-1T(c)(ii) of the regulations, consistent with the legislative history of the Act, provides that in the case of an animal the preproductive period (i) begins at the time of the animal's acquisition, breeding, or embryo implantation, and (ii) ends when the animal becomes productive in marketable quantities or when the animal is reasonably expected to be sold or otherwise disposed of. For example, in the case of a cow raised by a farmer to be used for breeding or dairy purposes, the preproductive period of the cow begins with its conception and ends on the date that the cow drops its first calf. Accord, H.R. Rep. No. 99-426, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. 628 (1985).

Taxpayers may use reasonable assumptions and estimates in determining whether animals produced in a farming business have a preproductive period of more than 2 years. For example, assume a taxpayer raises cattle that may be either sold by the taxpayer before the end of the 2-year preproductive period, or alternatively, kept by the taxpayer beyond the 2-year period. Assume also that the taxpayer is not required to use an accrual method of accounting under section 447 or 448, and thus the taxpayer is required to capitalize costs under section 263A only with respect to cattle with a preproductive period of more than 2 years. In determining the cattle that have a preproductive period of more than 2 years, the taxpayer may reasonably estimate, based on past experience and other factors, the percentage of total cattle raised that are reasonably expected to be kept beyond the 2-year period; the provisions of section 263A would then apply to these cattle. Similar estimates may be made by the taxpayer with respect to the sex of cattle that are conceived, but not yet born as of the end of the taxable year.

COSTS TO BE CAPITALIZED

Taxpayers capitalizing costs under section 263A (using the unit livestock method or any other method) must capitalize all direct and indirect costs allocable to the farming property being produced. Costs that are allocable to property being produced include both variable costs that directly correspond to the volume of the taxpayer's production (such as feed), as well as fixed costs which generally do not increase in proportion to the volume of the taxpayer's production (such as depreciation on machinery). Thus, costs required to be capitalized under section 263A are not limited to "marginal" increases in costs attributable to the property being produced, but rather also include portions of fixed costs which are not marginal in nature.

With respect to cattle, costs typically required to be capitalized under section 263A will include the costs of feed (such as grain, silage, concentrates, supplements, haylage, hay, pasture and other forages), breeding, artificial insemination, veterinary services and medicine, livestock hauling, bedding, fuel, lubrication and electricity, hired labor (where applicable), tax depreciation and repairs on buildings and equipment used in raising the cattle (for example, barns, trucks and tractors), farm overhead, taxes relating to any of these items (except for State and Federal income taxes), and interest relating to any of these items (determined, where applicable, under the "avoided cost" method as described in section 1.263A-1T(b)(2)(iv) of the regulations).

In light of the additional costs required to be capitalized under section 263A, taxpayers should not adopt unit prices utilized in the past under the unit livestock method without carefully analyzing whether these unit prices reflect all of the costs required to be capitalized by the particular taxpayer under section 263A.

METHODS AVAILABLE

Certain taxpayers, other than those required to use an accrual method of accounting, may elect not to have the rules of section 263A apply with respect to certain types of property produced in the trade or business of farming. See section 1.263A-1T(c)(6) of the regulations. Taxpayers making the election may (subject to other limitations of the Code) continue to deduct the costs that were deductible under the rules in effect before the enactment of section 263A of the Code.

With respect to taxpayers that do not make the election out of section 263A, section 1.263A-1T(c)(5) of the regulations generally provides that the costs required to be capitalized with respect to farming property may, if the taxpayer chooses, be determined using reasonable inventory valuation methods such as the farm-price method or the unit livestock method. The use of these inventory valuation methods avoids the necessity of accounting for the costs of raising animals by "tracing" and accumulating costs applicable to each separate animal. In addition, under the regulations, these inventory methods may be used by a taxpayer regardless of whether the farming property being produced is otherwise treated as inventory by the taxpayer, and regardless of whether the taxpayer is otherwise using the cash method or an accrual method of accounting. Thus, for example, the unit livestock method may be utilized by a taxpayer in accounting under section 263A of the Code for the costs of raising animals that will be used for draft, breeding or dairy purposes and depreciated (under the rules of section 168 of the Code) when the animal is placed in service.

Notwithstanding a taxpayer's use of the farm-price method or the unit livestock method with respect to farm property to which the provisions of section 263A apply, that taxpayer is not required, solely by such use, to use the same method of accounting with respect to farming property to which the provisions of section 263A do not apply. Thus, for example, assume that Farmer A raises dairy cattle to which the provisions of section 263A apply, as well as cattle that are fed and held primarily for slaughter. Assume also that Farmer A is not a taxpayer required to use an accrual method of accounting under section 447 or 448; thus the provisions of section 263A do not apply to the cattle held by Farmer A primarily for slaughter. (See section 1.263A-1T(c)(1) of the regulations.) Although Farmer A may use the unit livestock method with respect to the dairy cattle, his use of this method does not require Farmer A to use the unit livestock method with respect to the cattle held primarily for slaughter. Instead, Farmer A's accounting for such slaughter cattle is determined under other provisions of the Code and regulations thereunder.

UNIT LIVESTOCK METHOD

Taxpayers not electing to use the safe harbors provided in this notice may use any reasonable inventory valuation method to capitalize the costs of producing property in the trade or business of farming under section 263A. One such reasonable inventory valuation method is the unit livestock method, described in section 1.471-6 of the regulations. Under the unit livestock method, the taxpayer adopts a standard unit price for each animal within a particular class; this standard unit price is used by the taxpayer in lieu of specifically identifying and tracing the costs of raising each animal in the taxpayer's farming business. Taxpayers using the unit livestock method must adopt a reasonable method of classifying animals with respect to their age and kind so that the unit prices assigned by the taxpayer to animals in each class are reasonable. Thus, taxpayers using the unit livestock method typically classify cattle based on their age (for example, a separate class will typically be established for calves, yearlings and 2-year olds).

Under section 1.471-6 of the present regulations, taxpayers using the unit livestock method may not subsequently change the classification or unit costs they intially adopted without obtaining the approval of the Commissioner. (Taxpayers who were, however, using the unit livestock method prior to the effective date of section 263A are required to change automatically their method of accounting, including their unit costs, to reflect the additional costs required to be capitalized under sectin 263A. See section 1.263A-1T(e)(11) of the regulations.) Forthcoming regulations will modify this rule contained in section 1.471-6 and require that taxpayers adjust the unit prices upward, from time to time as specified by those regulations, to reflect increases in costs taxpayers experience in raising livestock. Any other changes in the classification or unit prices used in the unit livestock method will continue to be allowed only with the consent of the Commissioner.

In addition, section 1.471-6 of the current regulations provides that no increase in unit cost is required under the unit livestock method with respect to the taxable year in which certain animals are purchased, if such purchases occur in the last six months of the taxable year. The temporary regulations under section 263A, published in the Federal Register on March 30, 1987, (52 FR 10052, T.D. 8131) amend this rule and provide that any tax shelter required to use an accrual method of accounting under section 448 must include in inventory the annual standard unit price for all animals purchased during the taxable year, regardless of when in the taxable year such purchases are made. See section 1.263A-1T(c)(5)(ii) of the regulations. Forthcoming regulations will further amend this rule, and require that all taxpayers using the unit livestock method must modify the annual standard price in order to reasonably reflect the particular period in the taxable year in which purchases of livestock are made, if such modification is necessary in order to avoid significant distortions in income that would otherwise occur through operation of the unit livestock method. Such amendments will be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987. The regulations will not specify the particular modification that shall be made to the annual standard price for any particular taxpayer, but rather shall allow any reasonable modification made by the taxpayer to the annual standard price to avoid significant distortions in income. For example, assume a taxpayer purchases and raises cattle for slaughter. Assume further that the taxpayer is required to use an accrual method of accounting under section 447 of the Code; thus, section 263A applies to the taxpayer's costs of raising the cattle. Under the forthcoming regulations, the taxpayer may not expense the costs of raising cattle that are purchased in the latter half of the taxpayer's taxable year. Instead, the taxpayer must modify the annual standard price so as to reasonably capitalize the costs of raising the cattle, based on the date of their purchase.

UNIT LIVESTOCK METHOD—SAFE-HARBOR

The legislative history to the 1986 Act evidences a Congressional concern with the potential complexities imposed on farmers under the uniform capitalization rules. In this regard, the discussion of the uniform capitalization rules in the House Ways and Means Committee Report provides that farmers "may determine the costs required to be capitalized by using methods similar to one of the simplified valuation rules of present laws (e.g., the farm-price or the unit-livestock method), in lieu of capitalizing actual costs". H.R. Rep. No. 99-426, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. 629 (1985). See also S. Rep. No. 99-313, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 142 (1986).

In addition, the temporary regulations provide simplified methods of complying with section 263A of the Code. The preamble accompanying those regulations stated that the "regulations provide a simplified method for producers of property in order to reduce the administrative costs of taxpayer compliance with the capitalization requirements of section 263A while preserving the statute's basic purpose to apply uniform capitalization rules to the costs of producing property. The Internal Revenue Service welcomes comments and suggestions as to how the simplified production method may be improved to accomplish those objective most adequately." 52 FR at 10057. In response to this request for comments, several persons have submitted suggestions to the Internal Revenue Service urging the Service to provide for additional simplified methods that would be available to farmers complying with section 263A of the Code.

Based on the foregoing, this notice provides two elective safe harbors that may be used by certain taxpayers in conjunction with the unit livestock method in complying with the capitalization rules of section 263A. Such taxpayers may, at their election, use the safe harbor figures provided in this notice in lieu of independently determining (based on all the applicable facts and circumstances) the amount and timing of section 263A costs to be capitalized with respect to livestock under the unit livestock method or under any other reasonable method.

The safe harbors provided in the notice pertain to the costs of female cattle (to which the provisions of section 263A otherwise apply) raised or purchased by the taxpayer to be used principally (i) for purposes of breeding ("beef cattle"); or (ii) for purposes of producing milk to be sold for consumption ("dairy cattle"). The Internal Revenue Service is aware that the amount and timing of costs to be capitalized under section 263A with respect to beef and dairy cattle may vary depending on the business operations of the particular taxpayer and various other facts. Thus, no inference is intended by the provision of these safe harbors as to the amount and timing of costs to be capitalized by taxpayers not electing the safe harbors provided herein.

The Treasury Department, from time to time, will adjust the safe harbors provided herein to reasonably reflect changes in the costs of producing cattle due to general fluctuations in price indexes and other factors. Any such revisions of these safe harbors will be published by the Internal Revenue Service and will apply to all taxpayers using the safe harbors for taxable years beginning after the date such revisions are published.

Raised cattle.

Taxpayers electing the use of the safe harbor for beef cattle shall capitalize (and decrease the amount of otherwise deductible expenses incurred by the taxpayer) a total of $340 per cow over the following periods: (i) $85 (one-quarter) shall be capitalized in the taxable year in which the cow is born; (ii) $170 (one-half) shall be capitalized in the taxable year following the year in which the cow is born; and (iii) $85 (one-quarter) shall be capitalized in the second taxable year following the year in which the cow is born.

Taxpayers electing the use of the safe harbor for dairy cattle shall capitalize (and decrease the amount of otherwise deductible expenses incurred by the taxpayer) a total of $540 per cow over the following periods: (i) $135 (one-quarter) shall be capitalized in the taxable year in which the cow is born; (ii) $270 (one-half) shall be capitalized in the taxable year following the year in which the cow is born; and (iii) $135 (one-quarter) shall be capitalized in the second taxable year following the year in which the cow is born.

The provisions of these safe harbors apply regardless of when, in the taxable year, the cattle are actually born. Thus, for example, the requirement to capitalize $85 with respect to a beef cow for the first year it is born applies regardless of whether that cow is born in the spring or the fall of the year in question.

In addition, the safe harbors provided in this ruling apply to cattle that were born before January 1, 1987. Assume, for example, that a cash-method farmer raising beef cattle elects to use this safe harbor for his taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. With respect to cattle on hand as of the end of the farmer's taxable year ending December 31, 1987 to which the provisions of section 263A apply, the farmer would capitalize: (i) $85 for each cow born in 1985; (ii) $170 for each cow that was born in 1986; and (iii) $85 for each cow that was born in 1987. For the farmer's 1988 taxable year: (i) no additional amounts would be included in inventory with respect to cows born in 1985; (ii) $85 would be capitalized for each cow born in 1986: (iii) 170 would be capitalized for each cow born in 1987; and (iv) $85 would be capitalized for each cow born in 1988.

Purchased cattle.

In some situations, the provisions of section 263A may apply to taxpayers who purchase beef or dairy cattle from other persons and then raise such cattle to maturity. Taxpayers electing the safe harbors provided in this notice shall treat the date of the cow's purchase as the date of its birth and shall capitalize the greater of (i) the purchase price of such cattle or (ii) the safe harbor amounts provided herein. Thus, for example, assume a taxpayer purchases a beef calf for $40 in 1987. A taxpayer electing the safe harbor for beef cattle would capitalize $85 (the greater of $40 or $85) with respect to the calf for that taxable year. (This treatment would apply regardless of whether the calf was purchased in the first or second half of 1987). Assume, in contrast, that the taxpayer purchases a beef calf for $95. In that case, the taxpayer would capitalize $95 with respect to that calf for that taxable year. The additional amounts capitalized with respect to the calf for subsequent years would follow the schedule applicable to raised cattle, set forth above (i.e., $170 in the second year and $85 in the third year).

ELECTION TO USE SAFE-HARBORS

The safe harbors provided in this ruling may not be used by any corporation, partnership or tax shelter required to use an accrual method of accounting under section 447 or 448. All other taxpayers to which the provisions of section 263A apply may adopt these safe harbors, subject to the requirements of this notice. Taxpayers eligible to use these safe harbors may automatically elect to use them for the first taxable year in which they raise beef or dairy cattle to which the provisions of section 263A apply. Thus, for example, a farmer raising beef or dairy cattle to which the provisions of section 263A apply may automatically elect to use these safe harbors for his first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986 (typically, the calendar 1987 taxable year). Similarly, with respect to a taxpayer who does not raise beef or dairy cattle to which the provisions of section 263A apply until a later year (for example, 1989), that taxpayer may automatically elect the use of these safe harbors for that later year (1989). Taxpayers may elect the use of these safe harbors by using the safe harbor in determining and reporting their taxable income on a timely filed (with regard to extensions) Federal income tax return for the year in question.

Taxpayers electing the safe harbors provided in this notice may not discontinue the use of such safe harbors unless consent to such change in method of accounting is obtained from the Commissioner. In addition, except as otherwise provided in this notice, taxpayers may not elect or adopt the use of these safe harbors unless consent to such change in method of accounting is obtained from the Commissioner.

Taxpayers that elected not to have section 263A apply for 1987.

Taxpayers producing beef or dairy cattle that elected under section 263A(d)(3) of the Code and 1.263A-1T (c)(6) of the regulations not to have the rules of section 263A apply to the costs incurred in a farming business for their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986, may effectively revoke such election and adopt the use of the safe-harbors provided in this notice (in addition to applying the rules of section 263A to all other applicable plants or animals produced by the taxpayer in a farming business). Taxpayers may revoke the election with respect to their beef or dairy cattle by applying the rules contained in this notice for their taxable year ending in 1987 and by filing an amended return for such year within 180 days after this notice is published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Taxpayers that elected under section 263A(d)(3) of the Code not to have the rules of section 263A apply may automatically revoke such election under this notice only for their taxable year ending in 1987 (typically their calendar year).

Taxpayers that applied the rules of section 263A for 1987.

Taxpayers who applied the rules of section 263A by using reasonable methods (other than the safe harbors provided herein) to capitalize the costs of producing cattle for their first taxable year ending in 1987 may elect the use of the safe harbors provided by this notice for (i) their taxable year ending in 1987, or (ii) their taxable year ending in 1988. (For purposes of this notice and section 263A of the Code, in order for a method to be reasonable, a taxpayer must determine the costs to be capitalized based on the particular facts and circumstances of the taxpayer's operations, and not, for example, on the basis of any "safe harbors" other than the safe harbors provided in this notice.) Taxpayers that elect to apply the use of the safe harbors provided in this notice for their taxable year ending in 1987 shall effect such election by filing an amended Federal income tax return for their taxable year ending in 1987 within 180 days after this notice is published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Taxpayers that do not wish to apply the safe harbors until their 1988 taxable year shall apply the safe harbors provided in this notice to the costs of raising cattle in their 1988 taxable year, while adding such safe harbor costs to the costs capitalized under other reasonable methods for their 1987 year. For example, assume a calendar year taxpayer adopted the unit livestock method and applied the rules of section 263A to beef cattle raised by such taxpayer in 1987 by capitalizing x dollars for each cow born in 1987, y dollars for each cow born in 1986 and z dollars for each cow born in 1985. A taxpayer electing these safe harbor rules for 1988 would capitalize an additional $170 with respect to each cow born in 1987 and on hand at December 31, 1988; thus, each cow would have total accumulated capitalized costs of $170 plus x dollars. Similarly, the taxpayer would capitalize an additional $85 dollars with respect to each cow born in 1986 and on hand at December 31, 1988; such cattle would have total accumulated capitalized costs of $85 plus y dollars. Finally, the taxpayer would capitalize $85 with respect to each cow born in 1988 and on hand at December 31, 1988. For all future years, the taxpayer would capitalize costs based on the safe harbor provided in this notice. Taxpayers may utilize the provisions of this paragraph allowing a change to the safe harbors provided in this notice from other reasonable methods of capitalizing costs only for their taxable year ending in 1988. The provisions of this paragraph may not be used for any later taxable year, nor may they be used for changes in 1988 by taxpayers who did not comply with the provisions of section 263A for their taxable year ending in 1987. (For example, the provisions of this paragraph may not be used for changes in 1988 by taxpayers whose method of capitalizing costs under section 263A of the Code for 1987 was unreasonable and not in conformity with section 263A and the regulations thereunder. Such taxpayers, however, may adopt these safe harbors for 1987 by filing an amended Federal income tax return for such year, as provided in this notice).

PROCEDURAL INFORMATION

Sections 9201-9204 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986

The Service will issue proposed regulations under sections 9201-9204 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 (OBRA 1986) that will, in general, provide that no year of service (including years of service before the effective date of the OBRA 1986 provisions) may be disregarded because of the attainment of any age in determining benefits payable to employees from certain employee benefit plans. The proposed regulations are expected to be published in the Federal Register for public comment no later than March 31, 1988.

OBRA 1986 amended the Internal Revenue Code, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 to require certain employee benefit plans to provide for benefit accruals on behalf of employees without regard to age. The Treasury Department was given primary authority to issue regulations under the OBRA 1986 benefit accrual provisions. Under section 9204(a)(1) of OBRA 1986, the benefit accrual rules "shall apply only with respect to plan years beginning on or after January 1, 1988, and only to employees who have 1 hour of service in any plan year to which such amendments apply."

The proposed regulations will, in general, provide that the OBRA 1986 benefit accrual rules apply to all years of service (including years of service before January 1, 1988) completed by a participant in a defined benefit plan who has at least 1 hour of service in a plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1988, with respect to defined contribution plans, the proposed regulations will provide that the OBRA 1986 accrual rules do not require that retroactive allocations be made to the accounts of participants for plan years beginning before January 1, 1988. However, the proposed regulations will provide that if a defined contribution plan allocates amounts to accounts of participants under a formula that takes prior service into account, all years of service (including years of service before January 1, 1988) must generally be taken into account in determining allocations for plan years beginning on or after January 1, 1988.

Reliance

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. Taxpayers may rely on this notice until the proposed regulations are published.

Gasohol Blenders—Special 20-day Refund Procedure

Notice 88-26

The purpose of this Notice is to inform gasohol blenders of the special 20-day refund procedure provided in section 6427(i)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 ("the Code"). Under this special procedure, gasohol blenders may claim a partial refund of tax paid with respect to gasoline purchased to be blended with alcohol to produce gasohol on which tax was imposed at the 9-1/10 cents a gallon rate provided under section 4081(a) of the Code rather than the 3-4/9 cents a gallon rate of tax provided under section 4081(c)(1).

Under the conditions provided in Notice 88-2, page 473, this Bulletin, registered gasohol blenders are permitted to purchase gasoline for blending to produce gasohol at the reduced tax rate of 3-4/9 cents a gallon. In all other cases, gasohol blenders (like all other purchasers) must purchase gasoline at the rate provided under section 4081(a). If a gasohol blender does not purchase gasoline to be blended to produce gasohol at the reduced tax rate under the conditions provided in Notice 88-2, the special 20-day refund procedure may be used by the blender to claim a refund for the amount of tax imposed under section 4081(a) on the removal or sale of the gasoline in excess of the reduced rate of tax provided under section 4081(c)(1). To claim a refund under this special procedure, such blender must file a claim for refund on Form 843, Claim, with a statement that includes:

a. The name(s) of the supplier(s) of the gasoline and alcohol,
b. date(s) of the purchase(s),
c. total number of gallons of gasoline purchased,
d. total number of gallons of alcohol purchased, and
e. total number of gallons of gasohol produced.

In addition, the claim for refund must be for $200 or more, and only one claim per taxpayer per week will be accepted. If the Service does not process the claim and issue the refund within the 20-day period, interest from the date of the filing of the claim must be paid on the refund amount. Interest will be calculated using the rate and method under section 6621.

A Form 843 may be obtained either from the gasohol blender's local I.R.S. district office or by calling 1-800-424-FORM (3676). Gasohol blenders that qualify and file for the special 20-day refund procedure provided in section 6427(i)(3) must write

"GASOHOL CLAIM" in red beside the title of Form 843 and on the envelope they send to the IRS. The Form 843 must be mailed to a special address at the same Service Center at which the gasohol blender files its tax returns. The special addresses that must be used are provided below:

As provided in Notice 88-2 and in Notice 88-12, page 481, this Bulletin, the reduced ratio of tax applicable to gasoline removed or sold for blending with alcohol to produce gasohol under section 4081(c)(1) is 3-1/3 cents a gallon plus the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate ("the LUST rate") of 1/9 cent a gallon. The rate of tax applicable to gasohol removed or sold under section 4081(c)(1) is 3 cents a gallon plus the LUST rate of 1/10 cent a gallon.

Original Issue Discount—Treatment of Auction-Rate Debt

Notice 88-27

This notice relates to the treatment under sections 1271 through 1275 of the Internal Revenue Code of certain debt instruments under which the interest rate is reset to a market rate through the use of an auction procedure.

BACKGROUND

Section 1.1275-4 of the proposed original issue discount regulations provides rules for the treatment of contingent payments. The proposed original issue discount regulations were published in the Federal Register on April 8, 1986, 51 FR 12022, 1986-1 C.B. 820.

Since the issuance of the proposed regulations, debt instruments have been issued under which the interest rate is reset to a market rate through an auction procedure, either for a period set by the instrument or, as directed under the instrument, for a period set by the issuer or the holders. Under this auction procedure, as of each auction date, current holders of the instruments may specify (1) that they will continue to hold their instruments; (2) that they wish to sell their instruments at par; or (3) that they will continue to hold their instruments if the new interest rate is no lower than a minimum rate specified by the holder. Prospective purchasers of the instruments must specify the minimum interest rate at which they wish to purchase the instruments at par. The instrument specifies a maximum rate of interest that the issuer will pay on the debt. An independent auction agent determines the lowest rate that is necessary to enable the sale at par of all instruments that current holders wish to sell. The rate so determined is paid to all holders of the instruments until the next auction period. If orders to sell exceed orders to purchase, the interest rate is set at the maximum rate.

TREATMENT OF AUCTION RATE DEBT UNDER THE ORIGINAL ISSUE DISCOUNT RULES

Payments of interest with respect to debt instruments will not be treated as contingent payments within the meaning of section 1.1275-4 of the proposed regulations merely because the interest rate may be reset to a market rate determined through an auction procedure. For this purpose, the interest rate for any period will be considered reset to a market rate if, under the terms of the debt instrument, the interest rate is set at the beginning of the period at the lowest rate that will enable the sale at par of all instruments that current holders wish to sell. The interest rate may be subject to a specified minimum or maximum rate. An interest rate will not be considered reset to a market rate if the procedure for setting the rate is subject to manipulation (e.g., to set interest at other than a market rate or to create a front-loading or back-loading of interest).

Nothing in this notice is intended to suggest whether, or under what circumstances, the resetting of the interest rate on a debt instrument through an auction procedure may constitute a reissuance of the instrument for Federal income tax purposes.

Nothing in this notice is intended to suggest that interest on debt instruments which is reset to a market rate through other procedures will be treated as contingent payments within the meaning of section 1.1275-4 of the proposed regulations.

Because this notice interprets section 1.1275-4 of the proposed regulations, it will not be treated as an administrative pronouncement as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations.

The Service is actively considering the proper application of the original discount rules to debt instruments the interest rate on which is set by auction or by other similar procedures. The Service solicits comments on this matter from interested practitioners and taxpayers.

Estimated Tax Penalty for Farmers

Notice 88-28

This notice provides for the waiver of penalties for underpayment of estimated tax by farmers under certain circumstances. The special estimated tax rules provided for farmers under section 6654(i) of the Internal Revenue Code allow a farmer to make only one required installment of estimated tax for the taxable year on January 15 of the following taxable year. If a farmer files his or her Federal Income Tax Return by March 1 of the following taxable year and pays in full the amount shown as due on the return, no penalty is imposed for not making a payment on January 15.

It has come to the attention of the Internal Revenue Service that many farmers did not timely receive their 1987 Forms 1099-A, Information Return for Acquisition or Abandonment of Secured Property, and/or Forms 1099-G, Statement for Recipients of Certain Government Payments (or substitute Forms CCC-182) from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Because of this, many farmers will be unable to determine their tax due and file their 1987 income tax returns before the March 1 date, and face estimated tax penalties. Under section 6654(e)(3)(A) of the Code, the Secretary has determined that, due to these unusual circumstances, the imposition of an estimated tax penalty would be against equity and good conscience.

Therefore, the Service will waive any estimated tax penalty for any farmer subject to the special rules under section 6654(i) of the Code who did not receive his or her forms by February 15, 1988. The farmer should attach to Form 1040 a Form 2210F, Underpayment of Estimated Tax by Farmers and Fishermen, and write in the bottom right of Form 2210F "Farm Waiver". The farmer must provide his or her name and social security number on Form 2210F, but should leave lines 1-23 blank.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287.

Inflation Adjustment for Computation of Windfall Profit Tax

Notice 88-29

Section 4989(b) of the Internal Revenue Code requires the determination of an inflation adjustment factor for use in computing the windfall profit tax.

The Service has determined that, for oil removed during the April-June quarter of 1988, the inflation adjustments are as follows:

Tier 1 or Tier 2 oil	0.5257
Tier 3 oil	0.8077

Worksheets for computation of the windfall profit tax are included in the Instructions for Form 6047, Windfall Profit Tax, and an explanation of the inflation adjustment may be found in the Specific Instructions for Line 4 of the worksheets.

Diesel Fuel and Aviation Fuel Taxes Imposed at Wholesale Level

Notice 88-30

This notice describes issues arising from the changes made by section 10502 of the Revenue Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-203, 101 Stat. 1330) ("1987 Act") to the excise tax on diesel fuel and aviation fuel that the Internal Revenue Service intends to address in regulations. The 1987 Act added sections 4091, 4092, and 4093 to the Code, which, beginning on April 1, 1988, move the point of collection of the diesel fuel and aviation fuel tax from the sale by the retailer to the sale by the producer. See section III(B)(1)(a) of this notice regarding the definition of "producer". As a result of this change, tax-free sales below the producer level are no longer allowed, except for fuel destined for use as heating oil and sales to certain categories of purchasers who register and post such bond as the Secretary may require. Thus, many persons who formerly bought these types of fuel tax-free will no longer be able to do so as of April 1, 1988. A credit or refund of all or part of the tax paid may be claimed if the fuel purchased is used for a nontaxable purpose. Conversely, taxable fuel purchased tax-free under section 4093 may be subject to tax if later used in a taxable use or sold by the purchaser in a sale subject to tax under section 4041.

At this time, several legislative proposals that would amend the diesel fuel excise tax are being considered by the Congress. Some of these proposals, if enacted, would alter the collection procedure for the tax for certain types of purchasers, including farmers. If any of these proposals are enacted into law, the Internal Revenue Service will publish additional guidance to implement the changes.

Nothing in this notice is intended to override any agreement or provision of law which takes precedence over the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

I. OVERVIEW

A. Introduction

Prior to April 1, 1988, the tax on diesel fuel and aviation fuel is imposed under section 4041 on fuel sold at the retail level for use in a diesel-powered highway vehicle or in an aircraft used in noncommercial aviation. On or after April 1, 1988, section 4091 imposes the tax on the sale of such taxable fuel by a producer or importer thereof. See section 4091(b) for rates of tax. Section 4092(a) defines "taxable fuel" as diesel fuel and aviation fuel. Diesel fuel is any liquid (other than gasoline) suitable for use as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle or a diesel-powered train. Aviation fuel is any liquid (other than gasoline) suitable for use as a fuel in an aircraft. A producer is defined in section 4092(b) as a person who is a refiner, compounder, blender, or wholesale distributor, or a dealer selling fuel exclusively to producers, and who elects to register under section 4101 with respect to the tax imposed by section 4091. The term "wholesale distributor" includes any person who sells a taxable fuel to producers, retailers, or to users who purchase in bulk quantities and deliver into bulk storage tanks. A wholesale distributor who also sells taxable fuel at retail may nonetheless qualify as a wholesale distributor under the statutory definition. Furthermore, the term "invoice", as used in this notice, includes an invoice, purchase order, or other record of sale which is maintained by the seller in the normal course of business.

B. Producers

Section 4093(b) provides that, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the tax imposed by section 4091 shall not apply in the case of sales of a taxabe fuel to a producer of such fuel. The regulations will provide that on or after April 1, 1988, and prior to May 1, 1988, a person may purchase taxable fuel tax-free as a producer of such taxable fuel by following certain procedures, including supplying a certification to the importer or producer selling such fuel. The procedures applicable before May 1, 1988, are described in section III(B)(1)(b) of this notice.

Section III(B)(1) of this notice provides that the regulations will require a producer to register by May 1, 1988, in order to make tax-free sales or purchases on or after that date. Producers that do not have an aceptable filing, deposit, and payment history in all areas of Federal taxation may be required to post a bond. Section V of this notice describes the criteria and requirements for bonding.

C. Taxable Fuel Destined for Use as Heating Oil

Section 4093(a) provides that the tax imposed by section 4091 does not apply in the case of sales of any taxable fuel which the Secretary determines is destined for use as heating oil. Section IV(C)(1)(b) of this notice describes how the regulations will define taxable fuel which the Secretary determines is destined for use as heating oil. As explained further in section IV(C), taxable fuel is destined for use as heating oil only if the taxable fuel is to be used by the purchaser as, or sold by the purchaser for, direct consumption as heating oil. Taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil will sometimes be referred to in this notice as "heating oil".

Section 4093(d) grants the Secretary authority to require registration of such persons as the Secretary deems necessary to carry out the subpart. The Secretary has determined to exercise this authority in the case of importers, producers, and retailers of taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil. As explained in section III(B) of this notice, the regulations will provide that importers or producers must register by May 1, 1988, and that heating oil retailers must register by October 1, 1988. Sections IV(B)(1) and (2) of this notice describe how importers and producers of taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil apply for such registration. Section IV(C) of this notice describes how heating oil retailers apply for registration. Such applications should be submitted as soon as possible. See also section III(B)(1) of this notice regarding registration requirements relating to sales and purchases by an importer or producer of taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil on or after May 1, 1988, and procedures to be used until that time. See section III(B)(2) relating to sales and purchases by a heating oil retailer of taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil on or after October 1, 1988, and procedures to be used until that time.

D. Exempt Uses

(1) In general

Under section 4093(c), the Secretary has authority, subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may provide (including registration and bonding), to permit tax-free sales for four specified categories of exempt uses. These categories are:

(a) Diesel fuel for use in a diesel-powered train;

(b) Aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation;

(c) Taxable fuel for use other than as a motor fuel; and

(d) Taxable fuel sold to a state or local government for its exclusive use.

(2) Registration and documentation

(a) In general. The Secretary has determined to exercise his authority to permit tax-free sales in all four of these categories (collectively, "tax-free purchases" or "tax-free sales") in certain situations and on a case-by-case basis. In general, the regulations will provide that, to make tax-free purchases, all persons eligible for such tax-free purchases, other than a state or local government, must register by October 1, 1988. Once registered, they will be able to make tax-free purchases. Prior to October 1, 1988, however, such persons may make tax-free purchases by following other procedures, including supplying the producer or importer with a certification. Setcion III(B)(2) of this notice describes the procedures applicable to sales or purchases before October 1, 1988 by persons required to register for the sales described in paragraph (1) of this section. Section IV(G) of this notice describes procedures to be followed by state and local governments in order to purchase taxable fuel tax-free. Sections IV(D), (E), and (F) describe how to apply for registration for tax-free purchases of taxable fuel for use in a diesel-powered train, in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation, and other than as a motor fuel, respectively. Such applications should be made as soon as possible.

(b) Aviation fuel. A special rule will apply, however, in the case of importers, producers, and purchasers of aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation. The regulations will provide that a Certificate of Registry (Form 637A) issued pursuant to Chapter 31 of the Internal Revenue Code to a purchaser of aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation or to a person who qualifies as an importer or producer (as definied in section 4092(b)) will apply until further nontice to the tax imposed on aviation fuel under section 4091. Thus, a commercial airline or an importer or producer of aviation fuel already registered on Form 637A may use such Certificate to make tax-free sales or purchases of aviation fuel for use not in noncommercial aviation both before and after October 1, 1988. Any importer, producer, or other purchaser of aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation not so registered must register using Form 637A. See section III(B) of this notice relating to deadlines for registration.

(c) State and lcoal governments. The regulations will provide that, until further notice, a state or local government will not be required to register for tax-free sales. See section IV(G) of this notice for rules relating to sales of taxable fuel to a state or local government, including the requirement that the state or local government supply the importer or producer with a certification that all the fuel so purchased is purchased for the exclusive use of the state or local government.

(3) Bonding

The regulations will require that persons that are eligible to make tax-free purchases but that do not have an acceptable filing, deposit, and payment history in all areas of Federal taxation may be required to post a bond. Section V of this notice describes the criteria and requirements for bonding. No bonds will be required in the case of state or local governments.

(4) Cases in which a tax-free purchase not available

(a) Following a taxable sale. A person eligible for tax-free purchases may make a tax-free purchase only if such person purchases the taxable fuel before the section 4091 tax has been imposed. Consider the example of such a person purchasing taxable fuel from a retail dealer. The retail dealer has paid a price for the fuel that includes the tax imposed under section 4091. If the price paid by the person purchasing from the retailer includes the section 4091 tax, the person may file a claim for a credit or refund, as described in section VIII of this notice if the fuel is used in a tax-exempt use. Thus, in the case of any fuel taxable under section 4091, there is not available section 6416 (unlike the gasoline excise tax), or any other procedure by which the exempt user may purchase the product tax-free and the seller make a claim for a credit or refund of the tax. In the case of fuel taxable under section 4091, only the exempt user is eligible to make a claim for credit or refund of the tax paid.

(b) Sales to other persons. Tax-free sales or purchases for exempt uses are available only for the categoriees set forth in section I(D)(1) of this notice. Sales to other persons for exempt uses, whether or not purchased from a producer, are taxable sales and the exempt user must make a claim for credit or refund of the tax. Exempt uses for which the tax must be paid include:

(i) Off-highway business use;

(ii) Use on a farm for farming purposes;

(iii) Use as supplies for vessels or aircraft;

(iv) Export or shipment to a possession of the United States;

(v) Exclusive use of a nonprofit educational organization;

(vi) Use by certain aircraft museums;

(vii)) Certain helicopter uses;

(viii) Certain intercity, local, and school bus uses; or

(ix) Certain taxicab uses.

Section VIII of this notice describes the credit and refund procedures to be followed by such exempt users.

E. Floor Stocks Tax

Section 10502(f) of the 1987 Act imposes a floor stocks tax on any taxable fuel held by a taxable person on April 1, 1988, at the rate of tax which would be imposed if the fuel were sold on that date in a sale subject to tax under section 4091. The floor stocks tax is to be paid before June 16, 1988. The regulations will define taxable fuel as any fuel taxable under section 4091 on which no tax has been imposed under section 4041 and which is not held exclusively for a nontaxable use, as defined in section 6427(l). A taxable person will be defined as any person other than an importer or producer of taxable fuel, as defined in section 4092. The regulations will provide that each taxable person musst prepare an inventory of taxable fuel held on April 1, 1988. The floor stocks tax is discussed further at section VI of this notice.

F. Reporting Requirements

The regulations will provide that liability for tax imposed under section 4091 must be reported on Form 720, "Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return". The regulations will require each person who is registered or requied to register under section 4101 or 4093, and each state or local government purchasing taxable fuel tax-free, to maintain adequate records of all taxable fuel it purchases, sells, or uses. Any person who claims a credit or refund of tax imposed under section 4091 will be required to maintain adequate records to support the credit or refund.

Section 4093(d) gives the Secretary authority to require information reporting as the Secretary deems necessary to carry out the tax imposed by section 4091. Later regulations may require additional recordkeeping and information reporting. See section VII of this notice for more information regarding recordkeeping and reporting requirements.

II. EXEMPTIONS FROM THE TAX

A. Tax-Free Sales

Section 4093(b) provides that, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the tax imposed by section 4091 shall not apply to sales of taxable fuel to a producer. Under section 4093(a), the tax imposed by section 4091 shall not apply to sales of any taxable fuel which the Secretary determines is destined for use as heating oil. Section IV(C)(1)(b) explains how the regulations will define taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil. The Secretary has authority to require registration of heating oil retailers, and the regulations willl rquire such registration. See sections III and IV of this notice. In addition, under section 4093(c), the Secretary has discretionary authority to permit sales without imposition of the section 4091 tax, in whole or in part, of—

(1) Diesel fuel for use in a diesel-powered train;

(2) Aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation;

(3) Taxable fuel for use other than as a motor fuel; and

(4) Taxable fuel sold to a state or local government for its exclusive use.

The Secretary has determined to exercise this authority on a case-by-case basis and the regulations will so provide. Sections III, IV, and V of this notice give additional information about registration and bonding for such tax-free purchases. Producers and persons wishing to sell or purchase fuel tax-free for these exempt uses, other than a state or local government or a person purchasing taxable fuel for such person's own use as heating oil, must register and post such bond as the Secretary may require. See section III(B) of this notice relating to deadlines for registration. See section IV(G) relating to requirements for state and local governments. In addition, there is no exemption with respect to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate ("L.U.S.T. tax") for diesel fuel used in a diesel-powered train or aviation fuel. Thus, the term "tax-free", as used in this notice with respect to these uses, does not include the L.U.S.T. tax.

A person eligible for tax-free purchases may make a tax-free purchase only if it purchases the fuel before the section 4091 tax has been imposed. If a person entitled to make tax-free purchases buys fuel on which the section 4091 tax has already been imposed and the price paid by the person includes the section 4091 tax, the person may file a claim for a credit or refund if the fuel is used in a tax-exempt use. For example, such an exempt person, A, purchases diesel fuel from a retailer, B. B paid the tax imposed under section 4091 when B purchased the fuel from C, a registered producer. The sale of fuel from B to A is not itself a taxable event, but because the tax has already been imposed, B charges A a price for the fuel which includes the tax paid by B to C. If A uses the fuel for a tax-exempt use, A may claim a credit or refund of tax paid with respect to fuel used for a nontaxable purpose. See section VIII of this notice regarding credits and refunds.

This result in necessary because, in the case of fuel taxable under section 4091, only the ultimate purchaser may claim a credit or refund of the tax paid. Unlike gasoline taxable under section 4081, neither section 6416 nor any other procedure applies to fuel taxable under section 4091 to enable the exempt user to purchase the product tax-free while the seller claims a credit or refund of the tax.

B. Other Nontaxable Uses

Under the 1987 Act, all exemptions from the tax (other than those described in paragraph II(A) above) must be realized through a credit or refund procedure following a tax-paid purchase of the fuel. A person may qualify for a credit or refund of the tax paid if the fuel is purchased in or after a taxable sale and is used—

(1) For off-highway business use;

(2) On a farm for farming purposes;

(3) As supplies for vessels or aircraft;

(4) For export or for shipment to a possession of the United States;

(5) By a nonprofit educational organization for its exclusive use;

(6) By certain aircraft museums;

(7) For certain helicopter uses;

(8) In certain intercity, local, and school buses; or

(9) For certain taxicab uses.

See section VIII of this notice for credit and refund procedures.

III. REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS

A. Who Must Register

The regulations will require that every person that is an exempt user eligible for tax-free purchases under section 4093 with respect to fuel taxable under section 4901, other than a state or local government or a person purchasing taxable fuel for such person's own use as heating oil, register in accordance with the applicable provisions of sections III(B) and IV of this notice before buying taxable fuel tax-free. Section 4101 also requires that any person subject to tax under section 4091 register with the Secretary before incurring any liability for tax under such section. See section III(B) of this notice regarding deadlines for registration. See sections IV(E) and III(B)(2)(b) of this notice regarding procedures which apply to a person that already holds a valid Certificate of Registry (Form 637A) as a purchaser of aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation.

B. Deadlines for Registration

(1) Importers and producers

(a) In general. Section 4092(b) defines "producer" as a person who is a refiner, compounder, blender, or wholesale distributor of a taxable fuel, or a dealer selling any taxable fuel exclusively to producers of such taxable fuel, and who elects to register under section 4101 with respect to the tax imposed by section 4091. The term "wholesale distributor" includes any person who sells a taxable fuel to producers, retailers, or to users who purchase in bulk quantities and deliver into bulk storage tanks. The regulations will provide that a wholesale distributor who also sells taxable fuel at retail may nonetheless qualify as a wholesale distributor under the statutory definition.

(b) Sales on or after April 1, 1988, and before May 1, 1988. The regulations will provide that on or after April 1, 1988, and before May 1, 1988, taxable fuel may be sold tax-free to a person who (but for not being registered under section 4101) meets the definition of the term "producer" as set forth in section III(B)(1)(a) above, and such person shall be deemed to be a registered producer during this period, provided that—

(i) The seller of taxable fuel to such purchaser in the normal course of its business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the date of sale, and the type and volume of product sold, and a written statement clearly indicating that the purchaser is a producer who has furnished a certification required by section III(B)(1)(b)(ii) of this notice to the seller, and

(ii) The seller obtains from such purchaser and keeps on file a certification, signed under penalties of perjury by a person having authority to bind the purchaser, stating the name, address, employer identification number of the purchaser, and the title of the person signing the certification. Such certification may cover sales to such purchaser for the period from April 1, 1988, to April 30, 1988, inclusive, and shall take the following form:

"The undersigned purchaser ("Purchaser") hereby certifies that Purchaser is a producer of taxable fuel who is a refiner, compounder, blender, or wholesale distributor of a taxable fuel or a dealer selling any taxable fuel exclusively to producers of such taxable fuel. If Purchaser claims an exemption as a wholesale distributor, Purchaser certifies that Purchaser sells a taxable fuel to producers, retailers, or to users who purchase in bulk quantities and deliver into bulk storage tanks.

"Purchaser understands that any fraudulent use of this certification to purchase any taxable fuel free of tax will subject Purchaser to penalties of perjury, which may include fine and imprisonment."

Title ______________________

The regulations will provide that a person who meets the requirements of this section III(B)(1)(b) shall, for the period beginning April 1, 1988, and ending before May 1, 1988, be deemed to be a registered producer of taxable fuel for purposes of purchasing fuel tax-free as a producer under section 4093(b), and for purposes of incurring liability for the tax imposed by section 4091.

(c) Sales on or after May 1, 1988. The regulations will provide that on or after May 1, 1988, taxable fuel may be sold tax-free by a producer or importer of taxable fuel to a producer of taxable fuel under section 4091, but only if—

(i) Both the seller and the purchaser are registered with respect to such sales in accordance with the provisions of section 4101.

(ii) The purchaser has notified the seller in writing with which District Director the purchaser is registered and the Certificate of Registry number of the purchaser, and

(iii) The purchaser's Certificate of Registry number appears on the invoice for each tax-free sale made to the purchaser.

(d) Additional information. Applicants are urged to submit applications for registry to the District Director as soon as possible to facilitate the processing of the applications and issuance of registration numbers by May 1, 1988. All approvals of applications to register as an importer or producer submitted on or before April 30, 1988, will be on a conditional basis only. The regulations will provide that the applicant will be furnished a conditional Certificate of Registry (validated Form 637 or Form 637A) ("Certificate") bearing the applicant's temporary registration number. A conditional Certificate is valid until the effective date of any final decision made by the District Director with respect to the application. When a final decision is made, a notice will be sent by the District Director to the applicant stating that (i) the application for registry has received final approval, (ii) the conditional Certificate will expire at a date not less than 60 days after the date of such notice unless a bond is given, or (iii) the Certificate is revoked. Upon final approval of the application and acceptance of the bond, if one is required, the applicant will be furnished a Certificate bearing the applicant's final registration number. See section V of this notice for a description of the criteria and requirements for bonding.

(2) Other applicants

(a) Sales before October 1, 1988—(i) In general. The regulations will provide that taxable fuel may be purchased tax-free from a registered producer or importer on or after April 1, 1988, and before October 1, 1988, if the fuel is—

(A) Purchased by a heating oil retailer and is destined for use as heating oil,

(B) To be used by the purchaser as fuel in a diesel-powered train,

(C) To be used by the purchaser in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation, or

(D) To be used by the purchaser other than as a motor fuel.

(ii) Additional requirements. During the period between April 1, 1988, and October 1, 1988, purchasers in sales listed at paragraph (2)(a)(i) of this section are not required to be registered in order for the sale to be tax-free provided that—

(A) The importer or producer in the normal course of its business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the date of sale, and the type and volume of product sold,

(B) The importer or producer obtains from the purchaser and keeps on file a certification, in the form provided below and signed under penalties of perjury by a person having authority to bind the purchaser, stating the name, address, employer identification number of the purchaser, the title of the person signing the certification, and the basis for claiming an exemption from payment of the tax imposed under sectin 4091,

(C) The invoice for the sale contains a written statement clearly indicating that the entire quantity of the fuel purchased is purchased for the nontaxable use specified in the purchaser's certification, and

(D) The District Director has not determined that the purchaser may not make tax-free purchases of taxable fuel under the following paragraph.

These requirements do not apply in the case of fuel purchased by a state or local government for its exclusive use or by a person purchasing taxable fuel for such person's own use as heating oil. Rules that will be contained in the regulations governing the purchase of taxable fuel by a state or local government are set forth at section IV(G) of this notice.

The regulations will further provide that a District Director has the authority to deny to any unregistered purchaser the right to buy taxable fuel tax-free under the rule of the preceding paragraph if the District Director determines that the District Director cannot verify the accuracy of, or compliance with the terms of, any certification provided by such unregistered purchaser. Any such action by the District Director shall be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on a registered importer or producer with respect to any previous sale of taxable fuel to such purchaser if the importer or producer in good faith accepted a proper certification by the purchaser that the fuel would be used by the purchaser in the exempt manner stated. However, the regulations will also provide that if, at the time of the sale, the importer or producer has reason to believe that any of the fuel sold tax-free by it to the purchaser is not intended to be used for the exempt purpose indicated by the purchaser, the importer or producer is not considered to have accepted the certification from the purchaser in good faith, and is not relieved of liability for the tax imposed on the sale of such taxable fuel under section 4091. An importer or producer has reason to believe that fuel sold by it is not intended for the exempt purposes stated if, for example, the importer or producer is aware that the purchaser does not have the equipment or facilities to use the fuel for the exempt purpose stated, or that the exempt purpose stated is inconsistent with the type of business the purchaser operates. An example of an inconsistent use that indicates acceptance of a certification not in good faith is one in which a producer, while aware that a purchaser's sole business is the operation of a fleet of diesel-powered highway vehicles, nevertheless sells large quantities of taxable fuel to such purchaser for use other than as a motor fuel.

(iii) Form of certification. Under the regulations, the certification may cover sales to such unregistered purchaser for the period from April 1, 1988, to September 30, 1988, inclusive, and shall take the following form:

"The undersigned purchaser ("Purchaser") hereby certifies that (a) Purchaser is a __________ [Specify whether purchaser is a heating oil retailer or user of taxable fuel in a diesel-powered train, in an aircraft used in commercial aviation, or other than as a motor fuel], and that (b) the taxable fuel to which this certification relates is purchased for use for the following purpose __________ [State whether sale for use as heating oil, as a fuel in a diesel-powered train, as a fuel in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation (as defined in section 4041(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended), or the specific use, in detail, other than as a motor fuel].

"If this taxable fuel is sold or used by Purchaser for a purpose other than as stated above, then Purchaser understands that Purchaser may be subject to tax and may also be subject to penalties if Purchaser does not satisfy applicable registration requirements before incurring any liability for tax resulting from such use. Purchaser will be prepared to establish by satisfactory evidence the purpose for which Purchaser used the product purchased under this certification.

"Purchaser understands that any fraudulent use of this certification to purchase any taxable fuel free of tax will subject Purchaser to penalties of perjury, which may include fine and imprisonment."

(b) Sales on or after October 1, 1988—(i) In general. The regulations will provide that no tax-free sales to any person, other than a producer, a state or local government or a person purchasing taxable fuel for such person's own use as heating oil, of fuel taxable under section 4091 shall be allowed on or after October 1, 1988, unless—

(A) Both the seller and the purchaser are registered with respect to such sales in accordance with the provisions of section 4101,

(B) The importer or producer obtains from the purchaser and keeps on file a certification, in the form provided below and signed under penalties of perjury by a person having authority to bind the purchaser, stating the name, address, Certificate of Registry number of the purchaser, the title of the person signing the certification, and the basis for claiming an exemption from payment of the tax imposed under section 4091, and

(C) The purchaser's Certificate of Registry number appears on the invoice for each tax-free sale made to the purchaser.

See section III(B)(1) of this notice for rules governing sales to registered producers.

(ii) Additional information. Applicants are urged to submit applications for registry to the District Director as soon as possible to facilitate processing of the applications and issuance of registration numbers by October 1, 1988. The regulations will provide that, upon approval of the application and acceptance of the bond, if one is required, the applicant will be furnished a Certificate bearing the applicant's registration number. Section V of this notice discusses the criteria and requirements for bonding.

(iii) Form of certification. Under the regulations, the certification may cover sales to such a registered purchaser for a period not to exceed 4 calendar quarters, and shall take the following form:

"The undersigned purchaser ("Purchaser") hereby certifies that (a) Purchaser is a registered ____________ [Specify whether purchaser is a heating oil retailer or user of taxable fuel in a diesel-powered train, in an aircraft used in commercial aviation, or other than as a motor fuel], and that (b) the taxable fuel to which this certification relates is purchased for use for the following purpose ____________ [State whether sale for use as heating oil, as a fuel in a diesel-powered train, as a fuel in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation (as defined in section 4041(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended), or the specific use, in detail, other than as a motor fuel].

"If this taxable fuel is sold or used by Purchaser for a purpose other than as stated above, then Purchaser understands that Purchaser may be subject to tax and may also be subject to penalties if Purchaser does not satisfy applicable registration requirements before incurring any liability for tax resulting from such use. Purchaser will be prepared to establish by satisfactory evidence the purpose for which Purchaser used the product purchased under this certification.

"Purchaser understands that any fraudulent use of this certification to purchase any taxable fuel free of tax will subject Purchaser to penalties of perjury, which may include fine and imprisonment."

C. Additional Rules Following Issue of Certificate

The regulations will provide additional rules following issuance of a Certificate. A Certificate, whether conditional or final, may not be transferred from one person to another. A new application for registry will be required, and a bond, if necessary, under the standards set forth in section V of this notice, if there is a substantial change in the ownership or management of a person that holds a Certificate. The regulations will give the District Director authority to revoke a Certificate at any time in a case where the District Director deems it necessary in order to ensure the collection of the tax imposed by section 4091. Any such revocation by the District Director shall be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on a registered importer or producer with respect to any previous sale of taxable fuel to such purchaser if the importer or producer in good faith accepted a proper certification by the purchaser that the fuel will be used by the purchaser in the exempt manner stated. However, the regulations will also provide that if, at the time of the sale, the importer or producer has reason to believe that the fuel sold by it is not intended to be used for the exempt purpose indicated by the purchaser, the importer or producer is not considered to have accepted the certification from the purchaser in good faith, and is not relieved of liability for the tax imposed on the sale of such taxable fuel under section 4091. See also paragraphs (B)(1) and (2) of this section regarding registration and certification requirements.

D. Penalties

Failure to meet the requirements of applicable regulations may result in revocation of a person's registration. See section 7272 for the imposition of a civil penalty for failure to register. See section 7232 for provisions relating to the imposition of criminal penalties for failure to register and give a bond as required by section 4101 or for willfully making any false statement in an application for registry under section 4101.

IV. APPLICATION FOR REGISTRY

A. In General

The regulations will provide that application for registry with respect to fuel taxable under section 4091 must be made on Form 637A to make tax-free sales or purchases of aviation fuel, or on Form 637 to register as a producer or to register to purchase diesel fuel or heating oil tax-free. Because Form 637A and Form 637 do not yet reflect changes made to the Internal Revenue Code by the Revenue Act of 1987, the regulations will provide that the applicable form must be prepared in accordance with the instructions and applicable regulations, as modified in this notice.

B. Importers and Producers

(1) In general

The regulations will provide that an importer or producer of taxable fuel must make separate application for registry with respect to diesel fuel and aviation fuel taxable under section 4091 by May 1, 1988. An importer or producer who sells diesel fuel not destined for use as heating oil as well as taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil must apply for registry as an importer or producer of diesel fuel under the rules below.

(2) Diesel Fuel

The regulations will provide that application for registry with respect to diesel fuel must be made on Form 637, "Registration for Tax-Free Transactions Under Chapters 31, 32, and 38 of the Internal Revenue Code". The application must indicate whether the applicant is an importer, refiner, compounder, blender, wholesale distributor, or dealer selling fuel exclusively to producers, and that the applicant qualifies for registry as a producer or importer. Each applicable designation on the form should be checked. If the form does not have a check box which applies to the applicant, check and complete the box, "Other (specify)". The application must specify "DIESEL FUEL" as the type of product bought or sold.

If the applicant also sells taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil, the regulations will provide that the application must specify "DIESEL FUEL AND HEATING OIL" as the type of product bought or sold. As discussed further in section IV(C)(1)(b) of this notice, the regulations will define the term "fuel destined for use as heating oil" as taxable fuel (a) purchased for use by the purchaser as heating oil, or (b) purchased by a registered importer, producer, or heating oil retailer for sale to a third party for use as heating oil by such third party. The term "fuel destined for use as heating oil" will not include taxable fuel to be sold by the purchaser of the fuel to a third party for resale by such third party as heating oil. Thus, for example, a registered purchaser, A, purchases taxable fuel for sale to a producer or heating oil retailer, B, who will then sell the fuel to a consumer, C, for C's use as heating oil. The purchase made by both B and C will be considered under the regulations to be a purchase of taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil, but A's purchase will not. This is because A did not purchase the fuel for use by A or by A's purchaser, B, as heating oil. A person who does not qualify as a producer but who purchases taxable fuel for sale as heating oil must apply for registry as a heating oil retailer under the rules described in section IV(C) of this notice.

In addition, the regulations will provide that the application must include a statement setting forth in detail—

(a) A description of the equipment and facilities, if any, maintained for the production of diesel fuel,

(b) A description of the equipment and methods actually employed in the production of diesel fuel,

(c) The ingredients or materials utilized,

(d) The percentage that the sales, if any, of diesel fuel or diesel fuel in an alcohol mixture produced by the applicant, is expected to bear to total sales of diesel fuel or diesel fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant,

(e) The percentage that the total sales of heating oil, if any, is expected to bear to total sales of heating oil, diesel fuel, and diesel fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant,

(f) A description of any storage facilities used,

(g) A description of any equipment or facilities used for the transfer of diesel fuel and/or heating oil, if any,

(h) In the case of a wholesale distributor, the percentage that the bulk sales of diesel fuel to persons other than producers, if any, is expected to bear to total sales of diesel fuel,

(i) The names and addresses of all persons, if any, that will be used by the applicant as agents or brokers in the selling of diesel fuel and/or heating oil, if any, and

(j) The name and address of any person for whom diesel fuel will be purchased or imported by the applicant (i.e., the beneficial owner).

(3) Aviation Fuel

The regulations will provide that a Certificate of Registry (Form 637A) issued pursuant to Chapter 31 of the Internal Revenue Code to a person who qualifies as an importer or producer (as defined in section 4092(b)) will apply until further notice to the tax imposed on aviation fuel under section 4091. Thus, an importer or producer of aviation fuel already registered on Form 637A may use such Certificate to make tax-free sales or purchases of aviation fuel under section 4091 until further notice. Until such notice, an importer or producer of aviation fuel holding a valid Certificate of Registry for tax-free sales and purchases of fuel used in an aircraft as of the date of this notice need not reapply for registry with respect to the tax imposed on aviation fuel under section 4091.

The regulations will require that an importer or producer of aviation fuel not holding a valid Certificate of Registry as of the date of this notice must register with respect to tax-free sales and purchases of aviation fuel under section 4091 on or after May 1, 1988, using Form 637A, in accordance with the instructions and applicable regulations, as modified in this notice. Section (c) of the instructions on Form 637A under "Who May Register" and all sections under "Exceptions to the Requirements for Registration" are no longer valid with respect to aviation fuel taxable under section 4091.

The regulations will provide that an application must include a statement as to whether the applicant is an importer, refiner, compounder, blender, wholesale distributor, or dealer selling fuel exclusively to producers. Each applicable designation on the form should be checked. If the form does not have a check box which applies to the applicant, check and complete the box, "Other (specify)". The application must specify "AVIATION FUEL" as the type of fuel bought or sold. In addition, the application must include a statement setting forth in detail—

(a) A description of the equipment and facilities, if any, maintained for the production of aviation fuel,

(b) A description of the equipment and methods actually employed in the production of aviation fuel,

(c) The ingredients or materials utilized,

(d) The percentage that the sales (if any) of aviation fuel or aviation fuel in an alcohol mixture produced by the applicant, is expected to bear to total sales of aviation fuel or aviation fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant,

(e) A description of any storage facilities used,

(f) A description of any equipment or facilities used for the transfer of any aviation fuel,

(g) The percentage that the bulk sales of aviation fuel is expected to bear to total sales of aviation fuel,

(h) The names and addresses of all persons, if any, that will be used by the applicant as agents or brokers in the selling of aviation fuel, and

(i) The name and address of any person for whom aviation fuel will be purchased or imported by the applicant (i.e., the beneficial owner).

C. Heating Oil Retailers

(1) Definitions

(a) Heating oil retailer. The regulations will define the term "heating oil retailer" as a person other than a producer or importer who purchases taxable fuel for resale as fuel destined for use as heating oil. See section V of this notice regarding bonding requirements relating to heating oil retailers.

(b) Fuel destined for use as heating oil. The term "fuel destined for use as heating oil" will be defined in the regulations as taxable fuel that is intended to be used to provide heat, provided that the fuel is—

(i) purchased for use by the purchaser to provide heat, or

(ii) purchased by a registered importer, producer, or heating oil retailer for sale to a third party for use by such third party to provide heat.

Thus, for example, the term "fuel destined for use as heating oil" will include fuel to be used by the purchaser to heat a residence or commercial building. Another example of fuel destined for use as heating oil is fuel to be used by the purchaser to heat a boiler that produces steam to run a steam turbine. Taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil will sometimes be referred to as "heating oil".

However, as defined above, the term "fuel destined for use as heating oil" will not include taxable fuel to be sold by the purchaser of the fuel to a third party for resale by such third party as heating oil. Thus, for example, if A purchases taxable fuel for sale to B, who intends to use the fuel to heat B's building, then, assuming A is registered as a heating oil retailer (or as a producer selling both diesel fuel and heating oil), both the sale of taxable fuel to A and the sale of taxable fuel to B will be considered to be sales of fuel destined for use as heating oil. Alternatively, if A is a producer who purchases taxable fuel for sale to B, who intends to resell the fuel to C, the sale of taxable fuel to A is not a sale of fuel destined for use as heating oil, regardless of C's use of the fuel. However, the sale from A to B would be a sale of fuel destined for use as heating oil under the rule above if C intends to use the fuel purchased from B to heat C's building.

(2) Making the application

The regulations will require that an applicant qualify as a heating oil retailer in order to register to purchase or sell taxable fuel tax-free as a heating oil retailer. The regulations will provide that application for registry must be made on Form 637, "Registration for Tax-Free Transactions Under Chapters 31, 32, and 38 of the Internal Revenue Code". See section III(B)(2) of this notice regarding registration requirements relating to sales and purchases of taxable fuel destined for use as heating oil on or after October 1, 1988, and procedures to be used until that time. See section IV(B) of this notice for provisions relating to a producer or importer selling both diesel fuel and heating oil.

The application will be required to include a statement that the applicant is a "HEATING OIL RETAILER" purchasing "HEATING OIL". The form does not have a check box which applies to the applicant. The required information must be supplied under "Other (specify)". In addition, the application must include a statement setting forth in detail—

(a) That all taxable fuel certified by the applicant as fuel destined for use as heating oil is purchased for sale to the applicant's customers for use by such customers as heating oil,

(b) A description of any storage facilities used,

(c) A description of any equipment or facilities used for the transfer of heating oil, if any, and

(d) The names and addresses of all persons, if any, that will be used by the applicant as agents or brokers in the selling of heating oil.

(3) Additional requirements

The regulations will further provide that a registered heating oil retailer may purchase fuel destined for use as heating oil tax-free from a registered importer or producer provided that—

(a) The heating oil retailer intends to sell all the fuel so purchased for use by its customer(s) as heating oil,

(b) The seller obtains from the purchaser and keeps on file a certification described in section III(B)(2)(b)(i)(B) of this notice, and

(c) The importer or producer in the normal course of business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the purchaser's Certificate of Registry number, the date of sale, and the type and volume of product sold.

The regulations will provide that a District Director has the authority to deny to any applicant the right to buy taxable fuel tax-free as fuel destined for use as heating oil if the District Director determines that the District Director cannot verify the accuracy of, or compliance with the terms of, any certification provided by such person.

In addition, the regulations will provide that a District Director may revoke a person's registry as a heating oil retailer at any time in a case where fuel is purchased tax-free as fuel destined for use as heating oil and—

(i) At the time of purchase, such retailer does not intend to sell the fuel purchased for use as heating oil,

(ii) If at the time the retailer sells fuel that was purchased as heating oil, such retailer has reason to believe that the fuel will be used other than as heating oil, or

(iii) The District Director deems it necessary in order to ensure the collection of the tax imposed by section 4091. The regulations will provide that a heating oil retailer has reason to believe that fuel will be used for a purpose other than as heating oil if, for example, the retailer knows that the purchaser of the fuel from the retailer does not have the equipment or facilities to use the fuel as heating oil, or the retailer knows that the use of the fuel as heating oil is inconsistent with the type of business the purchaser operates. An example of an inconsistent use indicating a reason to believe that the fuel will be used other than as heating oil is one in which a heating oil retailer, while aware that a purchaser's sole business is the operation of a fleet of diesel-powered highway vehicles, nevertheless sells large quantities of taxable fuel to such purchaser for use as heating oil. However, any such revocation by the District Director will be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on a registered importer or producer with respect to any previous sale of taxable fuel to such heating oil retailer if the importer or producer in good faith accepted a proper certification from the heating oil retailer that the fuel was intended for sale as heating oil.

D. Purchaser of Fuel for Use in a Diesel-Powered Train

(1) Making the application

The regulations will require that a purchaser of fuel for use in a diesel-powered train register using Form 637, "Registration for Tax-Free Transactions Under Chapters 31, 32, and 38 of the Internal Revenue Code". See section III(B)(2) of this notice regarding registration requirements relating to sales and purchases of diesel fuel for use in a diesel-powered train on or after October 1, 1988, and procedures to be used until that time. The regulations will define the term "train" to include a locomotive, work train, switching engine, track maintenance machine, or other equipment incident to train operations, so long as such equipment or machinery rides on rails. The term "train" will not include any equipment or machinery that does not ride on rails.

The applicant's type of business (e.g., "RAILROAD") is to be entered under "Other (specify)". The application will be required to include a statement that the applicant is buying "DIESEL FUEL" for use in a diesel-powered train, and that the applicant qualifies for this exemption as an "OPERATOR OF A DIESEL-POWERED TRAIN" under "Other (specify)". In addition, the application must include a statement setting forth in detail—

(a) The amount of taxable fuel expected to be used in a diesel-powered train,

(b) The percentage that the usage, if any, of diesel fuel or diesel fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant in a diesel-powered train, is expected to bear to total usage of diesel fuel or diesel fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant,

(c) A description of any storage facilities used, and

(d) A description of any equipment or facilities used for the transfer of diesel fuel, if any.

(2) Additional requirements

The regulations will further provide that a registered purchaser of diesel fuel for use in a diesel-powered train may purchase fuel tax-free for such use from a registered importer or producer provided that—

(a) The purchaser intends to use all the fuel so purchased as fuel for a diesel-powered train,

(b) The seller obtains from the purchaser and keeps on file a certification described in section III(B)(2)(b)(i)(B) of this notice, and

(c) The importer or producer in the normal course of business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the purchaser's Certificate of Registry number, the date of sale, and the type and volume of product sold.

In addition, the regulations will provide that a District Director may revoke a person's registry as a purchaser of fuel for use in a diesel-powered train at any time if, at the time of purchase, such purchaser does not intend to use the fuel that was purchased tax-free as fuel for a diesel-powered train, or if the District Director deems it necessary in order to ensure the collection of the tax imposed by section 4091. However, any such revocation by the District Director will be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on a registered importer or producer with respect to any previous sale of taxable fuel to such purchaser if the importer or producer in good faith believed that the fuel was to be used as fuel for a diesel-powered train.

E. Purchaser of Fuel for Use in an Aircraft Not in Noncommercial Aviation

(1) Making the application

The regulations will require that a purchaser of aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation make application for registry with respect to aviation fuel on Form 637A, "Registration for Tax-Free Sales and Purchases of Fuel Used in Aircraft Under Chapter 31 of the Internal Revenue Code" in order to purchase fuel for such use tax-free. The regulations will further provide that a valid Certificate of Registry (Form 637A) issued to a person purchasing aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation will apply to the tax imposed on aviation fuel under section 4091 until further notice. Until such notice, a person holding a valid Certificate of Registry for tax-free purchases of fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation as of the date of this notice need not reapply for registry with respect to the tax imposed on aviation fuel under section 4091. The regulations will also provide that the rules described in section III(B)(2)(b) of this notice will apply to such a registered person for sales of aviation fuel on or after April 1, 1988. See also paragraph (2) of this section, below.

A person not holding a valid Certificate of Registry for tax-free purchases of fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation as of the date of this notice must apply for registry with respect to tax-free sales and purchases of aviation fuel under section 4091 on Form 637A in accordance with the instructions and applicable regulations, as modified in this notice. See section III(B)(2) of this notice regarding registration requirements relating to sales and purchases of aviation fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation on or after October 1, 1988, and procedures to be used until that time.

The application must include a statement that the applicant is a commercial airline or other person purchasing "AVIATION FUEL" for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation. In addition, the application must include a statement setting forth in detail the percentage that the usage, if any, if aviation fuel or aviation fuel in an alcohol mixture, in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation is expected to bear to total usage of aviation fuel or aviation fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant.

(2) Additional requirements

The regulations will further provide that a registered purchaser of aviation fuel for use not in noncommercial aviation may purchase fuel for such use from a registered importer or producer provided that—

(a) The purchaser intends to use all the fuel so purchased as fuel for an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation,

(b) The seller obtains from the purchaser and keeps on file a certification described in section III(B)(2)(b)(i)(B) of this notice, and

(c) The importer or producer in the normal course of business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the purchaser's Certificate of Registry number, the date of sale, and the type and volume of product sold.

In addition, the regulations will provide that a District Director may revoke a person's registry as a purchaser of fuel for use in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation, at any time if, at the time of purchase, such purchaser does not intend to use the fuel that was purchased tax-free as fuel in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation, or if the District Director deems it necessary in order to ensure the collection of the tax imposed by section 4091. However, any such revocation by the District Director will be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on a registered importer or producer with respect to any previous sale of taxable fuel to such purchaser if the importer or producer in good faith believed that the fuel was to be used as fuel for an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation.

F. Purchaser of Fuel for Use Other Than as a Motor Fuel

(1) Definitions

(a) In general. For purposes of this exemption, the regulations will provide that use of taxable fuel "other than as a motor fuel" shall include use as a chemical feedstock, solvent, cleaner, or for explosives. Use other than as a motor fuel will not include use of taxable fuel in any motor, engine, machine, generator, self-propelled machinery, or vessel or boat. See, however, section IV(C)(1)(b) of this notice regarding taxable fuel used to heat a boiler.

(b) Request for comments. Persons who use taxable fuel for a non-motor fuel use not listed above, and who purchase and store such fuel in bulk quantities are requested to write to the Internal Revenue Service describing such use. This information will be used to develop regulations relating to the exemption for taxable fuel sold for use other than as a motor fuel. Address comments to Ms. Lauren G. Shaw of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20224 (Attention CC:LR:4).

(2) Making the application

The regulations will provide that application for registry must be made on Form 637, "Registration for Tax-Free Transactions Under Chapters 31, 32, and 38 of the Internal Revenue Code". See section III(B)(2) of this notice, describing that the regulations will require a purchaser of taxable fuel for use other than as a motor fuel to be registered in order to make tax-free purchases of diesel fuel for this use on or after October 1, 1988, and the procedures to be followed for tax-free sales until that time. The application must include a statement that the applicant is a purchaser of taxable fuel "FOR USE OTHER THAN AS A MOTOR FUEL." In addition, the application for registry will be required to include a statement setting forth in detail—

(a) A description of the intended use of the fuel other than as a motor fuel,

(b) The amount of taxable fuel expected to be used other than as a motor fuel,

(c) The ingredients or materials utilized,

(d) The percentage that the usage, if any, of diesel fuel or diesel fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant other than as a motor fuel, is expected to bear to total usage of diesel fuel or diesel fuel in an alcohol mixture by the applicant,

(e) A description of any storage facilities used, and

(f) A description of any equipment or facilities used for the transfer of diesel fuel and/or heating oil, if any.

(3) Additional requirements

The regulations will further provide that a registered purchaser of taxable fuel for use other than as a motor fuel may purchase fuel for such use from a registered importer or producer provided that—

(a) The purchaser intends to use all the fuel so purchased other than as a motor fuel,

(b) The seller obtains from the purchaser and keeps on file a certification described in section III(B)(2)(b)(i)(B) of this notice, and

(c) The importer or producer in the normal course of business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the purchaser's Certificate of Registry number, the date of sale, and the type and volume of product sold.

In addition, the regulations will provide that a District Director may revoke a person's registry as a purchaser of fuel for use other than as a motor fuel at any time if, at the time of purchase, such purchaser does not intend to use the fuel that was purchased tax-free in a use other than as a motor fuel, or if the District Director deems it necessary in order to ensure the collection of the tax imposed by section 4091. However, any such revocation by the District Director will be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on a registered importer or producer with respect to any previous sale of taxable fuel to such purchaser if the importer or producer in good faith believed that the fuel was to be used other than as a motor fuel.

G. State or Local Government

(1) In general

The regulations will provide that, until further notice, a state or local government will not be required to register for tax-free sales of taxable fuel under section 4093(c) if it buys its fuel from a registered importer or producer before the section 4091 tax has been imposed. However, the regulations will provide that if a state or local government purchases fuel on which the section 4091 tax has already been imposed and the price paid by the state or local government includes the section 4091 tax, the state or local government may file a claim for a credit or refund. This rule is explained in more detail at sections I(D)(4)(a) and II(A) of this notice.

The regulations will further provide that on or after April 1, 1988, a state or local government may purchase taxable fuel tax-free from a registered importer or producer provided that—

(a) The importer or producer in the normal course of its business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the date of purchase, and the type and volume of product purchased,

(b) The importer or producer obtains from the state or local government and keeps on file a certification, in the form provided below and signed under penalties of perjury by a person having authority to bind the state or local government, that all fuel purchased is purchased for the exclusive use of the state or local government,

(c) The Federal employer identification number of the estate or local government is attached to, or appears on, the face of the invoice for the sale, and

(d) The sales invoice contains a written statement clearly indicating that the entire quantity of the fuel is purchased for the exclusive use of a state or local government.

The regulations will give the District Director authority to deny to any state or local government the right to buy taxable fuel tax-free if the District Director determines that the District Director cannot verify the accuracy of, or compliance with the terms of, any certification provided by such state or local government. However, any such action by the District Director will be prospective only and shall not result in the imposition of tax on a registered importer or producer with respect to any previous sale of taxable fuel to such state or local government.

The regulations will provide that one certification may be used by all agencies, boards, and commissions of a state that are authorized by the state to make purchases for the exclusive use of the state, but that such certification may not be used by any political subdivision of that state, such as a county or municipality. Each such political subdivision will be required to supply a separate certification relating to fuel purchased for its exclusive use.

(2) Form of certification

The regulations will provide that the certification may cover sales of taxable fuel to the state or local government for a period not to exceed 12 calendar quarters, and shall take the following form:

"The undersigned purchaser ("Purchaser") hereby certifies that (a) Purchaser is a state or local government buying taxable fuel for its exclusive use, and that (b) the taxable fuel to which this certification relates is purchased for the exclusive use of Purchaser.

"If this taxable fuel is used by Purchaser for a purpose other than as stated above, then Purchaser understands that Purchaser may be subject to tax and may be subject to penalties if Purchaser does not satisfy applicable registration requirements before incurring any liability for tax resulting from such use. Purchaser will be prepared to establish by satisfactory evidence the purpose for which Purchaser used the product purchased under this certification.

"Purchaser understands that any fraudulent use of this certification to purchase any taxable fuel free of tax will subject Purchaser to penalties of perjury, which may include fine and imprisonment."

V. BOND REQUIREMENTS

A. In General

The regulations will provide that any person required to register to make tax-free purchases under section 4093 may be required to post a bond with respect to the tax imposed by section 4091. Generally, under the regulations, no bond will be required with respect to the tax imposed by section 4091 if a person has an acceptable filing, deposit, and payment history in all areas of Federal taxation, as described in paragraph (B) of this section. In no case will the regulations require a bond of a state or local government purchasing taxable fuel for its exclusive use, or a heating oil retailer purchasing only fuel destined for use as heating oil as that term is defined under section IV(C)(1)(b) of this notice. However, the regulations will provide that if a heating oil retailer purchases both fuel destined for use as heating oil and taxable fuel not destined for use as heating oil, the heating oil retailer may be required to post a bond with respect to taxable fuel purchased other than as fuel destined for use as heating oil. See section IV(C) of this notice for additional requirements relating to heating oil retailers.

B. Standards for Requiring a Bond

The regulations will provide that, to determine if an applicant has an acceptable tax compliance history, the District Director will examine whether the applicant has a satisfactory filing, deposit, and payment history. The regulations will direct the District Director to examine the applicant's filing, deposit, and payment history in all areas of Federal taxation, including income, employment, and excise taxes for either the preceding 8 quarters (for taxes due on a quarterly basis) or the preceding 2 years (for taxes due on an annual basis) to determine if the applicant has filed tax returns and made deposits and payments of tax in a timely manner. The regulations will provide that, if the District Director is not satisfied with the filing, deposit, and payment history of the applicant, or no such history exists (e.g., in the case of a newly created business), a bond will be required, but that under extenuating circumstances (e.g., bankruptcy of the applicant), the District Director may waive the bond requirement and accept an alternative form of security. The regulations will provide that the bond shall be filed with a Form 928, modified to apply to the tax imposed under section 4091.

C. Amount of Bond

The regulations will provide that, if a bond is required, the amount of the bond will be the lesser of (1) $500,000 or (2) the amount of tax that would be imposed under section 4091 on the expected volume of taxable fuel that will be used or sold by the applicant during an average 1-month period other than fuel destined for use as heating oil (as determined by the District Director) as if all such use or sales are taxable. This requirement may result in a bond being required from some persons that do not expect to incur any tax liability under section 4091, such as, for example, a newly established purchaser of fuel for use in a diesel-powered train or a producer that sells to other producers. The regulations will also provide that a strengthening or superseding bond may be required if, for any month, the actual volume of taxable fuel sold is greater than the volume on which the existing bond is based.

D. Acceptable Issuer

The regulations will provide that, if a bond is required, the surety on the bond must be a company approved for inclusion on the Department of the Treasury Circular 570 as an acceptable surety or reinsurer on Federal bonds. Under the regulations, any other company or individual will not be acceptable as a surety for purposes of a bond required under sections 4091 and 4101.

E. Release of Bond

The regulations will provide that a registrant that is required to give a bond may apply to the District Director for the release of the bond, based on a showing of satisfactory filing, deposit, and payment history.

VI. FLOOR STOCKS TAX

A. In General

Section 10502(f) of the 1987 Act imposes a floor stocks tax on any taxable fuel held by a taxable person at the first moment of April 1, 1988, at the rate of tax which would be imposed if such fuel were sold on such date in a sale subject to tax under section 4091 of the Internal Revenue Code. The taxes imposed by section 10502(f) of the 1987 Act shall be paid before June 16, 1988.

Section 4091(b) provides that the Highway Trust Fund financing rate is 15 cents per gallon, the Airport and Airway Trust Fund financing rate is 14 cents per gallon, and the L.U.S.T. tax rate is 0.1 cent per gallon. Section 4091(c) provides that the Highway Trust Fund financing rate for diesel fuel for use in producing a diesel fuel mixture is 10 cents per gallon if at least 10 percent of such mixture consists of alcohol. The Highway Trust Fund financing rate for such a mixture of diesel fuel and alcohol is 9 cents a gallon if the diesel fuel in such mixture was not taxed at the 10-cent per gallon rate. Section 4091(d) provides that the Airport and Airway Trust Fund financing rate shall not apply to the sale of any mixture of aviation fuel if at least 10 percent of such mixture consists of alcohol or to the sale of aviation fuel for use in producing such a mixture. Thus, the effective rates of tax are as follows:

Type of fuel	Cents per gallon
Diesel fuel	15.1
Diesel fuel for trains	0.1
Diesel fuel for blending with alcohol	10.11
Diesel fuel in alcohol mixture	9.1
Aviation fuel (commercial use)	0.1
Aviation fuel (noncommercial use)	14.1

B. Definitions

For purposes of the floor stocks tax, the regulations will provide that the term "taxable fuel" means any taxable fuel (as defined in section 4092 of the Internal Revenue Code) on which no tax has been imposed under section 4041 of such Code. Such term does not include fuel held exclusively for any use which is a nontaxable use as defined in section 6427(l) of such Code. The term "taxable person" will be defined to mean any person other than a producer (as defined in section 4092 of such Code) or importer of taxable fuel. Fuel will be treated as held by a person if title thereto has passed to such person whether or not delivery to such person has been made. For example, a taxable person may be a retailer of diesel fuel, a construction company, or a farmer holding diesel fuel in storage. If such person holds such fuel exclusively for a nontaxable use, then the fuel will not be considered to be taxable fuel for purposes of the floor stocks tax. However, if such person holds such fuel for a taxable use, or for both taxable and nontaxable uses, the regulations will provide that the fuel is taxable fuel for purposes of the floor stocks tax.

For purposes of the floor stocks tax imposed by section 10502(f), only the L.U.S.T. tax shall apply with respect to diesel fuel held exclusively for use as a fuel in a diesel-powered train and aviation fuel held exclusively for use as a fuel in an aircraft not in noncommercial aviation.

C. Inventory

The regulations will require every taxable person liable for the floor stocks tax on taxable fuel to prepare an inventory of taxable fuel held at the first moment of April 1, 1988. Taxable persons holding taxable fuel subject to the tax at more than one location will be required to prepare a separate inventory, in duplicate, for each such location. One copy of the separate inventory is to be retained at the location and one copy is to be kept at the principal place of business of the taxable person. Each inventory is to show the name of the taxable person, the location of the particular premises for which the inventory is made, the address shown on the taxable person's tax return, and the total number of gallons of taxable fuel held at the particular location that are subject to the floor stocks tax on taxable fuel. The regulations will provide that the inventory is not to be filed with the return but is to be retained by the taxpayer.

D. Special Rule for Determining Amount of Taxable Fuel Held in Inventory

As explained above, taxable persons are required to make an inventory of all taxable fuel held on April 1, 1988, and keep records of that inventory. The regulations will provide that, in determining the amount of taxable fuel subject to the floor stocks tax, a taxable person may exclude the amount of taxable fuel in dead storage. "Dead storage" will be defined as the amount of taxable fuel that will not be pumped out of a storage tank because the taxable fuel is below the mouth of the draw pipe. For this purpose, a taxable person will be permitted to assume that the amount of taxable fuel in dead storage is 200 gallons for a tank with a capacity of less than 10,000 gallons and 400 gallons for a tank with a capacity of 10,000 gallons or more. Alternatively, a taxable person will be permitted to compute the amount of taxable fuel in dead storage by using the manufacturer's conversion table for the tank and the number of inches between the bottom of the tank and the mouth of the draw pipe. If the taxable person uses the conversion table method to compute the amount of taxable fuel in dead storage, the distance between the bottom of the tank and the mouth of the draw pipe is to be assumed to be 6 inches, unless the taxable person establishes otherwise.

E. Requirements With Respect to Return

(1) Form

The regulations will require every person liable for the floor stocks tax on taxable fuel to make a return of the tax on Form 720.

(2) Time and place for filing return

The return reflecting the floor stocks tax is to be filed with the Service Center indicated by the instructions for the Form 720. The regulations will provide that in the case of a taxable person not otherwise required to file Form 720, the return must be filed before June 16, 1988, and must be marked "FINAL". If liability is subsequently incurred by such taxable person during the quarter ending June 30, 1988, so that a second Form 720 is required to be filed for that quarter, the taxable person must mark the second Form 720 "AMENDED". In the case of all other taxable persons, the regulations will require that the return reflecting the floor stocks tax be filed on or before the date prescribed by the instructions for the Form 720 for the quarter ending June 30, 1988. For provisions relating to timely filing and paying, see sections 7502 and 7503. For provisions relating to additions to the tax in case of failure to file a return within the prescribed time, see section 6651 and §301.6651.

(3) Time and place for paying tax

The regulations will provide that the tax is due and payable without assessment or notice, before June 16, 1988. If a taxable person is not required to make a deposit of any tax reported on Form 720 using a Federal Tax Deposit Coupon for the quarter ending June 30, 1988, the taxable person is to pay the tax by check or money order. Such check or money order must reflect the taxable person's taxpayer identification number, and "Form 720 Second Quarter 1988, Floor Stocks Tax on [TYPE OF FUEL] and the IRS number of each fuel. The IRS numbers for each fuel are as follows:

Type of fuel	IRS Number
Diesel fuel	85
Diesel fuel for trains	71
Diesel fuel for blending with alcohol	86
Diesel fuel in alcohol mixture	86
Aviation fuel (commercial use)	77
Aviation fuel (noncommercial use)	87

The check or money order must be sent, together with the Form 720, to the Service Center indicated by the instructions for the Form 720. All other taxable persons shall pay the tax by making a deposit of the tax, together with a Federal Tax Deposit Coupon before June 16, 1988, at an authorized depository or the Federal Reserve Bank serving the taxable person's area. For provisions relating to interest on underpayments, additions to tax, and penalties, see the applicable sections of 26 C.F.R. Part 301 (Regulations on Procedure and Administration).

(4) Credit or refund

The regulations will provide that any person who has paid a floor stocks tax on taxable fuel may be entitled, subject to the provisions of sections 6416 and 6427, to a credit or refund of the tax for any of the reasons specified in section 6416 or 6427. That is, in the case of the floor stocks tax, either the exempt user or the seller of the fuel to the exempt user may claim the refund or credit. Under the regulations, credit or refund may be claimed for any of the purposes specified relating to—

(a) Export or shipment to a possession of the United States;

(b) Supplies for vessels or aircraft,

(c) Exclusive use of a state or local government,

(d) Exclusive use of a nonprofit educational organization,

(e) Use of taxable fuel in the production of special fuels,

(f) Off-highway business use,

(g) Intercity, local, or school buses,

(h) Use on a farm for farming purposes,

(i) Use by certain aircraft museums,

(j) Certain helicopter uses, or

(k) Certain taxicab uses.

Claims for refund under section 10502(f) of the Revenue Act are to be filed on Form 843, "Claim". Subject to the provisions of sections 6416 and 6427, any person entitled to claim a refund of tax may, in lieu of claiming a refund, claim a credit for the tax against taxes imposed under Subtitle A or Chapter 32 of Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code on any subsequent return. A taxpayer should attach to the return a statement or a Form 4136, "Computation of Credit for Federal Tax on Gasoline and Special Fuels", if applicable, to show the computations. See also section VIII of this notice regarding credit and refund procedures.

(5) Records

The regulations will require every person liable for the floor stocks tax on taxable fuel to maintain—

(a) Records of the separate inventories required by section VI(C) of this notice,

(b) A duplicate copy of the return, together with other relevant papers and material, and

(c) A complete and detailed record with respect to any claim of refund or credit of the tax.

All records required by this paragraph are to be kept at the principal place of business of the person required to maintain the records. The records are at all times to be available for inspection by internal revenue agents and officers. Records required by paragraph (5)(a) and (b) of this section are to be maintained for a period of at least three years after the date the tax becomes due or the date the tax is paid, whichever is later. Records required by paragraph (5)(c) of this section (including any record required by paragraph (5)(a) or (b) that relates to a claim) are to be maintained for a period of at least three years after the last day prescribed for the filing of the claim for credit or payment.

VII. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

A. Filing Requirements

The regulations will provide that liability for tax imposed under section 4091 must be reported on Form 720 (Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return in accordance with the instructions for Form 720 and the applicable regulations.

B. Recordkeeping Requirements

The regulations will require each person who is registered or required to register under section 4101 or 4093, and each state or local government purchasing taxable fuel tax-free, to maintain adequate records of all taxable fuel it purchases, sells, or uses. For each purchase, sale, or use of taxable fuel, the regulations will require that the record include: (1) the volume of taxable fuel, (2) the type(s) of taxable fuel, (3) the date of the transaction, (4) the name and status of each person involved (e.g., X Corporation as seller and A Proprietor as purchaser), and (5) whether the sale or use is taxable. Any person who claims a credit or refund of tax imposed under section 4091 is to maintain adequate records to support the credit or refund. All records required by this paragraph are to be kept at the principal place of business of the person required to maintain the records. The records are at all times to be available for inspection by internal revenue agents and officers. Records required by this section are to be maintained for a period of at least three years after either (1) the date the tax becomes due or is paid (whichever is later), or (2) the last date prescribed for the filing of the claim for credit or payment, as applicable.

Section 4093(d) gives the Secretary authority to require information reporting as the Secretary deems necessary to carry out the subpart. Later regulations may require additional recordkeeping and information reporting.

VIII. CREDIT AND REFUND PROCEDURES

Exempt users should use Form 4136, "Computation of Credit for Federal Tax on Gasoline and Special Fuels", to claim a credit against Federal income tax liability, or Form 843, "Claim", to request a refund of taxes paid, with respect to taxable fuel used for a nontaxable purpose. For more information regarding credits or refunds, see I.R.S. Publication 378, "Fuel Tax Credits". IX. ADMINISTRATIVE PRONOUNCEMENT

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Passive Foreign Investment Company Provisions Section 1295: Election to be a Qualified Electing Fund

Notice 88-31

Section 1295 Elections by Shareholders

The Internal Revenue Service will amend the temporary regulations concerning passive foreign investment companies and the qualified electing fund election under section 1295 that were published in the Federal Register, 53 Fed. Reg. 6770 (March 2, 1988)—(T.D. 8178) [page 313, this Bulletin]. The election must be made on or before March 14, 1988, for taxable year ending on or before December 31, 1987. The amended regulations will provide, however, that the qualified electing fund (QEF) election may be made by any shareholder of a passive foreign investment company (PFIC) that is a U.S. person provided the election is ratified by the PFIC no later than December 15, 1988.

Section 1.1295-1T(b)(1) will be amended to permit the QEF election for taxable years ending before October 1, 1988, to be made on behalf of the PFIC by any shareholder of a PFIC that is a U.S. person (including any U.S. person that is a shareholder of a PFIC by application of the attribution rules of section 1297(a) of the Code). The election statement filed by a U.S. person who is a shareholder of the PFIC must have the heading, "Shareholder Section 1295 Election—Subject to Corporate Ratification," and contain the information required by §1.1295-1T(b)(2)(ii)(A), (B), and (C), to the extent known by the shareholder. The shareholder making the election also must provide his/her/its name, address, and taxpayer identification number, represent that he/she/it was a shareholder of the PFIC during the taxable year of the PFIC for which the election is made, and sign the election statement, under penalties of perjury, stating that the information and representation provided are true, correct and complete to the best of the shareholder's knowledge and belief. An election made by a shareholder must be filed with the Philadelphia Service Center, P.O. Box 21086, Philadelphia, PA 19114, before the 15th day of the third month following the taxable year of the PFIC for which the election is made. For taxable year ended on or before December 31, 1987, the election must be filed on or before March 14, 1988.

Section 1.1295-1T(b)(1) will be amended to provide that an election made by a shareholder will be valid provided the PFIC, by December 15, 1988, reports to the Internal Revenue Service, at the Philadelphia address provided above, that it formally ratified the election made by the shareholder. The PFIC also must satisfy the other election requirements set forth in §1.1295-1T(b) by December 15, 1988.

Section 1.1295-1T(b)(1)(iii) of the temporary regulations also will be amended to apply to elections that must be filed before November 15, 1988. If a PFIC or its shareholder files a statement containing the information required in §1.1295-1T(b)(2)(ii)(A), (B), and (C) before the 15th day of the third month following the taxable year of the PFIC for which the election is being made, the PFIC will have until December 15, 1988, to satisfy the other election requirements provided in §1.1295-1T(b), including sending the shareholder notification and request for certification.

Section 1.1295-1T(b)(6)(i), which requires annual reporting by the PFIC to the Internal Revenue Service, also will be amended. A PFIC whose election was made for its taxable year ending before July 1, 1988, will have until March 15, 1989, to satisfy the annual reporting requirement of §1.1295-1T(b)(6).

Section 1.1294-1T(c()2) will be amended to provide that a shareholder who wishes to make the election under section 1294 to extend the time for payment of tax on its share of the undistributed earnings of the PFIC, but is required under §1.1294-1T(c)(1) to make the election before March 15, 1989, will have until March 15, 1989, to amend its tax return and make the election under section 1294.

Time for Mailing Elections under Section 1295

The Internal Revenue Service also will amend §1.1295-1T(b)(1)(i) to modify the date an election under section 1295 mailed outside the United States must be postmarked to be considered filed by March 14, 1988. Section 1.1295-1T(b)(1)(i) provides that a foreign corporation electing to be a qualified electing fund must file its election before the 15th day of the third month following the year for which the election is made. An election mailed outside the United States in the manner described in that paragraph must be postmarked at least 10 calendar days before the due date. The Internal Revenue Service will amend §1.1295-1T(b)(1)(i) to provide that an election under section 1295 that is due by March 14, 1988, and is mailed outside the United States will be timely filed if postmarked on or before March 14, 1988.

Effective Date

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is used in §1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287. Taxpayers may rely on this notice until the amended regulations are published. The regulations will be effective for taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986.

Clarification of the Requirement to Furnish Tax Shelter Registration Numbers

Notice 88-32

This notice provides further clarification of the instructions for Form 8271, Investor Reporting of Tax Shelter Registration Number, in connection with certain acquisitions involving tax shelters required to be registered under section 6111 of the Internal Revenue Code. Section 6111 of the Code and section 1.6111-1T of the Income Tax Regulations require the registration of tax shelters. In addition, any person who transfers an interest in a tax shelter is required to furnish the tax shelter registration number to any transferee of such interest. This notice supplements the provisions of Announcement 85-33, I.R.B. 1985-9, 22, which clarified the instructions to Form 8271 to provide rules under section 6111 that are applicable to an investment by a partnership, an S corporation or a trust ("pass-through entities") in a tax shelter.

This notice clarifies the tax shelter reporting requirements under section 6111 of the Code in the case of the substantial acquisition by a pass-through entity of an interest in an investment that has been registered as a tax shelter. If

(i) a pass-through entity acquires at least a 50 percent interest (in profits and capital), during one taxable year of such pass-through entity, in an investment that is registered as a tax shelter (and in which the pass-through entity had not held an interest prior to that taxable year), and

(ii) the investment would not meet the definition of a tax shelter (within the meaning of section 6111(c)(1)(A) of the Code as to any investor) immediately following the acquisition if the investment had been offered for sale at that time (For example, this situation could occur if debt incurred to finance the investment were satisfied in connection with the acquisition, thereby reducing the tax shelter ratio for each investor to less than 2 to 1.), then the pass-through entity is not required under section 6111 to give a copy of Form 8271 to its partners, shareholders or beneficiaries (as the case may be) with respect to its interest in the investment. All other investors who hold or acquire (directly or indirectly) an interest in the tax shelter investment (i.e., investors other than those to whom a pass-through entity is not required to furnish a registration number under this notice) are required to prepare and include a Form 8271 for the investment with their Federal income tax returns and to furnish the number to any persons to whom they transfer an interest in the investment. In addition, the pass-through entity is required to prepare a Form 8271 and include Form 8271 with its Form 1065, 1120S, or 1041.

The Service is actively considering the application of the tax shelter number reporting requirements in the situation described above and other similar situations. The Service solicits comments on this matter from interested practitioners and taxpayers.

PROCEDURAL INFORMATION

This notice serves an an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Employee Plans—Distribution of Excess Amounts

Notice 88-33

This notice provides guidance with respect to the distribution of excess deferrals under section 402(g), excess contributions under section 401(k) excess aggregate contributions under section 401(m). In general, these excess amounts (with allocable income) must be returned within a short period of time after the end of the tax or plan year to avoid sanctions under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. The notice advises plan sponsors of methods that will be considered reasonable for purposes of allocating gain or loss to excess amounts; provides a safe harbor method for computing the gain or loss allocable to the excess amount for the period between the end of the year and the date of distribution; and provides special rules for the treatment of certain losses allocable to excess amounts. Finally, the notice provides transitional relief with respect to the definition of highly compensated employees.

Background

Section 402(g) of the Code, as added by section 1105(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (TRA), Pub. L. 99-514, [1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 334] places limitations on the amount of elective deferrals that employees may make to section 401(k) arrangements, section 403(b) arrangements, sections 408(k) salary reduction simplified employee pensions (SARSEPs), and section 501(c)(18) plans. In general, this limitation is $7,000 ($9,500 for 403(b) plans) for the 1987 taxable year. Amounts in excess of this limitation and income thereon are treated as income to the employee in 1987. If not distributed by April 15, 1988, such amounts are treated as employer contributions and may not be distributed until other distributions of employer contributions are permitted by the terms of the plan. Furthermore, such amounts will again be subject to taxation at the time of distribution.

Section 401(k)(3) of the Code, as amended by TRA, places limitations on the amount of elective contributions that employees may make to a cash or deferred arrangement. Section 401(m) of the Code, as added by TRA, imposes limitations on amounts of employee contributions and matching contributions that may be contributed to qualified plans under section 401(a) and annuity plans under section 403(a) and 403(b). In general, these limitations are determined by comparing the percentage of contributions made by highly compensated employees to those made by employees who are not highly compensated.

With respect to participants, an excess contribution or an excess aggregate contribution (plus income) distributed within 2 1/2 months after the end of the plan year is includible in the gross income of the participant on the earliest date any elective contribution by the employee during the plan year would have been received by the employee had the employee originally elected to receive the amounts in cash. If it is distributed after the 2 1/2 month period but before the close of the plan year following the plan year in which it was contributed, it is includible in the gross income of the participant in the taxable year in which it is distributed. With respect to a SARSEP, an excess contribution (plus allocable income) is includible in gross income in the year contributed, regardless of when it is distributed.

If the excess contribution or excess aggregate contribution is distributed after the 2 1/2 month period, the employer will be subject to a penalty tax equal to 10% of such excess amount under section 4979 of the Code. If the excess contribution or excess aggregate contribution is not distributed before the close of the plan year following the plan year in which it was contributed, the cash or deferred arrangement (in the case of an excess contribution) or the entire plan (in the case of an excess aggregate contribution) will lose its qualified status with respect to the plan year in which the contribution was made, and for each year thereafter in which the excess contribution or excess aggregate contribution remains in the account.

Notice 87-2, 1987-1 C.B. 396, provides model amendments that plan sponsors (excluding master or prototype plan sponsors) may adopt to conform to post-TRA qualification requirements, effective for plan years beginning before January 1, 1989. The formula in Notice 87-2 for allocating income to excess amounts requires that a corrective distribution be increased by the amount of net gains allocable to the excess amount, but provides that a corrective distribution shall not be reduced by the amount of net losses allocable to the excess amount.

Notice 87-33, 1987-1 C.B. 480, provides model amendments for adoption by master and prototype plan sponsors. Notice 87-34, 1987-1 C.B. 490, provides a model amendment that may be used by master or prototype plan sponsors who wish to adopt a qualified cash or deferred arrangement under section 401(k). The formulas in these notices for allocating income to excess amounts require plans to increase a corrective distribution by the amount of net gains allocable to the excess amount, and to reduce the corrective distribution by the amount of net losses allocable to the excess amount. Thus, where a plan experiences net losses, a corrective distribution (or forfeiture) computed in accordance with these notices (which provide for allocation of losses) will be smaller than a corrective distribution (or forfeiture) computed in accordance with Notice 87-2 (which does not provide for allocation of losses).

Notice 87-72, 1987-2 C.B. 381, permits plan sponsors (other than master and prototype plan sponsors), who have adopted or intend to adopt the model amendments of Notice 87-2, to modify the model language to allocate losses to excess amounts. This permits such plan sponsors to adopt a loss allocation formula similar to those available to master and prototype plan sponsors under Notices 87-33 and 87-34.

Notice 87-77, 1987-2 C.B. 385, provides guidance on when corrective distributions of excess amounts must be made and when corrective distributions will be includible in income; on how to reflect the corrective distributions of such excess amounts on information returns; and on the applicability of employment and withholding taxes to corrective distributions.

Allocation of Income to Excess Amounts

For correction of 1987 excess amounts, plan sponsors may use any reasonable method for allocating gain and loss to such amounts, provided that such method is used consistently for all participants and for all corrective distributions under a plan for the 1987 taxable or plan year (whichever is applicable). The methods provided in Notice 87-2 (with or without the modification permitted by Notice 87-72) and in Notices 87-33 and 87-34, collectively designated the Closing Balance Method, will be deemed reasonable methods. In addition, the Adjusted Balance Method provided in this notice will be deemed a reasonable method of determining the gain or loss allocable to an excess amount for the 1987 taxable or plan year.

Under the Closing Balance Method or the Adjusted Balance Method, the income allocable to the excess must be determined by computing both the income for the applicable year and the income for the period between the end of the year and the date of distribution (the gap period). This notice demonstrates the calculation of allocable income for such periods under both the Closing Balance Method and the Adjusted Balance Method. It also provides an additional method, the Ten-Percent Method, that will be deemed a reasonable method for calculating the gap period income.

The Ten-Percent Method may only be used to calculate gap period income; it may not be used to calculate the income for the applicable year. However, it may be used to calculate gap period income in conjunction with any reasonable method for calculating income for the applicable year. For example, it may be used in conjunction with the Closing Balance Method provided in model amendments under Notices 87-2, 87-33, and 87-34, even though such model amendments do not expressly provide for the Ten-Percent Method.

I. Closing Balance Method

Under the Closing Balance Method of Notices 87-2, 87-33, and 87-34, the income allocable to the excess is equal to the sum of (1) the income allocable to the account containing the excess amounts for the applicable year and (2) the income allocable to such account for the gap period, multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the excess amount, and the denominator is the closing balance (as of the end of the applicable year) of the account containing the excess amount. The closing balance includes income for the applicable year.

Example 1. Participant A made an elective contribution of $30,000 to a qualified cash or deferred arrangement under section 401(k) during 1987, resulting in an excess deferral for 1987 of $23,000. A had an opening account balance of $80,000. The gain allocable for the calendar year to the elective contribution account is $15,000. The gain allocable for the gap period, January 1, 1988 to March 1, 1988 (the date of distribution), is $5,000. The 1987 closing elective deferral account balance for A is $125,000, determined as follows: $80,000 opening account balance plus $15,000 gain earned through the end of the taxable year plus the $30,000 elective contribution. Under the Closing Balance Method, the income allocable to the excess deferral for the 1987 taxable year is $2,760 ($15,000 multiplied by 23,000/125,000). The income for the gap period is $920 ($5,000 multiplied by 23,000/125,000). Thus, under the Closing Balance Method, the income allocable to the excess deferral is $3,680 ($2,760 plus 920). The same result would be obtained by multiplying the combined income for the applicable year and gap period ($20,000) by the Closing Balance Method fraction (23,000/125,000). In either case, the amount of income subject to distribution is $3,680. Thus, the amount required to be distribted is $26,680 ($23,000 excess plus $3,680 income).

II. Adjusted Balance Method

Regulations under sections 401(k) and 401(m) will provide that gains and losses are to be allocated to excess amounts (with respect to both the applicable year and the gap period) on the basis of the Adjusted Balance Method described in this notice. The Adjusted Balance Method computes the income allocation on the basis of closing account balances (determined as of the end of the applicable year and as of the end of the gap period) adjusted for gains and losses during the applicable period. The formula under the Adjusted Balance Method is identical to that of the Closing Balance Method, except that the closing account balance is reduced by gains allocable to the account during the applicable period, and increased by losses allocable to such account during such period.

Example 2. Assume the facts set forth in Example 1. The elective deferral account balance for the end of the year is $125,000. Under the Adjusted Balance Method, the denominator of the fraction, $110,000, is computed by subtracting from the account balance ($125,000), the gain allocable to the account, ($15,000). Thus, the income allocable to the excess deferral for the 1987 taxable year is $3,136.36 ($15,000 income multiplied by 23,000/110,000). For purposes of computing the gap period income under the Adjusted Balance Method, the elective deferral account balance on the date of distribution is $130,000 ($125,000 opening balance on January 1, 1988 plus $5,000 earnings through the date of distribution). The denominator of the fraction is $125,000 ($130,000 minus 5,000). The income allocable to the excess deferral for the gap period under the Adjusted Balance Method is $920 ($5,000 multiplied by 23,000/125,000). Thus, under the Adjusted Balance Method, the total income allocable to the excess deferral in this example is $4,056.36 ($3.136.36 plus 920). The amount required to be distributed is $27,056.36 ($23,000 excess plus $4,056.36 income).

III. Ten-Percent Method

Regulations under section 401(k) and 401(m) will provide that the income allocable to an excess amount for the gap period may be determined under the following Ten-Percent Method. Under the Ten-Percent method, the allocable income for the gap period may be deemed to be equal to 10% of the income or loss allocable to the distributable excess for the applicable year multiplied by the number of calendar months that have elapsed since the end of the applicable year. A distribution occurring on or before the fifteenth day of the month will be treated as having been made on the last day of the preceding month, and a distribution occurring after such fifteenth day shall be treated as having been made on the first day of the next month. The income for the applicable year may not be calculated under the Ten-Percent Method.

Example 3. Assume the same facts as in Example 1, except that gap period income will be computed pursuant to the Ten-Percent Method. The gap period income allocable to the excess amount described in Example 1 is $552.00 (10% of $2,760.00 multiplied by the number of months (two) between the end of the year and the date of the corrective distribution). The total income allocable to the excess amount using the Ten-Percent Method in conjunction with the Closing Balance Method is $3,312.00 ($2,760.00 plus 552.00). Accordingly, the amount required to be distributed is $26,312.00 ($23,000 excess plus $3,312.00 income).

Example 4. Assume the same facts as in Example 2, except that gap period income will be computed pursuant to the Ten-Percent Method. The gap period income allocable to the excess amount described in Example 2 is $627.27 (10% of 3,136.36 multiplied by the number of months (two) between the end of the year and the date of the corrective distribution). The total income allocable to the excess amount using the Ten-Percent Method in conjunction with the Adjusted Balance Method is $3,763.63 ($3,136.36 plus 627.27). Accordingly, the amount required to be distributed is $26,763.63 ($23,000 excess plus $3,763.63 income).

Excess Contributions and Excess Aggregate Contributions

The foregoing examples of income allocation are based on excess deferrals, but similar formulas apply with respect to excess contributions and excess aggregate contributions. In the case of excess contributions, the numerator of the fraction is the total amount of excess contributions for the plan year, and the denominator of the fraction is the sum of the account balances attributable to the accounts containing such excess contributions (i.e. the sum of the accounts including the participant's elective deferrals, qualified matching contributions treated as elective deferrals, and the qualified nonelective contributions treated as elective deferrals). In the case of excess aggregate contributions, the numerator is the total amount of excess aggregate contributions for the plan year, and the denominator is the sum of the account balances containing such excess aggregate contributions (i.e. the accounts attributable to employee contributions, to matching contributions, and to elective deferrals and qualified nonelective contributions treated as matching contributions, if any). As in the case of elective deferrals, the foregoing denominators are unadjusted for gains and losses if the Closing Balance Method applies, or are adjusted for gains and losses if the Adjusted Balance Method applies.

Special Rule for Model Plan Adopters

Notwithstanding their adoption of the Closing Balance model language contained in Notices 87-2, 87-33, or 87-34, plan sponsors and employers who have adopted plans using the model amendments may calculate the income allocable to the excess amounts for the 1987 taxable or plan year pursuant to the Adjusted Balance Method, and may calculate the gap period income pursuant to either the Adjusted Balance Method or the Ten-Percent Method.

Definition of Highly Compensated Employee

Regulations under section 401(k) and (m) will provide that no penalties or plan disqualification will result from an error in the amount of excess contributions or excess aggregate contributions provided the following requirements are met:

(1) such failure or error resulted solely from an error in determining the group of highly compensated employees which error reflected a reasonable interpretation of the provisions of section 414(q) relied upon by the employer in defining highly compensated employee; and

(2) the excess contributions or excess aggregate contributions are with respect to plan years commencing with or during the 1987 calendar year and ending prior to July 1, 1988.

The following examples are illustrative of potential sources of differences in determining the group of highly compensated employees that will generally be considered reasonable interpretations of section 414(q) for purposes of this rule: (1) exclusion of collective bargaining employees in determining the number of employees in the top-paid group; (2) determination of the number of employees in the top-paid group on the basis of the total number of active employees at the end of the determination year and look-back year respectively; (3) use of the employer's fiscal year ending in the plan year for the determination year and use of the preceding fiscal year for the look-back year; (4) use of the 1986 and 1987 calendar years for the look-back year and determination year respectively.

In addition, regulations will provide that plans subject to the requirements of section 401(k) and (m) that have short plan years commencing in the 1987 or 1988 calendar years are eligible to elect the transitional rule in §1.414(q)1 A-15 for such years. For purposes of determining whether employees in such plans are five-percent owners or receive compensation in excess of $50,000, the employer must take into account the twelve month period ending with the last day of the short plan year.

Computation of Corrective Distribution Amount

In general, the excess amount to be distributed must be adjusted for gains and losses. However, excess amounts may be distributed without regard to losses in the following circumstances:

(1) Excess deferrals (but not excess contributions or excess aggregate contributions) for 1987 may be distributed without reduction for losses. Such distributions may require a plan amendment, but the sponsor may utilize the extended period provided under section 1140 of the TRA for making such amendments.

(2) If a plan sponsor adopts timely the model amendments in Notice 87-2, excess deferrals, excess contributions, and excess aggregate contributions may be distributed without reduction for losses until further guidance is issued by the Service.

Notice 87-77 Amplified

Plan sponsors and fiduciaries are reminded that corrective distributions of 1987 excesses made in 1988 are to be reported to participants on 1988 Forms W-2P and 1099-R. Payors and plan administrators need not furnish the 1988 Form W-2P or 1099-R to participants until the regular deadline for such reporting (January 31, 1989), but must advise plan participants at the time of distribution of the year in which the distribution is includible in income and that receipt of amounts includible in income in a prior year will require a participant to file an amended income tax return if a return has already been filed for that year. The 30-day notice requirement described in Notice 87-77 (with respect to corrective distributions of 1987 excess contributions and excess aggregate contributions made after the 2 1/2 month period and with respect to recharacterized amounts), can be satisfied either by providing the employer a copy of the completed 1988 Form W-2P or 1099-R or by providing the employer a written statement containing the information that the plan administrator or the payor would have been required to provide to the employer on the 1988 Form W-2P or 1099-R.

Reporting a Loss on 1987 Form 1040

If a 1987 net loss with respect to a corrective distribution of an excess deferral is incurred, such loss may be reported on 1987 Form 1040, Line 21, Other Income, as a bracketed (negative) numerical amount. Identify it as a "Loss on Excess Deferral Distribution." The full amount of the excess deferral will be reported as income on Line 7 of the 1987 Form 1040.

Gasohol Blenders and Sellers of Gasoline—Transitional Procedures

The purpose of this Notice is to inform gasohol blenders and sellers of gasoline that the transitional procedures provided in Notice 88-2, page 473, this Bulletin, for the first quarter of 1988 will continue to be effective through June 30, 1988. Under that procedure, a reduced rate of tax under section 4081(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 ("the Code") applies to sales of gasoline to registered gasohol blenders only if the gasoline is or will be blended with alcohol to produce gasohol. Registered gasohol blenders are also reminded that they must file a Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return (Form 720) for the second quarter of 1988 and maintain certain records, as provided in Notice 88-2, if they purchase gasoline to blend with alcohol to produce gasohol at the reduced rate of tax.

For the reduced rate of tax to apply to a sale to a gasohol blender, the blender must have complied with the registration and bond requirements of section 4101 of the Code. Thus, any gasohol blender that wishes to purchase gasoline to blend with alcohol to produce gasohol at the reduced rate of tax provided under section 4081(c)(1) must apply for registration on a Form 637 with the district director and obtain a registration number that signifies gasohol blender. Use of registration as a blender to purchase gasoline at the reduced rate that is not to be used to blend with alcohol to produce gasohol is a misuse of the registration and may lead to revocation or suspension of the registration.

Section 4101 of the Code provides that persons registering under section 4101 may be required to give a bond. Effective April 1, 1988, a gasohol blender that wishes to purchase gasoline to blend with alcohol to produce gasohol at the reduced rate of tax may be required to give a bond if the district director is not satisfied with the blender's federal tax filing, deposit, and payment history. See I.R.S. Notice 88-16, page 482, this Bulletin.

Final regulations will clarify that if a bond is required, effective July 1, 1988, the amount of the bond will be equal to the lesser of (1) $1,000,000 or (2) an amount equal to 5-2/3 cents multiplied by the number of gallons of gasoline the gasohol blender expects to purchase at the reduced rate of tax provided under section 4081(c)(1) in an average 1-month period (as determined by the district director). This calculation of the amount of a bond that may be required of a gasohol blender that purchases gasoline to blend with alcohol to produce gasohol at the reduced rate of tax under section 4081(c)(1) after June 30, 1988, may result in a bond amount different from the amount required under the proposed regulations published in the Federal Register on November 18, 1987 (52 FR 44141) or in Notice 88-16. Therefore, this portion of the proposed regulations, as revised, will be issued in proposed form before being issued in final form.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Section 933.—Income From Sources Within Puerto Rico: 1986 Tax Reform Act Changes Affecting United States Citizens Who Are Bona Fide Residents of Puerto Rico

Notice 88-35

The Tax Reform Act of 1986, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1 (the Act), changed the tax treatment of deductions for age and blindness and of income from sales of stock and other personal property. This notice describes how these changes affect United States citizens who are bona fide residents of Puerto Rico ("citizen residents").

BACKGROUND

Section 933 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provides that income derived from sources within Puerto Rico by a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico is excludable from gross income. If the resident is a United States citizen, however, the resident's income from sources outside Puerto Rico remains subject to tax under normal United States tax rules.

DEDUCTIONS FOR AGE AND BLINDNESS

Section 933(1) of the Code provides that deductions allocable to Puerto Rican source income may not be claimed against other income by a citizen resident. A citizen resident's deductions must be apportioned between Puerto Rican source income and other income under principles similar to those set forth in section 861(b). Deductions allowed under section 151 (relating to personal exemptions), however, are excepted from this rule and may be claimed by a citizen resident against non-Puerto Rican source income.

For taxable years before 1987, sections 151(c) and (d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 allowed deductions for age and blindness exemptions. Under section 933, the full amount of these deductions could be claimed against the taxable income of citizen residents.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, the Act removed these deductions from section 151 of the Code, and provided instead additional standard deductions (based on age and blindness) under section 63(f). Like other deductions and the former zero bracket amount, therefore, these deductions must now be apportioned between Puerto Rican source income and other income. Citizen residents may deduct only the amount apportioned to other income.

SALES OF STOCK AND OTHER PERSONAL PROPERTY

Section 865 of the Code, added by the Act, provides that for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, the source of income from the sale of personal property is the seller's country of residence. Section 865(g)(2) provides that United States citizens will be treated as residents of the United States for purposes of section 865 unless the taxpayer pays to a foreign country (including, for this purpose, Puerto Rico) a tax on the sales income at an effective rate of at least ten percent. Therefore, if a citizen resident recognizes gain from the sale of stock or other personal property, the gain is excludable from gross income under section 933 only if the individual pays a tax on the gain to Puerto Rico at an effective rate of at least ten percent.

Tiered Structure—Section 444 Election

Notice 88-36

This notice provides guidance regarding the definition of the term "tiered structure" under section 444(d)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

I. Background

Sections 441(i), 706(b), and 1378 of the Code, as amended by section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514)—(the "1986 Act"), [1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 279], generally require personal service corporations, partnerships, and S corporations, respectively, to conform their taxable years to the taxable years of their owner.

New section 444 of the Code, as added by section 10206 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (Pub. L. 100-203)—(the "1987 Act"), allows certain partnerships, S corporations and personal service corporations to elect the use of a taxable year that is different from the taxable year that such entities would otherwise be required to use under section 806 of the 1986 Act.

Under section 444(d)(3) of the Code, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that is a member of a tiered structure generally may not make a section 444 election to use a particular taxable year for Federal income tax purposes. The Internal Revenue Service has received many inquiries regarding the definition of tiered structure under section 444(d)(3).

For additional background information, see section I (entitled "Background") and VII (entitled "Tiered Structures") of Notice 88-10, page 478, this Bulletin.

II. Summary of Guidance.

This notice provides that an entity that is a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation will be treated as a member of a tiered structure if such entity directly owns any portion or a "deferral entity," or is directly owned (in whole or in part) by a "deferral entity." The term "deferral entity" is defined to include partnerships, S corporations, personal service corporations and certain trusts.

This notice also contains two de minimis rules which allow certain deferral entities to be disregarded for purposes of determining whether a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is a member of tiered structure. For those provisions, as well as additional rules relating to the determination of membership in a tiered structure, see the "Detailed Guidance" section of this notice.

The rules provided in the "Detailed Guidance" section of this notice will be included in forthcoming temporary regulations. However, neither the release of this notice nor the publication of this notice in the Internal Revenue Bulletin will commence the running of the 60-day period described in section III of Notice 88-10 (page 478) for making a section 444 election. Rather, as provided in section III of Notice 88-10, such election period will commence with the publication of the forthcoming temporary regulations in the Federal Register.

(6) Examples.

(c) Tiered structure—(1) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section, no section 444 election shall be made or continued with respect to a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that is a member of a tiered structure on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section. For purposes of this section, the term "personal service corporation" means a personal service corporation as defined in section 441(i)(2).

(2) Definition of a member of a tiered structure—(i) In general. A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation will be considered a member of a tiered structure if--

(A) The partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation directly owns any portion of a deferral entity, or

(B) A deferral entity directly owns any portion of the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation.

However, see paragraph (c)(3) of this section for certain de minimis rules, and see paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section for an anti-abuse rule. In addition, for purposes of this section, a beneficiary of a trust shall be considered to own an interest in the trust.

(ii) Deferral entity—(A) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "deferral entity" means an entity that is a partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation, or trust.

(B) Exception. Notwithstanding paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(A) of this section, the term "deferral entity" does not include a trust (or a portion of a trust) which is treated as owned by the grantor or beneficiary under Subpart E, part I, subchapter J, chapter 1, of the Code (relating to grantor trusts), including a trust that is treated as a grantor trust pursuant to section 1361(d)(1)(A) of the Code (relating to qualified subchapter S trusts).

(iii) Anti-abuse rule. Notwithstanding paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is considered a member of a tiered structure if the partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation, or related taxpayers have organized or reorganized their ownership structure or operations for the principal purpose of obtaining a significant unintended tax benefit from making or continuing a section 444 election. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a significant unintended tax benefit results when a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation makes a section 444 election and, as a result, a taxpayer (not limited to the entity making the election) obtains a significant deferral of income substantially all of which is not eliminated by a required payment under section 7519. See examples (15) through (19) in paragraph (c)(6) of this section.

(3) De minimis rules—(i) In general. For rules relating to a de minimis exception to paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section (the "downstream de minimis rule"), see paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section. For rules relating to a de minimis exception to paragraph (c)(2)(i)(B) of this section (the "upstream de minimis rule"), see paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section. For rules relating to the interaction of the de minimis rules provided in this paragraph (c)(3) and the "same taxable year exception" provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section, see paragraph (c)(5)(v) of this section.

(ii) Downstream de minimis rule—(A) General rule. If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation directly owns any portion of one or more deferral entities as of the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section if, in the aggregate, all such deferral entities accounted for--

(1) Not more than 5 percent of the partnership's, S corporation's, or personal service corporation's adjusted taxable income for the testing period ("5 percent adjusted taxable income test"), or

(2) Not more than 2 percent of the partnership's, S corporation's, or personal service corporation's gross income for the testing period ("2 percent gross income test"). See section 702(c) for rules relating to the determination of gross income of a partner in a partnership.

See examples (3) through (5) in paragraph (c)(6) of this section.

(B) Definition of testing period. For purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(ii), the term "testing period" means the taxable year that ends immediately prior to the taxable year for which the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation desires to make or continue a section 444 election. However, see the special rules provided in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(D) of this section for certain special cases (e.g., the partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation or deferral entity was not in existence during the entire testing period). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(B).

Example. A partnership desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987. The testing period for purposes of determining whether deferral entities owned by such partnership are de minimis under paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section is the taxable year ending October 31, 1987. If either the partnership or the deferral entities were not in existence for the entire taxable year ending October 1, 1987, see the special rules provided in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(D) of this section.

(C) Definition of adjusted taxable income—(1) Partnership. In the case of a partnership, adjusted taxable income for purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section is an amount equal to the sum of the—

(i) Aggregate amount of the partnership items described in section 702(a) (other than credits and tax-exempt income),

(ii) Applicable payments defined in section 7519(d)(3) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(1)(i) of this section, and

(iii) Guaranteed payments defined in section 707(c) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(1)(i) of this section and are not otherwise included in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(1)(ii) of this section.

For purposes of determining the aggregate amount of partnership items under paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(1)(i) of this section, deductions and losses are treated as negative income. Thus, for example, if under section 702(a) a partnership has $1,000 of ordinary taxable income, $500 of specially allocated deductions, and $300 of capital loss, the partnership's aggregate amount of partnership items under paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(1)(i) of this section is $200 ($1,000 - $500 - $300).

(2) S corporation. In the case of an S corporation, adjusted taxable income for purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section is an amount equal to the sum of the—

(i) Aggregate amount of the S corporation items described in section 1366(a) (other than credits and tax-exempt income), and

(ii) Applicable payments defined in section 7519(d)(3) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(2)(i) of this section, deductions and losses are treated as negative income. Thus, for example, if under section 1366 (a) an S corporation has $2,000 of ordinary taxable income, $1,000 of deductions described in section 1366(a)(1)(A) of the Code, and $500 of capital loss, the S corporation's aggregate amount of S corporation items under paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(2)(i) of this section is $500 ($2,000 - $1,000 - $500).

(3) Personal service corporation. In the case of a personal service corporation, adjusted taxable income for purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section is an amount equal to the sum of the—

(i) Taxable income of the personal service corporation, and

(ii) Applicable amounts defined in section 280H(f)(1) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C)(3)(i) of this section.

(D) Special rules—(1) Pro-forma rule. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(3)(D)(3)(ii), if a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation directly owns any interest in a deferral entity as of the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section and such ownership interest is different in amount from the partnership's, S corporation's, or personal service corporation's interest on any day during the testing period, the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test must be applied on a pro-forma basis (i.e., adjusted taxable income and gross income must be calculated for the testing period assuming that the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation owned the same interest in the deferral entity that it owned as of the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(D)(1).

Example. A personal service corporation desiring to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, acquires a 25 percent ownership interest in a partnership on or after October 1, 1987. Furthermore, the partnership has been in existence for several years. The personal service corporation must modify its calculations of the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test for the testing period ended September 30, 1987, by assuming that the personal service corporation owned 25 percent of the partnership during such testing period and the personal service corporation's adjusted taxable income and gross income were correspondingly adjusted.

(2) Reasonable estimates allowed. If the information necessary to complete the pro-forma calculation described in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(D)(1) is not readily available, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation may make a reasonable estimate of such information.

(3) Newly formed entities—(i) Newly formed deferral entities. If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation owns any portion of a deferral entity on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section and such deferral entity was not in existence during the entire testing period (hereinafter referred to as a "newly formed deferral entity"), both the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test are modified as follows. First, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation shall calculate the percentage of its adjusted taxable income or gross income that is attributable to deferral entities, excluding newly formed deferral entities. Second, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation shall calculate (on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section) the percentage of the tax basis of its assets that are attributable to its tax basis with respect to its ownership interests in all newly formed deferral entities. If the sum of the two percentages is 5 percent or less, the deferral entities are considered de minimis and are disregarded for purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section. If the sum of the two percentages is greater than 5 percent, the deferral entities do not qualify for the de minimis rule provided in paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section and thus the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is considered to be a member of a tiered structure for purposes of this section.

(ii) Newly formed partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation desiring to make a section 444 election. If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation desires to make a section 444 election for the first taxable year of its existence, the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test are replaced by a 5 percent of assets test. Thus, if on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, 5 percent or less of the assets (measured by reference to the tax basis of the assets) of the newly formed partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation are attributable to the tax basis with respect to its ownership interests in the deferral entities, the deferral entities will be considered de minimis and will be disregarded for purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section.

(iii) Upstream de minimis rule. If a partnership, S corporation or personal service corporation is directly owned by one or more deferral entities as of the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(i)(B) of this section if deferral entities directly own, in the aggregate, 5 percent or less of—

(A) An interest in the current profits of the partnership, or

(B) The stock (measured by value) of the S corporation or personal service corporation.

See examples (6) and (7) in paragraph (c)(6) of this section.

(4) Date for determining the existence of a tiered structure—(i) General rule. For purposes of paragraph (c)(1) of this section, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation will be considered a member of a tiered structure for a particular taxable year if the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is a member of a tiered structure on the last day of the required taxable year (as defined in section 444(e) of the Code) for such year. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(4)(i).

Example. Assume that a newly formed partnership whose first taxable year begins November 1, 1988, desires to adopt a September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election. Furthermore, assume that for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1988, the partnership's required taxable year is December 31. If the partnership is a member of a tiered structure on December 31, 1988, it will not be eligible to make a section 444 election for a taxable year beginning November 1, 1988, and ending September 30, 1989.

(ii) Special rule for taxable years beginning in 1987. For purposes of paragraph (c)(1) of this section, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation will not be considered a member of a tiered structure for a taxable year beginning in 1987 if the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is not a member of a tiered structure on the day the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation timely files its section 444 election for such year. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (c)(4)(ii).

Example (1). Assume that a partnership desires to retain a June 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Furthermore, assume that the partnership's required taxable year for such year is December 31 and that the partnership was a member of a tiered structure on such date. Also assume that the partnership was not a member of a tiered structure as of the date it timely filed its section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Based upon the special rule provided in this paragraph (c)(4)(ii), the partnership will not be considered a member of tiered structure for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the partnership was a member of a tiered structure on the date it filed its section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, but was not a member of a tiered structure on December 31, 1987. Paragraph (c)(4)(i) of this section would still apply and thus the partnership would not be considered part of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. However, the partnership would be considered a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1988, if the partnership was a member of a tiered structure on December 31, 1988.

(5) Same taxable year exception—(i) In general. Although a partnership or S corporation is a member of a tiered structure as of the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, the partnership or S corporation may make or continue a section 444 election if the tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) consists entirely of partnerships or S corporations (or both), all of which have the same taxable year as determined under paragraph (c)(5)(iii) of this section. However, see paragraph (c)(5)(v) of this section for the interaction of the de minimis rules provided in paragraph (c)(3) of this section with the same taxable year exception. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(5), two or more entities are considered to have the same taxable year if their taxable years end on the same day, even though they begin on different days. See exceptions (8) through (14) in paragraph (c)(6) of this section.

(ii) Definition of tiered structure—(A) General rule. For purposes of the same taxable year exception the members of atiered structure are defined to include the following entities—

(1) The partnership or S corporation that desires to qualify for the same taxable year exception,

(2) A deferral entity (or entities) directly owned (in whole or in part) by the partnership or S corporation that desires to qualify for the same taxable year exception,

(3) A deferral entity (or entities) directly owning any portion of the partnership or S corporation that desires to qualify for the same taxable year exception, and

(4) A deferral entity (or entities) directly owned (in whole or in part) by a "downstream controlled partnership," as defined in paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(B) of this section.

(B) Special flow-through rule for downstream controlled partnerships. If more that 50 percent of a partnership's profits and capital are owned by a partnership or S corporation that desires to qualify for the same taxable year exception, such owned partnership is considered a downstream controlled partnership for purposes of paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(A) of this section. Furthermore, if more than 50 percent of a partnership's profits and capital are owned by a downstream controlled partnership, such owned partnership is considered a downstream controlled partnership for purposes of paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(A) of this section.

(iii) Determining the taxable year of a partnership or S corporation. The taxable year of a partnership or S corporation to be taken into account for purposes of paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section is the taxable year ending with or prior to the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section. Furthermore, the determination of such taxable year will take into consideration any section 444 elections made by the partnership or S corporation. See examples (10) and (11) in paragraph (c)(6) of this section.

(iv) Special rule for 52–53-week taxable years. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(5), a 52–53-week taxable year with reference to the end of a particular month will be considered to be the same as a taxable year ending with reference to the last day of such month.

(v) Interaction with de minimis rules—(A) Downstream de minimis rule—(1) In general. If a partnership or S corporation that desires to make or continue a section 444 election is a member of a tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) and directly owns any member (or members) of the tiered structure with a taxable year different from the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of the same taxable year exception of paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section provided that, in the aggregate, the de minimis rule of (c)(35)(ii) of this section is satisfied with respect to such owned member (or members). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(5)(v)(A)(1).

Example. P, a partnership with a June 30 taxable year, owns 60 percent of P1, another partnership with a June 30 taxable year. P also owns 1 percent of P2 and P3, calendar year partnerships. If, in the aggregate, P's ownership interests in P2 and P3 are considered de minimis under paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section, P meets the same taxable year exception and may make a section 444 election to retain its June 30 taxable year.

(2) Special rule for members of a tiered structure directly owned by a downstream controlled partnership. For purposes of paragraph (c)(5)(v)(A)(1) of this section, a partnership or S corporation desiring to make or continue a section 444 election is considered to directly own any member of the tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) directly owned by a downstream controlled partnership (as defined in paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(B) of this section). The adjusted taxable income or gross income of the partnership or S corporation that is attributable to a member of a tiered structure directly owned by a downstream controlled partnership equals the adjusted taxable income or gross income of such member multiplied by the partnership's or S corporation's indirect ownership percentage of such member. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(5)(v)(A)(2).

Example. P, a partnership, desires to retain its June 30 taxable year by making section 444 election. However, as of the date specified in paragraph (c)—(4) of this section, P owns 75 percent of P1, a June 30 partnership, and P1 owns 40 percent of P2, a calendar year partnership. P also owns 25 percent of P3, a calendar year partnership. Pursuant to paragraphs (c)(5)(v)(A)(1) and (2) of this section, P may only qualify to use the same taxable year exception if, in the aggregate, P2 and P3 are de minimis with respect to P1. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(5)(v)(A)(2) of this section, P'S adjusted taxable income or gross income attributable to P2 equals 30 percent (75 percent times 60 percent) of P2's adjusted taxable income or gross income.

(B) Upstream de minimis rule. If a partnership or S corporation that desires to make or continue a section 444 election is a member of a tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) and is owned directly by a member (or members) of the tiered structure with taxable years different from the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of the same taxable year exception of paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section provided that, in the aggregate, the de minimis rule of paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section is satisfied with respect to such owning member (or members). See example 12 of paragraph (c)(6) of this section.

(6) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (c) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). A, a partnership, desires to make or continue a section 444 election. However, on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, A is owned by a combination of individuals and S corporations. The S corporations are deferral entities, as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (c)(2)(i)(B) of this section, A will be a member of a tiered structure unless under paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section, the S corporations, in the aggregate, own a de minimis portion of A. If the S corporations' ownership in A is not considered de minimis under paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section, A is a member of a tiered structure and will be allowed to make or continue a section 444 election only if it meets the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section.

Example (2). B, a partnership, desires to make or continue a section 444 election. However, on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, B is a partner in two partnerships, B1 and B2. B1 and B2 are deferral entities, as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section. Thus, under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section, B will be a member of a tiered structure unless B's aggregate ownership interests in B1 and B2 are considered de minimis under paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section. If B is a member of a tiered structure on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, B will be allowed to make or continue a section 444 election only if it meets the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section.

Example (3). C, a partnership with a September 30 taxable year, is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals. C desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. However, on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, C owns a 1 percent interest in C1, a partnership. C does not own any other interest in a deferral entity. For the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, 10 percent of C's adjusted taxable income (as defined in paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(C) of this section) was attributable to C's partnership interest in C1. Furthermore, 4 percent of C's gross income for the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, was attributable to C's partnership interest in C1. Under paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section, C's partnership interest in C1 is not de minimis because during the testing period more than 5 percent of C's adjusted taxable income is attributable to C1 and more than 2 percent of C's gross income is attributable to C1. Thus, C is a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (4). The facts are the same as example (3), except that for the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, only 2 percent of C's adjusted taxable income was attributable to C1. Under paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section, C's partnership interest in C1 is considered de minimis for purposes of determining whether C is a member of a tiered structure because not more than 5 percent of C's adjusted taxable income during the testing period is attributable to C1. Thus, C is not a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (5). The facts are the same as example (4), except that in addition to owning C1, C also owns 15 percent of C2, another partnership. For the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, 2 percent of C's adjusted taxable income is attributable to C1 and an additional 4 percent is attributable to C2. Furthermore, for the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, 4 percent of C's gross income is attributable to C1 while 3 percent is attributable to C2. Under paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section, C1 and C2 must be aggregated for purposes of determining whether C meets either the 5 percent adjusted gross income test or the 2 percent gross income test. Since C's adjusted taxable income attributable to C1 and C2 is 6 percent (2 percent + 4 percent) and C's gross income attributable to C1 and C2 is 7 percent (4 percent + 3 percent), C does not meet the downstream de minimis rule provided in paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section. Thus, C is a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (6). The facts are the same as example (3), except that instead of determining whether C is part of a tiered structure, the issue is whether C1 is part of a tiered structure, In addition, assume that on the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, the remaining 99 percent of C1 is owned by calendar year individuals and C1 does not own an interest in any deferral entity. Although C in Example (3) was considered to be a part of a tiered structure by virtue of its ownership interest in C1, C1 must be tested separately to determine whether it is part of a tiered structure. Since C's interest in C1 is 5 percent or less, C's interest in C1 is de minimis with respect to C1. See paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section. Thus, based upon these facts, C1 is not part of a tiered structure.

Example (7). The facts are the same as example (6), except that the remaining 99 percent of C1 is owned 94 percent by calendar year individuals and 5 percent by C3, another partnership. Thus, deferral entities own 6 percent of C1 (1 percent owned by C and 5 percent owned by C3). Under paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section, deferral entities own more than a de minimis interest (i.e., 5 percent) of C1, and thus C1 is part of a tiered structure.

Example (8). D, a partnership with a September 30 taxable year, desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. On December 31, 1987, and the date D plans to file its section 444 election, D is 10 percent owned by D1, a personal service corporation with a September 30 taxable year, and 90 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Furthermore, D1 will retain its September 30 taxable year because it previously established a business purpose for such year. Since D is owned in part by D1, a personal service corporation, and the ownership interest is not de minimis under paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section, D is considered a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. Furthermore, although D and D1 have the same taxable year, D does not qualify for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section because D1 is a personal service corporation rather than a partnership or S corporation. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (c)(1) of this section, D may not make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (9). The facts are the same as example (8), except that D1 is a partnership rather than a personal service corporation. Based upon these facts, D qualifies for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section. Thus, D may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (10). The facts are the same as example (9), except that D1 has not established a business purpose for a September 30 taxable year. In addition, D1 does not desire to make a section 444 election and under section 706(b), D1 will be required to change to a calendar year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(5)(iii) of this section, D and D1 do not have the same taxable year for purposes of the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section. Thus, D may not make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (11). The facts are the same as example (8), except that D1 is a partnership with a March 31 taxable year. Furthermore, for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987, D1 will change to a September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(5)(iii) of this section, D1 is considered to have a September 30 taxable year for purposes of determining whether D qualifies for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section. Since both D and D1 will have the same taxable year as of the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, D may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (12). The facts are the same as example (11), except that instead of the remaining 90 percent of D being owned by calendar year individuals, it is owned 86 percent by individuals and 4 percent by D2, a calendar year partnership. Thus, D, a September 30 partnership, is 10 percent owned by D1, a September 30 partnership, 86 percent owned by calendar year individuals, and 4 percent owned by D2, a calendar year partnership. Under paragraph (c)(5)(v)(B) of this section, D2's ownership interest in D is considered de minimis for purposes of the same taxable year exception. Since D2's ownership interest in D is considered de minimis, it is disregarded for purposes of determining whether D qualifies for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section. Thus, since both D and D1 will have the same taxable year as of the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, D may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (13). E, a partnership with a June 30 taxable year, desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. On the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, E is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals; E owns 99 percent of the profits and capital of E1, a partnership with a June 30 taxable year; and E1 owns 30 percent of the profits and capital of E2, a partnership with a September 30 taxable year. E owns no other deferral entities. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section, E is considered to be a member of a tiered structure. Furthermore, pursuant to paragraph (c)(5) of this section, E does not qualify for the same taxable year exception because E2 does not have the same taxable year as E and E1.

Example (14). The facts are the same as example (13), except that E owns only 49 percent (rather than 99 percent) of the profits and capital of E1. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(5) of this section, E qualifies for the same taxable year exception because E and E1 have the same taxable year. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(5) of this section, E1's ownership interest in E2 is disregarded since E does not own more than 50 percent of E1's profits and capital.

Example (15). Prior to consideration of the anti-abuse rule provided in paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section, H, a partnership that commenced operations on October 1, 1987, is eligible to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. Although H may obtain a significant deferral of income substantially all of which is not eliminated by a required payment under section 7519 (since there will be no required payment for H's first taxable year), the anti-abuse rule of paragraph (c)(2)(iii) will not apply unless the principal purpose of organizing H was the attainment of a significant deferral of income that would result from making a section 444 election.

Example (16). F, a partnership with a January 31 taxable year, desires to make a section 444 election to retain its January 31 taxable year for the taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. F is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Prior to the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section, F contributes substantially all of its assets to F1, a partnership, in exchange for a 51 percent interest in F1. The remaining 49 percent of F1 is owned by the calendar year individuals owning 100 percent of F. If F is allowed to make a section 444 election to retain its January 31 taxable year, F1's required taxable year will be January 31 since a majority of F1's partners use a January 31 taxable year. F's principal purpose for creating F1 and contributing its assets to F1 is to obtain an 11-month deferral on 49 percent of the income previously earned by F and now earned by F1. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section, F is not allowed to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987.

Example (17). The facts are the same as in example (16), except that F does not create F1 and contribute its assets to F1 until immediately after F makes its section 444 election for the taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. Thus, F is allowed to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. However, pursuant to paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section, F will have its section 444 election terminated for subsequent years unless the tax deferral inherent in the structure is eliminated (e.g., F1 is liquidated or the individual owners of F contribute their interest in F1 to F) prior to the date specified in paragraph (c)(4) of this section for subsequent taxable years beginning on or after February 1, 1988.

Example (18). The facts are the same as in example (16), except that F1 is 99 percent owned by F and none of the individual owners of F own any portion of F1. Furthermore, F obtained no tax benefit from creating and contributing assets to F1. Given these facts paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section does not apply and thus, F may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987.

Example (19). G, a partnership with an October 31 taxable year, desires to retain its October 31 taxable year for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987. However, as of December 31, 1987, G owns a 30 percent interest in G1, a calendar year partnership. G owns no other deferral entity, and G is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Furthermore, G's interest in G1 does not meet the de minimis rule provided in paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section. Thus, in order to avoid being a tiered structure, G sells its interest in G1 to an unrelated third party prior to the date G timely makes it section 444 election for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987. Although the sale of G1 allows G to qualify to make a section 444 election, and therefor to obtain a significant tax benefit, such benefit is not unintended. Thus, paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section does not apply, and G may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987.

IV. Administrative Pronouncement

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Reporting of Interest Expense on Debt-Financed Acquisitions and Distributions Involving Passthrough Entities

Notice 88-37

I. BACKGROUND

In Notice 88-20, page 487, this Bulletin, the Internal Revenue Service provided temporary guidance with respect to the allocation of interest expense in connection with certain transactions involving partnerships and S corporations ("passthrough entities"). The transactions addressed in Notice 88-20 are (a) debt-financed contributions to the capital of and purchases of interests in passthrough entities ("debt-financed acquisitions") and (b) debt-financed distributions by passthrough entities to owners of such entities ("debt-financed distributions"). This notice provides guidance with respect to the reporting of interest expense in connection with such transactions.

II. EFFECTIVE DATES

This guidance applies to interest expense taken into account by owners of passthrough entities in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

III. PERMISSIBLE ALTERNATIVES

Compliance with the reporting instructions set forth in this notice will facilitate the processing of returns of owners and passthrough entities. The Internal Revenue Service recognizes, however, that many taxpayers have filed their returns for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, and that Notice 88-20 is a recent pronouncement. Therefore, for taxable years beginning in 1987, reasonable alternative methods of reporting the interest expense described in this notice will be accepted regardless of whether the return was filed before or after this notice was issued. For example, the Service will accept a return on which interest expense properly reported on Schedule E under the rules in section IV of this notice is reported on Schedule A.

IV. INTEREST EXPENSE ON DEBT-FINANCED ACQUISITIONS

A. Individuals

1. In general

Individuals should report interest expense paid or incurred in connection with debt-financed acquisitions on either Schedule E or Schedule A of Form 1040, depending on the type of expenditure to which the interest expense is allocated. For purposes of this section IV, interest expense is allocated to a particular expenditure of a passthrough entity if the interest expense is allocated to such expenditure under the rules of §1.163-8T and Notice 88-20. (For purposes of this notice and Notice 88-20, the term "expenditure" has the same meaning as when used in §1.163-8T.) In addition, any interest expense allocated under the rules of Notice 88-20 to assets used in an activity shall be treated for purposes of this section IV in the same manner as interest expense allocated to an expenditure for such assets would be treated.

2. Interest expense allocated to trade or business expenditures

Interest expense allocated to a trade or business expenditure (within the meaning of §1.163-8T(b)(7)) of a passthrough entity should be reported in Part II of Schedule E. This interest expense should be identified on a separate line in column (a) as "business interest," followed by the name of the passthrough entity to which the interest expense relates, and the amount of such interest expense should be entered in column (h). This interest expense is deductible without limitation and should not be entered on Form 8582, relating to passive activity loss limitations, or Form 4952, relating to investment interest.

3. Interest expense allocated to passive activity expenditures

Interest expense allocated to a passive activity expenditure (within the meaning of §1.163-8T(b)(4)) of a passthrough entity should be entered on Form 8582 as a deduction from the activity in which such expenditure was made. The deductible amount (if any) of such interest expense, as determined under §1.469-1T(f)(2)(ii), should be reported in Part II of Schedule E. This interest expense should be identified on a separate line in column (a) as "passive interest," followed by the name of the passthrough entity to which the interest expense relates, and the amount of such interest expense should be entered in column (f).

4. Interest expense allocated to investment expenditures

Interest expense allocated to an investment expenditure (within the meaning of §1.163-8T(b)(3)) of a passthrough entity should be entered on Form 4952. The deductible amount (if any) of such interest expense should be reported on line 11 of Schedule A or on Schedule E in accordance with the instructions to Form 4952. See, however, the instructions to Form 1040 for circumstances in which deductible investment interest reportable on Schedule A may be reported on Schedule A without being entered on Form 4952. The investment interest that is reportable on Schedule E should be identified on a separate line in Part II, column (a), as "investment interest," followed by the name of the passthrough entity to which the interest expense relates, and the amount of such interest expense should be entered in column (h).

5. Interest expense allocated to personal expenditures

Interest expense allocated to a personal expenditure (within the meaning of §1.163-8T(b)(5)) made by a passthrough entity for or on behalf of the owner should be reported on line 12a of Schedule A.

B. Other taxpayers

Taxpayers other than individuals should report interest expense on debt-financed acquisitions on the line for interest expense on their returns. Although this interest expense need not be separately identified, it must be treated on the return in a manner that is consistent with the limitation (if any) that applies to such interest expense. Thus, for example, interest expense of a closely held C corporation (within the meaning of section 469(j)(1)) with respect to a debt-financed acquisition that is allocated to a portfolio expenditure (within the meaning of §1.163-8T(b)(6)) is not taken into account in computing net active income (within the meaning of section 469(e)(2)(B) and §1.469-1T(g)(4)(ii)).

V. INTEREST EXPENSE ON DEBT-FINANCED DISTRIBUTIONS

If, after the application of the rules in Notice 88-20, debt proceeds of a passthrough entity are allocated to distributions to owners of the entity, the portion of an owner's share of the passthrough entity's interest expense on debt proceeds allocated to distributions to owners that does not exceed the passthrough entity's interest expense on debt proceeds distributed to such owner should be included on the line on Schedule K-1 for other deductions. This interest expense should be identified on an attached schedule as "Interest expense allocate to debt-financed distributions." The passthrough entity should allocated a ratable portion of such interest expense to each distribution of debt proceeds to such owner and, on the attached schedule, should list all distributions to the owner to which debt proceeds are allocated and the amount of debt proceeds and interest expense allocated to each such distribution.

The manner in which the owner should report such interest expense depends on the types of expenditures that the owner makes with the distributed debt proceeds. Thus, for example, if the owner used the debt proceeds to make a personal expenditure (within the meaning of §1.163-8T(b)(5)), the owner should report the interest expense as personal interest on Schedule A.

Under Notice 88-20, if an owner's share of the passthrough entity's interest expense on debt proceeds allocated to distributions to owners exceeds the passthrough entity's interest expense on debt proceeds distributed to such owner, the passthrough entity may allocate the excess interest expense using any reasonable method. The interest expense allocated by the passthrough entity should be reported on Schedule K-1 in a manner consistent with such allocation. For example, if the passthrough entity allocates the excess interest expense to a rental activity, the expense should be taken into account by the entity in computing the income or loss from the rental activity that is reported to the owner on Schedule K-1.

Subject to certain restrictions, Notice 88-20 also permits the passthrough entity to allocate debt proceeds that are distributed to owners of a passthrough entity to expenditures other than distributions. The passthrough entity's interest expense on debt proceeds allocated to such other expenditures should be reported on Schedule K-1 in a manner consistent with such allocation. Thus, for example, if the passthrough entity allocates distributed debt proceeds to an expenditure in connection with a rental activity, the entity's interest expense on the debt proceeds should be taken into account by the entity in computing the income or loss from the rental activity that is reported to the owner on Schedule K-1.

Required Distributions from IRAs and Active Participant Status for 1987 Calendar Year

Notice 88-38

This notice provides individuals with an alternative method for satisfying the requirements for minimum distributions from individual retirement accounts and annuities (IRAs). This notice also provides a transition rule concerning active participant status for purposes of determining whether a deductible contribution to an IRA may be made.

REQUIRED DISTRIBUTIONS FROM IRAS

Section 408 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code) requires individuals who attain age 70 1/2 to receive minimum distributions from their IRAs under rules similar to the rules of section 401(a)(9) of the Code. Section 1.408-8, A-1 of the proposed Income Tax Regulations (52 Fed. Reg. 28070 (1987)) provides that the IRA holder must satisfy the minimum distribution requirements separately for each IRA. Section 408 of the Code also requires beneficiaries of an IRA holder to receive minimum distributions after the death of the IRA holder. These regulations apply separately with respect to each IRA; thus, an individual may not reduce the minimum distribution required from one IRA even though he or she has received more than the minimum amount from another IRA.

Under the alternative method provided in this notice, individuals must still calculate the required minimum distribution separately for each IRA. However, such amounts may then be totalled and the total distribution taken from any one or more of the individual IRAs. Thus, contrary to the rule in the regulation, the alternative method would allow an individual to satisfy the minimum distribution requirement by taking from one IRA the amount required to satisfy the minimum distribution requirement for other IRAs. The alternative method is available to individuals who must receive minimum distributions either because they have attained age 70 1/2 or because they are beneficiaries of IRA holders who have died. For example, an individual who holds one IRA directly and another IRA as a beneficiary may satisfy the minimum distribution requirements by taking from the IRA held directly the amount required to satisfy the minimum distribution requirement for the IRA held as a beneficiary.

Section 1.403(b)-2 of the proposed Income Tax Regulations provides that, generally, for purposes of applying the minimum distribution requirements that are described in section 401(a)(9) of the Code, section 403(b) tax-sheltered annuity contracts will be treated as IRAs described in section 408 of the Code. Accordingly the alternative method described in this notice also applies to holders of section 403(b) annuity contracts or custodial accounts. Distributions from such 403(b) contracts or accounts, however, will not satisfy the distribution requirements from IRAs, nor will distributions from IRAs satisfy the distribution requirements from 403(b) contracts or accounts. The alternative method may not be used to satisfy the minimum distribution requirements applicable to qualified plans under section 401(a) or qualified annuity plans under section 403(a).

EXAMPLE

An individual (X), born July 15, 1916, has three IRAs. X became 70 1/2 on January 15, 1987. Thus, X's required beginning date is April 1, 1988. On December 31, 1986 the account balance of IRA A, a rollover IRA, was $100,000; the account balance of IRA B was $10,000; and the account balance of IRA C was $1,000. The designated beneficiary of IRA A is X's brother, whose age as of his birthday in 1987 was 61. The designated beneficiary of IRA B is X's spouse whose age as of his birthday in 1987 is 80. the designated beneficiary of IRA C is X's mother, whose age as of her birthday in 1987 is 90.

The amount of the minimum required distribution from IRA A is $3,952.57 ($100,000 divided by 25.3, the joint life and last survivor expectancy of X and X's brother). The amount of the minimum required distribution from IRA B is $588.24 ($10,000 divided by 17.0, the joint life and last survivor expectancy of X and her spouse). The amount of the minimum required distribution from IRA C is $63.29 ($1,000 divided by 15.8, the joint life and last survivor expectancy of X and her mother). The total required distribution that must be withdrawn from any one or more of X's accounts by April 1, 1988 is $4,604.10, the sum of the minimum required distributions from the three IRAs.

On April 1, 1988, X withdraws $1,000 from IRA C and $3,604.10 from IRA B. X withdraws nothing from IRA A. X has met her distribution requirements with respect to IRAs A, B, and C for the 1987 distribution calendar year. In determining the December 31, 1987 account balances used in calculating minimum required distributions for IRAs B and C for the 1988 distribution calendar year, the amount actually distributed from each IRA by April 1, 1988 is subtracted from the December 31, 1987 account balance of such IRA in accordance with the provisions of proposed regulation section 1.408-8, A-5.

APPLICABILITY OF ALTERNATIVE METHOD

The alternative method contained in this notice may be used until further guidance is issued. Such further guidance will be applied prospectively and will in no case limit use of the alternative method for minimum distributions required in 1988 (including distributions to be made by December 31, 1988).

TRANSITION RULE NOT AVAILABLE FOR DISTRIBUTIONS MADE AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1987

The proposed regulations under section 401(a)(9) and section 408 of the Code include a transition rule for satisfying the IRA minimum distribution requirements with respect to distributions made in 1987. IRA holders are reminded that such transition rule is no longer available for distributions made after December 31, 1987. Thus, individuals who attained age 70 1/2 in 1987 must determine the amount of the minimum distribution required by April 1, 1988 without regard to the transition rule. Similarly, the transition rule is not available for determining minimum distributions required by December 31, 1988 even by an individual who used the transition rule in 1987. Individuals adopting the alternative method contained in this notice for determining minimum required distributions should note that such method differs from the aggregate method in the 1987 transition rule.

ACTIVE PARTICIPANT STATUS FOR PRE-1987 ACTIVITIES

Section 219(g) of the Code limits deductions for contributions to IRAs by individuals who are active participants in certain plans. This rule is effective for taxable years of individuals which begin after December 31, 1986.

Notice 87-16, 1987-1 C.B. 446, provides the following rule for determining active participant status under a discretionary profit-sharing plan. If, with respect to a particular plan year, no forfeitures, employer contributions or employee contributions have been allocated to an individual's account by the last day of the plan year, such individual is not considered an active participant for the taxable year in which such plan year ends. If, however, after the end of such plan year, the employer contributes an amount for such plan year, an individual to whose account an allocation is made is considered an active participant for the taxable year in which the contribution is made.

A special rule for plan years beginning in 1986 and ending in 1987 is contained in Q & A 11 of Notice 87-16 for purposes of determining whether an individual is an active participant in 1987. Such plan year is treated as two short plan years, the first of which ends December 31, 1986. In addition, amounts allocated during the short 1987 plan year that are attributable to services performed in 1986 or to compensation that would have been paid (but for a deferral election) or was actually paid before January 1, 1987 because of activities in 1986 are treated as allocated on December 31, 1986. Thus, an individual is not an active participant in such a plan for 1987 if no amounts are allocated to his or her account for 1987 with respect to 1987 services or compensation.

A similar rule will apply to plan years of discretionary defined contribution plans ending on or before December 31, 1986. Thus, an individual will not be an active participant in 1987 solely because of amounts contributed or allocated in 1987 with respect to a plan year ending before January 1, 1987 if such contributions or allocations relate solely to services performed or to compensation that would have been paid (but for a deferral election) or was actually paid before January 1, 1987.

Required Distributions from Section 403(b) Arrangements

Notice 88-39

This notice allows a delay until December 31, 1988, of the required beginning date for minimum distributions from tax-sheltered arrangements described in section 403(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

REQUIRED MINIMUM DISTRIBUTIONS

Section 1852(a)(3)(A) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (TRA'86), Pub. L. 99-514, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1, added to the Code section 403(b)(10), which applies minimum distribution requirements to tax-sheltered arrangements described in section 403(b) (including annuity contracts described in section 403(b)(1), custodial accounts described in section 403(b)(7) and retirement income accounts described in section 403(b)(9)). If the issuer or the custodian keeps the necessary records to identify the pre-1987 account balance, these requirements apply only to benefits which accrue under such tax-sheltered arrangement after December 31, 1986, including income on pre-January 1, 1987, accrued benefits.

Section 1.403(b)-2 of the proposed Income Tax Regulations provides that for purposes of applying the minimum distribution requirements of section 401(a)(9) of the Code, tax-sheltered arrangements will be treated as individual retirement annuities or individual retirement accounts described in section 408 of the Code.

Thus, in the case of distributions from a tax-sheltered arrangement, the required beginning date is April 1 of the calendar year following the calendar year in which the individual attains age 70 1/2. For employees who attained age 70 1/2 before January 1, 1988, the required beginning date is April 1 of the calendar year following the calendar year in which the employee retires. Absent this notice, the earliest required beginning date for any individual who attained age 70 1/2 in 1987 or earlier is April 1, 1988, and the minimum distribution for the 1987 distribution calendar year is based on the December 31, 1986, accrued benefit. The required beginning date under section 401(a)(9) of the Code is also the date which is relevant for determining, among other things, the designated beneficiary, the applicable after-death distribution requirements, and the recalculation of life expectancies.

Because the only benefits in a tax-sheltered arrangement that are subject to the distribution requirements are those accruing after December 31, 1986 (assuming the necessary records are maintained), in most cases the amount required to be distributed for the 1987 distribution calendar year with respect to such a section 403(b) tax-sheltered arrangement is zero.

Future regulations regarding section 403(b)(10) of the Code will provide that, in the case of any tax-sheltered arrangement from which no actual amount is required to be distributed on or before April 1, 1988, under section 403(b)(10) of the Code, the participant may treat December 31, 1988, as the required beginning date for all purposes under section 403(b)(10).

AFTER DEATH DISTRIBUTIONS

If an individual dies prior to January 1, 1987, a tax-sheltered arrangement must be distributed to the beneficiaries in accordance with section 401(a)(9)(B)(ii) or (iii) or (iv) of the Code, whichever is applicable. In order to satisfy these requirements, a distribution may be required to be made by December 31, 1987. However, because benefits that accrued before January 1, 1987, are not subject to the distribution requirements if appropriate records are kept, the amount required to be distributed by December 31, 1987, may be zero. A beneficiary who is not required to receive an actual distribution by December 31, 1987, may treat December 31, 1988, as the date of the first required distribution after death for purposes of determining the various rules that apply to after-death distributions.

RELIANCE

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Extension of Time to File for Taxpayers Traveling Outside of the United States and Puerto Rico

Notice 88-40

This notice provides guidance relating to the availability of the extension of time to file for taxpayers traveling outside the United States and Puerto Rico. The rules contained in this notice will be incorporated into regulations to be issued under section 6081 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Those regulations will be effective March 28, 1988.

Section 1.6081-2(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides an automatic two-month extension of time to file any income tax return and to pay the tax shown on that return in several circumstances. Section 1.6081-2(a)(5) provides such an extension for United States citizens residing or traveling outside the United States and Puerto Rico on the due date of the return. Section 1.6081-2(a)(6) provides such an extension for United States residents living or traveling outside the United States and Puerto Rico on the due date of the return. Both of these extensions apply to persons in military or naval service on duty outside the United States and Puerto Rico.

The rules with respect to United States citizens residing outside the United States and Puerto Rico and United States residents living outside the United States and Puerto Rico will remain in effect. However, the regulations governing automatic extensions for citizens or residents of the United States traveling outside the United States and Puerto Rico will be modified as follows. With respect to tax returns due on April 15, 1988, a taxpayer will be considered to be traveling outside the United States and Puerto Rico only if the period of travel outside the United States and Puerto Rico is a period of at least fourteen days continuous travel that includes all of April 15, 1988. For returns due after April 15, 1988, no such extension will be granted.

The automatic two-month extension of time for filing returns and paying any tax shown on that return will continue to be available to United States citizens or residents who are in military or naval service on duty outside the United States and Puerto Rico.

In no event will any extension of time to pay granted under section 1.6081-2(a) of the regulations prevent the imposition of interest on the amount of any underpayment of tax for the period beginning on the last date prescribed for payment, disregarding the extension, in accordance with section 6601(b) of the Code.

With respect to returns due on April 15, 1988, if the taxpayer claims an extension of time to file under section 1.6081-2(a)(5) or (6) of the regulations, and the taxpayer does not satisfy the requirements set forth above, the penalties provided by section 6651 of the Code for failure to file timely any return or to pay any tax shown due on that return shall apply unless the taxpayer establishes that such failure was due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is used in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the regulations and may be relied on to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287.

Court-Ordered Tax Increases

Notice 88-41

In September 1987, the United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri in the case of Jenkins v. State of Missouri, 672 F. Supp. 400 (W.D. Mo. 1987), approved a long-range capital improvement plan for the Kansas City, Missouri School District (KCMSD). To provide funding for the capital improvement plan, the court also ordered that (1) a 1.5 percent surtax be added to the Missouri State Income Tax on income earned within the KCMSD, and (2) the tax levy for the KCMSD be raised to $4 per $100 valuation.

Section 164(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, in general, allows a deduction for paid or accrued state and local income and property taxes. Section 164(b)(2) provides, in part, that a state or local tax includes only a tax imposed by a state or a political subdivision of the state.

The substance of the federal court's order was to direct the State of Missouri and the KCMSD to assess, levy, and collect these increased taxes. Thus, the requirement under section 164(b)(2) of the Code that the taxes be imposed by a state or political subdivision of the state is satisfied, and the state income tax surtax and the increased property tax levy are deductible taxes under section 164(a).

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or a revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287.

Notice on Alternatives to the Form W-4 Calculations for Withholding

Notice 88-42

In order to make the 1988 Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate, as simple as possible, the Internal Revenue Service did not take into account on the form certain tax credits that would affect a relatively small number of people. The Service also simplified certain other calculations, thus resulting in a calculation that is less precise than would be possible in a more complicated form. This notice provides to employees instructions that they may follow to match their withholding more closely to their expected tax liability.

BACKGROUND

An employee completes the Form W-4 to determine the number of withholding allowances (or exemptions) that he or she is entitled to claim.

WITHHOLDING ALLOWANCES AND TAX CREDITS

Employees are permitted by Service regulations to take into account tax credits to which they are entitled in determining the total number of withholding allowances. An adjustment to withholding for the child and dependent care credit under section 21 of the Internal Revenue Code is provided in the 1988 Form W-4, and the employee can elect to receive advance payment of the earned income credit under section 32 by filing Form W-5, Earned Income Advance Payment Certificate, with the employer. In addition, although not mentioned on the 1988 Form W-4, an employee may at his or her option take the following credits into account in determining the number of withholding allowances to which he or she is entitled: (1) the credit for the elderly and the permanently and totally disabled under section 22; (2) the credit on certain home mortgages under section 25; (3) the foreign tax credit under section 27 (but see below); (4) the earned income credit under section 32, provided the employee has not filed for the advance payment of the credit on Form W-5; and (5) the general business credit under section 38.

In determining the number of withholding allowances an employee may claim for the tax credits listed above, an employee should first determine the total estimated dollar amount of the tax credits available for 1988 based on tax credits for previous years and any new circumstances that may give rise to additional credits for 1988.

Generally, employees may include the foreign tax credit available under section 27 in calculating withholding allowances under this notice. However, if compensation is excluded from United States income tax withholding because it is subject to income tax withholding by a foreign country, the foreign tax credit attributable to that compensation should not be included in total credits for purposes of calculating withholding allowances.

After the total dollar amount of the tax credits available for 1988 has been determined, an employee should multiply that dollar amount by the appropriate number determined from the table below. The amount resulting from the multiplication mentioned in the preceding sentence should then be added to the amount otherwise includible on line 5 of the "Deductions and Adjustments Worksheet" on page 2 of the 1988 Form W-4. An employee who wishes to take these credits into account should use the Deductions Worksheet for this purpose even though he or she would not otherwise use it.

If an employee who expects to take the child and dependent care credit wishes to use this method of calculating his withholding allowances rather than using line F of 1988 Form W-4 he or she may do so.

Married Filing Jointly or Qualifying Widow(er)		Single or Married Filing Separately		Head of Household
If combined estimated wages are	Multiply credits by	If estimated wages are—	Multiply credits by	If estimated wages are—	Multiply credits by
$0 to 41,000	6.7	$0 to 23,000	6.7	$0 to 32,000	6.7
41,001 to 83,000	3.6	23,001 to 48,000	3.6	32,001 to 70,000	3.6
over 83,000	3.0	over 48,000	3.0	over 70,000	3.0

ALTERNATIVE METHOD OF CALCULATING WITHHOLDING ALLOWANCES

Employees are permitted by Service regulations to take most items of income, adjustments to income, deductions, and tax credits into account in determining their proper number of withholding allowances. However, because the 1988 Form W-4 provides a simplified manner for taking these items into account, use of the Form W-4 does not always provide taxpayers with withholding results that precisely match their tax liabilities.

Taxpayers are not required to use the Form W-4 calculation of the proper number of withholding allowances if they use a more accurate method that takes into account only the items of income, adjustments to income, deductions, and tax credits referred to on Form W-4 and its instructions and other tax credits, and if they base their calculation on withholding schedules, tax rate schedules, and the Form 1040ES worksheet. The number of withholding allowances determined under this alternative method may be used in lieu of the number of allowances reached by following the Form W-4 computations.

ADMINISTRATIVE PRONOUNCEMENT

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Nonconventional Source Fuel Credit

Notice 88-43

ACTION: Publication of inflation adjustment factor and reference price for calendar year 1987 as required by section 29(d)(2)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C. section 29(d)(2)(A) (formerly section 44D, renumbered by the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984).

SUMMARY: The inflation adjustment factor and reference price are used in determining the availability of the tax credit for production of fuel from nonconventional sources under section 29 of the Internal Revenue Code.

DATE: The 1987 inflation adjustment factor and reference price apply to qualified fuels sold during calendar year 1987.

INFLATION FACTOR: The inflation adjustment factor for calendar year 1987 is 1.4949.

PRICE: The reference price for all qualified fuels is $15.41 per equivalent barrel for the 1987 calendar year.

Because the above reference price does not exceed $23.50 multiplied by the inflation adjustment factor, the phaseout of credit provided for in section 29(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code does not occur for any qualified fuel based on the above reference price.

International).

Application of Floor Stocks Tax on Diesel and Aviation Fuel Held on April 1, 1988

Notice 88-44

The purpose of this notice is to provide guidance to taxpayers relating to the floor stocks tax imposed by section 10502(f) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-203, 101 Stat. 1330) ("1987 Act") on taxable fuel held by a taxable person on April 1, 1988. See also Notice 88-30, page 497, this Bulletin, and Announcement 88-64, 1988-16 I.R.B. 35.

Section 10502(f) of the 1987 Act imposes a floor stocks tax on any taxable fuel held by a taxable person on April 1, 1988, at the rate of tax which would be imposed if such fuel were sold on such date in a sale subject to tax under section 4091 of the Internal Revenue Code ("Code"). Section 10502(f)(3) of the 1987 Act provides that the taxes imposed by section 10502(f) shall be paid before June 16, 1988.

A "taxable person" is defined in section 10502(f)(4)(B) of the 1987 Act as any person other than a producer (as defined in section 4092 of the Code) or importer of taxable fuel. Section 10502(f)(4)(A)(i) defines "taxable fuel" as any taxable fuel (as defined in section 4092 of the Code) on which no tax has been imposed under section 4041 of the Code. Section 10502(f)(4)(A)(ii) provides, however, that the term "taxable fuel" shall not include fuel held exclusively for any use which is a nontaxable use (as defined in section 6427(1) of the Code). Thus, a person must pay a floor stocks tax only if such person is a taxable person and holds taxable fuel on April 1, 1988.

A person must satisfy both prongs of this test before the tax will apply. A person is a taxable person if such person is not a producer (as defined in section 4092(b)) or importer of diesel or aviation fuel. See also Notice 88-30. A liquid is taxable fuel for purposes of the floor stocks tax only if all three of the following apply—

(1) The liquid is a liquid other than gasoline which is suitable for use as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle or in an aircraft,

(2) The liquid was acquired prior to April 1, 1988, in a sale not subject to tax under section 4041, and

(3) The liquid is not held exclusively for a nontaxable use as defined in section 6427(1) of the Code. (That is, diesel or aviation fuel held for a taxable use is subject to the floor stocks tax, and fuel held exclusively for a nontaxable use is not subject to the floor stocks tax.)

The Internal Revenue Service will consider fuel held for a nontaxable use to be held exclusively for a nontaxable use (and therefore not subject to the floor stocks tax) as follows—

(a) If fuel is held in a storage facility that contains only fuel intended for a nontaxable use, the Internal Revenue Service will consider all fuel in the storage facility to be held exclusively for nontaxable use.

(b) If fuel is held in a storage facility that holds both fuel intended for a taxable use and fuel intended for a nontaxable use (i.e. "mixed storage"), the Internal Revenue Service will consider the amount or percentage of such fuel intended for a nontaxable use to be held exclusively for a nontaxable use.

If a taxable person maintains diesel or aviation fuel in mixed storage on April 1, 1988, such person must determine the amount or percentage of such fuel intended for a nontaxable use by the date payment of the floor stocks tax is due. This determination is made on a first-in, first-out basis. If all fuel held in mixed storage on April 1, 1988, has been used by the date payment of the floor stocks tax is due, such determination shall be made based on actual usage.

If all fuel held in mixed storage on April 1, 1988, is not used by the date payment of the floor stocks tax is due, such determination shall be made based on the amount of such fuel actually used for a nontaxable purpose, together with a reasonable estimate of such person's anticipated use of all such fuel not used by the date payment of the floor stocks tax is due. An estimate generally will be considered to be reasonable if it is based on such person's past usage of diesel or aviation fuel. However, if, when the fuel is actually used, the amount of fuel actually used for a nontaxable use is less than the amount of fuel estimated to be held for a nontaxable use, such taxable person must pay the additional tax due and file an amended return reflecting the proper amount of taxable fuel held on April 1, 1988, by the date prescribed for the filing of a Form 720 for the quarter in which the fuel is actually used. See also section 10502(f)(2) of the 1987 Act and section VI(E)(4) of Notice 88-30 relating to a credit or refund for overpayment of the floor stocks tax.

The provisions of this notice may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example 1: A producer or importer holds diesel fuel on April 1, 1988, on which no tax was imposed under section 4041. The producer or importer is not a taxable person and the floor stocks tax does not apply.

Example 2: At the first moment of April 1, 1988, a fuel retailer holds diesel fuel on which no tax was imposed under section 4041. All of the fuel is held for sale to users. The retailer is a taxable person holding taxable fuel. The floor stocks tax applies to the retailer's entire inventory.

Example 3: At the first moment of April 1, 1988, a farmer holds diesel fuel in mixed storage on which no tax was imposed under section 4041. All of the fuel is not used by the date payment of the floor stocks tax is due. Based on actual usage until such date and past practice with respect to usage of diesel fuel, the farmer determines that 90% of the diesel fuel held in inventory on April 1, 1988, is held exclusively for a nontaxable use and that 10% of such fuel is held for a taxable use. The farmer is a taxable person and 10% of the fuel held on April 1, 1988, is taxable fuel. The floor stocks tax applies to 10% of the fuel held in the farmer's inventory on April 1, 1988.

The floor stocks tax imposed by section 10502(f) of the 1987 Act is reported on Form 720, "Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return". The floor stocks tax applies only to the number of gallons of taxable fuel held in inventory on April 1, 1988, as determined under the rules of this notice and Notice 88-30. Fuel held exclusively for a nontaxable use as determined under the rules of this notice is not taxable fuel for purposes of the floor stocks tax, and the floor stocks tax should not be reported with respect to this fuel on Form 720. See also section VI of Notice 88-30 regarding the inventory required to be taken on April 1, 1988.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3 (b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Taxable Year of Trusts—Income Received by Certain Beneficiaries May Be Spread Over 4 Years

Notice 88-45

Under section 645 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code), all trusts are required to use the calendar year as their taxable year. As a result of this requirement trusts that previously were fiscal year taxpayers had short taxable years in 1987. In order to prevent beneficiaries of such trusts from including income from two trust tax years in their income for 1987, section 1403(c)(2) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the Act) provides that such beneficiaries must spread their income attributable to the trust's short year ratably over a four year period beginning with the beneficiaries' 1987 tax year. This four year reporting requirement is mandatory. There is a pending technical correction that would allow any trust beneficiary to elect to waive the benefits of the four year spread. Additional guidance will be provided to taxpayers if this technical correction is enacted.

Where a beneficiary who is subject to section 1403(c)(2) of the Act dies prior to the end of the four year period, any remaining unreported income shall be included in gross income for the beneficiary's last taxable year. Taxpayers are reminded that amounts paid in satisfaction of a decedent's final income tax liability are deductible for Federal estate tax purposes under section 2053 of the Code.

Section 1403(c)(3) of the Act applies only to amounts that beneficiaries are required to include in income under section 652(a) or 662(a) of the Code. Thus, the four year spread rule does not apply to the beneficiaries of charitable remainder trusts (as defined in section 664(d) of the Code), and beneficiaries of such trusts must report the entire amount received from such trusts as received in their current taxable year. There is a pending technical correction to the Act that would make the four year spread rule available to the beneficiaries of charitable remainder trusts. Additional guidance will be provided to taxpayers if this technical correction is enacted.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in §1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund

Notice 88-46

The purpose of this Notice is to clarify that a claim filed under section 6421 of the Code for a credit or refund by certain ultimate purchasers of gasoline includes the amount attributable to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate ("LUST rate").

The ultimate purchasers referred to in the preceding sentence include persons using gasoline: (1) in a vessel employed in the fisheries or in the whaling business (see section 6421(a), relating to nonhighway use); (2) in intercity, local, or school buses (see section 6421(b)); and (3) for any purpose described in section 4221(a)(2) (relating to exportation), (a)(3) (relating to vessel or aircraft supplies), (a)(4) (relating to State or local government use), or (a)(5) (relating to nonprofit education use) (see section 6421(c), relating to use for certain exempt purposes).

Therefore, notwithstanding the provisions to the contrary in the proposed regulations published in the Federal Register on November 18, 1987 (52 FR 44141) ("proposed regulations"), the credit or refund under section 6421 to such an ultimate purchaser (for example, a State or local government) is an amount equal to the product of the number of gallons of gasoline purchased (in the case of a credit or refund allowed under section 6421(c)), or used (in the case of a credit or refund allowed under subsection (a) or (b) of section 6421), multiplied by the rate at which tax was imposed on the gasoline under section 4081, including the amount attributable to the LUST rate.

The proposed regulations do not amend the credit or refund procedures under section 6420 of the Code, relating to gasoline used on a farm, since the procedures under section 6420 were not amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. A credit or refund under section 6420 includes the amount attributable to the LUST rate.

The credit or refund allowed under section 6421(a) with respect to gasoline used in an off-highway business use other than use in a vessel employed in the fisheries or in the whaling business does not include the amount attributable to the LUST rate. See section 6421(f)(4) of the Code. However, Congress is considering a Technical Corrections Bill that would amend section 6421(f), as it relates to the credit or refund amount attributable to the LUST rate for certain nonhighway use under section 6421(a). If the technical correction is enacted, further guidance will be provided.

The clarification provided by this Notice will be reflected in the final regulations.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3 (b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Foreign Tax Credit for Panamanian Taxes

Notice 88-47

Sections 901 and 902 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 allow United States taxpayers a credit against their federal income tax liability for certain taxes that they and their subsidiaries pay to any foreign country. On March 25, 1988, President Eric Arturo Delvalle of Panama, exercising powers granted him by the Constitution of Panama, issued Executive Decree No. 16, directing that income taxes due to the Government of Panama be paid to the order of the Government of the Republic of Panama in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, through the Embassy of Panama in Washington as collection office. On March 31, 1988, the Embassy of Panama in Washington issued a supplemental decree providing a method for paying such taxes and specifying Government of Panama Account Number 2 at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York as the account into which the taxes should be paid. This notice confirms that income taxes due to the Government of Panama which are paid into such account will be considered paid to the Government of Panama, and will therefore be creditable foreign taxes if all other requirements of sections 901 and 902 of the Code are satisfied.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3 (b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Copies of the supplemental decree, and of an unofficial translation of Executive Decree No. 16, are reproduced below.

[UNOFFICIAL TRANSLATION]

EXECUTIVE DECREE NO. 16 OF THE 25TH OF MARCH 1988

In which is decreed an extension of the period of time for filing of income tax returns and for payment of the corresponding adjusted tax and of other tributary obligations.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC

Within his legal capacity,

CONSIDERING;

1. that the current political, economic and financial conditions of the Republic of Panama prevent taxpayers from fulfilling their tributary obligations under the law;

2. also that governmental institutions of the country are headed by persons not authorized by the Constitutional Government of the Republic;

3. that Article 710 of the Fiscal Code establishes that taxpayers must, no later than the 31st of March, file their sworn income tax return for the previous taxable year and pay the adjusted tax calculated using the payment indicated in the sworn tax return relative to the estimated as owed for the same year;

4. that, under Section 5 of Article 179 of the constitution, the Executive branch has the role of "overseeing the collection and administration of national taxes";

5. that the Executive branch cannot permit that taxes, duties, revenues and other national income be collected and used by an illegitimate government that, only because of the sole will of a dismissed soldier, maintains public power in the absence of popular will; and

6. that, given the above, it is necessary to authorize an extension of the period of time for filing income tax returns and for paying corresponding adjusted tax, as well as a suspension in favor of all taxpayers with respect to other tributary obligations.

DECREES:

Article I: The period for filing a sworn income tax return for the 1987 fiscal period and for paying the adjusted tax calculated from the sworn declaration and the estimated declaration for said fiscal period is hereby extended until the 30th of April of 1988.

Article II: Until Constitutional order has been restored, any income tax payment and, particularly any payment of the adjusted tax described in Article 710 of the fiscal code, which is made in a manner different from that described in the present Decree shall not be deemed as good payment.

Article III: Until the executive branch provides otherwise, fiscal obligations discussed in this Decree may be paid only through deposits made to the order of the Government of the Republic of Panama in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

The deposit voucher which is made in conformity with the above provision will serve as a valid receipt for credit of payment of fiscal obligations to which this Decree makes reference.

Article IV: For purposes of filing income tax returns, the Embassy of Panama in the United States of America will serve as the collection office.

Article V: An indefinite suspension in favor of all State taxpayers is hereby decreed with respect to all fiscal obligations other than the income tax adjustment. As a result, during the time in which this suspension is in force, said taxpayers are exempt from the fulfillment of all tributary obligations consigned under the law.

During the effectiveness of this suspension, the failure to pay a tributary obligations will not create interest, fiscal penalties nor other charges.

Article VI: This Decree will become effective upon its enactments and it will be published through available means.

Penalty for Failure by Income Tax Return Preparer to Sign Return

Notice 88-48

It has come to the attention of the Internal Revenue Service that the enactment of new section 645 of the Internal Revenue Code which is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, may result in the imposition of special hardships on preparers of Forms 1041, U.S. Fiduciary Income Tax Returns. Section 645 of the Code, added by section 1403(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, requires trusts, with certain limited exceptions, to use a calendar taxable year. Section 6695(b) of the Code provides that income tax return preparers who are required by regulations to sign returns or claims for refund prepared by them and fail to do so, shall pay a penalty of $25.00 for each such failure unless the failure is due to reasonable cause. Section 1.6695-1(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations generally provides that, income tax return preparers must manually sign returns or claims for refund prepared by them. Thus, most Forms 1041 must now be filed by April 15, plus extensions, and the requirement to manually sign each return at that time creates hardships for income tax return preparers responsible for the preparation of large numbers of such returns.

In order to alleviate these hardships, the Service will not assert against a preparer of 1987 Forms 1041 the section 6695(b) penalty for failure to sign a return provided the preparer uses a facsimile signature in signing the returns and meets the following conditions:

(1) the preparer submits to the Service with the Forms 1041 bearing the preparer's facsimile signature, a letter manually signed by the preparer (a) listing the taxpayer name and identification number shown on each Form 1041 bearing the facsimile signature, and (b) containing a declaration, under penalties of perjury, that the facsimile signature appearing on each return is the signature used by the preparer to sign the return;

(2) after the facsimile signature is affixed, no person other than the preparer may alter any entries on the Form 1041 other than to correct arithmetical errors discernible on the return; and

(3)(a) the employer of the preparer, or (b) the partnership in which the preparer is a member or (c) the preparer (if neither (a) nor (b) applies), retains and makes available, upon request by the Service, a manually signed copy of the letter submitted to the Service with the returns and a record of any arithmetical errors corrected.

The Service will consider amending the regulations under section 6695(b) of the Code to permit the use of facsimile signatures by preparers of Forms 1041.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287.

Partnerships and S Corporations—Section 444 Election

Notice 88-49

Significant guidance has been provided relating to sections 444, 7519 and 280H, including Notice 88-10, page 478, this Bulletin, regarding certain issues of immediate concern, Announcement 88-49, providing guidance to certain corporations electing S status, and Notice 88-36 providing guidance regarding the definition of a tiered structure. Nevertheless, there is some uncertainty remaining under present law because comprehensive temporary regulations regarding these sections have not yet been issued by the Office of the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, the Office of Chief Counsel, and the Treasury Department Office of Tax Policy. This notice attempts to reduce th remaining uncertainty by: (1) waiving certain penalties that would otherwise be imposed on owners (of partnerships and S corporations considering a section 444 election) who must take certain actions (e.g., request an extension of their 1987 income tax return) by April 15, 1988; and (2) answering the most common and important unanswered questions regarding these sections, thus enabling most partnerships and S corporations to decide whether they will make a section 444 election when regulations and the election form are issued. Comprehensive temporary regulations interpreting sections 444, 7519 and 280H will be issued in the very near future.

I. Background.

Section 444 of the Internal Revenue Code, added by section 10206 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (Pub. L. 100-203, 101 Stat. 1330), was enacted into law on December 22, 1987. Section 444 of the Code allows certain partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations to elect the use of a taxable year that is different from the taxable year that such entities would otherwise be required to use. On January 15, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Notice 88-10 (page 478, this Bulletin) to provide guidance with respect to certain issues of immediate concern to taxpayers affected by section 444. Notice 88-10 explained that forthcoming temporary regulations would provide that a section 444 election shall not be required to be made before the later of (i) April 30, 1988, or (ii) 60 days after the publication of those temporary regulations in the Federal Register. This Notice 88-49 does not constitute the publication of temporary regulations in the Federal Register, and this Notice 88-49 does not commence the beginning of the 60-day period for making a section 444 election.

Furthermore, on March 11, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Announcement 88-49 (1988-13 I.R.B. 34) to provide guidance to corporations electing S status that may consider making a section 444 election. Finally, on March 15, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Notice 88-36 (page 517, this Bulletin) to provide guidance regarding the definition of a "tiered structure" for purposes of section 444(d)(3).

Although comprehensive temporary regulations on sections 444, 7519 and 280H will soon be issued, the Internal Revenue Service is aware that taxpayers are in need of immediate guidance on several issues. The issues arise because of uncertainties surrounding the ability of various entities to make a section 444 election for their taxable year beginning in 1987 and the resulting uncertainties created for owners of such entities in filing their 1987 Federal income tax returns.

For example, assume I, a calendar year individual, owns an interest in P, a profitable partnership that previously had a September 30 taxable year. Furthermore, assume that pending publication of comprehensive temporary regulations on sections 444, 7519, and 280H, P is uncertain whether it will make a section 444 election. If P does not make a section 444 election, P will be required to have a short taxable year for the period October 1 to December 31, 1987. Given these facts, I is uncertain as to how much taxable income from P to include on his 1987 tax return (or application for extension of time to file a return) that is due April 15, 1988. If I assumes that P is going to make a section 444 election, but P ultimately does not make a section 444 election, I is concerned that I could be subject to a (A) penalty for failure to pay tax on a timely basis; (B) penalty for failure to file a timely return (i.e., if I files an extension request for I's 1987 return and such extension request is invalidated for failure to make an accurate estimate of 1987 tax); (C) penalty for underpaying I's 1988 estimated tax payment due April 15, 1988 (e.g., if I bases such payment on I's estimated 1987 tax liability); and (D) liability for payment of interest on any underpayment of tax.

II. Summary of Guidance.

Section III of this notice provides guidance on several administrative issues (e.g., time for filing returns, waiver of penalties, and the imposition of interest) of immediate concern to owners of a partnership or S corporation that is considering whether to make a section 444 election. Section IV of this notice provides guidance on several substantive issues that are of immediate concern to partnerships and S corporations contemplating a section 444 election.

III. Administrative Issues.

A. Background.

Section XI of Notice 88-10 provided that the temporary regulations would extend the time for filing a tax return of a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that makes (or decides not to make) a section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning in 1987. Notice 88-10 did not, however, extend the time for filing the tax returns, or the time for payment of income tax, of the owners of a partnership or S corporation that is undecided about whether it should make a section 444 election. Thus, taxpayers are reminded that an extension of time to file a partnership return or an S corporation income tax return does not extend the time for filing the income tax return of the partners or shareholders.

B. Waiver of certain penalties for owners of a partnership or S corporation considering whether to make a section 444 election.

If an owner of a partnership or S corporation is assessed a penalty under section 6651(a)(2) for failure to pay income tax or a penalty under section 6654 for underpayment of its first quarter 1988 estimated tax payment, the Internal Revenue Service will waive the portion of such penalty that is attributable to section 444. In addition, the Internal Revenue Service has received several questions on whether an owner (of a partnership or S corporation) who has timely filed a request for extension of time to file the owner's 1987 tax return could be assessed a penalty under section 6651(a)(1) (for failure to timely file an income tax return) because insufficient tax was paid with the request for extension. Such owners will not be subject to a penalty for failure to file, because the Internal Revenue Service generally does not assess a penalty for failure to file upon invalidation of a request for extension.

The portion of the penalty attributable to section 444 is an amount equal to the difference between what the penalty would be assuming a section 444 election is made and what the penalty would be assuming a section 444 election is not made. However, the penalty waiver only applies to that portion of the penalty that is attributable to an underpayment from the due date through August 15, 1988. See section III. D. of this notice for an example.

Taxpayers should be aware that the Internal Revenue Service will be unable to identify those eligible for this waiver of penalty prior to assessment of the penalty. Accordingly, in order to obtain consideration of a waiver, taxpayers will need to return their penalty notice to the Internal Revenue Service with an explanation that they are eligible for a penalty waiver under Section III. B. of Notice 88-49, including identification of the partnership(s) or S corporation(s) (or both) and the portion of the penalty attributable to each such entity.

Accordingly, partnerships and S corporations that have already decided whether they will make a section 444 election are encouraged to furnish their owners with the information necessary to timely file their return (or compute the tax that would otherwise be due with an application for extension of time for filing) and pay their tax so that such owners may avoid receiving a penalty notice.

C. Interest on late payment of tax.

Under section 6601 of the Code, interest must be paid on any underpayment of income tax beginning with the due date (determined without regard to any extension of time for payment) of the tax. Thus, although Section III. B. of this notice waives certain penalties for the late payment of income tax, notwithstanding such waiver interest will be imposed as provided in section 6601 with respect to any such late payment.

D. Example.

The following example demonstrates the provisions of section III of this notice.

Assume HW, a husband and wife that file a joint return on a calendar year basis, own an interest in P, a partnership. P has historically used a June 30 taxable year and as of April 15, 1988 is undecided whether it is going to make a section 444 election to retain a year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. HW's 1987 income tax liability will be $20,000 if P makes a section 444 election and $25,000 if P does not make a section 444 election. Further, assume that on or before April 15, 1988 HW file Form 4868, Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, to extend their 1987 income tax return and make a tax payment with such extension request in an amount sufficient to bring their total payments for the year to $20,000. However, on July 1, 1988 HW are informed that P did not make a section 444 election. Thus, when HW file their 1987 income tax return on August 15, 1988, they pay an additional $5,000 of tax.

Absent the relief provided in this notice, HW would, under section 6651(a)(2), be subject to a penalty for failure to pay tax and, in addition, HW could, under section 6651(a)(1), be subject to a penalty for failure to file a timely return if their extension request is invalidated.

Pursuant to this notice, the Internal Revenue Service will waive such penalties, if assessed, because they are attributable to section 444. However, the Internal Revenue Service will not waive any interest on the $5,000 underpayment of tax. Furthermore, the Internal Revenue Service will waive that portion of any penalty for underpayment of HW's first quarter 1988 estimated tax that is attributable to section 444.

IV. Substantive issues.

A. New entity electing to be an S corporation.

The Internal Revenue Service has received a number of inquiries concerning two issues related to newly formed corporations that elected to be S corporations. The first issue is whether a newly formed corporation that elected to be an S corporation for its first taxable year beginning in 1986 and ending on December 31, 1986, may, pursuant to section 444(b)(2), change to a fiscal year for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that an S corporation whose first taxable year ended on December 31, 1986 may not make a section 444 election and change to a fiscal year, because under section 444(b)(2), the deferral period of the taxable year being changed is zero. Moreover, the special rule under section 10206(d)(4) of the 1987 Act for existing entities electing S status does not apply to such an S corporation, because the corporation was never a C corporation before making its S election.

The second issue concerns a newly formed corporation that elected to be an S corporation for its first taxable year beginning in 1987. Specifically, if, as a condition for making its S election, such corporation agreed to use a calendar year, the issue is whether such corporation may make a section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning in 1987. Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that the prior agreement to use a calendar year may be disregarded and thus such corporation may make a section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning in 1987.

B. "Applicable percentage" for first taxable year beginning in 1987.

Under section 806(e)(2)(C) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, (the 1986 Act), certain partners and shareholders are entitled to a four-year "spread" on the excess of their share of income over expenses from a partnership or S corporation that is required to change its taxable year under the 1986 Act. In order to provide a de facto four-year spread, section 7519(b)(2) of the Code multiplies the required payment otherwise required to be made by a partnership or S corporation by the applicable percentage defined in section 7519(d)(4). However, certain entities (e.g., a corporation that elected to be an S corporation for a taxable year beginning in 1987) that may qualify to make a section 444 election, and thereby obtain the de facto four-year spread, have partners or shareholders that would not have been entitled to the four-year spread under section 806(e)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act. As a result, the Internal Revenue Service has received several inquiries concerning whether the applicable percentage for taxable years beginning in 1987 for such entities will be changed from 25 percent to 100 percent.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that the applicable percentage for the first taxable year beginning in 1987 of any taxpayer properly making a section 444 election will be 25 percent.

C. Entities liquidated or sold for tax purposes prior to making a section 444 election.

If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is liquidated or sold before making a section 444 election for a particular taxable year, it is unclear whether a section 444 election may be made for such taxable year. If the election may not be made, the taxpayer will be required to change its taxable year to its required year, which may result in two consecutive short period returns.

For example, assume an existing S corporation historically used a June 30 taxable year and desires to retain such year for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987 by making a section 444 election. However, the S corporation is liquidated for tax purposes on February 15, 1988. The issue is whether such S corporation may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election even though it is no longer in existence for tax purposes. If a section 444 election can be made, the S corporation will file its final income tax return for the period July 1, 1987 to February 15, 1988. If a section 444 election cannot be made, the S corporation will be required to file two short period income tax returns: July 1 to December 31, 1987 and January 1 to February 15, 1988.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that a taxpayer is not precluded from making a section 444 election merely because the taxpayer is liquidated or sold for tax purposes before a section 444 election is made for the year. However, it should be noted that if the provisions of section 7519 apply in such a situation, the taxpayer must make the required payment under section 7519 and subsequently apply for a refund of such payment in accordance with the forthcoming temporary regulations.

D. Can required payments effectively be computed on the same income in the case of a tiered structure?

The Internal Revenue Service has received several questions concerning how required payments should be calculated for members of a tiered structure. Specifically, taxpayers are concerned that two or more required payments may effectively be computed on the same taxable income.

Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that a partnership or S corporation that has made a section 444 election must separately determine the amount of its required payment without regard to the required payment of any other member of the tiered structure. Thus, in certain cases the same taxable income could be subject to more than one required payment. However, the forthcoming temporary regulations will minimize this possibility by providing that a taxable year elected under section 444 by a particular entity will be used for purposes of determining the taxable year under section 706(b) of any partnership owned by the electing entity.

For example, assume partnership A desires to retain its June 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election. Further, assume that A has owned for several years 99 percent of the profits and capital in B, a partnership also desiring to retain its June 30 taxable year. If both A and B are required to make section 444 elections, B's taxable income would be effectively subject to two required payments. However, the forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that if A makes a section 444 election to retain its June 30 taxable year, then B's required year pursuant to section 706(b)(2)(B) shall be June 30, since B's majority partner has a June 30 taxable year. Thus, in such a situation, B may retain its June 30 taxable year without making a section 444 election.

E. Refunds of required payments.

Section IX of Notice 88-10 provides substantial guidance with respect to refunds of required payments, including discussion of various events that will entitle a taxpayer to a refund. However, taxpayers are uncertain when these refunds will be made.

Procedures will be established to pay refunds on a timely basis. However, in no event shall a refund be made prior to April 15 of the second calendar year that follows the calendar year in which an election year begins. For example, assume a partnership made a section 444 election to retain its taxable year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987 and as a result made a required payment under section 7519 for such year. Further assume that P terminates its election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1988. Based upon these facts, P will receive a timely refund, but no earlier than April 15, 1989.

F. "Re-activating" an S election.

Many corporations timely filed Form 2553 to elect S status for a taxable year beginning in 1987 and requested that they be given permission to use a fiscal year based upon business purpose. However, many of these corporations did not agree to use a calendar year in the event their business purpose request was denied. Thus, if the Internal Revenue Service denied the corporation's business purpose request, the corporation's S election was terminated.

The Service has received a number of inquiries about whether the corporations described above could "re-activate" their S election by filing a section 444 election. Forthcoming temporary regulations will provide that a corporation's S election may be re-activated in such a case, assuming that the corporation's initial Form 2553 was properly filed, the corporation makes a valid section 444 election, and the reactivation is consented to by all of the shareholders who have owned stock in the corporation at any time during the period the S election would be effective.

Guidance Concerning Reorganization Transactions Effected Through Use of State Domestication Statutes

Notice 88-50

This notice announces that, through publication of Rev. Rul. 88-25, page 8, this Bulletin, the Internal Revenue Service will provide guidance concerning the application of section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Internal Revenue Code to the "domestication" of a foreign corporation pursuant to a state domestication statute. State domestication statutes (which are also known as corporate migration or corporate continuance statutes) allow an entity to transfer its place of incorporation without requiring the incorporation of a new legal entity. The Revenue Ruling concludes that there is a transfer of assets and liabilities from the foreign corporation to the domesticated U.S. corporation and a distribution by the foreign corporation to its shareholders of the stock in the domesticated corporation.

In addition, the ruling holds that a domestication constitutes a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Code. Generally, applicable reorganization provisions of the Code will provide nonrecognition treatment to the foreign corporation and its shareholders. In certain circumstances, however, nonrecognition treatment will be contingent upon compliance with section 367(b), which generally govern international reorganizations, or section 897(d) or (e), which affect international reorganizations involving U.S. real property interests.

The regulations under section 367 of the Code will be revised to require the closing of the taxable year in all reorganizations of a foreign corporation into a domestic corporation (or vice versa) and to clarify that there is an actual or constructive transfer of assets and exchange of stock in all inbound, outbound and foreign to foreign reorganizations. See Notice 87-29, 1987-1 C.B. 474. The closing of the taxable year requirement will not generally apply to reorganizations under section 368(a)(1)(F) within the same Country.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287.

Finally, the Service is willing to provide further guidance on additional issues raised by the domestication of a foreign corporation. Written questions and comments should be addressed to:

Nonaccrual-Experience Method of Accounting Under Section 448(d)(5)

Notice 88-51

Background.

The purpose of this notice is to provide guidance to taxpayers regarding the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting allowed under section 448(d)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Section 448(d)(5) of the Code provides that any person using an accrual method of accounting with respect to amounts to be received for the performance of services by such person shall not be required to accrue any portion of such amounts which (on the basis of experience) will not be collected (the "nonaccrual- experience method"). The provisions of section 448(d)(5) do not apply to any amount if interest is required to be paid on such amount or if there is any penalty for failure to timely pay such amount.

On June 16, 1987, proposed and temporary regulations interpreting section 448 were published in the Federal Register (52 FR 22764, T.D. 8143) [1987-2 C.B. 121]. Section 1.448-2T provides guidance with respect to the nonaccrual-experience method under section 448(d)(5). Under the nonaccrual-experience method, a taxpayer does not recognize as gross income the estimated uncollectible amount of each receivable. Upon collecting the account receivable, the taxpayer recognizes additional gross income reflecting the amount collected which the taxpayer did not initially expect to collect. Further, the taxpayer may not deduct as a bad debt under section 166 any amount which the taxpayer did not previously take into income under the nonaccrual-experience method with respect to a wholly or partially worthless account receivable.

Nonaccrual-Experience Method and Periodic System.

Section 1.448-2T(e)(3) requires the taxpayer to separately apply the nonaccrual-experience method to each of its accounts receivable that is eligible for such method (the "separate receivable system"). The legislative history of section 448 provides that "the Secretary of the Treasury may provide a periodic system of accounting for billings, that, on the basis of experience, will not be collected where the periodic system results in the same taxable income as would be the case were each receivable recorded separately." H.R. Rep. No. 99-426, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. 608 (1985) [1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 2)].

In the preamble to T.D. 8143, the Internal Revenue Service, while noting that the regulations did not provide a periodic system, specifically invited comment on the operation of any such system for applying the nonaccrual-experience method, including the manner of accounting for wholly or partially worthless debts under that system. The Internal Revenue Service received several taxpayer submissions in response to the request for comment. The submissions suggested specific methods of implementing the periodic system and urged the Service to allow such a system in order to avoid administrative complexities and costs associated with the separate treatment of each account receivable under the nonaccrual-experience method. Accordingly, this notice provides a periodic system for using the nonaccrual-experience method (the "periodic system"). The present separate receivable system under section 1.448-2T(e)(3) continues to be available as an alternative to taxpayers using the nonaccrual-experience method.

The Periodic System.

The periodic system applies the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting through a method somewhat similar to a reserve method. The periodic system is based on the aggregate amount of accounts receivable to be received by the taxpayer for the performance of services. A taxpayer using the periodic system must establish an account representing the aggregate amounts that the taxpayer estimates will not be collected with respect to all of its accounts receivable in that trade or business eligible for the nonaccrual-experience method ("eligible" accounts receivable), based on the six-year moving average formula provided in section 1.448-2T(e)(2). At the end of the taxable year, the taxpayer must adjust the amount in the account to reflect the aggregate amount that the taxpayer estimates will not be collected on the accounts receivable outstanding at year-end. The taxpayer must offset the amount of the year-end adjustment by an adjustment increasing or decreasing gross income, as appropriate. Thus, the taxpayer must offset an adjustment increasing the amount of the account for uncollectible amounts by an adjustment decreasing gross income. Similarly, the taxpayer must offset an adjustment decreasing the amount of the account by an adjustment increasing gross income.

The periodic system requires the taxpayer to charge directly to bad debt expense wholly or partially worthless accounts receivable which it charges off during the taxable year. In determining the amount charged to bad debt expense for those worthless accounts receivable, the taxpayer must disregard the estimated uncollectible amounts pertaining to the accounts receivable. Similarly, the taxpayer must disregard the estimated uncollectible amounts of accounts receivable when it accounts for the collection of those receivables.

The periodic system further requires the taxpayer to use the six-year moving average formula to estimate the total amount that it will not collect on all of its eligible accounts receivable outstanding at the end of the taxable year, including receivables outstanding at the end of the prior taxable year. In contrast, the separate receivable system requires the taxpayer to determine only once the amount of a particular receivable it expects not to collect using the nonaccrual-experience method, regardless of the term of the particular receivable.

Example of Periodic System.

The following example illustrates the periodic system under the nonaccrual-experience method.

(a) X, a calendar-year accrual-method taxpayer, changes to the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986. As of January 1, 1987, X has 10 eligible accounts receivable, each with a $1,000 face amount, for a total accounts receivable balance of $10,000. Under the six-year moving average formula, X estimates that it will not collect 10% ($1,000) of the $10,000 total amount due as of January 1, 1987. (The $1,000 amount equals the section 481 (a) adjustment of X's change in method of accounting to the nonaccrual-experience method of 1987. See section 1.448-2T(g).) During 1987, X (i) determines that one account receivable on hand at January 1, 1987, is wholly worthless; (ii) collects in full eight of the accounts receivable on hand at January 1, 1987; (iii) does not write off or collect the remaining account receivable on hand at January 1, 1987, which remains on hand at December 31, 1987; and (iv) provides additional services which generate 19 new eligible accounts receivable on hand as of December 31, 1987, each with a $1,000 face amount, thus otherwise recognizing gross income of $19,000.

(b) Under the periodic system, X must charge bad debt expense for $1,000 with respect to the account receivable that X determines is wholly worthless. (In contrast, X must charge bad debt expense for $900 under the separate receivable system.) In addition, under the periodic system, X must reduce accounts receivable by $8,000 for the eight accounts receivable that X collected in full. (In contrast, under the separate receivable system, X must reduce accounts receivable by $7,200 and increase gross income by $800.)

(c) Assume that X applies the six-year moving average formula to all X's accounts receivable at December 31, 1987, and estimates that 9% of those receivables are uncollectible. Thus, the account for the aggregate amounts that X estimates are uncollectible must equal $1,800 (9% of $20,000). Under the periodic system, X must increase the balance in the account for aggregate estimated uncollectible amounts from $1,000 to $1,800. Thus, X must increase the account for aggregate estimated uncollectible amounts by $800 and decrease gross income by $800. (In contrast, under the separate receivable system, X calculates the estimated uncollectible amounts only with respect to new accounts receivable on hand at year-end and adjusts gross income accordingly. Thus, X does not recognize $1,710 of gross income for the $19,000 of new accounts receivable recognized in 1987.)

(d) Under the periodic system, the net taxable income which X recognizes in 1987 is $10 more than the net taxable income which X would recognize under the separate receivable system. This $10 increase in net taxable income under the periodic system results from a positive $910 difference in gross income under the periodic system for the accounts receivable that X generated during 1987, reduced by the $800 difference in treatment under the periodic system for the eight accounts receivable that X collected in full in 1987, and further reduced by the $100 difference in treatment under the periodic system for the account receivable charged off during 1987. Therefore, X's net balance reflected in the accounts receivable and reserve account at December 31, 1987, is $10 more under the periodic system than under the separate receivable system.

Treatment of Periodic System.

The taxpayer's use of the separate receivable system or the periodic system is a method of accounting under all provisions of the Code. Thus, for example, a taxpayer using the separate receivable system or the periodic system for a particular trade or business may not change its method of accounting to the other system for that trade or business unless it obtains the consent of the Commissioner to the change. Nevertheless, a taxpayer who used the separate receivable system for its taxable years beginning in 1987 may automatically change its method of accounting to the periodic system for its taxable year beginning in 1988. The taxpayer may effect the automatic change in method of accounting by (i) establishing an account (with a "credit" balance) under the six-year moving average formula representing estimated uncollectible amounts for all eligible accounts receivable on hand at the beginning of its 1988 taxable year; (ii) increasing (i.e., "debiting") its accounts receivable on hand at the beginning of its 1988 taxable year by the amount described in clause (i); and (iii) applying the periodic system to all activities occurring in 1988 and thereafter.

In addition, a taxpayer may change to the periodic system of accounting under the provisions of section 1.448-2T (h), which presently apply to taxpayers using the separate receivable system. Thus, for example, an accrual-method taxpayer may change to the periodic system for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986. Similarly, a taxpayer changing from the cash method to an overall accrual method of accounting under section 448 may change to the periodic system for the year in which it changes to an overall accrual method of accounting. All other provisions of the regulations apply equally to taxpayers using the nonaccrual-experience method, whether they use the separate receivable system or the periodic system. Thus, for example, the regulatory provisions governing the availability of the nonaccrual-experience method to a taxpayer's various accounts receivable apply equally to the separate receivable and periodic systems.

The Internal Revenue Service recognizes that the use of the periodic system may result in small differences in taxable income in comparison to the results achieved by the use of the separate receivable system, particularly in years when the taxpayer's bad debt experience changes. The taxpayer may use the periodic system in spite of the resulting differences if it consistently maintains its use of the periodic system.

Administrative Pronouncement.

Foreign Insurance Companies; Effectively Connected Income; Estimated Tax Payments

Notice 88-52

This notice describes the effect of section 842 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 on the taxable income of foreign insurance companies and provides guidance on making estimated tax payments for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987.

Section 10242 of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1987, 101 Stat. 1330, Pub. L. No. 100-203, amended section 842 of the Code to provide a minimum amount of new investment income that is effectively connected with the conduct of an insurance business within the United States. This provision applies to any foreign company carrying on an insurance business within the United States that would qualify under part I (relating to the taxation of life insurance companies) or part II (relating to the taxation of other insurance companies) of subchapter L of the Code if it were a domestic corporation. The effect of the provision is that income from sources without the United States of a foreign life or property and casualty insurance company that carries on an insurance business within the United States may be treated as effectively connected with that trade or business and subject to taxation on a net basis.

Under section 842 of the Code as amended, the net investment income of a foreign insurance company that is effectively connected with the conduct of an insurance business in the United States may not be less than the required U.S. assets of the company multiplied by the domestic investment yield applicable to the company for the taxable year or, if the company elects, by its worldwide current investment yield.

The required U.S. assets of a foreign insurance company for any taxable year are determined by multiplying the mean of the company's total insurance liabilities on U.S. business by the domestic asset/liability percentage applicable to the company. The Secretary will prescribe for each year a separate domestic asset/liability percentage for foreign life insurance companies and foreign property and casualty insurance companies. The domestic asset liability percentage for each type of insurance company equals a fraction, the numerator of which is the mean assets of domestic companies of the same type and the denominator of which is the mean liabilities of domestic companies of the same type.

The Secretary also will prescribe for each year a separate domestic investment yield for foreign life insurance and foreign property and casualty insurance companies. The investment yield for each type of insurance company equals a fraction, the numerator of which is the net investment income of domestic insurance companies of the same type and the denominator of which is the mean of the aggregate assets held for the production of investment income of domestic companies of the same type. In lieu of using the domestic investment yield, a foreign insurance company may elect to use its worldwide current investment yield. The worldwide current investment yield equals a fraction, the numerator of which is the net investment income of the company from all sources and the denominator of which is the mean of the worldwide assets of the company that are held for the production of investment income.

The Secretary has not yet determined the asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987. Therefore, to compute the estimated tax and the installment payments of estimated tax for the first such year, a foreign insurance company (whether a life or a property and casualty company) will, until publication by the Secretary of the domestic asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields, be allowed to compute its tax due on investment income by using the actual investment income that is effectively connected with the conduct of the company's U.S. trade or business. Any reduction in a required installment resulting from using a company's actual investment income rather than the amount of investment income computed under section 842 of the Code must be recaptured by increasing the amount of the first installment payment due after publication of the domestic asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields.

No additions to tax will be made because of any underpayment of estimated tax for any required installment in the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987 due prior to the publication of the domestic asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields if: (1) the foreign insurance company timely computes and pays such required installment based on its actual investment income, and (2) the foreign insurance company's first estimated tax payment due after publication of the domestic asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields (the "subsequent installment payment") meets the conditions of paragraphs (1) or (2), below.

(1) Annualization exception. The subsequent installment payment is sufficient if the amount of the payment satisfies the requirements of section 6655(e) of the Code with respect to all applicable taxes specified in section 6655(g). Thus, the foreign insurance company must determine its annualized taxable income under section 6655(e)(2)(A)(i)(II), (III), or (IV), whichever is applicable, and compute the resulting tax using the domestic asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields. The resulting tax shall include the alternative minimum tax under section 55 and the environmental tax under section 59A and may take credits into account to the extent permitted under section 6655(g). The sum of this subsequent installment payment and the earlier installment payment or payments of the foreign insurance company must equal or exceed the following percentages of the tax so computed:

(i) 45 percent (50 percent × 90 percent), if the subsequent installment payment is the second installment payment for the taxable year;

(ii) 67.5 percent (75 percent × 90 percent), if the subsequent installment payment is the third installment payment for the taxable year; or

(iii) 90 percent, if the subsequent installment payment is the fourth installment payment for the taxable year.

(2) Installment payments equal to applicable percentage of tax shown on return. The subsequent installment payment is sufficient if the sum of that payment and the earlier installment payment or payments of the foreign insurance company equals or exceeds the applicable percentages listed in paragraph (1)(i), (ii), or (iii), above, of the tax shown on the return of the foreign insurance company for the taxable year to which the installment payments relate. The tax shown on the return includes all taxes specified in section 6655(g) of the Code.

In addition, no additions to tax will be made if each installment of a foreign insurance company that is not a large corporation, as defined in section 6655(g)(2) of the Code, equals 100 percent of the tax shown on the return of the foreign insurance company for the preceding taxable year multiplied by 25 percent, provided that the requirements of the flush language of section 6655(d)(1) are met.

A foreign insurance company that computes its estimated tax installment payments pursuant to this Notice should write "Subject to section 842" at the top of Form 2220 (Underpayment of Estimated Tax by Corporations).

Continuation of Code Section 897(i) Elections by Netherlands Antilles Companies; Anti-Treaty Shopping Rules; Extension of Deadlines in Notice 88-1

Notice 88-53

This notice extends until September 1, 1988, the May 2, 1988, deadline set forth in section 3 of Notice 88-1, page 471, this Bulletin. Notice 88-1 provided guidance on the status of elections by Netherlands Antilles companies and certain other treaty country corporations under section 897(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Such elections provide that a foreign corporation will be treated as a domestic corporation for purposes of sections 897, 1445 and 6039C of the Code. A section 897(i) election can be made only if the foreign corporations is entitled to nondiscriminatory treatment under any treaty obligation of the United States.

On January 11, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Notice 88-1, which provided, inter alia, guidance concerning: (a) the impact of the termination of the income tax treaty between the United States and the Netherlands Antilles on section 897(i) elections made by Netherlands Antilles companies; and (b) the application of the anti-treaty shopping provision of the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation between the United States and the Kingdom of the Netherlands, extended to the Netherlands Antilles under Article XXIV thereof (8 UST 2043; TIAS 3942 (1957)) (the "Antilles FCN Treaty"), and the anti-treaty shopping provisions of similar treaties.

In Notice 88-1 the Service stated that companies formed under the laws of the Netherlands Antilles which are controlled, directly or indirectly, by nationals of third countries may not rely on the nondiscrimination provisions of the Antilles FCN Treaty as the basis for making a section 897(i) election after May 2, 1988. In addition, companies entitled to the benefits of the nondiscrimination provisions contained in any other friendship, commerce and navigation treaty (an "FCN treaty") which contains an antiy-treaty shopping provision similar to Article XXII(1)(e) of the Antilles FCN Treaty may not rely on such nondiscrimination provision after such date if the company is controlled, directly or indirectly, by nationals of third countries.

A company is considered not to conform to the anti-treaty shopping provisions of an FCN treaty if it does not satisfy the anti-treaty shopping provision of an FCN treaty at either the time the election is made or the time of an acquisition or disposition of a U.S. real property interest. Any such company which makes a section 897(i) election in reliance on the nondiscrimination provisions of an FCN treaty (or is treated as having made such an election pursuant to section 2 of Notice 88-1) is referred to herein as having made an "FCN treaty-shopping election."

Notice 88-1 further provides that foreign corporations that have made an FCN treaty-shopping election on or before May 2, 1988, will be bound by, and receive the benefits of, that election only as provided in section 3 of Notice 88-1. Section 3 of Notice 88-1 provides that certain transactions or events must occur by May 2, 1988, in order for an FCN treaty-shopping election to continue in effect after May 2, 1988. Section 3 of Notice 88-1 further provides that an FCN treaty-shopping election made on or after May 3, 1988, will not be valid.

This notice modifies Notice 88-1 to provide that the May 2, 1988, and May 3, 1988, deadlines are extended to September 1, 1988 and September 2, 1988. Accordingly, all references in Notice 88-1 to "May 2, 1988" are changed to "September 1, 1988"; all references in Notice 88-1 to May 3, 1988 are changed to "September 2, 1988." All other terms and provisions of Notice 88-1 remain unchanged.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is used in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Notice 88-1 is modified.

Application of IRC Section 149(b) to State or Local Bonds Issued in Connection with EPA State Water Pollution Control Revolving Fund Program

Notice 88-54

This notice provides guidance regarding the application of section 149(b) of the Internal Revenue Code to State or local bonds issued in connection with the State Water Pollution Control Revolving Fund Program under Title VI of the Clean Water Act (Program).

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is authorized under the Program to make capitalization grants to States to help them establish State revolving funds for financing water pollution control facilities. The States may use the grants to make loans to local governments to finance the construction of water pollution control facilities, to establish debt service reserve funds for bonds the proceeds of which are to be used to make such loans, and for various other purposes.

On January 28, 1988, EPA issued final initial guidance relating to implementation of the Program (EPA guidance). The EPA guidance provides that payment of capitalization grants will be made in the form of a letter of credit in order to minimize the outlay burden on the Federal Government. States will drawn down funds under the letter of credit in accordance with procedures outlined in the EPA guidance. If the grant is used to establish a debt service reserve fund for bonds, draw-downs generally will occur at a fixed rate based on the national, historic outlay rate. The draw-down rate will be accelerated if necessary to prevent an imminent default on the bonds.

Section 149(b) of the Code generally provides that a State or local bond the payment of principal or interest on which is guaranteed (directly or indirectly) by the Federal Government or any agency or instrumentality thereof will not qualify for tax exemption under section 103(a). Regulations to be issued under section 149(b) will provide that payments of principal and interest on State and local bonds will not be considered Federally guaranteed within the meaning of section 149(b) solely by reason of the fact that the debt service reserve fund for the bonds (or principal or interest on the bonds) may be funded with capitalization grants awarded under the Program in accordance with procedures outlined in the EPA guidance.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure. See Rev. Rul. 87-138, 1987-2 C.B. 287.

Modification of Notice 88-30

This notice extends until May 31, 1988, the period during which certain persons will be deemed to be registered as a producer under section 4101 of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to sales of fuel taxable under section 4091 of such Code, in accordance with the provisions of Notice 88-30, page 497, this Bulletin, as corrected by Announcement 88-64, 1988-16 I.R.B. 35. Notice 88-30 described issues arising from the changes made by section 10502 of the Revenue Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-203, 101 Stat. 1330 ("1987 Act")) to the excise tax on diesel fuel and aviation fuel that the Internal Revenue Service intends to address in regulations. The 1987 Act added sections 4091, 4092, and 4093 to the Code, which, beginning on April 1, 1988, moved the point of collection of the diesel fuel and aviation fuel tax from the sale by the retailer to the sale by the producer. See also Notice 88-44, page 528, this Bulletin, relating to the floor stocks imposed under section 10502(f) of the 1987 Act of taxable fuel held by a taxable person on April 1, 1988.

Section III(B)(1)(b) of Notice 88-30 states that the regulations relating to sales of fuel taxable under section 4091 will provide that on or after April 1, 1988, and before May 1, 1988, taxable fuel may be sold taxfree to a person who (but for not being registered under section 4101) meets the definition of the term "producer" as set forth in section III(B)(1)(a) of Notice 88-30, and that such person shall be deemed to be a registered producer during such period, provided that—

(i) The seller of taxable fuel to such person in the normal course of its business maintains on file copies of invoices of sales of taxable fuel showing the name of the purchaser, the date of sale, the type and volume of product sold, and a written statement clearly indicating that the purchaser is a producer who has furnished a certification required by section III(B)(1)(b)(ii) of Notice 88-30 to the seller, and

(ii) The seller obtains from such purchaser and keeps on file a certification, signed under penalties of perjury by a person having authority to bind the purchaser, stating the name, address, employer identification number of the purchaser, and the title of the person signing the certification.

Section III(B)(1)(b)(ii) of Notice 88-30 also provided that the certification required by such section may cover sales of taxable fuel to a person who (but for not being registered under section 4101) meets the definition of the term "producer" as set forth in section III(B)(1)(a) of Notice 88-30, for the period from April 1, 1988, to April 30, 1988, inclusive, and shall take the following form:

"The undersigned purchaser ("Purchaser") hereby certifies that Purchaser is a producer of taxable fuel who is a refiner, compounder, blender, or wholesale distributor of a taxable fuel or a dealer selling any taxable fuel exclusively to producers of such taxable fuel. If Purchaser claims an exemption as a wholesale distributor, Purchaser certifies that Purchaser sells a taxable fuel to producers, retailers, or to users who purchase in bulk quantities and deliver into bulk storage tanks.

"Purchaser understands that any fraudulent use of this certification to purchase any taxable fuel free of tax will subject Purchaser to penalties of perjury, which may include fine and imprisonment."

E.I.N.: ________ ________
Address: ________ by ________ ________ Title ________

Section III(B)(1)(b) of Notice 88-30 further states that the regulations will provide that a person who meets the requirements of such section shall, for the period beginning April 1, 1988, and ending before May 1, 1988, be deemed to be a registered producer of taxable fuel for purposes of purchasing fuel tax-free as a producer under section 4093(b), and for purposes of incurring liability for the tax imposed by section 4091.

Section III(B)(1)(c) of Notice 88-30 states that the regulations will provide that on or after May 1, 1988, taxable fuel may be sold tax-free by a producer or importer of taxable fuel to a producer of taxable fuel under section 4091, provided that certain requirements are met.

The Internal Revenue Service recognizes that, because of time constraints, many persons who (but for not being registered under section 4101) meet the definition of the term "producer" have not yet received the Certificate of Registry required under Notice 88-30 in order to purchase taxable fuel tax-free on or after May 1, 1988. Therefore, the regulations will provide that the period during which such persons will be deemed to be a registered producer of taxable fuel for purposes of purchasing fuel tax-free as a producer under section 4093(b), and for purposes of incurring liability for the tax imposed by section 4091 is extended to include the period from May 1, 1988, to May 31, 1988, inclusive. Accordingly, a certification furnished to a seller under section III(B)(1)(b)(ii) of Notice 88-30 may be modified in writing to apply to the period from April 1, 1988, to May 31, 1988, inclusive.

Section III(B)(1)(d) of Notice 88-30 provides that an application for registry submitted on or before April 30, 1988, will be approved on a conditional basis only. In accordance with the rule of the preceding paragraph, the period during which an application for registry will be approved on a conditional basis only is also extended through May 31, 1988.

EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Notice 88-30 is modified.

ADMINISTRATIVE PRONOUNCEMENT

Employee Stock Ownership Plans; Diversification Requirements

Notice 88-56

This notice provides guidance, in the form of questions and answers, with respect to certain provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, concerning the diversification of investments requirement applicable to employee stock ownership plans (ESOPs) under section 401(a)(28) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code) and the rules governing the taxation of qualified plan distributions under section 72.

Until further guidance is published, the guidance provided by these questions and answers may be relied upon by taxpayers to design and administer plans and to determine the tax treatment of plan distributions. The Service will apply the questions and answers in issuing determination letters, opinion letters, other rulings and in auditing returns with respect to taxpayers and plans. If future guidance is more restrictive than this notice, such guidance will be applied without retroactive effect. No inference should be drawn, however, regarding issues not addressed in this notice which may be suggested by a particular question and answer or as to why certain questions, and not others, are included. Retroactive protection will not necessarily be afforded with respect to any such inferred guidance.

A. Code Section 401(a)(28)

Q-1: Which employer securities held by an ESOP or a tax credit ESOP are subject to the diversification of investments requirement of section 401(a)(28) of the Code?

A-1: Employer securities acquired by or contributed to an ESOP or a tax credit ESOP after December 31, 1986, are subject to the diversification of investments requirement of section 401(a)(28). Thus, for example, dividends paid to an ESOP after December 31, 1986, with respect to employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan on or before such date are subject to the diversification requirement of section 401(a)(28) if such dividends are either paid in the form of employer securities or paid in cash or other property that is subsequently used to acquire employer securities. However, employer securities acquired by or contributed to an ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, are not subject to the diversification requirements. See Q&A-7 and Q&A-8 for an exception to section 401(a)(28) for certain de minimis amounts of employer securities.

Q-2: In what circumstances are employer securities actually acquired by or contributed to a tax credit ESOP after December 31, 1986, treated as acquired by or contributed to the tax credit ESOP on or before December 31, 1986?

A-2: Employer securities (within the meaning of section 409(1)) acquired by or contributed to a tax credit ESOP after December 31, 1986, are deemed, for purposes of section 401(a)(28), to be acquired by or contributed to the ESOP before January 1, 1987, if: 1) with respect to such securities, a tax credit was calculated under section 41(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 with reference to compensation paid or accrued before January 1, 1987, by the employer to employees under a tax credit ESOP; 2) the securities were acquired or contributed within the time period provided in section 404(a)(6) plus such additional time period allowed for contributions to a tax credit ESOP under section 41(c)(2) and 41(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954; and 3) the securities were allocated as of a date no later than the last day of the plan year ending within the employer's first taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1986. Thus, such employer securities are not subject to the diversification requirements of section 401(a)(28).

Q–3: In what circumstances are employer securities actually acquired by an ESOP or tax credit ESOP after December 31, 1986, treated as acquired by or contributed to the ESOP or tax credit ESOP on or before December 31, 1986?

A–3: Employer securities acquired by an ESOP or tax credit ESOP after December 31, 1986, will be deemed, for purposes of section 401(a)(28), to have been acquired by or contributed to the ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, in the following circumstances:

A) Cash or other assets derived from the disposition of employer securities pursuant to a corporate reorganization or acquisition attempt (whether or not successful) which are used to purchase other employer securities will be treated as acquired by or contributed to the ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, if the period between the disposition and the reinvestment does not exceed 90 days or such longer period as may be granted by the Commissioner under rules similar to those of Treas. Reg. §1.46–8(e)(10). For dispositions after June 8, 1988, no extensions will be granted unless applied for within 90 days after the disposition.

B) Employer securities acquired by an ESOP or tax credit ESOP after December 31, 1986, which were purchased with contributions made to the ESOP in cash on or before December 31, 1986 (including employee contributions) will be treated as acquired by or contributed to the ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, if such contributions were used to purchase employer securities within 60 days after the date of the contribution.

C) Employer securities acquired by an ESOP or tax credit ESOP after December 31, 1986, which were purchased with earnings or dividends paid in cash to an ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, will be treated as acquired by or contributed to the ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, if such earnings or dividends were used to purchase employer securities within 60 days from the date of payment to the ESOP.

D) Employer securities acquired by an ESOP after December 31, 1986, which were purchased with the proceeds of an exempt loan (under section 4975) received by the ESOP in cash on or before December 31, 1986, will be treated as acquired by or contributed to the ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, if such proceeds are invested in employer securities within 60 days of the receipt of the proceeds by the ESOP.

E) Employer securities acquired by an ESOP after December 31, 1986, which were purchased with amounts transferred to an ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, pursuant to a section 4980 transaction will be treated as acquired by or contributed to the ESOP on or before December 31, 1986, if the amounts are used to purchase employer securities within the time period prescribed in section 4980(c)(3)(B).

Q–4: If an ESOP does not account for employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986, separately from employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan on or before December 31, 1986, how are the employer securities subject to diversification determined?

A–4: Solely for purposes of section 401(a)(28), it is presumed that unless a plan separately accounts for employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986, the employer securities allocated to participants' accounts after December 31, 1986, consist, first, of those employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986, and second, of employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan on or before December 31, 1986.

Q–5: Do special rules apply for determining employer securities subject to diversification for an ESOP or tax credit ESOP which adopts model plan amendments?

A–5: If the sponsor of an ESOP or tax credit ESOP adopts the applicable model plan amendments contained in Notice 87–2, 1987–1 C.B. 396, on or before the date specified in section 1140 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, the portion of a qualified participant's account balance attributable to employer securities acquired by or contributed to the ESOP after December 31, 1986, may be determined under either Q&A–4 of this notice or by multiplying the number of shares of employer securities allocated to a qualified participant's account by a fraction, the numerator of which is the number of shares of securities acquired by or contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986, and allocated to participant accounts, and the denominator of which is the total number of shares held by the plan at the plan valuation date nearest to the date on which the participant becomes a qualified participant.

In addition, see Q&A–17 in the case of a plan which determined the employer securities subject to the diversification requirement in conformity with the model plan amendments on or before June 8, 1988.

Q–6: May an ESOP or tax credit ESOP allocate employer securities acquired by or contributed to the ESOP after December 31, 1986, to participant's accounts on a different basis than employer securities acquired by or contributed to the ESOP before January 1, 1987?

A–6: Yes. However, the plan's allocation method must meet the requirements of section 401(a)(4). Thus, an ESOP or tax credit ESOP that allocates among participants both employer securities acquired by or contributed to the ESOP after December 31, 1986, (post-86 securities) and employer securities acquired by or contributed to the ESOP before January 1, 1987, (pre–87 securities) will fail to satisfy section 401(a)(4) if such plan uses an allocation method that disproportionately allocates post–86 securities in favor of the employees described in section 401(a)(4).

Q–7: What amount of employer securities held by an ESOP or tax credit ESOP constitutes a de minimis amount of employer securities that is not subject to the diversification of investments requirement of section 401(a)(28)?

A-7: If the fair market value (determined at the plan valuation date immediately preceding the first day on which a qualified participant is eligible to make a diversification election) of the employer securities acquired by or contributed to an ESOP after December 31, 1986, and allocated to a qualified participant's account is $500 or less, then such employer securities will be considered to constitute a de minimis amount of employer securities that is not subject to the diversification of investments requirement of section 401(a)(28). A plan may elect to use a de minimis amount of less than $500.

For purposes of determining whether the amount of employer securities acquired by or contributed to an ESOP after December 31, 1986, and allocated to the account of a qualified participant exceeds the de minimis amount described above, employer securities held in accounts of all ESOPs or tax credit ESOPs maintained by an employer corporation and by members of the controlled group of corporations (within the meaning of section 414(b), (c), (m) or (o)) which includes the employer corporation shall be considered as held by the same plan.

Q-8: What amount of employer securities held by an ESOP or tax credit ESOP is subject to diversification if the fair market value of the employer securities acquired or contributed after December 31, 1986, exceeds the de minimis amount?

A-8: If the fair market value of the employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986, and allocated to the account of a qualified participant exceeds the de minimis amount for any year of a participant's qualified election period, then all shares allocated to the account of a qualified participant which were acquired or contributed after December 31, 1986, shall be subject to the diversification requirements of section 401(a)(28) in each remaining year of a participant's qualified election period.

Q-9: What portion of a qualified participant's account is subject to the diversification of investments requirement?

A-9: The portion of a qualified participant's account subject to the diversification election in all years in the qualified election period, other than the final year of such period, is equal to: (1) 25 percent of the total number of shares of employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986, that have ever been allocated to a qualified participant's account on or before the most recent plan allocation date; less (2) the number of shares of employer securities previously distributed, transferred, or diversified pursuant to a diversification election made after December 31, 1986. See Q&A-7 and Q&A-8 regarding the exception for de minimis amounts. The resulting number of shares may be rounded to the nearest whole integer. With respect to a qualified participant's final diversification election, "50 percent" is substituted for "25 percent" in determining the amount subject to the diversification election.

The following example illustrates the rules of this Q&A:

Employee (E), a participant in a calendar year ESOP maintained by Corporation X, is first eligible to make a diversification election in 1989. The fair market value of X corporation stock was $10 per share on December 31, 1988. As of December 31, 1988, E's account contains 100 shares of X stock which were contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986 (post-86 stock). The X stock in E's account is subject to the diversification requirements of section 401(a)(28) because the fair market value of the post-86 stock exceeds $500 (See Q&A-7, supra). The ESOP must permit E to elect to diversify up to 25 shares of the post-86 stock allocated to his account (25% of 100 shares). E must be eligible to make this election through March 31, 1989. E elects prior to April 1, 1989 to receive a distribution of 25 shares of X stock.

During 1989, X corporation contributes X stock to the ESOP. E's account receives an allocation of 10 shares of X stock with respect to the 1989 employer contribution. As of December 31, 1989, E's account contains 85 shares of post-86 stock (110 shares—25). The portion of E's account subject to diversification following the 1989 plan year is calculated as follows: 25% of 110 shares is subject to the diversification election (27 1/2 shares). This amount is then reduced by the number of shares E has previously elected to diversify. Thus, E must be able to elect diversification with respect to an additional 2 1/2 shares of post-86 stock (27 1/2 less 25) through March 31, 1990. This number may be rounded to 3 shares of post-86 stock.

Q-10: Which shares of employer securities must be diversified pursuant to a diversification election?

A-10: The shares of employer securities that are diversified pursuant to a diversification election need not consist of securities acquired by or contributed to the ESOP after December 31, 1986. This is the case even though the determination of the number of shares that must be available for diversification under section 401(a)(28) is based on the number of employer securities acquired by or contributed to the ESOP after December 31, 1986 (See Q&A-9).

However, the shares of employer securities that are diversified pursuant to a diversification election must consist of employer securities that, immediately prior to diversification, are subject to the requirements of section 409(h). Also, in the case of an ESOP that permits participants to receive distributions of employer securities that have been held by the plan for at least 84 months in circumstances other than those described in section 409(d)(1)-(3), section 401(a)(28) overrides the 84 month rule of section 409(d) only to the extent that the shares of employer securities allocated to a qualified participant and diversified pursuant to a diversification election actually consist, first, of employer securities that have satisfied the 84-month rule and, thereafter, of employer securities that continue to be subject to the 84-month rule and have been held by the plan for longer periods of time than other employer securities subject to the 84-month rule.

Q-11: May an ESOP permit the diversification of amounts in excess of those required by section 401(a)(28)(B)?

A-11: Yes. However, amounts in excess of the minimum amount required to be available for diversification under section 401(a)(28)(B) are not treated as available for diversification or as diversified pursuant to section 401(a)(28)(B). Thus, employer securities subject to section 409(d) and in excess of the minimum amount required to be available for diversification under section 401(a)(28)(B) may not be diversified to the extent that such securities may not be distributed under section 409(d). Also, amounts subject to the requirements of section 409(h) and in excess of the minimum amount required to be available for diversification under section 401(a)(28)(B) remain subject to section 409(h) even if such amounts are diversified.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, if a plan permitted the diversification of amounts in excess of the minimum amount required by section 401(a)(28) with respect to employer securities acquired by or contributed to the plan after December 31, 1986, such excess diversification will be treated as required by section 401(a)(28)(B) for purposes of applying sections 409(d) and 409(h) if such diversification was implemented no later than June 8, 1988, reflected a reasonable interpretation and of section 401(a)(28).

Q-12: When is a participant eligible to make diversification elections with respect to his ESOP account?

A-12: Pursuant to section 401(a)(28)(B), a qualified participant must be able to elect to diversify the appropriate portion of his ESOP account balance (as determined under Q&A-9 of this notice) within 90 days after the close of each plan year during the participant's "qualified election period." A "qualified participant" (as defined in section 401(a)(28)(B)(iii) means any employee who has completed at least ten years of participation under the plan and has attained 55 years of age.

Generally, a participant's qualified election period consists of the 5 plan year period beginning with the plan year after the plan year in which the participant first becomes a qualified participant. However, the qualified election period of any employee who became a qualified participant before January 1, 1987, shall not begin before the first plan year beginning after December 31, 1986 and shall continue thereafter for a complete 5 plan year period.

For example, a participant in an ESOP (which uses a calendar plan year) who becomes a qualified participant during 1987 will first be eligible to make a diversification election within the first 90 days of 1989 (within 90 days following the close of the first plan year beginning after 12/31/87). The qualified participant's qualified election period begins in the 1988 plan year and ends with the 1992 plan year. The qualified participant's last diversification election will be within the first 90 days of 1993.

Similarly, for example, in the case of an employee who first became a qualified participant in 1986 or any prior year, the participant's qualified election period would begin with the 1987 plan year and close with the 1991 plan year. The qualified participant must first be given a diversification election within the first 90 days of 1988.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, in the case of an employee who became a qualified participant before January 1, 1987, a plan will not fail to meet the requirements of section 401(a)(28)(B) if such qualified participant is eligible to make the first diversification election no later than September 6, 1988. In addition, for purposes of this paragraph, an employee who became a qualified participant in 1987 and who was treated under the plan, prior to April 9, 1988, as eligible to make the first diversification election on or before June 8, 1988, may be treated as an employee who became a qualified participant before January 1, 1987.

Q-13: What methods can be used by an ESOP or a tax credit ESOP in order to satisfy the diversification of investments requirement with respect to a qualified participant?

A-13: An ESOP or tax credit ESOP will be treated as satisfying the diversification of investments requirement of section 401(a)(28) if:

A) the portion of the participant's account balance that is subject to the diversification election under section 401(a)(28)(B)(i) is distributed to the participant (or made available for distribution under Q&A-15) within 90 days after the last day of the period during which the election can be made;

B) the plan offers at least 3 distinct investment options (which are not inconsistent with regulations prescribed by the Secretary) with respect to the portion that is subject to the diversification election to each participant making an election under section 401(a)(28)(B)(i) and any investment option selected by the participant is implemented no later than 90 days after the last day of the period during which the election can be made; or

C) the plan offers the option to direct the plan to transfer the portion of the participant's account that is subject to the diversification election to another qualified defined contribution plan of the employer that offers at least 3 distinct investment options in accordance with B) above, provided that the transfer is made no later than 90 days after the last day of the period during which the election can be made. Such transfer must comply with applicable qualification requirements, including sections 414(l), 411(d)(6) and 401(a)(11).

The diversification of investments requirement for a year will be satisfied if the number of employer securities distributable under the plan during the 90 days after the last day of the period in which a diversification election can be made equals or exceeds the number of employer securities subject to diversification for the year. Thus, for example, if a tax credit ESOP provides for distribution of employer securities 84 months after allocation, and such employer securities are distributed during the 90 days after the last day of the period in which a diversification election can be made, such distribution may be used to fulfill the diversification requirement if it is equal to 25% (50% for the last year) or more of the employer securities subject to diversification under section 401(a)(28)(B).

Q-14: To what extent is a distribution in satisfaction of a participant's diversification election subject to certain other provisions of the plan or Code governing distributions?

A-14: Amounts that are required to be available for diversification and are diversified by means of distribution, as permitted under A-13(A), generally are treated as amounts that are not held by an ESOP. Thus, a distribution in satisfaction of a diversification election is not subject to the right to demand employer securities requirement of section 409(h) and may be made notwithstanding the 84 month holding period requirement of section 409(d). However, a distribution in satisfaction of a diversification election is subject to the provisions of section 409(h) concerning the exercise of a put option by participants to the extent that the distribution consists of employer securities. Also, see Q&A-10 for special rules applicable to the interaction of sections 401(a)(28) and 409(d). Finally, a distribution in satisfaction of a diversification election does not fail to satisfy section 411(d)(6) merely because it is not available in the form of employer securities or it is available only as a single sum distribution.

However, a distribution or transfer in satisfaction of a diversification election is eligible for the special exception for ESOP benefits under section 401(a)(11)(C). See, however, Q&A-16 with respect to the inapplicability of this special ESOP benefit exception for distributions of amounts previously diversified pursuant to section 401(a)(28) in accordance with either Q&A-13(B) or Q&A-13(C).

Finally, a distribution in satisfaction of a diversification election must satisfy section 411(a)(11) concerning the consent of the participant to a distribution, but is not subject to the rules, under section 401(a), restricting the distribution of plan benefits before the termination of employment (in the case of a pension plan) or the occurrence of certain other events (in the case of a profit-sharing plan).

Q-15: Has a plan satisfied the distribution option described in A-13(A) of this notice with respect to a qualified participant's diversification election for a given year if the qualified participant does not elect to receive a distribution from the plan?

A-15: Yes. An ESOP or a tax credit ESOP has satisfied the diversification of investments requirement with respect to a qualified participant for a given year when the plan has made available to a qualified participant a distribution of the portion of the qualified participant's account subject to the diversification election (as determined under Q&A-9 of this notice) regardless of whether the qualified participant actually elects to receive a distribution of employer securities. Thus, the diversification election has been satisfied where a distribution to a qualified participant has not been made solely because of the failure of a participant to elect such distribution (or of a participant's spouse to consent to the distribution if such consent is required). This result is the same as the result under A-13(B), which requires only that the ESOP offer 3 distinct investment options (and not that a qualified participant actually elect to diversify).

Q-16: To what extent is a distribution of amounts previously diversified pursuant to section 401(a)(28) in accordance with either Q&A-13(B) or Q&A-13(C) subject to certain other provisions of the plan or Code governing distributions?

A-16: Amounts that have been diversified pursuant to section 401(a)(28) in accordance with either Q&A-13(B) or Q&A-13(C) are treated as amounts that are not held under an ESOP. Thus, section 409(h) does not apply to a distribution of such amounts. Similarly, section 411(d)(6) is not violated if such amounts are not available for distribution in the form of employer securities. Finally, in the case of an ESOP that is a money purchase pension plan, amounts that have been previously diversified in accordance with either Q&A-13(B) or Q&A-13(C) may not be distributed prior to the participant's separation from service and fail to qualify for the special ESOP benefit exception under section 401(a)(11)(C).

Q-17: Has an ESOP failed to satisfy the requirements of section 401(a)(28) with respect to diversification elections offered to qualified participants before the issuance of this notice if it offered such elections in accordance with a reasonable interpretation of section 401(a)(28)?

A-17: No. An ESOP which offered diversification elections which do not fully conform with this notice before the issuance of this notice has not failed to satisfy the requirements of section 401(a)(28) where: 1) the non-conforming diversification election was first offered to qualified participants before June 8, 1988, and 2) the non-conforming diversification election was based on a reasonable interpretation of the statute. However, any diversification election offered after June 8, 1988, must be in compliance with the requirements of this notice An ESOP which offered qualified participants a diversification election before June 8, 1988, which did not comply with the requirements of this notice, may offer qualified participants a diversification election which conforms to the requirements of this notice within the period ending on September 6, 1988. For purposes of this provision, operation in conformity with the model plan amendments contained in Notice 87-2, 1987-2 IRB 17, will be treated as based on a reasonable interpretation of the statute.

In addition, a calendar year ESOP which offered, within the first 90 days of 1988, a diversification election to a person who became a qualified participant during the 1987 plan year will be treated as operating on the basis of a reasonable interpretation and therefore has not failed to comply with section 401(a)(28)(B) even though such a participant is not required to be given a diversification election pursuant to the statute until the first 90 days of 1989.

B. Code Section 72(t)

Q-18: For purposes of section 72(t)(2)(C), when have a majority of assets in an ESOP, or benefits distributed to participants, been invested in employer securities for the five plan year period preceding a distribution?

A-18: For purposes of determining whether a plan has had a majority of its assets invested in employer securities (as defined in section 409(1)) for the preceding five plan year period under section 72(t)(2)(C)(i), or for purposes of determining whether a distribution is a "qualifying ESOP distribution" (See Q&A-21 of Notice 87-13) under section 72(t)(2)(C)(ii), assets of the plan will not fail to be treated as invested in employer securities solely because of the transactions described in this Q&A-18.

A) Cash or other assets derived from the disposition of employer securities pursuant to a corporate reorganization or acquisition attempt (whether or not successful) which are used to purchase other employer securities will be treated as invested in employer securities at the time acquired by the plan if the period between the disposition and the reinvestment does not exceed 90 days or such longer period as may be granted by the Commissioner under rules similar to those of Treas. Reg. §1.46-8(e)(10). For dispositions after June 8, 1988, no extensions will be granted unless applied for within 90 days after the disposition.

B) Cash contributions made by the employer to a tax credit ESOP will be treated as invested in employer securities at the time acquired by the plan if such contributions are used to purchase employer securities within the time periods after contribution provided by the applicable statutory or regulatory provisions governing the requirements for the tax credit.

C) Any other contributions made to an ESOP in cash (including employee contributions) will be treated as invested in employer securities at the time acquired by the plan if such contributions are used to purchase employer securities within 60 days after the date of the contribution.

D) Earnings or dividends attributable to employer securities paid in cash to an ESOP will be treated as invested in employer securities at the time acquired by the plan if such earnings or dividends are used to purchase employer securities within 60 days from the date of payment to the ESOP.

E) Proceeds of an exempt loan (under section 4975) received by the ESOP in cash will be treated as invested in employer securities at the time acquired by the plan if such proceeds are invested in employer securities with 60 days of the receipt of the proceeds by the ESOP.

F) Amounts transferred to an ESOP pursuant to a section 4980 transaction will be treated as invested in employer securities at the time acquired by the plan if the amounts are used to purchase employer securities within the time period prescribed in section 4980(c)(3)(B).

In addition, benefits held in cash or cash equivalents are to be treated as invested in employer securities to the extent that the value of such benefits allocated to a participant does not exceed 2 percent of the value of the employer securities allocated to such participant under the ESOP or tax credit ESOP.

The Depositor Ownership Requirements for Certain Financial Institutions Under Section 382(1)(5)(A) and (F)

Notice 88-57

Section 621(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the "Act") amended section 382 of the Internal Revenue Code to provide that, for any taxable year ending after the date on which an ownership change occurs (the "change date"), the amount of a new loss corporation's taxable income that may be offset by any pre-change loss cannot exceed the section 382 limitation for such year. Special rules are provided so that the section 382 limitation on the utilization of pre-change losses will not apply in the case of an ownership change with respect to certain distressed financial institutions. See section 382(1)(5)(A) and (F). The Internal Revenue Service intends to promulgate regulations clarifying the interpretation of these rules.

In general, relief under section 382(1)(5)(A) is available if (i) the old loss corporation is under the jurisdiction of the court in a title 11 or similar case immediately before the ownership change and (ii) the shareholders and creditors of the old loss corporation (determined immediately before the ownership change) own at least 50 percent of the new loss corporation stock immediately after the ownership change (the "continuity of ownership requirement"). Although stock described in section 1504(a)(4) is not treated as stock under section 382, regulations will provide that such stock shall be treated as a creditor's claim against the old loss corporation and the owner of such stock shall be treated as a creditor for purposes of the continuity of ownership requirement.

In the case of a financial institution that undergoes a reorganization described in section 368(a)(3)(D)(ii) or certain other transactions which occur as an integral part of a transaction involving such a reorganization (collectively referred to as "special reorganizations"), section 382(1)(5)(F) provides that (i) the continuity of ownership requirement shall be reduced from 50 percent to 20 percent, (ii) a depositor in the old loss corporation shall be treated as a stockholder in that corporation, and (iii) the deposits of the old loss corporation which become deposits of the new loss corporation shall be treated as stock of the new loss corporation. The cross reference in section 382(1)(5)(F)(i)(I), which modifies the general continuity of ownership requirement in the case of special reorganizations, has created some uncertainty as to how continuity of ownership is satisfied in such cases.

Prior to amendment by the Act, section 382 ("old section 382") provided similar relief to a financial institution that was reorganized in a title 11 or similar case. The continuity of ownership requirement under that provision also required that the owners of the transferor corporation (with the depositors treated as owners) retain at least a 20 percent continuity of ownership in the acquiring corporation in order to avoid a reduction in the transferor corporation's net operating losses. Under old section 382, continuity of ownership did not require the retention of any voting interest in the acquiring corporation, but was measured solely by reference to the fair market value of the interest received in the acquiring corporation by the owners of the transferor corporation.

The legislative history of section 382(1)(5)(F) indicates that Congress did not intend to alter the prior law continuity of ownership requirement for special reorganizations. H. Rep. (Conf. Rep.) No. 99-841, 99th Cong. 2d Sess. 193, 1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 4) 193. Consequently, the Service intends to promulgate regulations under section 382 which will provide that the 20 percent continuity of ownership requirement under section 382(1)(5)(A) and (F) is to be applied by disregarding the voting power requirement of section 1504(a)(2)(A).

Defined Benefit Plans Transferring Assets to Defined Contribution Plans

Notice 88-58

This notice provides guidance as to those instances which are excepted from the suspension of determination and examination cases involving transfers of plan assets and liabilities from defined benefit plans to defined contribution plans.

On February 21, 1985, the IRS, with the Department of Labor and the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, cautioned that transfers of funds between plans were subject to the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code and Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (see IR-85-19). Subsequently, on February 18, 1986, the IRS issued a field directive that suspended determination and examination cases with respect to transfers of assets and liabilities from defined benefit plans to defined contribution plans. In the field directive the IRS stated that such transfers would be studied to determine their effect on plan qualification.

As of May 9, 1988, any case involving a terminating defined benefit plan from which only excess assets are transferred to a defined contribution plan of the same employer will be released from the suspension if the termination satisfies all applicable requirements. For purposes of release from the suspension, the transfer may involve amounts that could revert to the employer. Cases in which liabilities of the plan are being transferred will continue to be subject to the suspension.

In order to satisfy all liabilities under the plan, the plan administrator must distribute plan assets by purchasing irrevocable commitments from an insurer to provide all benefits under the plan or by otherwise fully providing all benefits under the plan in accordance with plan provisions and applicable requirements. After satisfaction of all plan liabilities, the remaining assets ("excess assets") may revert to the employer under certain circumstances and to the extent provided in the plan.

For federal income tax purposes (except as provided for under section 4980(c)(3) of the Code), a transfer of excess assets from a defined benefit plan to a defined contribution plan of the same employer constitutes a reversion of the assets to the employer followed by a contribution to the defined contribution plan. Thus, a reversion of excess assets from a defined benefit plan, whether received by the employer or transferred to a defined contribution plan, is included in the gross income of the employer under section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code (subject to the limitations of section 111). In addition, section 4980 of the Code imposes a tax equal to 10% of the amount of any direct or indirect employer reversion from a qualified plan. Section 4980(c)(3) of the Code provides a temporary exception to the inclusion of a reversion in gross income, and also from imposition of the 10% tax on reversions, for any portion of a reversion transferred from a defined benefit plan to an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP), if the transfer meets the requirements set forth in such section.

For the employer maintaining the defined benefit and defined contribution plans involved in such a transfer, any deduction will be subject to the limitations of section 404(a) of the Code, because the employer has made a contribution to the defined contribution plan in an amount equal to the amount transferred. In addition, with respect to any nondeductible contribution, the excise tax imposed by section 4972 of the Code will apply.

Any excess assets transferred from a defined benefit plan to a defined contribution plan and allocated to participants' accounts are annual additions for the limitation year in which allocated under that defined contribution plan and will be subject to the limits of section 415 of the Code (including restrictions on the use of suspense accounts).

Plan administrators who have a ruling request in suspension due to the study of transfer issues but believe that their request should now be released from suspense should contact the appropriate Key District Office.

The Service is still studying other forms of transfers from a defined benefit plan to a defined contribution plan and further guidance is expected to be available shortly.

No inference is intended as to the implications of these transactions under Part 4 of Title I of ERISA.

Applicable Short-Term Federal Rate Under Section 6621

Notice 88-59

In determining the quarterly interest rates to be used for overpayments and underpayments of tax under section 6621 of the Internal Revenue Code, the Internal Revenue Service will use the federal short-term rate based on daily compounding.

Section 6621 of the Code, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986, section 1511, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1, 661, establishes differential rates for computing interest on tax overpayments and underpayments. The overpayment rate equals the sum of the federal short-term rate plus 2 percentage points, and the underpayment rate equals the sum of the federal short-term rate plus the 3 percentage points. For this purpose, the "federal short-term rate" is the federal short-term rate determined in accordance with section 1274(d), rounded to the nearest percent. Under section 6621, the rate effective for a calendar quarter is based on the federal short-term rate determined during the first month of the preceding calendar quarter.

Section 1274(d)(1)(C)(i) of the Code provides that the federal short-term rate shall be the rate determined by the Secretary based on the average market yield (during any one month period selected by the Secretary and ending in the calendar month in which the determination is made) on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States with remaining periods to maturity of 3 years or less.

Section 6622 of the Code provides the general rule that in computing the amount of any interest required to be paid by the Secretary or by the taxpayer, or any other amount determined by reference to the amount of interest, the interest and the amount shall be compounded daily.

Annual, semi-annual, quarterly, and monthly equivalency rates are published monthly for purposes of section 1274(d) of the Code. The statute and committee reports do not specify which federal short-term rate should be used in performing the computations required by section 6621. Because the section 6621 rate is subject to daily compounding under section 6622, the rate most consistent with determination of the section 6621 rate is the federal short-term rate based on a daily compounding assumption.

In addition, the daily compounding rate is the rate that most accurately reflects the cost to the government of borrowing funds that are unavailable because of tax delinquencies.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Foreign Life Insurance Companies—Percentage

Notice 88-60

AGENCY: Department of the Treasury.

ACTION: Proclamation.

SUMMARY: This proclamation announces the percentage to be used to compute the income tax liability for 1987 of foreign corporations carrying on life insurance business in the United States and provides instructions for computing the estimated tax and the installment payments of estimated tax for 1988 for all foreign insurance companies.

EFFECTIVE DATE: March 15, 1988.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This proclamation, issued each year by the Secretary of the Treasury, announces the percentage to be used to compute the income tax liability of foreign corporations carrying on life insurance business in the United States. In addition, the proclamation provides instructions for computing the estimated tax and the installment payments of estimated tax for 1988 for all foreign insurance companies.

PROCLAMATION

For purposes of computing the 1987 income tax of foreign corporations carrying on a life insurance business, a percentage of 16.2 percent shall be used in determining the "minimum figure" under former section 813. For purposes of computing the estimated tax and the installment payments of estimated tax for the taxable year 1988, all foreign insurance companies (life and property-casualty companies) will be allowed to rely on their actual investment income for purposes of computing investment income under section 842, as amended by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, until publication by the Secretary of the domestic asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields under section 842. No additions to tax shall be made because of any underpayment of estimated tax for the taxable year 1988 if: (1) The taxpayer timely pays estimated tax based on its actual net investment income, and (2) the taxpayer deposits the full amount due under section 6655 of the Code with its first estimated tax payment following publication of the domestic asset/liability percentages and the domestic investment yields under section 842.

This proclamation was issued without notice and public procedure because the public cannot effectively participate in the determination of the percentage required under former section 813. It is computed from information contained in income tax returns that are not open to the public. The proclamation was not published prior to its effective date because the percentage is computed on the basis of data which was not then available.

Application of Uniform Capitalization Rules to Authors and Other Producers of "Creative Properties"

Notice 88-62

This notice provides guidance to certain authors, photographers, artists, and other similarly situated persons regarding the uniform capitalization rules under section 263A of the Internal Revenue Code.

I. Background.

Section 263A of the Code, enacted in the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514, the "1986 Act"), provides uniform capitalization rules that govern the treatment of costs incurred in the production of property or the acquisition of property for resale. Section 263A was enacted, in part, to prevent the inappropriate mismatching of income and expense that resulted from the current deduction of the costs of producing or acquiring property.

Section 263A(b) of the Code generally provides that the uniform capitalization rules apply to the "production" (including the development or improvement) of real or tangible personal property produced by the taxpayer. Moreover, this section provides that, for purposes of the uniform capitalization rules, the term "tangible personal property" shall include a film, sound recording, video tape, book, or similar property. (See also the legislative history to section 263A contained in 2 H.R. Rep. No. 99-841 (Conf. Rep.), 99th Cong., 2d Sess. II-308, n. 1 (1986)). Based on section 263A(b) and its accompanying legislative history, section 1.263A-1T (a)(5)(iii) of the regulations provides, for example, that section 263A requires the capitalization by authors of the costs of researching, preparing and writing literary works. Similar rules apply to the production of other properties enumerated as tangible properties in section 263A(b).

For example, costs required to be capitalized under section 263A by authors and other similar persons consist of the costs of creating, researching, writing and preparing the literary works and other properties being produced, including costs of travel undertaken for business purposes (e.g., research); depreciation, rent and repairs on equipment and facilities used in producing the properties; all labor and compensation costs (including pension costs, where applicable) of any persons involved in the production activity; office overhead; interest (where required under section 263A(f)); and any other direct or indirect costs relating to the production of such properties as described in 1.263A-1T(b)(2) of the regulations.

Taxpayers are required to allocate and capitalize costs to the particular properties being produced, and to recover such costs under other applicable provisions of the Code. See, e.g., section 167 (depreciation); Rev. Rul. 60-358, 1960-2 C.B. 68, Siegel v. Commissioner, 78 T.C. 659 (1982) (income forecast method); section 1.61-3(a) of the regulations (cost of goods sold).

II. Authority and Need for Safe Harbor.

The Internal Revenue Service has received numerous inquiries from authors, photographers and other persons expressing concern regarding the application of the uniform capitalization rules to their businesses. These concerns have focused both on the allocation and capitalization of costs under section 263A, as well as the amortization or recovery of these capitalized costs under other sections of the Code.

The legislative history of section 263A indicates that Congress was aware of the possible administrative complexities resulting from the application of the uniform capitalization rules to businesses. In response to this concern, Congress granted the Treasury Department authority under section 263A to "adopt other simplifying methods and assumptions where, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury, the costs and other burdens of literal compliance may outweigh the benefits." S. Rep. 99-313, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 141-42 (1986).

Moreover, in the preamble to temporary regulations under section 263A, published in the Federal Register on March 30, 1987 (52 FR 10057, T.D. 8131), the Internal Revenue Service generally solicited comments and suggestions regarding the use of simplified methods in complying with the uniform capitalization rules under section 263A. In response to this request for comments, the Internal Revenue Service has received numerous suggestions from taxpayers asking that additional simplified methods be provided for individual authors, photographers, and other taxpayers creating various types of property.

III. Elective Safe Harbor—In General.

Based on the foregoing, this notice provides an elective three-year "safe harbor" for certain authors and other taxpayers with respect to their capitalization of costs under section 263A and the recovery or amortization of such costs under other sections of the Code.

Under the three-year safe harbor provided herein, taxpayers shall aggregate and capitalize all "qualified creative costs" incurred during each taxable year and shall amortize and deduct 50 percent of such aggregate costs in the year they are incurred, 25 percent of such costs in the year following the year in which they are incurred, and the final 25 percent of such costs in the second year following the year in which they are incurred.

The three-year safe harbor provided in this notice substantially reduces the administrative complexities of complying with the uniform capitalization rules by eliminating the necessity to amortize the capitalized costs under the income forecast method for taxpayers otherwise required to use such method. (The income forecast method requires the taxpayer to estimate the future expected income to be received from the property in issue, in addition to only allowing the taxpayer to amortize the property's capitalized costs for the periods during which the taxpayer recognizes income from such property).

Moreover, the three-year safe harbor provided here eliminates any need for the taxpayer to allocate total costs incurred in the taxpayer's trade or business between (i) costs that are required to be capitalized under section 263A and costs that are permitted to be expensed; and (ii) costs incurred with respect to separate properties produced by the taxpayer (e.g., various manuscripts being created by an author). It is anticipated that the 50 percent portion of total aggregate qualified creative costs deducted in the year such costs are incurred under the safe harbor, reasonably approximates the amounts of both otherwise deductible costs incurred during that taxable year and the amortization of costs required to be capitalized under section 263A for that year.

IV. Properties Covered By Safe Harbor.

This three-year safe harbor is available only for the qualified creative costs paid or incurred ("incurred") in producing "creative properties" defined as films, sound recordings, video tapes, books (including, for example, articles and poems), photographs, plays and other dramatic works, musical and dance compositions (including accompanying words), graphic and pictorial compositions, fine art paintings and sculptures, and other similar fine art products (but not including jewelry).

No other properties other than those defined herein as creative properties are eligible for this safe harbor. For example, section 263A is itself applicable, in part, to the production of a film, sound recording, video tape, book or "similar property." The term "similar property" in section 263A is not limited to properties which are defined as creative properties in this notice. Thus, the term "similar property" in section 263A may include specific types of properties other than, and in addition to, the properties defined herein as being eligible for the three-year safe harbor. Similarly, certain properties (e.g., paintings and sculptures) defined as creative properties for purposes of this notice are tangible properties and hence subject to the capitalization rules of section 263A without reference to the provisions of section 263A(b) providing that certain enumerated properties shall be treated as tangible for purposes of the uniform capitalization rules.

Taxpayers electing to use the three-year safe harbor in accounting for the costs of producing any creative property to which this three-year safe harbor applies shall be deemed to have also elected to use the three-year safe harbor in accounting for the production of any other creative property to which the safe harbor applies. Thus, for example, a taxpayer producing both books and films who elects to use the three-year safe harbor in accounting for the production of the books must also use the three-year safe harbor with respect to the production of the films.

V. Qualified Creative Costs—In General.

The three-year safe harbor provided herein only applies to "qualified creative costs" which are defined as certain costs incurred by a self-employed individual (except as provided in section VIII herein), in the production of creative properties where the personal efforts of such individual predominantly create such properties. Qualified creative costs do not include the costs paid or incurred by a person in his capacity as an employee, nor do they include costs incurred by an individual in producing creative properties where the personal efforts of such individual do not predominantly create such properties (e.g., where the properties are predominantly created by persons other than the individual such as employees or independent contractors).

With respect to any properties predominantly created by employees of the individual or by independent contractors hired by the individual, the provisions of this safe harbor are not available in accounting for the costs of producing such properties under section 263A. (Qualified creative costs do, however, include amounts paid by an individual to employees or independent contractors assisting in the production of the creative properties, if the personal efforts of such individual predominantly create such properties.)

Moreover, except as provided in section VIII herein, qualified creative costs do not include costs incurred by any person other than an individual. For example, except as provided in section VIII, qualified creative costs do not include costs incurred by a partnership, trust, or corporation.

For purposes of the three-year safe harbor, qualified creative costs consist of all costs incurred by the taxpayer in the trade or business or activity conducted for profit (collectively, "trade or business") of producing creative properties that would be otherwise deductible under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, excluding the provisions of section 263A. Thus, qualified creative costs consist of: (i) all costs required to be capitalized under section 263A and the regulations thereunder with respect to the production of creative properties ("section 263A costs"); and (ii) all other costs incurred and otherwise deductible by the taxpayer in the trade or business of producing creative properties.

VI. Qualified Creative Costs—Examples.

Qualified creative costs eligible for this safe harbor would generally include, for example, depreciation deductions taken with respect to a computer or automobile (i.e., equipment and facilities) used to produce creative properties, since these costs are required to be capitalized under section 263A as a cost of producing such properties. In contrast, qualified creative costs would not include the costs of purchasing a computer or an automobile that will be used to produce creative properties because, although such purchase costs are capitalized (see, e.g., section 263), they are not capitalized under section 263A as costs of producing creative properties. Moreover, such costs are not otherwise deductible by the taxpayer.

Qualified creative costs also include all other costs incurred by the taxpayer that would be otherwise deductible in the trade or business of producing creative properties. Thus, such costs include the costs of marketing, selling, advertising and distributing creative properties undertaken by an individual in the trade or business of producing creative properties. For example, costs incurred by a taxpayer in promoting or selling a finished manuscript or photograph would be qualified creative costs and thus would be subject to the provisions of this three-year safe harbor. In addition, qualified creative costs include all office overhead (e.g., general and administrative costs), and all otherwise deductible interest expense incurred in the trade or business of producing creative properties, regardless of whether such costs would be required to be capitalized under section 263A.

Moreover, qualified creative costs include the costs of producing properties that are sold (or otherwise disposed of, in their entirety) by the taxpayer in the same taxable year that such costs are incurred. For example, costs incurred by a taxpayer in writing an article (or producing a photograph) that the taxpayer sells in its entirety to a magazine in the same year that the costs are incurred would be qualified creative costs and thus would be subject to this three-year safe harbor.

Similarly, costs incurred by a taxpayer in a hobby are not qualified creative costs eligible for this safe harbor because (i) such costs are not section 263A costs; and (ii) qualified creative costs only consist of costs incurred in a trade or business or an activity conducted for profit.

VII. Mechanics of Three-Year Safe Harbor.

Assume, for example, that a photographer elects to use the three-year safe harbor beginning in 1987 when the taxpayer incurs a total of $16,000 in qualified creative costs consisting of all the taxpayer's section 263A costs, and all other costs incurred that year in the photography business that would be otherwise deductible by the taxpayer. Under the three-year safe harbor, the photographer would capitalize $16,000 of costs in 1987 and would expense $8,000 of these costs in 1987, and $4,000 of these costs in each of 1988 and 1989. In addition, assume that the photographer incurs a total of $20,000 in qualified creative costs in 1988. The photographer would capitalize $20,000 of costs in 1988 and would expense $10,000 of these costs in 1988, and $5,000 of these costs in each of 1989 and 1990.

VIII. Availability of Safe-Harbor to Certain Entities.

The three-year safe harbor may be used with respect to a corporation or partnership engaged in the trade or business of producing creative properties (an "eligible corporation" or "eligible partnership"), but only if the requirements of this section VIII are met. A corporation or partnership may use the three-year safe harbor if substantially all of such entity is owned by one "qualified employee owner", as defined herein. For purposes of this provision, ownership by any members of such qualified employee owner's family, as defined in section 267(c)(4) of the Code, shall be treated as ownership by the qualified employee owner.

A qualified employee owner shall be deemed to own substantially all of a corporation if such individual owns at least 95 percent (by value) of the stock of such corporation. Similarly, a qualified employee owner shall be deemed to own substantially all of a partnership if such individual has an interest in partnership profits and capital of at least 95 percent.

A qualified employee owner is an individual employed by an eligible corporation or eligible partnership where the personal efforts of such qualified employee owner produce creative properties for such corporation or partnership. Moreover, "qualified creative costs" eligible for this safe harbor only include costs incurred in the production of creative properties where the personal efforts of the qualified employee owner predominantly create such properties. Qualified creative costs do not include any of the costs of creating properties where the personal efforts of the qualified employee owner do not predominantly create such properties (e.g., where the properties are predominantly created by persons other than the qualified employee owner such as other employees or independent contractors). With respect to any properties predominantly created by persons other than the qualified employee owner, the provisions of this safe harbor are not available in accounting for the costs of producing such properties under section 263A.

Any corporation or partnership meeting the requirements of this section VIII may use the three-year safe harbor provided in this notice in accounting for qualified creative costs, subject to all the requirements, conditions and procedures of this notice applicable to individuals electing such safe harbor (except where expressly noted).

IX. Election to Use Three-Year Safe Harbor

Taxpayers may automatically elect to use the three-year safe harbor by determining and reporting their taxable income under such safe harbor on a timely filed (with regard to extensions) Federal income tax return for the first taxable year (including, but not limited to the first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986) to which the provisions of section 263A apply to the particular taxpayer's production of creative properties.

In addition, with respect to the taxpayer's first taxable ending after December 31, 1986 (typically, the calendar 1987 year), taxpayers may automatically elect to use the three-year safe harbor by determining and reporting their taxable income under the safe harbor on an amended Federal income tax return for such year filed within 270 days after this notice is published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Alternatively, eligible taxpayers who have filed, on or before [date which is thirty days after publication of this notice in the Internal Revenue Bulletin] a Federal income tax return for their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986, may, if those taxpayers choose, follow the procedures set forth herein (the "1988 election") and automatically adopt the three-year safe harbor for their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1987 (typically, the calendar year 1988). By adopting the 1988 election, taxpayers wishing to use the three-year safe harbor may, if they choose, avoid filing an amended return for their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986.

Taxpayers are eligible to adopt the 1988 election if, and only if, such taxpayers have properly capitalized the costs of producing creative properties for their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986, as required by section 263A and the regulations thereunder. Taxpayers who have not properly capitalized their costs of producing creative properties in determining and reporting taxable income on a Federal income tax return filed for their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986, may not adopt the 1988 election. Such taxpayers may only elect to use the three-year safe harbor by filing an amended return using the three-year safe harbor for their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986, as described in this section IX.

Taxpayer properly adopting the 1988 election shall take the balance of section 263A capitalized costs, outstanding on their books and records as of the close of their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1986, and shall amortize and deduct 50 percent of such capitalized costs in their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1987, and 50 percent of such costs in the next succeeding taxable year. Such taxpayers shall also apply the three-year safe harbor to qualified creative costs incurred in their first taxable year ending after December 31, 1987, and for all years thereafter.

For example, assume a calendar year taxpayer producing creative properties properly capitalizes the costs of producing such creative properties in determining and reporting taxable income in a 1987 Federal income tax return that is filed on April 15, 1988. The taxpayer has a balance of $12,000 in outstanding section 263A costs on her books and records as of December 31, 1987, i.e., the taxpayer has capitalized, as a cost of producing creative properties, $12,000 of costs in 1987 that have not been amortized or deducted as of the close of the taxable year. The taxpayer may adopt the three-year safe harbor by filing an amended return for 1987 using the three-year safe harbor for that year. Thus, the taxpayer would determine all of the qualified creative costs (including, but not limited to, section 263A costs) incurred in 1987 and apply the three-year safe harbor to those costs and to all qualified creative costs incurred in subsequent years.

Alternatively, the taxpayer may, if she chooses, adopt the 1988 election and, with respect to the $12,000 balance of section 263A costs outstanding at December 31, 1987, amortize and deduct $6,000 of those costs in 1988, and $6,000 of those costs in 1989. The taxpayer would then apply the three-year safe harbor to all qualified creative costs incurred in 1988 and in all subsequent years. Thus, if the taxpayer incurs an additional $18,000 of qualified creative costs in 1988, the total costs deducted in 1988 would be $15,000 ($6,000 + $9,000); the total costs deducted in 1989 would be $10,500 ($6,000 + 4,500), in addition to 50% of the qualified creative costs incurred in 1989. The taxpayer would file a Federal income tax return for 1988 determining and reporting taxable income under these procedures. The taxpayer would not file an amended return for 1987.

Taxpayers automatically electing to use the three-year safe harbor on a Federal income tax return (whether such return is timely filed or is amended, and regardless of whether the 1988 election is adopted) shall note such election of the safe harbor by typing or legibly printing the following statement at the top of page 1 of Schedule C (Form 1040): "Three-Year Safe Harbor Adopted Under the Provisions of Notice 88-62." With respect to corporations and partnerships automatically electing to use the three-year safe harbor, such statement shall be provided on the top of Schedule A, Form 1120, or Schedule A, Form 1065, respectively.

Except as otherwise provided in this notice, taxpayers may not elect the use of the three-year safe harbor for any taxable year, unless consent to such change in method of accounting is obtained from the Commissioner. Moreover, taxpayers electing to use this three-year safe harbor may not discontinue such use unless consent to such change in method of accounting is obtained from the Commissioner.

Applicable Rate of Interest on Nonqualified Withdrawals From a Capital Construction Fund

Notice 88-63

Under the authority in section 607(h)(4)(B) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended (46 U.S.C. 1177(h)(4)(B)), we hereby determine and announce that the applicable rate of interest on the amount of additional tax attributable to any nonqualified withdrawals from a Capital Construction Fund established under section 607 of the Act shall be 8.00 percent, with respect to nonqualified withdrawals made in the taxable year beginning in 1987.

The determination of the applicable rate of interest with respect to nonqualified withdrawals was computed, according to the joint regulations issued under the Act (46 CFR 391.7(e)(2)(ii)), by multiplying eight percent by the ratio which: (1) The average yield on 5-year Treasury securities for the calendar year immediately preceding the beginning of such taxable year bears to (b) the average yield on 5-year Treasury securities for the calendar year 1970. The applicable rate so determined was computed to the nearest one-hundredth of one percent.

Inflation Adjustment for Computation of Windfall Profit Tax

Notice 88-64

Section 4989(b) of the Internal Revenue Code requires the determination of an inflation adjustment factor for use in computing the windfall profit tax.

The Service has determined that, for oil removed during the July-September quarter of 1988, the inflation adjustments are as follows:

Tier 1 or Tier 2 oil	0.5321
Tier 3 oil	0.8244

Worksheets for computation of the windfall profit tax are included in the Instructions for Form 6047, Windfall Profit Tax, and an explanation of the inflation adjustment may be found in the Specific Instructions for Line 4 of the worksheets.

Filing Requirements for Returns Claiming the Foreign Tax Credit

Notice 88-65

Section 1.905-2 of the Income Tax Regulations sets forth conditions for allowance of the foreign tax credit available under section 901 of the Internal Revenue code of 1986. To claim the credit, individuals must submit Form 1116, and corporations must submit Form 1118.

Section 1.905-2(a)(2) of the regulations requires taxpayers to attach to the return a receipt for taxes paid, and a foreign tax return for taxes accrued. Section 1.905-2(b) describes secondary evidence of taxes paid or accrued that may be submitted in lieu of these documents. Recent efforts by the Service to enforce this requirement have revealed that many taxpayers cannot timely obtain and prepare the necessary information in a form suitable for submission with the tax return.

Therefore, the Service is initiating an effort to analyze compliance levels for foreign tax credits and will study the current system for claiming foreign tax credits and explore alternative systems. In conjunction with the study, regulations will be issued suspending all but the first sentence of section 1.905-2(a)(2) of the regulations, and all of section 1.905-2(b). The suspension will be effective beginning January 1, 1988.

Taxpayers whose 1987 returns have been rejected by the Service for lack of foreign tax credit documentation must resubmit those returns on or before August 15, 1988, accompanied by the Form 3531 they received. If Form 3531 is missing, the resubmitted return must be accompanied by a supplemental statement attesting to the date the return was originally submitted. No other documentation need be submitted. Taxpayers who have already resubmitted returns without Form 3531 need not resubmit again. Returns that were originally timely submitted and that are resubmitted as described in this paragraph will be deemed for all purposes as filed on the date of original submission.

Taxpayers whose returns have been retained, but who have received letters from the Service requesting foreign tax credit documentation, need not respond to those letters.

The Service will not assess late filing penalties if an otherwise timely return was rejected solely for lack of foreign tax credit documentation and the return is timely resubmitted as described above. A taxpayer who receives a notice of assessment of such a penalty may apply for abatement by submitting to the Service a statement attesting that the return was timely submitted and referring to this notice.

The Service cautions that foreign tax credits, like all other items on the return, must be substantiated with proper documentation, and that the documentation must be available for examination on request. See Rev. Rul. 67-308, 1967-2 C.B. 254. The suspension of the regulations means only that until further notice, the documentation need not be submitted when the return is filed.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied on to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Long-term Contracts; Modification of the Percentage of Completion-Capitalized Cost Method

Notice 88-66

This notice provides guidance with respect to the amendment of section 460 of the Internal Revenue Code, regarding the accounting for long-term contracts, by section 10203 of the Revenue Act of 1987 (the "1987 Act"), Pub. L. No. 100-203, 101 Stat. 1330. This notice amplifies the provisions of Notice 87-61, 1987-2 C.B. 370. This notice and Notice 87-61 relate to the procedures by which taxpayers may change their methods of accounting for long-term contracts for purposes of section 460 of the Code. As a result of the amendment of section 460 of the Code by the 1987 Act, certain taxpayers may wish to reconsider whether it is desirable to change their method of accounting for long-term contracts. Thus, in addition to providing guidance under section 460 of the Code, the provisions of this notice extend the period of time provided in Notice 87-61 during which taxpayers may automatically change to the percentage of completion method of accounting as modified by section 460 of the Code ("the percentage of completion method") for all long-term contracts entered into after February 28, 1986.

1. Background.

Section 460 of the Code provides that, in the case of a long-term contract (except as provided in section 460(e) of the Code), items are to be taken into account using (i) the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method, or (ii) the percentage of completion method. Section 460 is effective for long-term contracts entered into by the taxpayer after February 28, 1986.

As initially enacted, section 460 of the Code required that, under the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method of accounting for long-term contracts, 40 percent of the items with respect to each contract are to be taken into account using the percentage of completion method, and 60 percent of the items with respect to each contract are to be taken into account using the taxpayer's "normal" method of accounting for long-term contracts, subject to the requirements of section 460, including the cost allocation requirements of section 460(c). Section 10203 of the 1987 Act modified the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method to require that, for contracts entered into after October 13, 1987 (with certain exceptions contained in section 10203(b)(2) of the 1987 Act), 70 percent of the items with respect to each contract are to be taken into account using the percentage of completion method and the remaining 30 percent are to be taken into account using the taxpayer's "normal" method, subject to the requirements of section 460, including the cost allocation requirements of section 460(c). For purposes of section 460, a taxpayer's normal method of accounting for long-term contracts is the method the taxpayer was using to account for long-term contracts immediately prior to the effective date of section 460.

Any taxpayer that, immediately prior to the effective date of section 460, accounted for contracts based on the position that such contracts were long-term contracts under section 1.451-3(b) of the Income Tax Regulations, shall be required to account for such contracts (and any successor contracts) under section 460 unless such taxpayer obtains the consent of the Commissioner to change its method of accounting. The term "successor contracts", as used in the preceding sentence, shall mean all contracts which, under the criteria and methods used by the taxpayer prior to the effective date of section 460 in determining whether a contract was a long-term contract under section 1.451-3(b) of the Regulations, would be classified by such taxpayer as long-term contracts under section 1.451-3(b), regardless of whether such criteria and methods are correct. Thus, for example, the criteria and methods used by a taxpayer in determining that items were "unique" prior to February 28, 1986, and thus were produced under long-term contracts, will continue to be used by the taxpayer unless the taxpayer obtains the consent of the Commissioner to change its method of accounting under the applicable administrative procedures in effect at the time of change (e.g., Rev. Proc. 84-74, 1984-2 C.B. 736). See H.R. Rep. No. 495, 100th Cong., 2d Sess. 923 (1987).

II. Taxpayers Using the Percentage of Completion-Capitalized Cost Method.

Except as provided in Notice 87-61, any taxpayer reporting income from long-term contracts immediately prior to the effective date of section 460 using a method of accounting other than the percentage of completion method is required to use the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method of accounting for all long-term contracts entered into by the taxpayer after February 28, 1986.

For contracts entered into after February 28, 1986, and before October 14, 1987, the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method requires that 40 percent of the items with respect to each contract be taken into account using the percentage of completion method, and the remaining 60 percent be taken into account using the taxpayer's normal method of accounting for long-term contracts. For contracts entered into after October 13, 1987, the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method requires that 70 percent of the items with respect to each contract be taken into account using the percentage of completion method and that the remaining 30 percent be taken into account using the taxpayer's normal method of accounting for long-term contracts. (However, see section III, relating to automatic changes to the percentage of completion method.)

The change in the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method shall be effectuated by using a "cut-off" method with respect to contracts entered into after October 13, 1987, i.e., the taxpayer shall not change its method of accounting for contracts entered into on or before October 13, 1987 and no adjustment under section 481(a) of the Code shall be computed. Taxpayers described in this section II using the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method of accounting for long-term contracts shall follow the notification procedures of section V of this notice.

III. Automatic Change to Percentage of Completion Method.

For purposes of section 460 of the Code, any taxpayer using a method of accounting other than the percentage of completion method as its normal method of accounting for long-term contracts (e.g., a taxpayer using the completed contract, cash or an accrual method of accounting) may automatically change its method of accounting to the percentage of completion method (including, if elected, the simplified cost-to-cost method provided in Notice 87-61) either for—

1) all items under all long-term contracts entered into by the taxpayer after October 13, 1987, or

2) all items under all long-term contracts entered into by the taxpayer after February 28, 1986.

Thus, a taxpayer may use the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method for all contracts entered into after February 28, 1986 and before October 14, 1987, and may, under the terms of this notice, automatically change its method of accounting to the percentage of completion method for all items under all contracts entered into after October 13, 1987. Alternatively a taxpayer may, under the terms of this notice, use the percentage of completion method for all items under all long-term contracts entered into after February 28, 1986. (The effect of alternative (2) of this section III regarding contracts entered into after February 28, 1986 is to extend the period, initially set forth in Notice 87-61, within which taxpayers may elect to use the percentage of completion method for all such contracts.)

The period for filing amended returns for taxpayers changing their method of accounting to the percentage of completion method is provided in section V of this notice. See also section VI of this notice which permits taxpayers to elect whether to include contracts described in section 460(e)(1) of the Code in a change in method of accounting under this section III. Any taxpayer described in this section III shall follow the notification procedures of section V of this notice.

IV. Changes in Method of Accounting Requiring Commissioner's Consent.

A change in method of accounting to the percentage of completion method other than a change for—

1) all items under all long-term contracts entered into by the taxpayer after October 13, 1987, or

2) all items under all long-term contracts entered into by the taxpayer after February 28, 1986, will constitute a change in method of accounting that requires the consent of the Commissioner. For example, if a calendar year taxpayer wishes to change to the percentage of completion method from the percentage of completion-capitalized cost method for its taxable year beginning on January 1, 1988, such taxpayer is required to obtain the consent of the Commissioner with respect to such change in method of accounting (including the calculation of the resulting section 481(a) adjustment). Prior to obtaining such consent, the taxpayer is required to account for all long-term contracts entered into after February 28, 1986, under section 460 of the Code using a "cut-off" method as provided in this notice and Notice 87-61.

V. Notification Procedures for Certain Methods of Accounting.

Any taxpayer described in section II or III of this notice shall complete and file a statement notifying the Service of its use of the various methods of accounting (including the simplified cost-to-cost method provided in Notice 87-61) permitted under this notice with the taxpayer's Federal income tax return for the first taxable year ending after October 13, 1987, for which the taxpayer is required to account under section 460 for long-term contracts. The taxpayer shall type or legibly print the following language at the top of the statement required to be filed: "NOTIFICATION PROCEDURES UNDER SECTION V OF NOTICE 88-66". Any amended return filed by a taxpayer described in section III for the purpose, in whole or in part, of changing a taxpayer's method of accounting as described in this notice must be filed on or before 180 days after the date that this notice is published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. The taxpayer shall type or legibly print the following language at the top of each amended return: "NOTIFICATION PROCEDURES UNDER SECTION V OF NOTICE 88-66".

Notwithstanding the requirements of the preceding paragraph, with respect to any taxpayer who has (i) filed a Federal income tax return on which the statement described in the preceding paragraph was required to be included, (ii) failed to file the statement described in the preceding paragraph with such return, and (iii) otherwise properly used the method of accounting as required or allowed under sections II or III of this notice, such taxpayer may file a statement indicating the use of its method of accounting under the following procedures. Such statement shall be attached to the taxpayer's first Federal income tax return filed subsequent to 90 days after the publication of this notice in the Internal Revenue Bulletin for which the taxpayer is required to account under section 460 for long-term contracts. (A taxpayer, at its option, may attach such a statement with a return filed before the date described in the preceding sentence.) The taxpayer shall type or legibly print the following language at the top of the statement required to be filed: "NOTIFICATION PROCEDURES UNDER SECTION V OF NOTICE 88-66". Any use of a method of accounting described in this section V shall be effectuated by using a "cut-off" method with respect to contracts entered into after February 28, 1986, or October 13, 1987, as the case may be, i.e., the taxpayer shall not compute a section 481(a) adjustment with respect to its use of the new method of accounting.

VI. Certain Construction Contracts.

With the exception of the interest capitalization requirements of section 460(c)(3) of the Code, section 460 does not apply to any contract for the construction of real property entered into by a taxpayer if (i) the taxpayer reasonably estimates (at the time the contract is entered into) that the contract will be completed within the 2-year period beginning on the contract commencement date; and (ii) the taxpayer's average annual gross receipts for the 3 taxable years preceding the taxable year in which the contract is entered into do not exceed $10 million. See section 460(e)(1) of the Code.

However, a taxpayer that wishes to change its method of accounting to the percentage of completion method for all items under all long-term contracts, including long-term contracts described in section 460(e)(1), may make such change in method of accounting under section III of this Notice 88-66. In addition, a taxpayer that makes such change may also elect to use the simplified cost-to-cost method, as provided in Notice 87-61. Alternatively, such a taxpayer may make a change in method of accounting under section III of this notice with respect only to long-term contracts not described in section 460(e)(1), thus retaining its previous method of accounting for contracts described in section 460(e)(1).

Moreover, in applying section 56(a)(3) to determine alternative minimum taxable income with respect to contracts described in section 460(e)(1), a taxpayer may elect to use the simplified cost-to-cost method as provided in Notice 87-61. The preceding sentence liberalizes the provisions of section IX of Notice 87-61, which allowed such an election to be made only by taxpayers properly using the cash method of accounting for long-term contracts.

Thus, for example, assume a taxpayer (taxpayer B) is in the business of constructing and selling houses. Customers enter into contracts with B to purchase the houses, with such contracts typically providing that such purchase shall be consummated after the construction of the house is completed, and after certain other events have occurred (e.g., financing for the house is obtained). Under these facts, B is treated as constructing property under a long-term contract (as defined in section 460(f)) with respect to any house that is under construction as of the end of a taxable year and for which a contract for sale of such house is in effect.

Thus, if B meets the requirements of section 460(e)(1) of the Code, section 460 (except for the interest capitalization requirements of section 460(c)(3)) does not apply to B's long-term contracts. Similarly, section 263A does not apply to the construction of such homes. (See section 263A(c)(4) of the Code.) However, as discussed in Notice 87-61, under the alternative minimum tax ("AMT"), B is required to account for all long-term contracts using the percentage of completion method even though the contracts are exempted under section 460(e)(1) from the percentage of completion method for regular tax purposes. Under this Notice 88-66, B may use the simplified cost-to-cost method of applying the percentage of completion method for AMT purposes, regardless of B's method of accounting for long-term contracts for regular tax purposes.

In contrast, assume that B does not meet the requirements of section 460(e)(1) (e.g., B's average annual gross receipts under section 460(e)(1)(B) exceed $10,000,000). Thus, the requirements of section 460 (including, for example, the use of the look-back method and the percentage of completion method) would apply to B's long-term contracts. As section IX of Notice 87-61 provides, B is allowed to use the simplified cost-to-cost method of applying the percentage of completion method for AMT purposes only if B uses the simplified cost-to-cost method for regular tax purposes. Finally, assume that B has houses under construction as of the end of a taxable year and that no contracts with customers have been entered into for the sale of such houses. With respect to these houses, B is not producing property under a long-term contract because no such contracts exist. Instead, B is constructing property subject to section 263A which, in contrast to section 460(e)(1), does not contain any exceptions for construction contracts under its provisions.

Application of the Rule of Section 382(l)(3)(A)(iv) to Convertible Stock

Notice 88-67

The Internal Revenue Service intends to amend the temporary Income Tax Regulations under section 382 of the Internal Revenue Code to, among other things, (i) clarify that certain convertible stock constitutes an "interest that is similar to an option" within the meaning of section 1.382-2T(h)(4)(v)(A), (ii) provide that such an instrument does not constitute "stock" for the purpose of testing whether an ownership change has occurred if, at the time the instrument is issued, it would be described in section 1504(a)(4) by disregarding subparagraph (D) thereof and by ignoring the potential participation in corporate growth that the conversion feature may offer ("convertible pure preferred stock"), (iii) identify certain convertible stock that will be treated as not constituting an "interest that is similar to an option", and (iv) grant the Service the authority to issue revenue rulings providing additional exceptions under section 1.382-2T(h)(4)(x).

Except as provided in regulations, section 382(k)(6)(A) of the Code defines "stock" as stock other than stock described in section 1504(a)(4). Section 1504(a)(4) provides that the term "stock" excludes any stock that is not entitled to vote, is limited and preferred as to dividends and does not participate in corporate growth to any significant extent, has redemption and liquidation rights which do not exceed the issue price of such stock (except for a reasonable redemption or liquidation premium), and is not convertible into another class of stock. Thus, any convertible stock generally constitutes "stock" under section 382(k)(6)(A). But see section 1.382-2T(f)(18)(ii).

Convertible stock also may be subject to the option attribution rules of section 1.382-2T(h)(4)(i) of the temporary regulations (the "option rules"). Section 382(l)(3)(A) of the Code generally provides that the option attribution rules of section 318(a)(4) shall apply to an option or similar interest if application of that rule would result in an ownership change. Section 1.382-2T(h)(4)(v)(A) sets forth a nonexclusive list of interests that are similar to an option for purposes of section 382 (e.g., warrants, puts, convertible debt instruments, etc.). Although the term "convertible stock" is not specifically enumerated in that list, such an instrument provides the owner with a right to acquire stock of the loss corporation and, subject to the exception set forth below in the first paragraph under the heading "Other Classes of Convertible Stock", will be subject to the option rules.

Convertible Pure Preferred Stock

The Service has determined that, for purposes of section 382(k) of the Code, convertible pure preferred stock should be treated similarly to convertible debt. Accordingly, the Service will, pursuant to its regulatory authority under section 382(k)(6)(B)(ii), treat convertible stock as not constituting stock if, at the time the instrument is issued, it would be described in section 1504(a)(4) by disregarding subparagraph (D) thereof and by ignoring the potential participation in corporate growth that the conversion feature may offer. Instead, such an instrument will be treated solely as an "interest that is similar to an option." Such an instrument nevertheless shall continue to be treated as "stock" for purposes of section 382(e) (which does not exclude stock described in section 1504(a)(4)).

Other Classes of Convertible Stock

The Service also plans to clarify the treatment of classes of convertible stock other than convertible pure preferred stock (e.g., convertible preferred stock that has voting rights) for the purpose of analyzing whether there is an ownership change on any testing date. Any class of convertible stock not described in the preceding paragraph will be treated solely as stock and will not be treated as an option or an interest similar to an option under section 1.382-2T(h)(4)(v) of the temporary regulations as long as the terms of the conversion feature do not permit or require the tender of any consideration other than the stock being converted. This clarification that the option rules will not be applied to such convertible stock will not prevent the recharacterization of such an ownership interest as constituting "not stock" under section 1.382-2T(f)(18)(ii). For purposes of that analysis, the conversion feature shall be taken into account in determining the likely participation of the instrument in future corporate growth.

The Service is studying the appropriate treatment under section 382 of interests that are both stock and subject to the option rules (e.g., convertible stock, other than convertible pure preferred, that permits or requires the tender of any consideration other than the stock being converted). The Service invites taxpayers to comment on the rules described in this notice. In particular, comments are invited regarding any additional rules that may be appropriate in applying the option rules to convertible stock.

The amendments to the temporary regulations described in this notice (including the rules described below under the heading "Effective Date") will not affect the rules that may apply under section 1.382-2T(f)(18)(ii) of the temporary regulations to recharacterize "stock" as "not stock".

Effective Date

The amendments to the temporary regulations generally will apply with respect to stock issued on or after July 20, 1988. Unless the election described below is timely filed to make the amendments retroactive, convertible stock (including convertible pure preferred stock) issued prior to July 20, 1988 will be treated as "stock" and not as an "interest that is similar to an option" for purposes of section 382 of the Code. But see section 1.382-2T(f)(18)(ii).

Loss corporations may elect to treat the amendments to be made to the temporary regulations described in this notice as effective on and after May 6, 1986. The election, if made, is effective (i) for all classes of convertible stock of the loss corporation outstanding at any time on or after May 6, 1986, and, (ii) solely for the purpose of determining if there is an ownership change with respect to the loss corporation making the election, for all classes of convertible stock outstanding at any time on or after May 6, 1986, of a corporation owning, directly or indirectly, stock of the loss corporation.

The election must be made by filing a statement of election on or before the later of (i) October 18, 1988, or (ii) the due date (including extensions) of the first information statement required by section 1.382-2T(a)(2)(ii) of the temporary regulations following June 20, 1988. The statement must be filed with the District Director with whom the loss corporation would file its Federal income tax return. The statement may be filed on a plain sheet of paper at the top of which is typed "STATEMENT OF ELECTION FILED UNDER NOTICE 88-67" and must (i) contain the taxpayer's name, address, and employer identification number and (ii) be signed by a person authorized to sign the income tax return of the loss corporation.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

The collection of information in this notice has been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget in accordance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 and has been approved by OMB (Control Number 1545-0123).

Guidance on Application of Section 457 to Vacation Leave, Sick Leave, and Other Benefit Plans

Notice 88-68[1]

Section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986, provides that amounts of compensation deferred under certain "eligible deferred compensation plans" maintained by state and local governments and tax-exempt employers are only included in a participant's or beneficiary's gross income in the taxable year in which the compensation is paid or otherwise made available to that individual. In general, if the plan is not an "eligible deferred compensation plan", the deferred amounts are included in the individual's gross income in the first taxable year of the individual for which there is no substantial risk of forfeiture.

Question and answer 26 in Notice 87-13, published in 1987-1 C.B. 432, clarifies that section 457 applies to both elective and nonelective deferred compensation plans of state and local governments and tax-exempt employers. In Notice 88-8, page 477, this Bulletin, the Service announced that section 457 will not apply to nonelective deferred compensation plans maintained by state and local governments and tax-exempt organizations for taxable years of employees beginning before January 1, 1988. In addition, Notice 88-8 provides that section 457 will not apply to bona fide vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, severance pay, disability pay, and death benefit plans maintained by state and local governments and tax-exempt organizations for taxable years of employees beginning before the issuance of guidance describing the extent to which these forms of compensation are subject to section 457. Finally, this Notice states that the Service is studying a number of issues under section 457, including the extent to which these plans are subject to section 457, and that further guidance will be provided on these issues.

Based on further study, the Service has determined that regulations under section 457 will provide that bona fide vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, severance pay, disability pay, and death benefit plans are not deferred compensation plans subject to section 457. This rule will apply without regard to whether such a plan is elective or nonelective in nature.

No inference should be drawn from this notice as to any issue not specifically addressed herein. A number of issues remain with respect to section 457, including when a vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, or severance pay plan is bona fide, and not a mere device to provide deferred compensation. The Service continues to study these other issues and welcomes all comments and suggestions. Further guidance will be provided on these issues.

This document serves as an "administrative pronouncement" as that term is described in section 1.6661-3(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations and may be relied upon to the same extent as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

SECTION 20. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to update Rev. Proc. 87-1, 1987-1 C.B. 503, which provides procedures for issuing rulings, determination letters and information letters, and for entering into closing agreements on specific issues involving the interpretation or application of the federal tax laws. It also tell taxpayers and their representatives where to send requests for rulings, determination letters and information letters. It gives the steps to follow so that requests may be handled more efficiently. Changes to this revenue procedure will be incorporated annually in a new revenue procedure published as the first revenue procedure of the year.

SEC. 2. SCOPE

.01 The Chief Counsel through the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) provides basic principles and rules for the uniform interpretation and application of the federal tax laws under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International).

.02 This revenue procedure applies only to ruling requests, information letters, and closing agreements under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) that do not relate to international transactions, and to requests for determination letters under the jurisdiction of field offices that relate to Code sections under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) that do not relate to international transactions. The procedures for obtaining rulings, closing agreements, and information letters on specific tax issues involving the interpretation or application of the federal tax laws and income tax treaties relating to international transactions are contained in Rev. Proc. 87-4, 1987-1 C.B. 529.

.03 The procedures for obtaining rulings, etc., that apply specifically to federal firearms, alcohol and tobacco taxes under subtitle E of the Internal Revenue Code are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The procedures for obtaining rulings, determination letters, etc., on employee plans and exempt organizations are under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations). See Rev. Proc. 83-36, 1983-1 C.B. 763, as modified by Rev. Proc. 87-40 1987-2 C.B. 514. However, the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) include section 521 of the Code, on exemption of farmer's cooperatives from tax; section 526, on shipowners' protection and indemnity associations; section 527(a), (b), (c), (d), (e), and (g), on political organizations, and section 528 on certain homeowners associations.

SEC. 3. CHANGES

.01 References throughout the revenue procedure to the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical) are changed to the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) to reflect the combination of the Technical and International organizations under one Associate Chief Counsel.

.02 Section 4.04 is amended to refer to the Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division in addition to the Corporation Tax Division and the Individual Tax Division.

.03 Section 5.02 is amended to provide that the National Office will consider prospective estate tax rulings on issues involving sections 2041 and 2056 of the Code during a proposed 1-year test period. See Rev. Proc. 87-58, 1987-2 C.B. 764.

.04 Section 5.07 is amended to reflect the modifications made to that section by Rev. Proc. 87-7, 1987-1 C.B. 542.

.05 Section 8.05 is amended to provide that an extension of the 21-day period for post-conference submissions must be approved by the Associate Director or Deputy Associate Director having jurisdiction over the Branch to which the case is assigned.

.06 Section 8.05 is amended by the addition of Rev. Proc. 87-28, 1987-1 C.B. 770 (guidelines for a request for a ruling under section 162(k)) to the list of revenue procedures providing specific guidelines for requesting rulings under certain Code sections.

.07 Section 8.05 is amended by the addition of Rev. Proc. 87-32, 1987-2 C.B. 396 (guidelines for requesting to adopt, retain or change an accounting period for partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations) to the list of revenue procedures providing specific guidelines for requesting rulings under certain Code sections. Rev. Proc. 87-32 modifies and supersedes Rev. Proc 83-25, 1983-1 C.B. 689 as modified.

.08 Section 8.12 is amended to provide a new mailing address for requests for rulings and a new room number for hand delivered requests.

.09 Section 8.18 is amended by redesignating such section 8.19 and by inserting a new section 8.18 before such section that describes the primary responsibility of the Director, Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division.

SEC. 4. GENERAL PRACTICE AND DEFINITIONS

.01 The Service answers inquiries of individuals and organizations, when appropriate in the interest of sound tax administration, about their status for tax purposes and the tax effects of their acts or transactions. The National Office issues rulings in such matters.

.02 District Directors of the Internal Revenue Service apply the statutes and tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, and other precedents published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin in determining tax liability, collecting taxes, and issuing information letters and determination letters in answer to taxpayers' inquiries or requests. For purposes of this revenue procedure, any reference to District Director or District Office includes their respective offices or, when appropriate, the Director of an Internal Revenue Service Center.

.03 The word "taxpayer" includes all persons subject to any provision of the Internal Revenue Code and, when appropriate, their representatives and issuers of section 103 obligations. Any reference to National Office means only the Office of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International).

.04 A "ruling" is a written statement issued to a taxpayer by the National Office that interprets and applies the tax laws to that taxpayer's specific set of facts. Rulings are issued only by the National Office, under the general supervision of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International). Issuing rulings has been largely delegated to the Directors of the Corporation Tax Division, the Individual Tax Division and the Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division.

.05 A "determination letter" is a written statement issued by a District Director in response to a written inquiry by a taxpayer that applies the principles and precedents previously announced by the National Office to a specific set of facts. A determination letter is issued only when a determination can be made on the basis of clearly established rules in the statute or regulations, or by a position in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin that specifically answers the question presented. A determination letter will not be issued if a determination cannot be made, for example, when the question presents a novel issue, or if the matter is excluded from the jurisdiction of a District Director under section 6 of this revenue procedure.

.06 An "information letter" is a statement issued either by the National Office or by a District Director that calls attention to a well-established interpretation or principle of tax law, without applying it to a specific set of facts. It may be issued if the request indicates that the taxpayer is seeking general information. If the request does not meet the requirement of section 8 of this revenue procedure, but the Service thinks that the general information may help the individual or organization, it may issue an information letter.

.07 A "revenue ruling" is an interpretation by the Service that has been published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. It is the conclusion of the Service on how the law is applied to an entire set of facts. Revenue rulings are issued only by the National Office and are published for the information and guidance of taxpayers. Internal Revenue Service officials, and other interested parties.

Since each revenue ruling represents the conclusion of the Service as to the application of the law to the entire statement of facts involved, taxpayers, Service personnel, and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusion in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same. They should consider the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, and revenue rulings. See Rev. Proc. 86-15, 1986-1 C.B. 544.

.08 A "closing agreement" is an agreement between the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the Commissioner's delegate and a taxpayer on a specific issue or issues or liability that is entered into under the authority in section 7121 of the Code. A closing agreement prepared in an office under the responsibility of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) is based on a ruling that has been signed by the Commissioner, or the Commissioner's delegate, that says that a closing agreement will be entered into on the basis of the holding of the ruling letter. Closing agreements are final, unless fraud, malfeasance, or misrepresentation of a material fact can be shown. Closing agreements may be entered into when it is advantageous to have the matter permanently and conclusively closed, or when a taxpayer can show good and sufficient reasons for an agreement and the government will sustain no disadvantage by its consummation. In appropriate cases, taxpayers may be asked to enter into a closing agreement as a condition to the issuing of a ruling. If, in a single case, closing agreements are requested for each of a number of taxpayers, such agreements are entered into only if the number of taxpayers is 25 or less.

However, if the issue and holding are identical for all taxpayers and they number more than 25, a "mass closing agreement" will be entered into with the taxpayer who is authorized by the others to represent the entire group.

SEC. 5. RULINGS ISSUED BY THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 In income and gift tax matters, the National Office issues rulings on prospective transactions and on completed transactions that occurred before the return is filed for the year in which such transactions are consummated. However, see Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, which concerns applications for extensions of the time for making an election or application for relief under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations. If a request for an extension of time under section 1.9100-1 is submitted after the return is filed but before the return is examined, the procedures under Rev. Proc. 88-1 are applicable. If an examination of the return has begun, or is being considered by an Appeals Office, the procedures of Rev. Proc. 88-2, page 571, this Bulletin, are applicable. The National Office issues rulings on the exempt status of organizations under section 521. See Rev. Proc. 84-46, 1984-1 C.B. 541. Specific instructions and guidelines relating to corporate distributions and the determination of the earnings and profits of corporate taxpayers are contained in Rev. Proc. 75-17, 1975-1 C.B. 677. In such matters only the provisions of sections 8.02, 8.10, 8.11, 8.14, 8.17, and 10 of this revenue procedure (Rev. Proc. 88-1) are applicable. Specific instructions and guidelines relating to a change in method of accounting for federal income tax purposes are contained in Rev. Proc. 84-74, 1984-2 C.B. 736. In such matters only the provisions of sections 7.02, 8.02, 8.05, 8.08, 8.10, 8.11, 8.15, 8.17, 8.18 and 8.21, 10, 14, 15 and 16 of this revenue procedure (Rev. Proc. 88-1) are applicable. In matters relating to accounting period changes only the provisions of sections 7.02, 8.02, 8.05, 8.08, 8.10, 8.11, 8.15, 8.17, 8.18, and 8.21, 10, 14, 15, and 16 of this revenue procedure (Rev. Proc. 88-1) are applicable. The National Office ordinarily does not issue rulings if, at the time the ruling is requested, the identical issue is involved in the taxpayer's return for an earlier period, and (1) that issue is being examined by a District Director or is being considered by an Appeals Office, or (2) that issue has been examined by a District Director or considered by an Appeals Office and the statutory period of limitation on either assessment or for filing a claim for refund or credit of tax has not expired, or a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by a District Director or by an Appeals Office. If a return dealing with an issue for a particular year is filed while a request for ruling on that issue is pending, the National Office will issue the ruling unless it is notified by the taxpayer that an examination of that issue or the identical issue on an earlier year's return has been started by a District Director. See Section 8.06. However, even if an examination has begun, the National Office ordinarily will issue the ruling if the District Director agrees, by memorandum, to permit the ruling to be issued. The National Office does not issue rulings on the replacement of involuntarily converted property, whether or not replacement has been made, if the taxpayer has already filed a return for the tax year in which the property was converted. See section 6.06 for the District Director's authority to issue determination letters in this connection. In addition, the National Office generally does not issue rulings on the classification of an organization if a return has been filed for the organization for an earlier period. However, the National Office will consider ruling requests concerning the classification of an existing organization as a partnership. See Rev. Proc. 86-12, 1986-1 C.B. 534.

.02 In estate tax matters, the National Office issues rulings with respect to transactions affecting the estate tax of a decedent before the estate tax return is filed. If the estate tax return is due to be filed before the ruling is issued, the taxpayer should secure an extension of time for filing the return for the maximum period of six months, and notify the National Office Branch considering the request for ruling that an extension has been secured. If the return is filed before the ruling is issued, the taxpayer must disclose on the return that a ruling has been requested, attach a copy of the pending ruling request to the return, and notify the National Office that the return has been filed. The National Office will make every effort to issue the ruling within three months of the day on which the return was filed. If the ruling cannot be issued within that three month period, the National Office will notify the District Director having jurisdiction of the return who may, by memorandum to the National Office, grant an additional period for the issuance of the ruling. The National Office generally will not rule on matters relating to the application of the estate tax to property or the estate of a living person. However, the National Office will consider prospective estate tax rulings on issues involving sections 2041 and 2056 of the Code. See Rev. Proc. 87-58, 1987-2 C.B. 764.

1. In matters involving additional tax under section 2032A(c), the National Office issues rulings on prospective transactions and on completed transactions that occurred before the return is filed for the year in which such transactions are consummated.

.03 In generation-skipping transfer tax matters, the National Office issues rulings on transactions that affect the generation-skipping transfer tax before the return is filed. In the case of a generation-skipping trust, or trust equivalent, rulings are not issued until after the trust or trust equivalent, has been established. Rulings may be issued on a generation-skipping transfer tax matter before a "direct skip" transfer takes place. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the National Office will issue rulings regarding the application of the generation-skipping transfer tax effective date rules (section 1433 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514) to wills, trusts and trust equivalents in existence on October 22, 1986, and to generation-skipping transfers taking place on or before October 22, 1986.

.04 In employment and excise tax matters, the National Office issues rulings on prospective transactions and on completed transactions either before or after the return is filed for those transactions. In employment tax matters, generally the taxpayer is the employer. However, if the worker asks for the ruling, both the worker and the employer are considered to be the taxpayer and both are entitled to the ruling. The National Office usually will not issue rulings if, at the time the ruling is requested, the identical issue is involved in the taxpayer's return for an earlier period and (1) that issue is under examination by a District Director or under consideration by an Appeals Office, or (2) that issue has been examined by a District Director or considered by an Appeals Office and the statutory period of limitation on either assessment or for filing a claim for refund or credit of tax has not expired, or a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by a District Director or by an Appeals Office. However, if a District Director began an examination of the issue involved in the ruling request, the National Office usually will issue the ruling if the District Director agrees, by memorandum, to permit the ruling to be issued.

.05 In administrative provisions matters, the National Office issues rulings on issues arising under the Internal Revenue Code, and related statutes, and the regulations thereunder, that relate primarily to the time, place, manner, and procedures, for reporting and paying taxes; assessing and collecting taxes (including interest and penalties); abating, crediting, or refunding overassessments or overpayments of tax; and filing information returns. Rulings ordinarily are not issued, if, at the time the ruling is requested, the identical issue is involved in the taxpayer's return for an earlier period and (1) that issue is being considered by a District Director or an Appeals Office, or (2) that issue has been examined by a District Director or considered by an Appeals Office and the statutory period of limitation on either assessment or for filing a claim for refund, or credit of tax has not expired, or a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by a District Director or Appeals Office. If a return involving an issue for a particular year is filed while a request for a ruling on that issue is pending, the National Office will issue the ruling unless an examination of that issue or an examination of the identical issue on an earlier year's return has been started by a District Director. But, even if consideration has begun, the National Office ordinarily will issue the ruling if the District Director agrees, by memorandum, to permit the ruling to be issued.

.06 The National Office does not issue rulings to business, trade, or industrial associations or to similar groups concerning the application of the tax laws to members of the group. It may, however, issue rulings to these groups or associations on their own tax status or liability if the request meets the requirements of this section. Furthermore, such groups or associations may submit suggestions of generic issues that would be appropriately addressed in revenue rulings.

.07 Pending the adoption of regulations (either temporary or final) that interpret the provisions of any act, the issuing of rulings will be considered under the following conditions.

1. If the ruling request presents an issue on which the answer seems clear by applying the statute to the facts, a ruling will be issued under the usual procedures.

2. If the ruling request presents an issue on which the answer seems reasonably certain but not entirely free from doubt, a ruling will be issued. However, section 2.01 of Rev. Proc. 87-7, 1987-1 C.B. 542 modifies this rule by excepting from its conditions a list of Code sections enacted or amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Section 2.02 of Rev. Proc. 87-7 provides that for Code sections listed in section 2.01 of that revenue procedure, the appropriate Branch in the office of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) will entertain all ruling requests and do its best to issue a ruling even if the answer does not seem reasonably certain.

However, if the ruling request presents an issue that cannot be readily resolved before regulations are issued, a ruling will not be issued. However, section 2.03 of Rev. Proc. 87-7 provides that where the Service has closed a regulations project or does not intend to open a regulations project, the appropriate Branch will entertain all ruling requests unless the issue is covered by section 7 of Rev. Proc. 88-1 or by Rev. Proc. 88-3, page 579, this Bulletin.

SEC. 6. DETERMINATION LETTERS ISSUED BY DISTRICT DIRECTOR

.01 In income and gift tax matters. District Directors issue determination letters in response to taxpayers' written requests on completed transactions that affect returns over which they have examination jurisdiction. This applies only if the question presented is specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by a position stated in a ruling, opinion or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. A determination letter usually is not issued for a question concerning a return to be filed by the taxpayer if the same question is involved in a return already filed. District Directors do not issue determination letters on the tax consequences of prospective or proposed transactions, except as provided in section 6.06.

.02 In estate tax matters. District Directors issue determination letters in response to written requests affecting the estate tax returns over which they have examination jurisdiction, but only if the question presented is specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by a position stated in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. District Directors do not issue determination letters on matters concerning the application of the estate tax to property or the estate of a living person.

.03 In generation-skipping transfer tax matters, District Directors issue determination letters in response to written requests affecting the generation-skipping transfer tax returns over which they have examination jurisdiction, but only if the questions presented are speficially answered by statute or regulation, or by a position stated in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. District Directors do not issue determination letters on matters concerning the application of the generation-skipping transfer tax before the distribution or termination takes place.

.04 In employment and excise tax matters, District Directors issue determination letters on completed transactions in response to written requests from taxpayers over which they have examination jurisdiction, but only if the question presented specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by a position stated in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

.05 Notwithstanding the provisions of section 6.01, 6.02, 6.03, and 6.04, a District Director will not issue a determination letter in response to a request that presents a question specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by a position stated in rulings, etc., published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin, if (1) if appears that the taxpayer has directed a similar inquiry to the National Office, (2) the same issue involving the same taxpayer is pending in a case before an Appeals Office, (3) the determination letter is requested by an industry, trade association, or similar group, or (4) the request involves, an industry-wide problem. Under no circumstances will a District Director issue a determination letter unless it is clearly shown that the request concerns a return that has been filed or is required to be filed over which the District Director has or will have examination jurisdiction. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 6.04, a District Director will not issue a determination letter on an employment tax question if the specific question for the same taxpayer has been or is being considered by the Central office of the Social Security Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board. Nor will District Directors issue determination letters for determination of a constructive sales price under section 4216(b) or 4218(c) of the Code. The National Office, however, will issue rulings in this area. See section 7.04.

.06 District Directors issue determination letters on the replacement of involuntarily converted property under section 1033 even though the replacement has not been made, if the taxpayer has filed an income tax return for the year in which the property was involuntarily converted.

.07 A request received by a District Director on a question concerning an income, estate, or gift tax return already filed will be, in general, considered in connection with the examination of the return. If a response is made to such a request before the return is examined, it will be considered a tentative finding in any later examination of that return.

SEC. 7. DISCRETIONARY AUTHORITY TO ISSUE RULINGS AND DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 The Service ordinarily will not issue rulings or determination letters in certain areas because of the factual nature of the problem involved, or for other reasons. Rev. Proc. 88-3, page , this Bulletin, provides a list of these areas. This list is not all inclusive, since the Service may decline to issue a ruling or a determination letter on other grounds, whenever warranted by the facts or circumstances of a particular case. The National Office and District Directors may, when it is considered appropriate and in the best interest of the Service, issue information letters calling attention to well-established principles of tax law.

.02 A ruling or a determination letter is not issued on alternative plans of proposed transactions or on hypothetical situations.

.03 The National Office ordinarily will not issue rulings on only part of an integrated transaction.

.04 The National Office will issue rulings in all cases on the determination of a constructive sales price under section 4216(b) or 4218(c) and in all other cases on prospective or future transactions if the law or regulations require a determination of the effect of a proposed transaction for tax purposes.

SEC. 8. INSTRUCTIONS TO TAXPAYER

.01 The taxpayer should submit a request for a ruling or a determination letter in duplicate if (1) more than one issue is presented in the request, or (2) a closing agreement is requested on the issue presented. It is not necessary to submit requests in duplicate under other circumstances except as set forth in section 8.09.

.02 A request for a ruling or determination letter and any factual information or change in the ruling request submitted at a later time must be accompanied by a declaration in the following form: "Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this request, including accompanying documents, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, the facts presented in support of the requested ruling or determination letter are true, correct, and complete." The declaration may not be made by the taxpayer's representative. It must be signed by the person or persons on whose behalf the request is made. The person who must sign for a corporate taxpayer must be an officer of the corporate taxpayer who has personal knowledge of the facts. The officer must be one whose duties are not limited to obtaining a ruling or determination letter from the Service. Furthermore, if the corporate taxpayer is a member of an affiliated group filing consolidated returns, a penalties of perjury statement must also be submitted by the common parent of the group. The person signing for a trust or partnership must be a trustee or partner who has personal knowledge of the facts.

.03 If more than one issue is presented in a request for a ruling, the Service generally will issue a single ruling letter. However, the taxpayer may request a separate ruling letter on any of the issues. Unless the Service determines that it is not feasible or not in the best interest of the Service to comply with such a request, it will issue separate ruling letters.

.04 When multiple issues are involved in a single factual situation and separate letters requesting rulings are submitted, a statement to this effect must be included in each ruling letter request. The Service in issuing each ruling will state that separate rulings have been issued or requests for rulings are pending.

.05 Each request for a ruling or a determination letter must contain a complete statement of all of the facts relating to the transaction. Such facts include: names, addresses, telephone numbers, and taxpayer identification numbers of all interested parties; the location of the District Office that has or will have examination jurisdiction over the return, not the Service Center where the return is filed; a full and precise statement of the business reasons for the transaction, and a carefully detailed description of the transaction. (The term "all interested parties" does not mean that a list is required of all shareholders of a widely-held corporation requesting a ruling relating to a reorganization, or a list of employees where a larger number may be involved.) If the request deals with only one step of a larger integrated transaction, the facts, circumstances, etc. relating to the entire transaction must be submitted. However, see section 7.03 of this revenue procedure (Rev. Proc. 88-1). In addition, true copies of all contracts, wills, deeds, agreements, instruments, and other documents in the transaction must be submitted with the request. Original documents, such as contracts, wills, etc., should not be submitted because they become part of the Service's file and will not be returned. All material facts in documents must be included in the taxpayer's letter requesting a ruling or in supplemental letters, and not merely incorporated by reference, and must be accompanied by an analysis of their bearing on the issue or issues, specifying the provisions that apply. If the request concerns a corporate distribution, reorganization, or similar transaction, the corporate balance sheet and profit and loss statement should be submitted. If the request relates to a prospective transaction, the most recent balance sheet and profit and loss statement should be submitted.

Material facts furnished to the Service by telephone or orally at a conference must be promptly confirmed by letter to the Service with a declaration in the form described in section 8.02. This confirmation must be furnished within 21 calendar days to be considered part of the request. An extension of the 21-day period will be granted only if justified in writing by the taxpayer and approved by the Associate Director or Deputy Associate Director having jurisdiction over the Branch to which the case is assigned. A request for extension should be submitted before the end of the 21-day period. If unusual circumstances close to the end of the 21-day period make a written request impractical, within the 21-day period the National office should be told of the problem and that the written request for extension will be coming soon. Such a request must be sent promptly. The taxpayer or taxpayer's representative will be told promptly and later in writing of the approval or denial of the requested extension. There is no right of appeal to a denial of an extension request. Because the purpose of these procedures is to speed up the ruling process, the taxpayer is encouraged to submit the required relevant material promptly. Therefore, requests for extension should be justified by compelling facts and circumstances. If the Service is not made aware, as provided above, of problems in meeting the 21-day period, or if the request is not sent promptly after the National Office is notified of problems in meeting the 21-day period, the Service will process the case on the assumption that no further submission will be received.

Specific guidelines for requesting rulings under certain Code sections follows: Rev. Proc. 84-48, 1984-1 C.B. 547, as amplified by Rev. Proc. 84-49, 1984-1 C.B. 548, and Rev. Proc. 84-50, 1984-1 C.B. 550, (guidelines for submitting request for rulings under sections 103 and 7478); Rev. Proc. 68-11, 1968-1 C.B. 761 (guidelines for a ruling request under section 117); Rev. Proc. 81-68, 1981-2 C.B. 723 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 332, 334(b)(1) or 334(b)(2)); Rev. Proc. 86-16, 1986-1 C.B. 546 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under sections 331 and 337); Rev. A ruling request that involves a question of whether a rate order, proposed or issued by a regulatory agency, will meet the normalization requirements of sections 46(f), 167(1), and 168(f)(2)(pre-Tax Reform Act of 1986, section 163(e)(3)) of the Code, ordinarily will not be considered unless the taxpayer states in the request for ruling whether:

(1) the regulatory authority responsible for establishing or approving the taxpayer's rates has reviewed the request and believes that the request is adequate and complete, and

(2) the taxpayer will permit the regulatory authority to participate in any National Office conference concerning the request.

.06 The request must contain a statement of whether, to the best of the knowledge of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative(s), if any, the identical issue is in a prior return of the taxpayer (or in a return for any year of a related taxpayer within the meaning of section 267 of the Code, or of a member of an affiliated group of which the taxpayer is also a member within the meaning of section 1504). If so, the statement must specify whether the issue (1) is being examined by a District Director, (2) has been examined and the statutory period of limitation on either assessment or for filing a claim for refund or credit of tax has not expired, or a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by a District Director, (3) is being considered by an Appeals Office in connection with the taxpayer's return for an earlier period, or has been considered by an Appeals Office and the statutory period of limitation on either assessment or for filing a claim for refund or credit of tax has not expired, or a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by an Appeals Office, or (4) is pending in litigation in a case involving the taxpayer or a related taxpayer. The request must also contain a statement whether, to the best of the knowledge of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative(s), if any, (i) the identical or similar issue has been submitted to the Service, by the taxpayer or its predecessor, but withdrawn before a ruling was issued, or (ii) ruled on by the Service to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer's predecessor. If so, the statement must specify the date of submission, withdrawal, or ruling and other details of the Service's consideration of the issue. If, after the request is filed but before a ruling is issued, the taxpayer knows that an examination of the issue by a District Director has been started, the taxpayer must notify the National Office of such action. If a return is filed before a ruling is received from the National Office concerning the issue, a copy of the request must be attached to the return. This alerts the District Office and avoids premature District action on the issue.

.07 As an alternative procedure (known as the "two-part" ruling request procedure) for the issuance of rulings on prospective transactions, the taxpayer may submit a summary of the facts considered to be controlling the issue, in addition to the complete statement required for ruling requests by section 8.05. If the National Office agrees with the summary, the National office will use it as the basis for the ruling. To use this procedure, the taxpayer should submit the following with the request for a ruling:

1. A complete statement of facts about the transaction, together with related documents, as required by section 8.05, and

2. A summary statement of the facts believed to be controlling in reaching the requested conclusion. When the taxpayer's statement of controlling facts is accepted, the Service will base its ruling on these facts and only this statement will ordinarily be incorporated in the ruling letter. It is emphasized, however, that:

(a) The taxpayer may elect this procedure for a "two-part" ruling request. It is not to be considered a required substitute for the regular procedures provided by this revenue procedure.

(b) The taxpayer's rights and responsibilities are the same under the "two-part" ruling request procedure as those provided in this revenue procedure.

(c) The Service reserves the right to rule on the basis of a more complete statement of facts it considers controlling and to seek more information in developing facts and restating them; and

(d) The "two-part" ruling request procedure will not apply, if it is inconsistent with other procedures, such as those dealing with request for permission to change accounting methods or periods; applications for recognition of exempt status undersection 521 of the Code; or rulings on employment tax status.

.08 If the taxpayer advocates a particular conclusion, an explanation of the grounds for the assertion must be furnished, together with a statement of relevant authorities in support of the taxpayer's views. Even though the taxpayer is urging no particular tax treatment of a proposed or prospective transaction, the taxpayer's views on the tax results of the proposed action and a statement of relevant authorities to support those views must be furnished. In addition, the taxpayer is encouraged to inform the Service, and discuss the implications of any legislation, tax treaties, court decisions, regulations, revenue rulings or revenue procedures that the taxpayer determines to be contrary to the position advanced. If the taxpayer determines that there are no contrary authorities, a statement to this effect would be helpful in the ruling request. Identification and discussion of contrary authorities will generally enable Service personnel to arrive more quickly at a full understanding of the issue and the relevant authorities. There is a further advantage to the taxpayer. When Service personnel receive the request, they will have before them the taxpayer's thinking on the effect and applicability of contrary authorities. Such information should, therefore, make research easier and lead to earlier action by the Service. Conversely, failure to disclose and distinguish significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional memoranda that will delay action on the ruling request.

.09 To assist the Service in making the deletions required by section 6110(c) of the Code from the text of rulings and determination letters, to be made open to public inspection under section 6110(a), a deletions statement must accompany each request. The statement must either state that no information other than names, addresses, and identifying numbers need be deleted or, if more information is proposed to be deleted, the statement must indicate the deletions proposed by the person requesting the ruling or determination letter. If the latter alternative is chosen, the statement must be made in a separate document, and it must be accompanied by a copy of the request for a ruling or determination letter and supporting documents, on which must be shown, by the use of brackets, the material that the person making the request believes should be deleted pursuant to section 6110(c). The statement of proposed deletions must indicate that statutory basis, under section 6110(c), for each proposed deletion. The statement of proposed deletions must not appear or be referred to anywhere in the request for a ruling or determination letter. If the person making the request decides to ask for additional deletions before the ruling or determination letter is issued, additional statements may be submitted. The procedures in this paragraph also apply to additional information that is submitted after the initial request.

.10 A request by or for a taxpayer must be signed by the taxpayer or the taxpayer's authorized representative. If the request is signed by a representative, or if the representative is to appear before the Service in connection with the request, the representative must be:

1. an attorney who is a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of any state, possession, territory, commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently qualified as an attorney and is authorized to represent the taxpayer;

2. a certified public accountant who is qualified to practice in any state, possession, territory, commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently qualified as a certified public accountant and is authorized to represent the taxpayer;

3. a person, other than an attorney or certified public accountant who is currently enrolled to practice before the Service, and who files with the Service a written delcaration that he or she is currently enrolled (including in the declaration either the enrollment number or the expiration date of the enrollment card) and is authorized to represent the taxpayer. (See Treasury Department Circular No. 230 (31 CFR Part 10), 1985-2 C.B. 742, for the rules on who may practice before the Service; or

4. a foreign representative who has received a "Letter of Authorization" from the Director of Practice, pursuant to section 10.7(b) of Treasury Department Circular No. 230. Practitioners may make written request for a "Letter of Authorization" to: Office of Director of Practice, PM:HR:DP, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. Section 10.7(b) of Circular No. 230 authorizes the Commissioner to allow any person to represent another without enrollment for the purpose of a particular matter. Without a "Letter of Authorization," the foreign representative may not represent the taxpayer before the Service.

The requirements above do not apply to an individual representing his or her fulltime employer, or to a bona fide officer, administrator, administratrix, trustee, etc., representing a corporation, trust, estate, association, or organized group. An unenrolled preparer of a return (other than an attorney or certified public accountant referred to in (1) and (2) above) who is not a full-time employee or a bona fide officer, administrator, administratrix, trustee, etc., may not represent a taxpayer in connection with a ruling or a determination letter.

Any authorized representative, whether or not enrolled to practice must also comply with the conference and practice requirements of the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR 601). Form 2848, Power of Attorney, and Form 2848-D, Authorization and Declaration, may be used with regard to rulings, closing agreements, and determination letters requested under this revenue procedure.

.11 If a taxpayer has more than one representative, it is sufficient to send a copy of the ruling to any one of them. Copies of a ruling will be sent to no more than two representatives, provided that they are located at different mailing addresses. If a taxpayer does not designate which representative is to receive a copy of the ruling, a copy of the ruling will be sent to the first representative named on the latest power of attorney. If the original of the ruling is to be sent to a representative, the power of attorney should contain a statement to that effect and designate the mailing address of the representative.

.12 A request for a ruling letter by the National Office should be sent to the Internal Revenue Service, Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International), Attention CC:IND:D:C, P.O. Box 7604, Ben Franklin Station, Washington, D.C. 20044. Requests may be hand delivered to Room, 6561, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20224. A request for a determination letter should be sent to the District Director of Internal Revenue whose office has or will have examination jurisdiction over the taxpayer's return.

.13 If a request for a ruling or determination letter does not comply with all the provisions of this revenue procedure, the request will be acknowledged, and the requirements that have not been met will be pointed out. If a request for a ruling lacks essential information, the taxpayer will be told that if the information is not received within 30 calendar days, the request will be closed. If the information is received after the request is closed, it will be reopened and treated as a new request as of the date the essential information is received. A request for a ruling letter sent to the District Director that does not comply with the provisions of this revenue procedure will be returned by the District Director for corrections before it is sent directly to the National office.

.14 A taxpayer who wants to have a conference on the issue or issues involved should indicate this in writing when, or soon after, filing the request.

.15 The Service processes requests for ruling and determination letters in regular order and as expeditiously as possible. Consideration of a request for processing ahead of its regular order, or by a specified time, delays the processing of other matters. Requests for processing ahead of the regular order must be made in writing, preferably in a separate letter sent with, or soon after, the request. If the request is not made in a separate letter, then the letter in which the request is made should say, at the top of the first page: "Expeditious Handling Is Requested. See page __ of this letter." The request should give a compelling need for such treatment. The Service cannot give assurance that any letter will be processed by the time requested. For example, the scheduling of a closing date for a transaction or a meeting of the board of directors or shareholders of a corporation, without regard for the time it may take to obtain a ruling or determination letter, will not be considered sufficient reason for handling a request ahead of its regular order. Nor will the possible effect of fluctuation in the market price of stocks on a transaction be considered sufficient reason for handling a request out of order. Requests by telegram will be treated in the same manner as requests by letter. Ruling and determination letters ordinarily are not issued by telegram. A request for expeditious handling will not cause the Communications and Records Unit to route the case to the Ruling Branch ahead of normal-processing; and a request for expeditious handling will not be considered until the underlying ruling request has been found to satisfy the section 6110 requirements.

.16 The Director, Individual Tax Division, has primary responsibility for providing basic principles for uniform interpretation and application of the federal tax laws in those areas involving: income taxes of subchapter S corporations (except accounting periods and methods) and noncorporate taxpayers (including individuals, partnerships, estates, and trusts); political organizations under section 527 (except subsection (f)); employment taxes and taxes on self-employment income; estate, gift, generation-skipping transfer, and certain excise taxes; and procedure and administration provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, except those that apply specifically to employee plans, exempt organizations, and actuarial determinations.

.17 The Director, Corporation Tax Division, has primary responsibility for providing basic principles of and rules for uniform interpretation and application of the federal tax laws in those areas involving: income taxes and earnings and profits of corporate taxpayers; changes in methods and periods of accounting, depreciation, depletion, valuation, and other engineering issues; the taxable status of exchanges and distributions in connection with corporate organizations, reorganizations, and liquidations; and the exemption of farmers' cooperatives (under section 521), shipowners' protection and indemnity associations (under section 526), and certain homeowners associations (under section 528).

.18 The Director, Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division, has primary responsibility for providing basic principles for uniform interpretation and application of the federal tax laws in those areas involving: income tax and other tax aspects of executive compensation and employee benefit programs (other than those within the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations)); and employment taxes and taxes on self-employment income.

.19 A taxpayer may obtain information regarding the status of a request by calling the person whose name and telephone number is shown on the acknowledgment of receipt of the request.

.20 After receiving the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the ruling or determination letter (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notation of third-party communications under section 6110(d)), the person requesting the ruling or determination letter may protest the disclosure of certain information in the ruling or determination letter. That person must within 20 calendar days send a written statement to the Internal Revenue Service office indicated on the notice of intention to disclose identifying those deletions that the Service has not made and that the person requesting the ruling or determination letter believes should have been made. That person must also submit a copy of the version of the ruling or determination letter proposed to be open to public inspection on which the person indicates, by use of brackets, the deletions proposed by the taxpayer that have not been made by the Service. Generally, the Service will not consider the deletion under this subparagraph of any material that the taxpayer did not propose to be deleted before the ruling or determination letter was issued. Within 20 days after it receives the response to the notice under section 6110(f)(1), the Service will mail to that person its final administrative conclusion regarding the deletions to be made. The taxpayer does not have the right to a conference to resolve any disagreements concerning material to be deleted from the text of the ruling. However, these matters may be taken up at any conference that is otherwise scheduled regarding the request.

.21 After receiving the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose (but not later than 60 calendar days after the notice is mailed), the person requesting a ruling or determination letter may send a request for delay of public inspection under either section 6110(g)(3) or (4). The request for delay must be sent to the Internal Revenue Service office indicated on the notice of intention to disclose. A request for delay under section 6110(g)(3) must contain the date on which it is expected that the underlying transaction will be completed. The request for delay under section 6110(g)(4) must contain a statement from which the Commissioner may determine that there are good reasons for the delay.

.22 A taxpayer who receives a ruling or determination letter before filing a return about any transaction that has been consummated and that is relevant to the return being filed should attach a copy of the ruling or determination letter to the return when it is filed.

.23 For appeal procedures with regard to adverse determination letters under section 521 of the Code and revocation or modification of exemption rulings and determination letters under section 521, see Rev. Proc. 84-46, 1984-1 C.B. 541, as amplified by Rev. Proc. 84-47, 1984-1 C.B. 545, and modified by Rev. Proc. 85-32, 1985-2 C.B. 415.

.24 In those situations when the National Office believes that the taxpayer's representative is not in compliance with Treasury Department Circular No. 230, the National Office will bring the matter to the attention of the Director of Practice.

SEC. 9. HANDLING OF RULING REQUESTS

.01 Within 21 calendar days after a ruling request is received in the Branch, Service personnel will contact the taxpayers to discuss informally the procedural and substantive issues in the ruling request.

.02 The following subject matters are included in the 21 calendar day procedure:

1. Individual Tax Division

(a) Partnerships and trusts

(b) Real estate investment trusts

(c) Credit for employment of certain new employees

(d) Estate and gift taxes

(e) Tax-exempt obligations

(f) Charitable remainder trusts

(g) Pooled income funds

best copy available

(h) Administrative provisions of the Code

(i) Excise taxes

(j) Installment sales

2. All matters within the jurisdiction of the Corporation Tax Division, except cases

(a) involving a request for change in accounting methods or periods, generally governed by Rev. Proc. 84-74, 1984-2 C.B. 736.

(b) relating to the last-in, first-out method of computing inventory.

(c) concerning insurance, issues on contracts with reserves based on segregated asset accounts.

(d) concerning insurance issues requiring actuarial computations.

3. Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division

(a) Stock options

(b) Employment and self-employment taxes (except ruling requests from individuals for employment status submitted on Forms SS-8)

(c) Rental value of parsonages

.03 Procedures to be followed regarding ruling requests are:

1. Within 21 calendar days after a ruling request has been received in the Branch having jurisdiction, a representative of the Branch will contact the taxpayer to discuss the procedural issues in the ruling requests covered by this procedure. Considering the complexity of some cases or the number of issues involved, it may not be possible for the Branch representative to discuss the substantive issues in the ruling request during this initial contact. However, when possible, as to each issue coming within the jurisdiction of the Branch, the Branch representative will tell the taxpayer:

(a) whether the Branch representative will recommend the Service rule as the taxpayer requested, rule adversely on the matter, or not rule;

(b) whether the taxpayer should submit additional information or representations to enable the Service to rule on the matter; or

(c) whether because of the nature of the transaction, or the issue presented, a tentative conclusion on the issue cannot be reached.

2. When the rulings requested involve matters within the jurisdiction of more than one Branch, a representative of the Branch that received the original ruling request will tell the taxpayer wihin the initial 21-calendar-day contact period: (1) that the rulings requested involving matters within the jurisdiction of another Branch have been referred to the other Branch for consideration, and (2) that a representative of the other Branch will contact the taxpayer within 21 calendar days after receiving the referral to informally discuss the procedural and, to the extent possible, the substantive issues if covered by this procedure.

3. If something less than a fully favorable ruling is indicated, the Branch representative will tell the taxpayer if minor modifications of the transaction or adherence to certain published positions will warrant the issuance of a favorable ruling. In addition, the Branch representative may tell the taxpayer what representations must be furnished in a document to comply with the requirements of the Service. However, the Branch representative will not suggest precise changes that would materially alter the form of the proposed transaction. If, at the conclusion of the discussion, the Branch representative determines that a meeting in the National Office would better serve the purpose of developing or exchanging information, a meeting will be offered and an early meeting date arranged. This meeting will not be the taxpayer's conference of right, as described in this revenue procedure.

4. The Service will not be bound by the informal opinion expressed by the Branch representative or any other authorized Service representative under this procedure, and such an opinion cannot be relied upon as a basis for obtaining retroactive relief under the provisions of section 7805(b) of the Code.

5. The ruling request will then be processed under present procedures.

SEC. 10. CONFERENCES IN THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 A taxpayer may request a conference only in connection with a ruling request. Normally, a conference is scheduled only when the National Office considers it to be helpful in deciding the case or when an adverse decision is indicated. If conferences are being arranged for more than one request for a ruling involving the same taxpayer, they will be scheduled so as to cause the least inconvenience to the taxpayer. If a conference has been requested, the taxpayer will be notified by telephone, if possible, of the time and place of the conference. The conference must be held within 21 calendar days after such contact has been made. Procedures for requesting an extension of the 21-day period and notifying the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative of the Service's decision are the same as those stated in section 8.05.

.02 A taxpayer is entitled, as a matter of right, to only one conference in the National Office unless one of the circumstances discussed in section 10.06 develops. This conference normally will be held at the Branch level of the appropriate Division in the office of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) and will be attended by a person who, at the time of the conference, has authority to sign the ruling letter for the Branch Chief in the case being discussed. When more than one Branch has taken an adverse position of an issue within its jurisdiction presented in a ruling request, or when the position ultimately adopted by one Branch will affect another Branch's determination, a representative from each Branch with the authority to sign for the Branch Chief will attend the conference. If more than one subject is to be discussed at the conference, the discussion will constitute a conference on each subject. In order to promote a free and open discussion of the issues, the conference usually will be held after the Branch has had an opportunity to study the case. However, at the request of the taxpayer or representative, the conference of right may be held at an earlier stage in the consideration of the case than the Service ordinarily would designate. No taxpayer has a "right" to appeal the action of a Branch to a Division Director or to any other official of the Service.

.03 In employment tax matters, only the party entitled to the ruling is entitled to a conference

.04 Since conference procedures are informal, no tape, stenographic, or other verbatim recording of a conference will be made

.05 The senior Service representative present at the conference insures that the taxpayer has full opportunity to present views on all of the issues that are in question. The Service representative explains the Service's tentative decision on the substantive issues and the reason for that decision. If the taxpayer advances prospective application under section 7805(b) of the Code, the Service representative will discuss the tentative recommendation concerning the request for relief and the reason for the tentative recommendation. No commitment will be made as to the conclusion that the Service will finally adopt.

.06 An invitation to an additional conference will be extended if, after the conference of right, an adverse holding is proposed but on a new issue or on the same issue but on different grounds from those discussed at the first conference. There is no right to another conference when a proposed holding is reversed at a higher level with a result less favorable to the taxpayer if the ground or arguments on which the reversal is based were discussed at the conference of right. The provision of this revenue procedure limiting the number of conferences to which a taxpayer is entitled will not prevent a taxpayer from attending further conferences when, in the opinion of National Office personnel, such conferences are necessary. All additional conferences of the type discussed in this paragraph are held only at the invitation of the Service.

.07 It is the responsibility of the taxpayer to furnish in writing to the National Office any additional data, lines of reasoning, precedents, etc., that are proposed by the taxpayer and discussed at the conference but that were not previously or adequately presented in writing. The taxpayer must furnish the additional information within 21 calendar days. If the additional information is not received within that time, a ruling will be issued on the basis of the information on hand or, if appropriate, no ruling will be issued. Procedures for requesting an extension of the 21-day period and notifying the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative of the Service's decision are the same as those stated in section 8.05.

SEC. 11. DISTRICT OFFICE REFERRAL OF MATTERS TO THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 Request for determination letters received by District Directors that, under the provisions of this revenue procedure, may not be acted upon by a District Office, will be forwarded to the National Office for reply. The District Office will let the taxpayer know that this action has been taken. District Directors will also refer to the National Office any request for a determination letter that in their judgment should have the attention of the National Office.

.02 If the request involves an issue on which the Service will not issue a ruling or determination letter, the request will not be forwarded to the National Office. The District Office will let the taxpayer know that the Service will not issue a ruling or a determination letter on the issue. See section 7.01 of this revenue procedure.

SEC. 12. REFERRAL OF MATTERS TO DISTRICT OFFICES

Request for rulings received by the National Office that, under section 5 of this revenue procedure, may not be acted upon by the National Office will be forwarded to the District Office that has examination jurisdiction over the taxpayer's return. The taxpayer will be notified of this action. If the request is on an issue or in an area of the type discussed in section 7.01 and it is decided not to issue a ruling or an information letter, the National Office will let the taxpayer know and the request will then be forwarded to the appropriate District Office for association with the related return.

SEC. 13. REVIEW OF DETERMINATION LETTERS

Determination letters issued under sections 6.01, 6.02, 6.03, and 6.04 are not reviewed by the National Office before they are issued. If a taxpayer believes that a determination letter of this type is in error, the taxpayer may ask the District Director to reconsider the matter. The taxpayer may also ask the District Director to request technical advice from the National Office. In such an event the procedures in Rev. Proc. 88-2 must be followed.

SEC. 14. WITHDRAWAL OF REQUESTS

A request for a ruling or determination letter may be withdrawn at any time before the signing of the letter of reply. If a request for a ruling is withdrawn, the National Office may give its views on the subject matter of the request to the District Director whose office will have examination jurisdiction over the taxpayer's return for consideration in connection with any later examination of the taxpayer's return. Even though a request is withdrawn, all correspondence and exhibits will be kept by the Service and will not be returned to the taxpayer. In appropriate cases, the Service may publish its findings in a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

SEC. 15. ORAL ADVICE TO TAXPAYERS

.01 The Service does not issue rulings or determination letters on oral requests. However, personnel in the rulings divisions ordinarily will discuss with taxpayers or their representatives inquiries regarding: substantive tax issues; whether the Service will rule on particular issues; and questions relating to procedural matters about submitting ruling requests (including the application of section 8, of this revenue procedure, to a particular case). Any discussion of substantive issues will be at the discretion of the Service on a time-available basis, and will not be binding on the Service.

.02 A taxpayer may seek oral technical assistance from a Taxpayer Service Representative in a District Office or Service Center when preparing a return or report, under other established procedures. Oral advice is advisory only and the Service is not bound to recognize it in the examination of the taxpayer's return.

SEC. 16. EFFECT OF RULINGS

.01 A taxpayer may not rely on a ruling issued to another taxpayer. A ruling, except to the extent incorporated in a closing agreement, may be revoked or modified at any time under appropriate circumstances. See section 4.08 for the effect of a closing agreement. If a ruling is revoked or modified, the revocation or modification applies to all years open under the statutes, unless the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate exercises the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation or modification. The manner in which the authority generally is exercised is given later in this section. For information on rulings relating to the sale or lease of articles subject to the manufacturer's excise tax and the retailer's excise tax, see section 16.08.

.02 When determining a taxpayer's liability, the District Director must ascertain whether (1) any ruling previously issued to the taxpayer has been properly applied, (2) the representations upon which the ruling was based reflected an accurate statement of the material facts, and (3) the transaction actually was carried out substantially as proposed. If, in the course of determining the tax liability, the District Director finds that a ruling should be modified or revoked, the findings and recommendations of the District Director will be forwarded to the National Office for consideration before further action. Such a referral to the National Office will be treated as a request for technical advice and the procedures of Rev. Proc. 88-2 will be followed. Otherwise, the ruling is to be applied by the District Office in its determination of the taxpayer's liability.

.03 Appropriate coordination with the National Office will be undertaken if any field official having jurisdiction over a return or other matter proposes to reach a conclusion contrary to a ruling previously issued to the taxpayer.

.04 Except to the extent incorporated in a closing agreement, a ruling found to be in error or not in accord with the current views of the Service may be modified or revoked. Modification or revocation of a ruling may be made by (1) a notice to the taxpayer to whom the ruling was issued, (2) an enactment of legislation or ratification of a tax treaty, (3) a decision of the United States Supreme Court, (4) the issuing of temporary or final regulations, or (5) the issuing of a revenue ruling, a revenue procedure, or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Consistent with these provisions, if a ruling relates to a continuing action or a series of actions, the ruling will ordinarily be applied until any one of the actions described above has taken place, or until specifically withdrawn. Publication of a notice of proposed rulemaking will not affect the application of any ruling issued under the procedures stated in this revenue procedure.

.05 Except in rare or unusual circumstances, the revocation or modification of a ruling will not be applied retroactively to the taxpayer for whom the ruling was issued or to a taxpayer whose tax liability was directly involved in the ruling if (1) there has been no misstatement or omission of material facts, (2) the facts at the time of the transaction are not materially different from the facts on which the ruling was based, (3) there has been no change in the applicable law, (4) the ruling was originally issued with respect to a prospective or proposed transaction, and (5) the taxpayer directly involved in the ruling acted in good faith in reliance upon the ruling and the retroactive revocation would be to the taxpayer's detriment. For example, the tax liability of each shareholder is directly involved in a ruling on the reorganization of a corporation. However, the tax liability of members of an industry is not directly involved in a ruling issued to one of the members, and the holding in a revocation or modification of a ruling to one member of an industry may be retroactively applied to other members of the industry. By the same reasoning, a tax practitioner may not obtain the nonretroactive application to one client of a modification or revocation of a ruling previously issued to another client. If a ruling is revoked by letter with retroactive effect, the letter will, except in fraud cases, state the grounds upon which the revocation is being made and the reasons why the revocation is being applied retroactively.

.06 A ruling issued on a particular transaction represents a holding of the Service on that transaction only. However, the application of that ruling to the transaction will not be affected by the later issuing of regulations (either temporary or final), if the conditions specified in section 16.05 are met. If the ruling is later found to be in error or no longer in accord with the position of the Service, it will not give the taxpayer protection for a like transaction in the same year or later year.

.07 However, if a ruling is issued covering a continuing action or a series of actions and it is determined that the ruling was in error, or no longer in accord with the position of the Service, the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) ordinarily will limit the retroactivity of the revocation or modification to a date that is not earlier than that on which the ruling is modified or revoked. To illustrate, if a taxpayer receives a ruling that certain payments are excludable from gross income for federal income tax purposes and it is later determined that the ruling is in error or no longer in accord with the position of the Service, the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) ordinarily will restrict the retroactive application of the revocation or modification of the ruling. If a taxpayer rendered service or provided a facility that is subject to the excise tax on services or facilities, and in reliance on a ruling issued to the same taxpayer did not pass the tax on to the user of the service of the facility, the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) ordinarily will restrict retroactive application of the revocation or modification of the ruling. If an employer incurred liability under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, but in reliance on a ruling made to the same employer, neither collected the employee tax nor paid the employee and employer taxes under the Act, the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) ordinarily will restrict the retroactive application of the revocation or modification of the ruling for both the employer tax and the employee tax. In the last situation, however, the restriction of retroactive application ordinarily will be conditioned on the furnishing by the employer of wage data, as may be required by section 31.6011(a)-1 of the Employment Tax Regulations.

.08 A ruling holding that the sale or lease of a particular article is subject to the manufacturer's excise tax or the retailer's excise tax may not retroactively revoke or modify an earlier ruling holding that the sale or lease of such an article was not taxable, if the taxpayer to whom the ruling was issued, in reliance upon the earlier ruling, parted with possession or ownership of the article without passing the tax on to the customer. Section 1108(b), Revenue Act of 1926.

.09 For rulings involving completed transactions, other than those described in sections 16.07 and 16.08, taxpayers will not be given the protection against retroactive revocation provided in section 16.05, since they will not have entered into the transactions in reliance on the ruling.

SEC. 17. EFFECT OF DETERMINATION LETTERS

A determination letter issued by a District Director has the same effect as a ruling issued to a taxpayer under section 16 of this revenue procedure. However, if the District Director is of the opinion that a conclusion contrary to that expressed in the determination letter is indicated, the matter need not be referred to the National Office. A District Director may not limit the modification or revocation of a determination letter but may refer the matter to the National Office for the possible exercise by the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate of the authority to limit the modification or revocation.

SEC. 18. EFFECT OF INFORMATION LETTERS

An information letter used by the National Office or by a District Director is advisory only and the provisions of section 16 do not apply.

SEC. 19. PROCEDURE FOR REQUESTING APPLICATION OF SECTION 7805(b) IN THE CASE OF RULINGS AND DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 Pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code, it is within the discretion of the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling (including determination letters) will be applied without retroactive effect.

A taxpayer to whom a ruling or determination letter has been issued may request that the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International), or the Commissioner's delegate, exercise the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of any subsequent revocation or modification of the ruling or determination letter.

.02 In the case of a ruling, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation or modification of a ruling must be in the form of, and meet the requirements for, a ruling request generally. These requirements are set forth in section 8 of this revenue procedure. Specifically, the request must state that it is being made pursuant to section 7805(b), contain a statement of the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and also be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 16.05 of this revenue procedure as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation.

A request for the application of section 7805(b) of the Code may take the form of a separate request for a ruling when, for example, a revenue ruling has the effect of modifying or revoking a ruling previously issued to the taxpayer or when the Service notifies the taxpayer of a change in position that will have the effect of revoking or modifying such a ruling. However, when such notice is given by the District Director during the course of an examination of the taxpayer's return, or during consideration by the Chief, Appeals Office, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of a ruling must be made in the form of a request for technical advice. See section 12.03 of Rev. Proc. 88-2. When germane to a pending ruling request, a request for the application of section 7805(b) may be made as part of the request, either intially or at any time before the ruling is issued. When a ruling that concerns a continuing transaction is modified or revoked by, for example, a subsequent revenue ruling, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of the ruling must be made before the return is examined that contains the transaction that is the subject of the request for a ruling.

.03 When a request for the application of section 7805(b) of the Code is made in a separate ruling request, the taxpayer has the right to a conference in the National Office in accordance with the provisions of section 10 of this revenue procedure. If the request is made intially as part of a pending ruling request or is made before the conference of right is held on the substantive issues, the section 7805(b) issue will be discussed at the taxpayer's one conference of right. (See section 10.05 of this revenue procedure). If the request for the application of section 7805(b) is made as part of a pending ruling request after a conference has been held on the substantive issue, and the Service determines that there is justification for having delayed the request, then the taxpayer will have the right to one conference of right concerning the application of section 7805(b) with the conference limited to discussion of this issue.

.04 In the case of a determination letter that the District Director proposes to modify or revoke, a request to limit the modification or revocation of the determination letter must be made by requesting the District Director who issued the determination letter to seek technical advice from the National Office, since a District Director has not been delegated authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the modification or revocation of a determination letter. See section 12.03 of Rev. Proc. 88-2. The taxpayer's request must state that it is being made pursuant to section 7805(b), contain a statement of the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and also be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 16.05 of this revenue procedure as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation.

.05 When technical advice is requested with respect to the application of section 7805(b) of the Code under the circumstances set forth in section 19.04 above, the taxpayer has a right to a conference in the National Office to the same extent as does any taxpayer who is the subject of a technical advice request. See section 8 of Rev. Proc. 88-2.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to update Rev. Proc. 87-2, 1987-1 C.B. 515, which provides revised procedures for furnishing technical advice to District Directors and Chiefs, Appeals Offices, by the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International). It also tells taxpayers about their rights when a District Director or a Chief, Appeals Office, requests such advice. Changes to this revenue procedure will be incorporated annually in a new revenue procedure published as the second revenue procedure of the year.

SEC. 2. SCOPE

.01 The Chief Counsel through the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) provides principles and rules for uniformly interpreting and applying the federal tax laws under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International). However, the procedures for obtaining technical advice on specific issues involving the interpretation or application of the federal income tax laws and income tax treaties relating to international transactions are not contained in this revenue procedure but are contained in Rev. Proc. 87-5, 1987-1 C.B. 535.

The procedures for obtaining technical advice specifically applicable to federal firearms, alcohol and tobacco laws under subtitle E of the Internal Revenue Code are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The procedures for obtaining technical advice specifically on issues under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) are found in Rev. Proc. 80-26, 1980-1 C.B. 671. The procedures that apply to technical advice for employee plans and exempt organizations are followed in obtaining technical advice on exemption of farmers' cooperatives from tax under section 521 of the Code, even though the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) has jurisdiction for issuing technical advice under this section. The Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) also has the jurisdiction for issuing technical advice under section 526, on shipowners' protection and indemnity associations; section 527(a), (b), (c), (d), (e), and (g), on political organizations; and section 528, on certain homeowners associations, under this revenue procedure.

.02 In the Office of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International), the authority to issue technical advice has been largely redelegated to the Branch Chiefs in the Individual Tax Division, the Corporation Tax Division, and the Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division.

SEC. 3. CHANGES

.01 References throughout the revenue procedure to the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical) are changed to the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) to reflect the combination of the Technical and International organizations under one Associate Chief Counsel.

.02 Section 2.02 is amended to refer to the Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division in addition to the Corporation Tax Division and the Individual Tax Division.

.03 Section 8.01 is amended to provide that an extension of the 21-day period for conferences must be approved by the Associate Director or Deputy Associate Director having jurisdiction over the Branch to which the case is assigned.

.04 Section 8.02 is amended to refer to the Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division in addition to the Corporation Tax Division and the Individual Tax Division.

.05 Section 8.07 is amended to provide that an extension of the 21-day period for post-conference submissions must be approved by the Associate Director or Deputy Associate Director having jurisdiction over the Branch to which the case is assigned.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS AND NATURE OF TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 For purposes of this revenue procedure, the word "taxpayer" includes all persons subject to any provision of the Internal Revenue Code and, when appropriate, their representatives and issuers of section 103 obligations.

.02 Any reference to the National Office means only the Office of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International).

.03 Any reference to District Director or District Office includes the office of the Director of the Foreign Operations District, where appropriate. Any reference to Chief, Appeals Office, includes Associate Chief, Appeals Office.

.04 "Technical advice" means advice or guidance furnished by the National Office upon requests of a District or an Appeals Office in response to any technical or procedural question that develops during any stage of any proceeding on the interpretation and proper application of tax law, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, or other precedents published by the National Office to a specific set of facts. Such proceedings include (1) the examination of a taxpayer's return, (2) consideration of a taxpayer's claim for refund or credit, or (3) any other matter involving a specific taxpayer under the jurisdiction of the Chief, Examination Division, such as the consideration of a taxpayer's application to enter into an agreement about the useful life method, and rate of depreciation of business property provided by section 167(d) of the Code. These proceedings include an examination to determine whether obligations issued are described in section 103(a). They also include processing and considering nondocketed cases in an Appeals Office. Technical advice is furnished as a way of helping Service personnel close cases and establish and maintain consistent holdings throughout the Internal Revenue Service. A District Director or an Appeals Office may raise an issue in any tax period, even though technical advice may have been asked for and furnished for the same or a similar issue for another tax period. Technical advice does not include memoranda on matters of general technical application furnished to District or Appeals Offices when the issues are not raised in connection with a proceeding involving a specific taxpayer.

.05 If a District Director, Chief, Appeals Office, or a taxpayer requests technical advice on a determination letter under section 521 of the Code, the procedures under Rev. Proc. 80-26, 1980-1 C.B. 671, and Rev. Proc. 84-46, 1984-1 C.B. 541, as well as section 601.201(n) of the Statement of Procedural Rules, must be followed.

.06 Only the National Office can revoke a ruling letter. Therefore, if a District Director or a Chief, Appeals Office, thinks that a ruling letter previously issued to a taxpayer should be modified or revoked, the procedures in section 5 of this revenue procedure must be followed.

.07 The provisions of this revenue procedure apply only to a case under the jurisdiction of a District Director or Chief, Appeals Office. Technical advice may be requested on issues considered in a prior Appeals disposition, not based on mutual concessions for the same tax period of the same taxpayer, if the Appeals Office that had the case concurs in the request. A District Director may not request technical advice on an issue if an Appeals Office is currently considering an identical issue of the same taxpayer (or of a related taxpayer within the meaning of section 267 of the Code or a member of an affiliated group of which the taxpayer is also a member within the meaning of section 1504). A case remains under the jurisdiction of the District Director even though an Appeals Office has the identical issue under consideration in the case of another taxpayer (not related within the meaning of sections 267 and 1504, respectively) in an entirely different transaction. With respect to the same taxpayer or the same transaction, when the issue is under the jurisdiction of an Appeals Office, and the applicability of more than one kind of tax is dependent upon the resolution of that issue, a District Director may not request technical advice on the applicability of any of the taxes involved.

SEC. 5. REQUESTING TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 The District Director or Chief, Appeals Office is responsible for determining whether to request technical advice on any issue being considered. Each request must be submitted through channels and signed by a person who is authorized to sign for the District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, and should include, in writing, a statement of applicable law and the arguments submitted by the District or Appeals Office in support of its position on the issue or issues. All requests for technical advice from Appeals Offices should be submitted to Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) through the Director, Appeals Division, CC:AP:PT. However, while the case is under the jurisdiction of the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, a taxpayer may request that an issue be referred to the National Office for technical advice. All requests for technical advice should be made at the earliest possible stage of the proceedings. The grounds for a request are that a lack of uniformity exists on the disposition of the issue or that the issue is unusual or complex enough to warrant consideration by the National Office. Taxpayers may also request technical advice when seeking an extension of time fixed by regulations for making an election or application for relief pursuant to section 1.9100-1 of the Income Tax Regulations. See section 5.11 of this revenue procedure for additional information. Although taxpayers are encouraged to make written requests setting forth the facts, law, and argument on the issue, and reasons for requesting National Office technical advice, they may make the request orally. If, after considering the taxpayer's request, the examining officer or Appeals Officer thinks that the circumstances do not warrant referral of the case to the National Office, the examining officer or Appeals Officer will tell the taxpayer. (See section 6 for taxpayer's appeal rights when an examining officer or an Appeals Officer declines to request technical advice).

.02 When technical advice is going to be requested, whether or not on the request of the taxpayer, the taxpayer will be told about it and given a copy of the arguments submitted by the District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, in support of its position on the issue or issues, except as noted in section 5.10. If the examining Officer or the Appeals Officer initiates the action, the Service will give the taxpayer a copy of the statement of the pertinent facts and the questions proposed for submission to the National Office. The request for technical advice should be worded to avoid possible misunderstanding in the National Office of the facts or the specific points at issue.

.03 If the Service initiates the request for technical advice, the taxpayer has 10 calendar days after receiving the statement of facts and specific questions to indicate in writing any disagreement about them. The taxpayer must justify in writing an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office. Every effort should be made to reach agreement on the facts and the specific points at issue. If agreement cannot be reached, the taxpayer may send, within 10 calendar days after receipt of notice, a statement of the taxpayer's understanding of the new specific points at issue. This statement will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice. The taxpayer must justify in writing an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office. When the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office and the taxpayer cannot agree on material facts, the National Office, at its discretion, may refuse to provide technical advice.

.04 If the taxpayer initiates the action to request technical advice and the taxpayer's statement of the facts and points at issue is not wholly acceptable to the District or Appeals Office, the Service will tell the taxpayer in writing what the areas of disagreement are. The taxpayer has 10 calendar days after receiving the written notice to reply to it. The taxpayer must justify in writing an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division or the Chief, Appeals Office. If agreement cannot be reached, both the statements of the taxpayer and the District or Appeals Office will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice. When the disagreement involves material facts essential to the preliminary assessment of the case, the District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, may, at its discretion, refuse referral to the National Office of a taxpayer initiated request for technical advice or, alternatively, the National Office may refuse to provide technical advice.

.05 If it has not already been done, the taxpayer may submit a statement explaining the taxpayer's position on the issues and citing precedents that the taxpayer believes will bear on the case. This statement will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice. If the taxpayer's statement is received after the request for technical advice has been forwarded to the National Office, it will be forwarded there to be associated with the request for technical advice. The taxpayer is encouraged to comment on any legislation, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, revenue procedures, or court decisions contrary to the taxpayer's position.

.06 At the time the taxpayer is told that the matter is being referred to the National Office, the taxpayer will also be told about the right to a conference in the National Office if an adverse decision is indicated and will be asked to say whether such a conference is desired.

.07 In connection with requests for technical advice, the taxpayer also has the same 10 days as in sections 5.03 and 5.04 to submit the statement described in section 5.09 of proposed deletions under section 6110(c) of the Code. If the taxpayer does not submit the statement, the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, will tell the taxpayer that such a statement is required. If the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, does not receive that statement within 10 days after such notification, the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, may decline to submit the request for technical advice. If the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, decides to request technical advice in a case in which the taxpayer has not submitted the statement of proposed deletions, the National Office will make those deletions that the Commissioner determines are required by section 6110(c).

.08 The requirements for submitting statements and other materialfor proposed deletions in technical advice memoranda before public inspection is allowed do not apply to requests for any documents to which section 6104 of the Code applies.

.09 To help the National Office make the deletions required by section 6110(c) of the Code in technical advice memoranda to be made open to public inspection under section 6110(a), a deletions statement must accompany requests. The statement must either state that no information other than names, addresses, and identifying numbers need be deleted, or if more information is proposed to be deleted, the statement must indicate the deletions proposed by the taxpayer. If the latter alternative is chosen, the statement must be made in a separate document, and it must be accompanied by a copy of all statements of facts and supporting documents that are submitted to the National Office under sections 5.03 and 5.04. The material that the taxpayer wants deleted must be shown in brackets. The statement of proposed deletions must show the statutory basis, under section 6110(c), for each proposed deletion. The statement of proposed deletions must not appear or be referred to anywhere in the request for technical advice. If the taxpayer decides to request additional deletions under section 6110(c) before the National Office replies to the request for technical advice, the taxpayer may submit additional statements. The procedures in this paragraph also apply to additional information submitted during consideration of the technical advice request.

.10 The provisions of this section (about referring issues upon the taxpayer's request, telling the taxpayer about the referral of issues, giving the taxpayer a copy of the arguments submitted by the District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, in support of its position on the issue or issues, submitting proposed deletions, and granting conferences in the National Office) do not apply to technical advice memoranda, described in section 6110(g)(5)(A) of the Code, on cases involving criminal or civil fraud investigations and jeopardy or termination assessments. However, in these cases the taxpayer may provide the statement of proposed deletions to the National Office after all proceedings in the investigations or assessments are complete but before the Commissioner mails the notice, under section 6110(f)(1), of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum.

.11 See Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, which concerns applications for extension of time for making an election or application for relief pursuant to section 1.9100-1 of the Income Tax Regulations. If a taxpayer requests an extension of time under section 1.9100-1 during an examination or when being considered by an Appeals Office, the procedures of Rev. Proc. 88-2 are applicable, except for section 6. The examination officer or Appeals Officer is not authorized to deny consideration of a request for technical advice that involves section 1.9100-1 relief. All such requests must be referred to the National Office. See section 4.03 of Rev. Proc. 79-63.

.12 Form 4463, Request for Technical Advice, should be used for transmitting requests for technical advice to the National Office.

.13 Any authorized representative, as described in section 8.10 of Rev. Proc. 88-1, whether or not enrolled to practice, must comply with the conference and practice requirements of the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR 601). Form 2848, Power of Attorney, and Form 2848-D, Authorization and Declaration, may be used with regard to requests for technical advice under this revenue procedure.

SEC. 6. APPEAL BY TAXPAYERS OF DISTRICT OR APPEALS OFFICE DETERMINATION NOT TO SEEK TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 If the examining officer or Appeals Officer thinks that a taxpayer's request for referral of an issue to the National Office for technical advice does not warrant referral, the examining officer or Appeals Officer will tell the taxpayer.

.02 The taxpayer may appeal the decision of the examining officer or the Appeals Officer not to request technical advice by submitting to that official, within 10 calendar days after being told of the decision, a statement of the facts, law, and arguments on the issue, and the reasons why the taxpayer believes the matter should be referred to the National Office for technical advice. The tax payer must justify in writing a request for an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office.

.03 The examining officer or the Appeals Officer submits the taxpayer's statement through channels to the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office, along with the examining officer's or the Appeals Officer's statement of why the issue should not be referred to the National Office. The Chief determines, on the basis of the statement, whether technical advice will be requested. If the Chief determines that technical advice is not warranted and proposes to deny the request, the taxpayer is told in writing about the determination. In the letter to the taxpayer, the Chief states the reasons for the proposed denial (except in unusual situations when doing so would be prejudicial to the best interests of the Government). The taxpayer has 10 calendar days after receiving the letter to notify the Chief of agreement or disagreement with the proposed denial. The taxpayer may not appeal the decision of the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office, not to request technical advice from the National Office. However, if the taxpayer does not agree with the proposed denial, all data on the issue for which technical advice has been sought, including the taxpayer's written request and statements, will be submitted to the Assistant Commissioner (Examination) or the Director, Appeals Division, for review. If the Assistant Commissioner (Examination) or the Director, Appeals Division, thinks the circumstances warrant it, he or she may consult the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) or his or her representatives. After this review, the District Office or the Appeals Office is notified whether the proposed denial is approved or disapproved, and, in turn, the District Office or the Appeals Office will notify the taxpayer.

.04 While the matter is being reviewed, the District Office or the Appeals Office suspends action on the issue (except when the delay would prejudice the Government's interest) until it is notified that the proposed denial is approved or disapproved. This notification is made within 45 calendar days after receipt of the data. The review is solely on the basis of the written record and no conference is held on the matter.

SEC. 7. WITHDRAWAL OF REQUESTS

.01 Only a District Director or Chief, Appeals Office may withdraw a request for technical advice, even a request initiated by the taxpayer. The withdrawal request may be made at any time before the responding transmittal memorandum is signed. The District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, must notify the taxpayer in writing of an intent to withdraw the request for technical advice except (1) when the period of limitation on assessment is about to expire and the taxpayer has declined to sign a consent to extend the period, or (2) when such notification would be prejudicial to the best interests of the Government. If the taxpayer does not agree that the request for technical advice should be withdrawn, the procedure in section 6 of this revenue procedure must be followed.

.02 When a request for technical advice is withdrawn, the National Office may send its views to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, when acknowledging the withdrawal request. In an Appeals case, acknowledgment of the withdrawal request should be sent to the appropriate Appeals Office, through the Director, Appeals Division, CC:AP:PT. In appropriate cases, the subject matter may be published as a revenue ruling or as a revenue procedure.

SEC. 8. CONFERENCES IN THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 If after an analysis of the technical advice request it appears that advice adverse to the taxpayer will be given, and if a conference has been requested, the taxpayer will be told, by telephone if possible, the time and place of the conference. The conference must be held within 21 calendar days after such contact has been made. If conferences are being arranged for more than one request for technical advice for the same taxpayer, they will be scheduled to cause the least inconvenience to the taxpayer. An extension of the 21-day period will be granted only if the taxpayer justifies it in writing and the Associate Director or Deputy Associate Director having jurisdiction over the Technical Branch to which the case is assigned approves it. Because the purpose of these procedures is to facilitate the technical advice process, requests for extensions should be justified by compelling facts and circumstances. The request for extension should be submitted before the end of the 21-day period. If unusual circumstances near the end of the 21-day period make a written request impractical, within the 21-day period the National Office should be told orally about the problem and of the forthcoming written request for extension. These requests must be promptly submitted. The taxpayer or taxpayer's representative will be told promptly and later in writing of the approval or denial of the requested extension. There is no right to appeal the denial of an extension request. If it is not advised of problems with meeting the 21-day period, or if the request is not sent promptly after the National Office is notified of problems with meeting the 21-day period, the Service will process the case on the basis of the existing record.

.02 A taxpayer is entitled by right to only one conference in the National Office unless one of the circumstances discussed in this section exists. This conference is normally held at the Branch level in the appropriate division (Individual Tax Division, Corporation Tax Division, or Employee Benefits and Exempt Organizations Division) of the Office of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International). It is attended by a person who has authority to sign the transmittal memorandum discussed in section 9.07 on behalf of the Branch Chief. When more than one branch has taken an adverse position on an issue within its jurisdiction presented in a request for technical advice, or when the position ultimately adopted by one Branch will affect another Branch's determination, a representative from each Branch with authority to sign for the Branch Chief will attend the conference. In appropriate cases, the examining officer or the Appeals Officer may also attend the conference to clarify the facts in the case. If more than one subject is discussed at the conference, the discussion constitutes a conference for each subject. To promote a free and open discussion of the issues, the conference usually is held after the Branch has an opportunity to study the case. However, the taxpayer may request that the conference of right be held at a stage earlier in the consideration of the case than the Service would ordinarily designate. The taxpayer has no right to appeal the action of a Branch to a Division Director or to any other official of the Service.

.03 In order to issue technical advice memoranda in a more efficient manner, the Branch representatives may offer the taxpayer an option of delaying the conference in order to submit a brief requesting section 7805(b) relief, discussed in section 12 of this revenue procedure, in the event of a final adverse determination by the Service. In such cases, a conference on the tentatively adverse position and the section 7805(b) relief request will be scheduled within 10 days of receipt of the taxpayer's section 7805(b) request.

.04 Because conference procedures are informal, no tape, stenographic, or other verbatim recording of a conference is made.

.05 The senior Service representative at the conference ensures that the taxpayer has full opportunity to present views on all the issues in question. The Service representatives explain the Service's tentative decision on the substantive issues and the reasons for it. If prospective application under section 7805(b) of the Code is advanced by the taxpayer, the Service representative will discuss the tentative recommendation concerning the request for relief and the reason for the tentative recommendation. No commitment will be made as to the conclusion that the Service will finally adopt.

.06 An invitation to an additional conference is made if, after the conference of right, an adverse holding is proposed either (1) on a new issue or (2) on the same issue but on grounds different from those discussed at the first conference. When a proposed holding is reversed at a higher level with a result less favorable to the taxpayer, the taxpayer has no right to another conference if the grounds or arguments on which the reversal is based were discussed at the conference of right. The limitation on the number of conferences to which a taxpayer is entitled does not prevent inviting a taxpayer to attend further conferences when National Office personnel think they are necessary. These additional conferences are held only at the invitation of the National Office.

.07 The taxpayer is responsible for furnishing in writing to the National Office within 21 calendar days after the conference any additional data, lines of reasoning, precedents, etc., that the taxpayer proposed and that were discussed at the conference but not previously or adequately presented in writing. A copy of the additional material submitted by the taxpayer must be sent by the taxpayer to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, for comment. If the additional information is not received within 21 days, the technical advice memorandum will be issued on the basis of the existing record. An extension of the 21-day period may be granted only if the taxpayer justifies it in writing and the Associate Director or Deputy Associate Director having jurisdiction over the Branch to which the case is assigned approves it. Procedures for requesting an extension of the 21-day period and notifying the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative of the Service's decision are the same as those in section 8.01. Any additional material should be submitted in duplicate to the National Office. If the additional information would have a significant impact on the facts in the request for technical advice, the National Office sends a copy to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, for comment on the facts contained in the additional information submitted. The District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, gives the matter prompt attention.

.08 A taxpayer may get information on the status of the request for technical advice by contacting the District or Appeals Office that requested the technical advice.

.09 A District Director or a Chief, Appeals Office, may get current information on the status of the request for technical advice by calling the person whose name and telephone number are shown on the acknowledgement of receipt of the request for technical advice.

SEC. 9. PREPARATION OF TECHNICAL ADVICE MEMORANDUM BY THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 Requests for technical advice generally are given priority and processed expeditiously. As soon as the request for technical advice is assigned, the technical employee analyzes the file to see whether it meets all requirements of section 5. If it does not comply with the requirements of section 5.09 relating to the statement of proposed deletions, the National Office makes the deletions from the technical advice memorandum that the Commissioner determines are required by section 6110(c) of the Code.

.02 Usually, within 21 calendar days after the Branch Office receives the request for technical advice, a representative of the Branch telephones the District or Appeals Office to discuss the procedural and substantive issues in the request that come within the Branch's jurisdiction. The Branch representative informs the District or Appeals Office:

(a) that the case is being returned because substantial additional information is required to resolve an issue, because significant unresolved factual variances exist between the statement of facts submitted by the District or Appeals Office and the taxpayer, or because major procedural problems cannot be resolved by phone (A request for technical advice will not be returned or reply delayed merely because additional information not essential to the preliminary assessment of the case is needed.); or

(b) that the case is not being returned but more information is needed or minor procedural deficiencies exist; or

(c) what the Branch representative's tentative conclusion is and the estimated date that the technical advice memorandum will be mailed; or

(d) that a tentative conclusion has not been reached because of the complexity of the issue and the estimated date the tentative conclusion will be made.

.03 Within 21 calendar days after the Branch receives the additional information requested in section 9.02(b), the Branch representative telephones the District or Appeals Office to discuss the procedural and substantive issues in the request that come within the jurisdiction of the Branch. The representative indicates either (1) the tentative conclusion and the estimated date the technical advice memorandum will be mailed, or (2) the fact that a tentative conclusion has not been reached because of the complexity of the issue and the estimated date the tentative conclusion will be made.

.04 Because the Branch representative's tentative conclusion may change during the preparation and review of the technical advice memorandum, it is not, under any circumstances, considered final. The District or Appeals Office may not tell the taxpayer what the tentative conclusion is.

.05 When the technical advice request concerns matters within the jurisdiction of more than one Branch, a representative of the Branch that received the original technical advice request informs the District or Appeals Office within the initial 21-calendar day period: (1) that the matters within the jurisdiction of another Branch have been referred to the other Branch or office for consideration, and (2) that a representative of the other Branch will contact the District or Appeals Office about the referral of the technical advice request within 21 calendar days after receiving it in accordance with section 9.02.

.06 If during the analysis and development of the case it is determined after discussion with the Branch Chief or reviewer, that additional information essential to the preliminary assessment of the case is needed, a Branch representative will obtain the additional information in the most expeditious manner possible from the taxpayer or the District Director or Chief, Appeals Office. Any additional information requested from the taxpayer by the National Office must be submitted by letter appended by a penalties of perjury statement within 21 calendar days after the request for information is made. A written request for an extension of time to submit additional material must be received by the National Office within the 21-day period, setting forth compelling facts and circumstances justifying the proposed extension. The Branch Chief of the Branch to which the case is assigned will determine whether to grant or deny the request for an extension of the 21-day period. There is no right to appeal the denial of an extension request. If the National Office does not receive the submission within the period of 21 days, plus any extensions granted by the Branch Chief, the National Office will issue the technical advice memorandum based on the existing record.

.07 Any additional information submitted by the taxpayer should be sent to the National Office and a copy sent to either the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, for comments on the additional information. If the District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, has comments, they must be furnished promptly to the National Office Rulings Branch.

.08 Generally, before replying to the request for technical advice, the National Office informs the taxpayer orally or in writing of the material likely to appear in the technical advice memorandum that the taxpayer proposed be deleted but that the Service determined should not be deleted. If so informed, the taxpayer may submit within 10 calendar days any further information, arguments, or other material that should be deleted. The Service attempts, if possible, to resolve all disagreements about proposed deletions before the National Office replies to the request for technical advice. However, the taxpayer does not have the right to a conference to resolve any disagreements about material to be deleted from the text of the technical advice memorandum. These matters, however, may be considered at any conference otherwise scheduled for the request.

.09 Replies to requests for technical advice are addressed to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office. When a request for technical advice is from Appeals, the response to the appropriate Appeals Office will be routed through the Director, Appeals Division, CC:AP:PT. The replies to technical advice requests are in two parts. Each part identifies the taxpayer by name, address, identification number, and year or years involved. The first part of the reply is a transmittal memorandum. In unusual cases it is a way of giving the District or Appeals Office administrative information or other information that under the nondisclosure statutes or for other reasons, may not be discussed with the taxpayer. The second part (the "technical advice memorandum") contains: (1) a statement of the issues; (2) a statement of the pertinent facts in the issues; (3) a statement of the pertinent law, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings and other precedents published in the Bulletin, and court decisions; (4) a discussion of the rationale developed by the National Office; and (5) the conclusions of the National Office. The conclusions give direct answers, whenever possible, to the specific questions of the District or Appeals Office. The discussion of the issues is in enough detail so the District or Appeals officials know the reasoning underlying the conclusion. Accompanying the technical advice memorandum is a notice, under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code, of intention to disclose a technical advice memorandum (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notations of third party communications under section 6110(d)). The District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, forwards this notice to the taxpayer when the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, gives a copy of the technical advice memorandum to the taxpayer according to section 9.08.

.10 A copy of the technical advice memorandum will be given to the taxpayer only after it has been adopted by the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office. However, in the case of technical advice memoranda described in section 6110(g)(5)(A) of the Code, relating to cases involving criminal or civil fraud investigations and jeopardy or termination assessments, a copy of the technical advice memorandum is not given to the taxpayer until all proceedings in the investigations or assessments are completed.

.11 After receiving the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum, the taxpayer may protest the disclosure of certain information in it. The taxpayer must submit a written statement within 20 calendar days identifying those deletions not made by the Service that the taxpayer believes should have been made. The taxpayer must also submit a copy of the version of the technical advice memorandum proposed to be open to public inspection with brackets around deletions that are proposed by the taxpayer but that have not been made by the National Office. Generally, the National Office does not consider the deletion of any material that the taxpayer has not proposed be deleted before the National Office reply is sent to the request for technical advice to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office. Within 20 days after it receives the taxpayer's response to the notice under section 6110(f)(1), the National Office must mail the taxpayer its final administrative conclusion about the deletions to be made.

SEC. 10. ACTION ON TECHNICAL ADVICE IN DISTRICT AND APPEALS OFFICE

.01 The District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, must process the taxpayer's case on the basis of the conclusions in the technical advice memorandum unless (1) the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, thinks that the conclusions reached by the National Office in a technical advice memorandum should be reconsidered, or (2) the Chief, Appeals Office, in the case of technical advice unfavorable to the taxpayer, decides to settle the issue in the usual manner under existing authority.

.02 The District Director or the Chief Appeals Office, gives the taxpayer (1) a copy of the technical advice memorandum described in section 9.07, and (2) the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notations of third party communications under section 6110(d)). This requirement does not apply to technical advice memoranda involving civil fraud or criminal investigations; jeopardy or termination assessments, as described in section 5.10; or documents to which section 6104 applies.

.03 In those cases in which the National Office tells the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, that a copy of the technical advice memorandum should not be given to the taxpayer, the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office tells this to the taxpayer if the taxpayer requests a copy.

SEC. 11. EFFECT OF TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 A taxpayer may not rely on a ruling issued to, or a technical advice memorandum received from the Service by, another taxpayer. Except in rare or unusual circumstances, a holding in a technical advice memorandum that is favorable to the taxpayer is applied retroactively. Moreover, since technical advice, as described in section 4.04 of this revenue procedure, is issued only on closed transactions, a holding that is adverse to the taxpayer is also applied retroactively unless the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) exercises the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of the holding.

.02 A holding that modifies or revokes a holding in a prior technical advice memorandum is applied retroactively, with one exception. If the new holding is less favorable to the taxpayer than the earlier one, it generally is not applied to the period in which the taxpayer relied on the prior holding in situations involving continuing transactions.

.03 If a technical advice memorandum relates to a continuing action or a series of actions, it is ordinarily applied until specifically withdrawn or until the conclusion is modified or revoked by enactment of legislation, ratification of a tax treaty, or issuance of a United States Supreme Court decision, regulations (temporary or final), a revenue ruling, or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Publication of a notice of proposed rulemaking does not affect the application of a technical advice memorandum.

.04 Generally, a technical advice memorandum that revokes or modifies a letter ruling or another technical advice memorandum is not applied retroactively for either the taxpayer to whom or for whom the ruling or memorandum was originally issued or for a taxpayer whose tax liability was directly involved in such ruling or memorandum if: (1) there has been no misstatement or omission of material facts; (2) the facts at the time of the transaction are not materially different from the facts on which the ruling or memorandum was based; (3) there has been no change in the applicable law; (4) in the case of a ruling, it was originally issued on a prospective or proposed transaction; and (5) the taxpayer directly involved in the ruling or memorandum acted in good faith in relying on the ruling or memorandum and the retroactive revocation would be to the taxpayer's detriment. For example, the tax liability of each shareholder is directly involved in a ruling or memorandum on the reorganization of a corporation. However, the tax liability of members of an industry is not directly involved in a ruling or memorandum issued to one of the members, and the holding in a revocation or modification of a ruling or memorandum to one member of an industry may be retroactively applied to other members of the industry. By the same reasoning, a tax practitioner may not obtain the nonretroactive application to one client of a modification or revocation of a ruling or memorandum previously issued to another client. When a ruling to a taxpayer or a memorandum involving a taxpayer is revoked with retroactive effect, the notice to the taxpayer, except in fraud cases, sets forth the grounds on which the revocation is being made and the reasons why the revocation is being applied retroactively.

SEC. 12. PROCEDURES FOR REQUESTING APPLICATION OF SECTION 7805(b) IN THE CASE OF TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 Pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code, it is within the discretion of the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling (including technical advice) will be applied without retroactive effect.

A taxpayer who has received a technical advice memorandum or with respect to whom a technical advice request is pending may request that the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International), the commissioner's delegate, exercise the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of any holding stated in the technical advice memorandum or to limit the retroactive effect of any subsequent modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum.

.02 When a technical advice memorandum that concerns a continuing transaction is modified or revoked by, for example, a subsequent revenue ruling or final regulations, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum must be made in the form of a request for a ruling when the request is submitted before the return is examined that contains the transaction that is the subject of the request for ruling. See section 19.02 of Rev. Proc. 88-1, page 557, this Bulletin.

.03 When a taxpayer is informed of the modification or revocation of a technical advice memorandum, ruling letter, or determination letter during the course of an examination of the taxpayer's return by the District Director or during consideration by the Chief, Appeals Office, a request to limit the retroactive application of the modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum, ruling letter, or determination letter must itself be made in the form of a request for technical advice. See section 5 of this revenue procedure. However, the taxpayer must also submit a statement, which will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice, that the request for technical advice, that the request for technical advice is being made pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code. This statement must also set forth the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and it must be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 11.04 of this revenue procedure as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation. The taxpayer's request for relief pursuant to section 7805(b) must be forwarded by the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office to the National Office for consideration.

.04 A request to limit the retroactive effect of a holding in a technical advice memorandum that does not modify or revoke a technical advice memorandum may be made as part of that technical advice request, either intially, or at any time before the technical advice memorandum is issued by the National office. In such a case, the taxpayer must also submit a statement in support of the application of section 7805(b) of the Code, as described in .03 above.

.05 When a request for technical advice concerns only the application of section 7805(b) of the Code, the taxpayer has the right to a conference in the National Office in accordance with the provisions of section 8 of this revenue procedure. If the request for application of section 7805(b) is included in the request for technical advice on the substantive issues or is made before the conference of right on the substantive issues, the section 7805(b) issues will be discussed at the taxpayer's one conference of right. If the request for the application of section 7805(b) is made as part of a pending technical advice request after a conference has been held on the substantive issue, and the Service determines that there is justification for having delayed the request, then the taxpayer will have the right to one conference of right concerning the application of section 7805(b) with the conference limited to discussion of this issue.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND AND SCOPE OF APPLICATION

Whenever appropriate in the interest of sound tax administration, it is the policy of the Service to answer inquiries of individuals and organizations regarding their status for tax purposes and the tax effects of their acts or transactions, prior to the filing of returns or reports that are required by the revenue laws.

There are, however, certain areas in which, because of the inherently factual nature of the problems involved, or for other reasons, the Service will not issue advance rulings or determination letters. These areas are set forth in three sections of this revenue procedure. Section 3 reflects those areas in which advance rulings and determinations will not be issued. Section 4 sets forth those areas in which they will not ordinarily be issued. "Not ordinarily" connotes that unique and compelling reasons must be demonstrated to justify a ruling or determination letter. Those sections reflect a number of specific questions and problems as well as general areas. Section 5 lists specific areas for which the Service is temporarily not issuing advance rulings and determinations because those matters are under extensive study. See Rev. Proc. 88-1, particularly section 7 captioned "Discretionary Authority to Issue Rulings and Determination Letters" for general instructions and other situations in which the Service will not or ordinarily will not issue rulings or determination letters.

With respect to the items listed, revenue rulings or revenue procedures may be published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin from time to time to provide general guidelines regarding the position of the Service.

Additions or deletions to this revenue procedure as well as restatement of items listed will be made by modification of this revenue procedure. Changes will be published as they occur throughout the year and will be incorporated annually in a new revenue procedure published as the third revenue procedure of the year. These lists should not be considered all-inclusive. Decisions not to rule on individual cases, as contrasted with those that present significant pattern issues, are not reported in this revenue procedure and will not be added to subsequent revisions.

The authority and general procedures of the Technical Function of the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service or the Offices of the District Directors of the Internal Revenue with respect to the issuance of advance rulings and determination letters with respect to Code sections under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) are outlined in Rev. Proc. 88-1, page 557, this Bulletin. For a list of the areas involving international transactions in which the Internal Revenue Service will not or ordinarily will not issue advance rulings or determination letters, see Rev. Proc. 88-6.

.02 Scope of Application

This revenue procedure is not to be considered as precluding the submission of requests for technical advice to the National Office from the Office of a District Director of the Internal Revenue or a Chief, Appeals Office.

This applies to all SAM arrangements where the loan proceeds are used for commercial or business activities, or where used to finance a personal residence if the facts are not similar to those described in Rev. 17. Section 302.—Distributions in Redemption of Stock.—Whether section 302(b) of the Code applies when the consideration given in redemption by a corporation in exchange for a shareholder's stock consists entirely or partly of the corporation's promise to pay an amount based on, or contingent on, future earnings of the corporation, when the promise to pay is contingent on working capital being maintained at a certain level, or any other similar contingency.

18. Rev. Proc. 88-5

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to modify the procedures for applications for waivers of the minimum funding standard under section 412(d) of the Internal Revenue Code and section 303 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Public Law 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 41. The modifications will reflect changes made by the Single-Employer Pension Plan Amendments Act (SEPPAA), Title XI of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985, Public Law 99-272, 1986-2 C.B. 298, and the changes made by the Pension Protection Act, Part II of subtitle D of title IX of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (OBRA), Public Law 100-203.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND INFORMATION

.01 Revenue Procedure 83-41, 1983-1 C.B. 725, describes the procedure for requesting a waiver of the minimum funding standard under section 412(d) of the Code. Section 2.02 of the Revenue Procedure states that a request will not be considered unless certain specific documents described therein are included in the waiver application. Section 2.03 of the Revenue Procedure describes the necessary information that must be furnished by the applicant for the waiver.

.02 SEPPAA modified the provisions of the Code with respect to requirements relating to waivers. In particular, SEPPAA (1) added section 412(f)(3)(B) and (C) to require that the Service consult with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC) before granting or modifying a waiver under subsection 412(d) where the cumulative outstanding balance of the amount of waived funding deficiencies for a plan plus the amount of the waiver currently requested equals or exceeds $2,000,000 and (2) added section 412(f)(4), which provides that the Secretary, before granting a waiver under subsection 412(d) shall require each applicant to provide evidence satisfactory to the Secretary that the applicant has provided notice of the filing of the application for such waiver to each employee organization representing employees covered by the affected plan. OBRA modified section 412(f)(3) of the Code by striking out "$2,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,000,000". In addition, OBRA amended section 412(f)(4)(A) of the Code to require that notice of application of a funding waiver also be given to each participant, beneficiary and alternate payee (within the meaning of section 414(p)(8)). Section 412(f)(4) also provides that the Secretary shall consider any relevant information provided by a person to whom such notice was given.

SEC. 3. CONSULTATION WITH PBGC

.01 Section 412(f)(3)(B) and (C) of the Code, as added by SEPPAA, requires that the Service provide the PBGC with notice of the completed application for any waiver and an opportunity to comment on such application within 30 days after receipt of such notice. Any information provided to the PBGC as a result of this provision shall be considered tax return information and is subject to the safeguards and reporting requirements of section 6103(p). The Service is not required to notify PBGC regarding applications where the outstanding balance of the amount of waived funding deficiencies for prior plan years plus the amount for which a waiver is currently requested is less than $2,000,000. This $2,000,000 threshold was reduced to $1,000,000 by OBRA.

.02 To expedite the procedures necessary to satisfy this requirement, section 2.03(d)(15) of Revenue Procedure 83-41 is modified to read as follows:

> "(15) A list of each of the prior 15 plan years for which a waiver was granted, the amount waived for such plan year, the outstanding balance of the amortization base established for the waiver, and the conditions, if any, placed upon the waiver. A copy of each waiver ruling letter must be submitted with the waiver request. The outstanding balance of the amortization base for each waiver is to be calculated as of the first day of the plan year for which a waiver is being requested."

.03 In addition, the first paragraph of section 2.03 of Revenue Procedure 83-41 is modified to add at the end thereof the following new sentence:

> "If the sum of the outstanding balances of any amortization bases established under section 412(b)(2)(C) of the Code for waivers granted to the plan for any prior plan years (calculated as of the first day of the plan year for which a new waiver is being requested) when added to the amount for which a waiver is currently being requested, equals or exceeds $1,000,000, the applicant must furnish two copies of the necessary waiver information described in this section 2.03."

SEC. 4. PROCEDURES FOR NOTICE AND SUBMISSION OF RELEVANT INFORMATION

Section 412(f)(4) states that the Secretary shall require each applicant for a waiver to demonstrate that the applicant has notified each employee organization representing employees covered by the affected plan that a waiver application has been filed. Accordingly, section 2.02 of Revenue Procedure 83-41 is modified to substitute a comma for the word "and" between "(1) and (2)" in the first sentence, insert, after "(2)" the words "and (3)," and to add the following paragraph (3):

"(3) The taxpayer must provide as part of the application a copy of a written notification signed by an appropriate officer of the taxpayer to each employee organization (union) representing employees covered by the affected plan and each participant, beneficiary, and alternate payee (within the meaning of section 414(p)(8) of the Code) that an application for a waiver of the minimum funding standard under section 412(d) of the Code has been submitted to the Service. The individual notice to participants, beneficiaries, and alternate payees may be in the form of a copy of a general notice which was signed by an appropriate officer of the company. The applicant must state that such notice was hand delivered or mailed to the last known address of the appropriate employee organization, participant, beneficiary, and alternate payee. If the applicant makes a reasonable effort to carry out the provisions of this paragraph, failure of an employee organization, participant, beneficiary, or alternate payee to receive the notice will not cause the applicant to fail the notice requirement. However, merely posting the notice on a bulletin board is not sufficient to satisfy this requirement. The notice must state that, under section 412(f)(4)(B) of the Code, the Service will consider any relevant information submitted. Further, the notice must specify the address to which information may be sent to the Service and state that because of the disclosure restrictions of section 6103 of the Code, the Service will not provide any information with respect to the waiver. The notice must also state that in accordance with section 104 of ERISA and section 2520.104b-10 of the Department of Labor regulations (29 CFR Part 2520) annual financial reports for the plan which include employer contributions made to the plan and the accumulated funding deficiency for the plan for any year are available for inspection at the U.S. Department of Labor in Washington, D.C., and that copies of such reports may be obtained upon request from the Public Disclosure Room, Room N-5507, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20210, upon payment of copying costs. In addition, the notice must state that copies of the latest annual report are available for inspection at the principal office of the plan administrator and any other location as required under section 104(b)(2) of the Employee Retirement Security Act of 1974 and the street address of such location. The notice must also state that copies of the annual report may be obtained from the plan administrator at a reasonable charge. The address to which requests for such copies may be sent and the amount of the charge must be stated. In addition, the notice must include a description of the extent to which the plan is funded for benefits which are guaranteed under Title IV of ERISA and the extent to which the plan is funded for benefit liabilities. Generally, this is satisfied if the notice includes the present value of the vested benefits, the present value of benefits determined as though the plan terminated, and the fair market value of plan assets, using the interest rate for calculating current liability. No additional information is required by the Service to be furnished to plan participants, beneficiaries, alternate payees or employee organizations as part of the waiver application process. Additional information may, of course, be provided by the employer pursuant to the collective bargaining process or otherwise.

SEC. 5. SUBMISSION OF COMMENTS

.01 Section 412(f)(4)(B), as added by SEPPAA, provides that the Secretary shall consider any relevant information provided by a person to whom notice was given as described in section 4 above. Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code prohibits the Service from disclosing return information with respect to any taxpayer. Accordingly, absent a disclosure waiver the Service may not reveal any part of the contents of any waiver application to any individual who wishes to submit relevant information concerning a waiver application. Moreover, the Service can neither confirm nor deny that a request for a waiver of the minimum funding requirement with respect to any particular pension plan has or has not been received.

.02 All relevant information submitted should be submitted in writing to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: E:EP:PA; 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. Although no specific time period is provided within which the information is to be submitted, such information should be submitted as soon as possible after notice is received that a waiver application has been filed.

.03 The Service will not suspend action on a waiver request in order to wait for information from employee organizations. If, however, a ruling letter has been issued to the applicant and information is later submitted, the Service will review the information so submitted and revoke or modify the ruling letter if it is deemed appropriate to do so. Generally, information submitted will not cause a revocation or modification of the ruling letter unless the information indicates that there was a material omission or misstatement of facts.

SEC 6. TIME WHEN APPROPRIATE TO REQUEST A WAIVER

Section 414(d), as amended by OBRA, requires that an employer (other than an employer maintaining a multiemployer plan) seeking a minimum funding waiver for a plan year beginning after December 31, 1987, must submit the request on or before the 15th day of the 3rd month following the close of the plan year for which the waiver is requested. However, there is a transitional rule for plan years beginning in calendar year 1988, that permits requests to be filed on or before the 15th day of the 6th month following the close of the plan year for which the waiver is requested. Accordingly, the first sentence of the first paragraph of section 4 of Rev. Proc. 83-41 is replaced by the following sentences:

> "A waiver request for a plan year beginning on or before December 31, 1987, must be submitted no later than the close of the plan year following the plan year for which the waiver is requested. A waiver request for a plan year beginning after December 31, 1987, and before January 1, 1989, must be submitted no later than the 15th day of the 6th month following the close of the plan year. All other waiver requests must be submitted no later than the 15th day of the 3rd month following the close of the plan year for which the waiver is requested."

SEC. 7. TEMPORARY HARDSHIP AT THE CONTROLLED GROUP LEVEL

Sec. 2.03 of Rev. Proc. 83-41 is changed by inserting after the term "employer" where it first appears in the first sentence the phrase:

> "and all other entities included within the controlled group of which the employer is a member".

Sec. 2.03(b) of Rev. Proc. 83-41 is changed by inserting after the term employer in the first sentence the phrase:

> "and all other entities included within the controlled group of which the employer is a member."

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective for all ruling requests received after the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. The provision in section 4 requiring that participants, beneficiaries and alternate payees be notified of waiver requests and the provision in section 4 requiring that such notification include a description of the extent to which guaranteed benefits and benefit liabilities are funded are applicable to requests submitted on or after March 22, 1988. The effective date of the provisions in section 6 with request to timely filing of waiver requests is based on the plan year for which the waiver is requested as stated in that section.

Rev. Proc. 88-6

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to amplify section 8 (Instructions to Taxpayer) of Rev. Proc. 88-1, page 557, this Bulletin, and Rev. Proc. 85-57, 1985-2 C.B. 740, to ensure receipt of complete and adequate information in order to expedite the processing of requests for rulings from public utility taxpayers concerning the normalization requirements of sections 46(f), 167(l), and 168(i)(9) of the Internal Revenue Code.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

Section 8 of Rev. Proc. 88-1 provides instructions to taxpayers requesting rulings from the Internal Revenue Service. Although a request for ruling on normalization matters is submitted by the public utility taxpayer, the proposed matter is frequently initiated either by the regulatory commission that has ratemaking authority for the taxpayer or by a consumer advocate officially recognized by the regulatory commission. Because ratepayers have an interest in whether a public utility uses a normalization method of accounting, input from the regulatory commissions and consumer advocates can often help the Service by clarifying the issues involved in a request for rulings and by discussing the authorities that bear on those issues.

SEC. 3 SCOPE AND PROCEDURE

A ruling request involving the normalization requirements of sections 46(f), 167(l), and 168(i)(9) of the Code, ordinarily will not be considered unless the taxpayer states in the request for ruling whether:

(1) the regulatory authority responsible for establishing or approving the taxpayer's rates has reviewed the request and concluded that it is adequate and complete, and (2) the taxpayer will permit the regulatory authority to participate in any National Office conference concerning the request.

If the taxpayer or the regulatory authority informs a consumer advocate of the request for rulings and the advocate wishes to communicate with the Service regarding the request, any such communication should be sent to Internal Revenue Service, Associate Chief Counsel (Technical & International), Attention CC:C:2:6, Room 5238, 1111 Constitution Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. These communications will be treated as third party contacts for purposes of section 6110 of the Code.

SEC. 4 EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 88-1 is amplified.

Rev. Proc. 85-57 is amplified and superseded.

SEC. 5 EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure will apply to all ruling requests submitted to the National Office after January 11, 1988.

Rev. Proc. 88-7

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure states the Internal Revenue Service (the Service) requirements relating to acceptable privately designed and printed or computer-prepared substitute federal tax return forms, (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 1120A, 940, 941, etc.) and computer-generated substitute schedules or forms to be attached thereto. It also authorizes the use of reproductions of official forms and gives direction for the proper completion of returns.

SEC. 2. SCOPE

This revenue procedure is the guide for preparing substitutes for most printed, computer-prepared and computer-generated tax forms. This procedure does not include guidance for Form 1040-ES, Form 1041-ES, Form 5498, Form 1096, the Form 1099 series, Form W-9 and the Form W-2 series. (See Sec. 18 and 19 to obtain guidance for the excluded forms). All other Internal Revenue Service tax forms, whether or not specifically mentioned herein by title or form number, are to be considered as covered by this general revenue procedure.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS

.01 Substitute Form. A tax form (or related schedule) that differs in any way from the official version and is intended to replace the entire form that is printed and distributed by the Service. This term also covers those approved substitute forms exhibited in this revenue procedure.

.02 Printed (or Preprinted) Form. A form produced using conventional printing processes. Also, a printed form which has been reproduced by photocopying or similar processes.

.03 Preprinted Pin-Fed Form. A printed form that has marginal perforations for use with automated and high-speed printing equipment.

.04 Computer-Prepared Substitute Form. A preprinted form in which the taxpayer's tax entry information has been inserted by a computer, computer-printer or other computer-type equipment, such as word-processing equipment.

.05 Computer-Generated Substitute Form. A form that is entirely designed and printed by the use of a computer printer on either lined or color-barred paper, so that all the line numbers, line captions, and the tax amount data entries are in the same computer typeface. No graphics usually appear on the form. (Most tax returns requiring signature and establishing tax liability may not be computer-generated. Among them are Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, etc.). The exhibits in the back of this revenue procedure are examples of computer-generated substitute forms.

.06 Manually Prepared Form. A pre-printed reproduced form in which the taxpayer's tax entry information is entered by an individual using a pen, pencil, typewriter, or other non-automated equipment.

.07 Graphics. Those parts of a printed tax form that are not tax amount entries or called-for information. Generally, these are line numbers, captions, shadings, instructions, special indicators, borders, rules, and strokes created by typesetting, photographics, photo-composition, etc.

.08 Acceptable Reproduced Form. A photocopy of an original form or of an unchanged reproduction proof supplied by the Service. (A reproduction is not a substitute form, but may subsequently be used as a computer-prepared substitute).

.09 Supporting Statement (Supplemental Schedule). A document providing detailed information to support an entry for a line(s) on an official or approved substitute form and filed with (attached to) a tax return. (A supporting statement is not a tax form and does not take the place of an official form, unless specifically permitted elsewhere in this procedure).

.10 Specific Form Terms. The following terms are used throughout this revenue procedure in reference to all substitute forms.

1. Format. The overall physical arrangement and general layout of a substitute form, as represented by the official form version.

2. Sequence. The same numeric and logical placement order of data, as reflected on the official form version. Sequence is an integral part of the total format requirement.

3. Line Reference (Code). The line numbers, letters or alpha-numerics used to identify each captioned line on the official forms; and printed to the immediate left of each caption or data entry field.

4. Item Caption. The textual portion of each line on the form, identifying the specific data elements required.

5. Data Entry Field. All areas designated on a form for the insertion of data, such as dollar amounts, quantities, responses, check-boxes, etc.

SEC. 4. MESSAGE TO TAX RETURN PREPARERS

.01 If you plan to change or modify any tax forms, you must follow these procedures, and, in many cases, you must get official approval before using substitute forms. The Service is continuing a program to identify and contact tax return preparers using unapproved forms that do not conform to this revenue procedure and impede processing of the return.

SEC. 5. HIGHLIGHTS OF PERMITTED CHANGES AND REQUIREMENTS

.01 THINGS YOU CAN DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS TO MAKE THEM SUITABLE FOR USE AS SUBSTITUTE TAX FORMS WITHOUT PRIOR APPROVAL.

1. You can photocopy most tax forms and use them instead of the official ones. Generally, forms that totally conform to the requirements specified in this revenue procedure may be privately printed without prior approval. Proposed substitutes not conforming to these requirements must be submitted for prior approval.

(a) See excluded forms in .02.7 below.

2. You can reproduce any current tax form as cut sheets, snap-sets, and marginally-punched, pin-fed forms, so long as you use an official Service version as the master copy. Official versions are supplied by the Service, such as those in the taxpayer's tax package, those in Package X, those printed in revenue procedures, reproduction proofs sold by the Service, and over-the-counter forms available at IRS and other governmental public offices or buildings.

3. You can adjust the graphics on specified areas of printed Forms 1040 and 1040A (and other forms) to allow for computer-printed or word processor fill-in. Only the areas listed in this revenue procedure may be adjusted without specific prior approval.

4. You can print and duplicate the substitute "worksheet-type" versions of Schedules A and B of Form 1040 (see exhibits). The Service will accept these substitute schedules instead of the official versions. These Schedules serve different purposes. One allows the form to contain state tax information which is blocked out before filing with the service. The other allows the form to be used singly or as part of a snap-set.

.02 THINGS YOU CANNOT DO TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE PRINTED TAX FORMS TO MAKE THEM SUITABLE FOR USE AS SUBSTITUTE TAX FORMS.

1. You cannot, without prior Service approval, change any Internal Revenue Service tax forms or use your own (non-approved) version, unless specifically permitted by this revenue procedure. Only minor changes are permitted to an official tax form, as OPM approval for IRS use was based on the specific format and content of each form submitted by IRS. Once approved, IRS does not have the authority to change (or to authorize changes to) the official forms.

2. You cannot adjust any of the graphics on Forms 1040, 1040A and 1040EZ (except in those areas specified in this revenue procedure) without prior approval from the Service.

3. You cannot use your own version of Schedule A (Form 1040) unless you first get it approved. The Service wants only one Schedule A—either yours or ours; yours needs prior approval from the Service.

4. With some exceptions, you cannot omit filling out pertinent referenced (numbered or lettered) lines of the official Schedule A (and other tax forms) when attaching a supporting statement. Exceptions to line completion requirements are listed in this revenue procedure.

5. You cannot use your own preprinted label on tax returns filed with the Service, unless you fully comply with the exception criteria specified in Section 17.06.

6. You cannot computer-generate the TAX RETURNS THEMSELVES (i.e., forms requiring signature and that establish tax liability; for example, Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.). These forms must be either the official, Service forms or privately preprinted using conventional printing processes, photocopying or similar reproduction processes. The forms may be filled in by a computer, by a word processor, or the like, but the forms themselves must be printed like the Service versions are. First-time users of forms designed using computer graphics must receive prior written approval. (See Exception in Sec. 22).

(a) Schedules are considered to be an integral part of the tax return itself, and therefore cannot be computer-generated, when they have been assigned consecutive page numbers and printed contiguous with page one of the return. Form 706, United States Estate Tax Return is an example of this situation, where Schedules A through R are on pages numbered as part of the basic return and cannot be separately computer-generated.

(b) However, Schedule 1 of Form 1040A is an example of when a schedule can be acceptably computer-generated. Although IRS-printed as a continuation of Form 1040A; the two pages of Schedule 1 do not have consecutive page numbers, and may therefore be separated from 1040A and submitted as a computer-generated substitute schedule.

(c) A "tax return" must remain complete, with its signature covering the entire return including all its assigned or associated (numbered) pages.

7. Some Service forms should never be reproduced as photocopies, or submitted on carbon copies, for intended use as substitute forms. This is because only the original or official versions are acceptable for filing with the IRS, due to their use in critical Service programs that normally require use of only OCR scannable documents.

(a) Forms 1096, 1098, 1099-A, 1099-B, 1099-DIV, 1099-G, 1099-INT, 1099-MISC, 1099-OID, 1099-PATR, 1099-R, 1099-S, 5498, 8109, and 8109-B are the major forms that fall in this excluded category.

(b) Most of these forms have the provision for assessment of penalties for the submission of non-OCR scannable versions. For further information, see Publication 1179 (revised annually).

.03 THINGS YOU CAN DO TO FILE COMPUTER-PREPARED/GENERATED FORMS. PRIOR APPROVAL IS NOT REQUIRED.

1. You can duplicate the approved, computer-generated formats of Schedules 1, A, B, C, D, E, F, R, SE, and Form 3903 (of this revenue procedure), and use them without prior approval.

2. You can fill in official Internal Revenue Service supplied forms using computer or word-processing equipment. Internal Revenue Service forms are designed for a vertical spacing of six lines to the inch, with money amount columns wide enough to allow for the computer printing of ten characters.

3. You can change certain specified areas on the Forms 1040 and 1040A (spelled out in the revenue procedures) to assist computer-printing requirements and to allow for a little more room on certain lines.

4. If you meet the requirements, standards, and qualifications of this revenue procedure, you can, without prior approval, computer-generate your own substitutes of the tax forms (except for actual tax returns) not exhibited here. (See Agreement in Sec 21).

SEC. 6. APPROVAL

.01 Basic Requirements. Preparers who desire to file substitute privately designed and printed tax forms and/or computer-generated and computer-prepared tax forms must develop such substitutes using these guidelines. These substitutes, unless excepted by revenue procedure, must be approved by the Service before being filed.

.02 Requests for Approval.

1. The Service cannot approve your substitute form until the official form has been published. Please propose your substitute after you have examined the official form.

2. You should know the Service revenue procedure relating to the official form before you attempt to alter the form to meet your needs. Any alteration of forms must be within the limits acceptable to the Service. It is possible that, from one filing period to another, a change in law or a change in internal need (processing, audit, compliance, etc.) may change the allowable limits for the alteration of the official form.

3. When specific approval of any substitute form is desired, a sample of the proposed substitute should be forwarded for consideration by letter to the Internal Revenue Service, Attention: Substitute Forms Program Coordinator, TR:R:R, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20224. To expedite multiple forms approval, we prefer that your proposed forms be submitted in separate sets by return. For example, Forms 1040 and their normally related schedules or attachments should be separated from Forms 1120, etc., if at all possible. Schedules and forms (i.e., Forms 3468, 4136, etc.) that can be used with more than one type of return (1040, 1041, 1120, etc.) should be submitted only once for approval, regardless of the number of different tax returns they may ultimately be associated with.

4. As no Service office except the one specified in Section 6.02.3 above is authorized to approve substitute forms, unnecessary delay may result if forms are sent elsewhere for approval. All such forms must be forwarded to the above address for formal control, review, and official approval. No IRS office is authorized to allow deviations from this revenue procedure.

5. The Service does not review or approve the logic of specific software programs, nor confirm the calculations entered on forms output from those programs that are submitted for approval. The accuracy of the program itself remains the responsibility of the software package developer, distributor, or user. The Substitute Forms Program is primarily concerned with the pre-filing quality review of the final forms output, produced by whatever means, that are expected to be processed by IRS field offices.

.03 When to Send Proposed Substitutes. Proposed substitutes should be sent to the address listed in .02 above, as much in advance of the filing period for the form as possible. This is to allow adequate time for analysis and response and to permit notice to our field offices that your substitute is acceptable. Quarterly filed forms, such as the Form 941, must be submitted by the first day of the last month of the quarter.

.04 Accompanying Statement. When the sample substitute is submitted, there should be an accompanying statement that lists the form number of each substitute requested and details those items that deviate from the official form in position, arrangement, appearance, line numbers, additions, deletions, etc. Included with each of the items should be a detailed reason or justification for the change and an approximation of the number of forms expected to be filed.

.05 Approval/Non-Approval Letter. The Service sends a formal letter of approval/non-approval. Approval letters may contain qualifications for use of the substitutes. Non-approval letters may specify the changes required for approval, but also may require resubmission for approval. Telephone contact is used when warranted.

.06 Duration of Approval.

1. Approvals are good for only one calendar year (January through December) or, in the case of corporation tax forms (with the exception noted below), for the remainder of the quarters of the calendar year.

2. Please Note: In some cases each new filing season requires a new approval, even if the official form does not change. But see the exceptions in 3 and 4 below.

3. Exception: Quarterly tax forms in the 94X series (941, 942, etc.) are approved only for one quarter. Each new quarter requires a new approval.

4. Exception: Limited continued use of a change approved for one tax year may be allowed for the same form in the following tax year. See 07. below for the limitations and for other requirements. Examples of such changes are the use of abbreviated words, revised form spacing, compressed text lines, shortened captions, etc., which do not change the consistency of lines or text on the official forms.

.07 Limited Continued Use of an Approved Change.

1. If you received written approval of a previous tax year substitute form governed by this revenue procedure and wish to continue to use the approved change in your current tax year substitute form, you may revise your form to include this change and, without additional written approval, use it as a current tax year substitute form, provided you comply with the requirements in this revenue procedure. See exception in 2 below.

2. This means that if you received written approval for a specific change on a specific form last year, you may again make the same change on the same form this year, if the item changed is present on this year's official form. Thus, the change allowed in last year's approved substitute Schedule A, for example, can be continued in your new substitute for this year. The new substitute does not have to be sent to the IRS, and written approval is not required. However, the new substitute must conform to the official current year IRS form in other respects: date, Office of Management and Budget (OMB) approval number, sequence number, Paperwork Reduction Act Notice Statement, arrangement, item caption, line number, line reference, data sequence, etc. It must also comply with this revenue procedure—which may have eliminated, added to, or otherwise changed the guideline which affected the change approved last year. Additionally, you will be bound by the "Agreement" in Section 21.

3. Exception: Those written approvals which stated that the approved change or form would not be allowed in any other tax year, or for a temporary, limited, or interim approval pending resolution of a failure to meet one or more Service-prescribed requirements.

4. This authorization for continued use of an approved change is limited to the continuation of design logic from an immediately prior tax year substitute form to a current tax year substitute form.

.08 Requested Copies. In our letter of approval, you may be requested to send to the Service eleven (11) copies of each approved form. When received, the copies will be used to notify Internal Revenue Service Centers that your substitute forms are approved. The requested forms should be assembled in sets. A set constitutes a return with the related schedules and forms in the same order as they will be filed, i.e., Form 1040, Schedules A, B, C, etc., and associated Forms 2119, 2441, etc.

.09 Responsibility. Following the receipt of initial approval for a substitute forms package, or of a software output program to print substitute forms, it is the responsibility of the originator (designer or distributor) to provide each subsequent client firm or individual with the pertinent Service forms requirements which must be met for continuing acceptability. Examples of this responsibility include the use of prescribed print paper, font size, legibility, state tax data deletion, the legal requirement of the Paperwork Reduction Act Notice for informing all users of substitute forms of the official use and collection requirements stated in the instructions for the official IRS forms, completion of documents, etc.

.10 Forms Approval Number. The Substitute Forms Program Coordination Office, TR:R:R, will assign a unique forms approval number to each firm that submits substitute forms for approval. This will be a permanently assigned control number that should be used on every form created by a particular firm.

1. This number should be printed at the bottom left margin area on the first page of every substitute form.

2. The Forms Approval Number consists of 4-6 positions, consisting of the following example configuration: H7348

(a) The first position (an alpha character), identifies the individual assigning the number within the Service.

(b) The second position (a numeric digit), identifies the year of issue of a number.

(c) The third position (a numeric digit), identifies the IRS Service Center with responsibility within the geographic location of the firm's home or national office location.

(d) The fourth, fifth, and sixth positions will be used as required, to identify the assigned numeric approval number (i.e., 1, 22, or 333, etc.).

3. This number should not be used on optically scanned (OCR) forms.

SEC. 7. OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET (OMB) REQUIREMENTS FOR ALL SUBSTITUTE FORMS

.01 Legal Requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. Public Law 96-511 requires that: (1) OMB approve all Service tax forms, (2) each IRS form contains (in the upper right corner) the OMB approval number and any expiration date, and (3) each IRS form (or its instructions) state why IRS is collecting the information, how it will be used, and whether or not the information is required to be furnished. This information must be provided to every user of any official or substitute tax forms.

.02 Application to Substitute Forms.

1. Approval Number and Date Is Required. All substitute forms must contain in the upper right corner (see Marginal Printing, Sec. 11.02.1(c)) the OMB number and any expiration date that is on the official form.

2. Format Required (2 Options).

(a) OMB No. XXXX-XXXX (preferred)

or

OMB # XXXX-XXXX

(b) OMB No. XXXX-XXXX (preferred)

Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy)

or

OMB # XXXX-XXXX

Expires XXXXXX (mmddyy)

3. Required Explanation to Users of Substitute Forms. You must also inform the users of your substitute forms of the Service use and collection requirements stated in the instructions for the official Service form. If you provide your users or customers with the official Internal Revenue Service instructions, page 1 of each form must retain the Paperwork Reduction Act Notice Statement as on the official forms (usually in the lower left corner of the forms). Otherwise, you must duplicate the material in the statement and add the phrase, "For Paperwork Reduction Act Notice, See Separate Instructions".

(a) If the Service instructions are not provided to users of your forms, the exact text of the Paperwork Reduction Act Notice must be furnished separately. This notice reads, "We ask for this information to carry out the Internal Revenue laws of the United States. We need it to ensure that taxpayers are complying with these laws and to allow us to figure and collect the right amount of tax. You are required to give us this information."

(b) If Service instructions are not provided, a copy of the alternative statement provided to users of your forms must be included with the forms you submit for approval.

.03 Obtaining OMB Number, Date and Statement. The OMB approval number, expiration date, and use and collection requirements may be obtained from the official printed form (or its instructions), the reproduction proof (or instructions), or from the Service.

SEC. 8. GENERAL GUIDELINES

.01 Official Form Is the Standard. Because a substitute form is a variation from the official form, you should know the requirements of the official form for the year of use before you modify it to meet your needs. For the most frequently used tax forms, the quickest way to obtain an official form is to request reproduction proofs of these forms. (See Sec. 20.)

.02 Design. Each form must follow the design of the official form as to format, arrangement, item caption, line numbers, line references, and sequence.

.03 State Tax Information Prohibited. State tax information must not appear (be visible) on the federal tax return or associated form or schedule which is filed with the Internal Revenue Service, except where amounts are claimed on or required by the federal return, e.g., line 5, Schedule A (Form 1040). (See Sec. 12.05 Block Out Methods.)

.04 Federal and State Columns. When a form is designed with both federal and state columns, the federal column must be to the left of the state column and adjacent to the line caption. Again, state tax information must not be on a federal tax form.

.05 Vertical Alignment of Amount Fields.

1. When a form is to be computer-prepared, you may remove the vertical line in the amount field that separates dollars from cents. When a form is to be computer-generated, vertically align the amount entry fields where possible. You must also use one of the ten-character amount formats shown in Sec. 23.04. Amount fields may be "rounded off" to dollars only, where form instructions specifically permit such entries.

2. When a form is to be manually prepared, the federal column must have a vertical line or some type of indicator in the amount field to separate dollars from cents if the official form has a vertical line. The cents columns must be at least 1/8-inch wide.

.06 Sequence Number. Please note that most forms have a "sequence number" located just below the year designation in the upper right corner of the form. The Service uses this number to indicate the order in which forms are processed when filed with a return. On computer-prepared forms it must be printed no less than 12-point, bold-face type and centered below the form's year designation. On computer-generated forms, place this sequence number following the year designation for the tax form and separate with an asterisk. It is not necessary to duplicate the "Attachment Sequence No." wording, except for the actual number. (See Forms Exhibits at the end of this Revenue Procedure).

.07 Sequence Numbers Required. The sequence number is required on most Internal Revenue Service forms. Please note that some of the numbers necessarily change each year. The specific sequence numbers used on official IRS forms must be duplicated on the representative substitute form. If a sequence number is not provided on the official form, it is not required on a substitute of that form either.

.08 Paid Preparer's Information and Signature Area.

1. On Forms 1040A, 1040, and 1120, etc., the "Paid Preparer's Use Only" area may not be rearranged or relocated. You may, however, add three extra lines to the paid preparer's address area without prior approval. This applies to other tax forms as well.

2. On Form 1040EZ this information must be provided at the bottom of the form below the taxpayer's signature area. As an alternative, the printed Paid Preparer's Information and Signature Area from either a Form 1040 or 1040A may be attached to the bottom of Form 1040EZ.

.09 Assemblage of Forms. When filing a return (i.e., Form 1040), the return must be arranged in this order: (1) the tax return, (2) Form 1040 schedules and forms in sequence number order, (3) all others (Form 1120, 1120S, 1065, 1041, etc.), lettered schedules (Schedule D, etc.) in alphabetical order and numbered forms in numerical order (Forms 2220, 4626, etc.), (4) supporting statements in the same sequence as the forms they support, and (5) additional information required or voluntarily submitted. In this way, they are received in the order in which they must be processed. If you do not send them to us in this order, the Service has to delay the return package to disassemble them and place them in this order before processing is continued.

SEC. 9. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS: PAPER

.01 Paper Content. The paper must be:

1. Chemical wood writing paper that is equal to or better than the quality used for the official form;
2. at least 18 pound (17″ × 22″, 500 sheets); or
3. at least 45 pound (25″ × 38″, 500 sheets).

.02 Paper Prohibited. Carbon-bonded paper is prohibited from use for all substitute forms filed with the Service.

.03 Paper with Chemical Transfer Properties—Limited Use. Chemical transfer paper for all substitute forms may be used only when the following specifications are met.

1. Each ply within the chemical transfer set of forms must be labeled.
2. Only the top ply (ply one and white in color), the one which contains chemical on the back only (coated back), may be filed with the Service. For example, a set containing three plies would be constructed as follows: ply one (coated back), "Federal Return, File with IRS"; ply two (coated front and back), "Taxpayer's copy"; and ply three (coated front), "Preparer's copy."
3. The file designation, "Federal Return, File with IRS," for ply one must be printed in the bottom right margin (just below the last line of the form) in 12-point, bold-face type. It is not mandatory, but recommended, that the file designation, "Federal Return, File with IRS," be printed in a contrasting ink for visual emphasis.
4. Carbon Paper. We prefer that you do not attach any carbon paper to any return you file with the Service.

.04 Paper and Ink Color. We prefer that the color of paper substantially duplicate that of the original form. You may use white paper. This means that your substitute must be printed in black ink and may be on white or on the color paper the Service form is printed on. Forms 1040A, 1040EZ, and 1040 substitute reproductions may be in black ink without the colored screening. The only exception to this rule is Form 1041ES, which should always be printed with a very light gray shading in the color screened area (an alternative is the salmon color originally specified on the Service reproduction proof). This is necessary to assist us in expeditiously separating this form from the very similar Form 1040ES.

.05 Page Size. Substitute or reproduced forms and computer-prepared/generated substitutes may be the same size as the official form (8" × 11", in most cases) or they may be the standard commercial size (8 1/2" × 11") exclusive of pin-feed holes. The thickness of the stock cannot be less than .003 inch.

.06 Lined Paper. Computer-generated substitute forms must be submitted on quality lined, machine paper. Lined, color-barred paper (of any bar coloration) is also acceptable. Lined paper assists Service employees during processing of the returns by allowing speedy and accurate location of tax entries corresponding to line captions. The lines provide the basic means for eye-travel from one side of the form to the other, and significantly reduces processing errors. Only original forms should be filed with IRS, as copies frequently do not meet legibility requirements, especially copies of forms originally printed on color-barred paper stock.

.07 Exceptions to Lined Paper Requirement. If your printer has underlining capability, you do not have to use lined or color-barred paper so long as you consistently underline text lines on the form. The underlining must be a continuous line and extend from the left text margin to the right text margin and be the same length for all lines on the page. Also, the use of printed vertical and horizontal graphics can produce an acceptable linear image of the official form, and is an approvable exception on a case by case basis.

SEC. 10. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS: PRINTING

.01 Printing Medium. The private printing of all substitute tax forms must be by conventional printing processes, photocopying, computer-graphics, or similar reproduction processes.

.02 Legibility. All forms must have a high standard of legibility, both as to printing and reproduction and as to fill-in matter. The Service reserves the right to reject those with poor legibility. The ink and printing method used must ensure that no part of a form (including text, graphics, data entries, etc.) developes "smears" or similar quality deterioration, including any subsequent copies of reproductions made from an approved master substitute form; either during preparation or during Service processing.

.03 Type Font. Almost all federal tax forms are printed using "News Gothic" as the basic type font. We request that you use this type font when composing any substitute forms.

.04 Image Size. The image size of printed substitute forms should be as close as possible to that of the official form. You may omit any text on both computer-prepared and computer-generated forms that is solely instructional.

.05 Title Area Changes. To allow a larger top margin for marginal printing and more lines per page (see Sec. 11 below), the title line(s) for all substitute forms (not including the form's year designation and sequence code, when present), may be photographically reduced by 40 percent or reset as one line of type. When reset as one line, the type size may be no smaller than 14-point. You may omit "Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service" and all reference to instructions in the form's title area.

.06 Remove Government Printing Office Symbol. When privately printing substitute tax forms, the Government Printing Office symbol and/or jacket number must be removed. In the same place, using the same type size, print the Employer Identifying Number (EIN) or the Social Security Number (SSN) of the printer or designer.

.07 Printing On One Side of Paper. While it is preferred that both sides of the paper be used for substitute and reproduced forms, resulting in the same page arrangement as that of the official form or schedule, the Service will not object if only one side of the paper is used.

.08 Photocopy Equipment. The Service does not undertake to approve or disapprove the specific equipment or process used in reproducing official forms, but requires only that the reproduced forms satisfy the conditions stated in the revenue procedures.

.09 Reproductions. Reproductions of official forms and substitute forms which do not meet the requirements of this revenue procedure may not be filed instead of the official forms.

.10 Removal of Instructions. You may remove all references to instructions. No prior approval is needed. One exception is that the statement "For Paperwork Reduction Act Notice, See Instructions", must be retained or a similar statement provided on each form.

SEC. 11. PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND REQUIREMENTS: MARGINS

.01 Margin Size.

1. The format of a reproduced tax return when printed on the page must have margins on all sides at least as large as the margins on the official form. This allows room for Service employees to make the necessary entries on the form during processing.

2. A one-half to one quarter inch margin must be maintained across the top, bottom, and both sides (exclusive of any pin-feed holes) of all computer-generated substitutes. The margin area is also used by Service employees to make necessary entries on the form during processing.

3. The marginal, perforated strips containing the pin-feed holes must be removed from all forms prior to filing with the Service.

.02 Marginal Printing.

1. Non-Tax Material Allowed in Limited Areas.

(a) On any 8- or 8 1/2-inch-wide Service or substitute form, you may print your logo, compnay or firm name, identifying and collation symbols, etc., in the left half of the top margin.

(b) With the exception of the actual tax return forms (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.), you may also print in the left vertical margin and in the left half of the bottom margin.

(c) Printing is never allowed in the right half of the top of the tax return form (i.e. Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.). The Service uses this area to imprint a File Location Number for each return.

2. Prior Approval Not Required. Prior approval is not required for the marginal printing allowed in 1 above when used with the unchanged exhibits in this revenue procedure or when printed on an unofficial form, on a photocopy of an official form or on an (unchanged) IRS reproduction proof.

3. Prior Approval Required. The marginal printing allowance in 1 above is also the guide for the preparation of acceptable substitute forms. There is no exception to the requirement that no printing is allowed in the right half of the top margin of the tax return form.

SEC. 12. APPROVED SUBSTITUTE FORMATS FOR FORM 1040 SCHEDULES

.01 Exhibits of Approved Formats. Two sets of exhibits (Exhibits A-1, B-1, A-2 and B-2) are at the end of this revenue procedure. They are acceptable substitutes for the official forms. They are intended to be used in place of the official forms and may be used without prior approval. Both sets are usable for manual entry or computer preparation. Vertical spacing is six (6) lines to the inch. You may also refer to them as examples of how the guidelines in this revenue procedure may be used in some specific cases. Please note that the Service does not supply reproduction proofs for these exhibits.

.02 Printing or Duplication of Exhibits A-1 and A-2 and B-1 and B-2. You may (1) print these exhibits or (2) duplicate them photographically or by using photo-reproduction techniques, providing your printed or reproduced images are exactly like the ones in the exhibits. With the exception noted below, nothing can be changed.

.03 EXCEPTION. In Exhibit A-1 and A-2 you may change the areas containing "other" items (lines 1c, 7, 9b, 14b, 21 and 25) as follows: (1) the areas inside the perimeter of the boxes containing the dash-leaders (---) may be used to print any particular deduction item associated with the corresponding deduction category, and (2) the dash-leaders may be removed (but you may not change the amount column box size or position).

.04 Exhibits A-1 and A-2.

1. Exhibit A-1. This substitute Schedule A format may be used as a single sheet or as one of the copies of a snap-set. It is designed to be used in place of the official Schedule A (Form 1040).

2. Exhibit A-2. This substitute Schedule A format may be used as a single sheet when both federal and state tax information is placed on the same form.

3. No State Tax Information. No state tax information can appear on these forms when filed with the Form 1040. The state column may be present but the state tax information must not be visible when filed with the Service. We prefer that the entire state column be completely blocked out.

.05 BLOCK OUT METHODS. A suggested method to block out the state tax information is: (1) place the substitute form in a clear plastic folder, (2) on the folder, place a strip of opaque material the exact width and length of the column you wish to block out, then (3) photocopy the substitute form while still in the folder. The result will be a form with only the federal tax information visible. Another method is to take a black marking pen and, using either vertical or horizontal strokes, cross out the state figures. Carbon-interleaved sets may be used where the amounts entered in the state column are filled in with black carbon overprint. This copy may be filed with the return.

.06 Exhibits B-1 and B-2. These exhibits correspond to Exhibits A-1 and A-2, and the provisions in .04.1 and 2 above apply. Both of these exhibits are acceptable for use in place of the official Schedule B (Form 1040).

.07 Exhibits A-1 and B-1 or A-2 and B-2. These exhibits may be used as sets when the return calls for both Schedule A and B.

1. Acceptable computer-generated formats for the schedules usually attached to the Form 1040 are shown in the Exhibits section of this revenue procedure. The exhibits are for Schedules A, B, C, D, E, F, R, and

SE. Schedule 1 (Form 1040A) is also included. All are acceptable substitutes for the official forms. They are intended to be used (without change) in place of the official forms and may be used without prior approval. All lines (including those not used for tax information) must be printed. (Any change to text or format of an exhibit requires prior written approval.) Vertical spacing is six (6) lines to the inch. You may also refer to them as examples of how the guidelines in this revenue procedure may be used in specific cases.

2. A combination of upper and lower case print fonts is acceptable in producing the computer-generated forms included in this procedure.

3. An exhibit of Form 3903 is included as an example, to reflect the computer-generation of any other non-schedule tax forms. This same logic can be applied to any Service form that is normally reproducible as a substitute form.

SEC. 13. SPECIFICATIONS FOR FILING SUBSTITUTE SCHEDULES K-1

Prior approval is NOT required for a substitute Schedule K-1 that accompanies Form 1065 (for partnership), a Form 1120-S (for small business corporation), or a Form 1041 (for fiduciary) when the substitute Schedule K-1 meets all of the following requirements.

.01 The Schedule K-1 must contain the payer and recipient's name, address and SSN/EIN.

.02 The Schedule K-1 must contain all line items required for use by the taxpayer.

.03 The line items must be in the same order and arrangement as those on the official form.

.04 The line items must be numbered, titled, and/or captioned exactly as shown on the official form.

.05 Each taxpayer's information must be on a separate sheet of paper. Therefore, all continuously printed substitutes must be separated, by taxpayer, before filing with the Service.

.06 Schedules K-1 for recipients must have instructions for required line items attached.

.07 You may be subject to penalties if you file Schedules K-1 with the Service and furnish Schedules K-1 to partners, shareholders, or beneficiaries that do not conform to the specifications of this revenue procedure.

.08 The amount of each partner's, shareholder's, or beneficiary's share of each line item must be shown. The furnishing of a total amount for each line item and a percentage (or decimal equivalent) to be applied to such total amount by the partner, shareholder, or beneficiary does not satisfy the law and the specifications of this revenue procedure.

.09 If you file Schedules K-1 not conforming to the above specifications, IRS may consider these as not processable and return them to you to be filed correctly. You may also be subject to the penalty as mentioned in .07 above.

SEC. 14. REQUIRED PREPARATION OF FORMS

.01 Completely Fill In Lines. You must completely fill in all the specified numbered or referenced lines as they appear on the official forms on computer-prepared or generated forms, (not just the totals but all the items that make up the totals as well) before attaching any supporting statement (see Sec. 15 below for exceptions).

.02 IRS Processing of Forms. The Service processes the return based on information entered on the official forms or approved substitutes. References are made to attachments only as required by law and as requirements direct. When you fail to complete all the pertinent lines on the official forms, Service Tax Examiners have to locate the information on your attachment and write it on the proper line of the official form. This time consuming process causes delays in processing the return and increases the potential for errors both in transcription and in interpretation.

.03 Notification of Preparers. The Service is continuing a program to notify preparers who fail to meet the requirement to completely fill in lines.

SEC. 15. EXCEPTIONS TO LINE COMPLETION REQUIREMENTS

.01 Zero Entries. Detailed information for any deduction or income category may be omitted from the printout if the category total to be reported is zero. However, the substitute form must show the total (zero when applicable) for each category. This means when no tax information is applicable, leave the line blank.

.02 Lines Captioned "Other" (All Forms). It is not necessary to fill in every numbered or referenced line of tax forms when the line caption calls for "Other," i.e., "Other (itemize)," "Other (specify)," "Other (attach schedule)," etc. Examples of this exception are lines 1c, 7, 9b, 14b, 21 and 25 for Schedule A, Form 1040. When this occurs, you may use a supporting statement and enter only the total amount of these "Other" items on the line of the official form. However, we prefer that you use the space on the official form when it is adequate.

.03 Schedule A (Form 1040). All numbered and lettered lines must be filled in, if applicable. Supporting statements may be used to give the details of the totals entered on such lines but may not be used as substitute for a collection of lines. For example, the detailed information for "Taxes" may now be shown on a supporting statement (supplemental schedule) and only line 8 filled in. Lines 5 through 7 must also be completed. Also, for example the details of "State and local income taxes" may be shown on a supporting statement and the total of such taxes entered on line 5. Also, the total of itemized deductions must be entered on line 26.

.04 Schedule B (Form 1040). Lines 2 and 4 need not be filled in on the form. A supporting statement may be used for the details of interest and dividend income and the appropriate totals of such income entered on lines 3 and 5, unless nominee distribution or accrued interest criteria apply. (See the tax package instructions concerning interest and dividends.)

.05 Schedule C (Form 1040). All lines must be filled in when applicable, except the line where "Other expenses-list type and amount" is listed. (See instruction in .02 above). Also, all Questions A through M must be present and answered.

.06 Schedule E (Form 1040).

1. When there are entries on page 1 for any of Part I, the following requirements must be met: (1) In Part I, lines 1, 2, and 3, the questions must be answered and tax information must be entered on the lines provided.

2. Supporting statements may be used for the details of rental and royalty income and expenses. The appropriate totals must be carried over and entered in the total column for lines 4, 5, 12, 20, 21 and 25 through 29.

3. Part II (page 2)—The income and loss from various partnerships, estates or trusts, small business corporations, etc. also may be detailed on a supporting statement, but the appropriate total income and total loss must be entered on lines 30 through 43.

4. As applicable, either page 1 or page 2 may be filed separately and independently of each other, as a valid Schedule E. Both pages are not required, unless the entered tax data applies to all parts of the form.

.07 Schedule F (Form 1040). If the cash method is used, only page one is needed. Otherwise both pages one and two must be entirely printed. Page two cannot be filed separately.

SEC. 16. SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

.01 Use of Supporting Statements. Supporting statements are to be used to explain an individual line entry on an official or substitute form. Unless specifically authorized by this revenue procedure (see Sec. 15), they must not be used to avoid completing required lines on the official form, or in lieu of a prescribed official schedule or form. Supporting statements are never to be used until the required official return or form they support are first totally filled in (completed). It is not acceptable to submit a blank or incomplete official form that refers to a supporting statement, and then to submit the form data entries solely on the statement, in lieu of completing a tax return or form.

.02 Supporting Statements. Supporting statements must: (1) provide details and explain entries made on the official form, (2) furnish all required information in the same sequence as called for on the official form, (3) furnish any additional information in the order of appearance on the form to which it refers, and (4) show taxpayer's name and social security number (SSN) or employer identification number (EIN), as applicable, and (5) clearly identify which official form it supports.

.03 Cross-Reference. Each supporting statement must be referenced to the form it supports, and the entry on the form must be cross-referenced to the supporting statement. For example, put "Statement X" on the top of the supporting statement that contains the identified line number and the supporting information, and put "See Statement X" on the line of the form that references the statement.

.04 Extent of Use. You may attach supporting statements to explain or support any line item on an official or approved substitute form.

.05 Assemblage. For filing purposes, supporting statements are not attached directly to their related forms. Rather, all supporting statements are assembled in the same sequence as the forms they support; they are then placed at the back of the form package, after the lettered and numbered forms (See Sec. 8.09).

.06 Multiple Supporting Statements. Supporting statements for each numbered or lettered form must have a separate page for its supporting statement(s). Each page should be the size of the form it supports, or it may be 8" × 11" or 8 1/2" × 11".

.07 Not Reviewed for Approval. The Service does not give its approval for specific supporting statements. The taxpayer or the tax practitioner for the taxpayer, must meet the needs as they arise, using the guidelines in this revenue procedure.

SEC. 17. SPECIFICATIONS FOR FILING SUBSTITUTE FORMS

.01 Filing Substitute Forms. Follow the same instructions as for filing official forms. These instructions are in the taxpayer's tax package.

.02 Computer-Prepared Tax Forms. For filing purposes the Service will accept computer-prepared tax returns (i.e., Forms 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) filled in by a computer or a word-processing equipment or similar manual equipment, but these forms must be pre-printed.

.03 Computer-Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept computer-generated versions of forms that are attached to individual and business income tax returns, provided the substitutes and their manner of completion meet the guidelines prescribed herein.

.04 Combination of Manually Prepared and Computer-Prepared/Generated Forms. For filing purposes, the Service will accept substitute tax forms that contain a combination of computer-prepared/generated and manually filled in information.

.05 Taxpayer and Preparer Signatures. All taxpayer signatures on forms to be filed with the Service must be original signatures, affixed subsequent to the reproduction process. However, the income tax preparer can satisfy the manual signature requirement by signing a completed income tax return form, making a photocopy of the return form, and having the taxpayer sign and file the photocopy. (See Rev. Rul. 78-370, 1978-2 C.B. 336).

.06 Use Preaddressed Label Information. When filing substitute or reproduced forms, use either (1) the preaddressed label included in the tax package the Service sent to the taxpayer, (2) your own printed label, duplicating exactly the SSN and all the name and address information from the Service label, including the two alpha characters preceding the Social Security Number, or (3) the printed alpha characters preceding the SSN, the SSN, and all name and address information in the same format as printed on the Service label. Use of this label information avoids larger processing costs because it reduces the potential for error—the kind of error which can delay the receipt of refund and information needed by the taxpayer, as well as significantly reducing the processing time for each return.

1. If taxpayer name(s) or address are incorrect on the Service label, line out old name(s) or address and insert corrected information on the preaddressed label provided ((1) above). In (2) and (3) above, print corrected name(s) or address on your duplicated label or in the appropriate form area, as applicable. NOTE: Whenever a correction is made to name(s) and/or address, DO NOT print the two alpha characters located in the upper left corner (preceding the SSN) of all Service preaddressed labels.

2. If you propose printing your own (substitute) return label ((2) above), or propose printing name and address information directly on tax forms ((3) above), you must first forward the Service an example of your printed label or entity data format as it will appear on your forms, for approval prior to actual use. Mail your format examples for approval to the office specified in Section 6 of this Revenue Procedure.

3. The only acceptable computer-generated format, to be used on a substitute label or to be printed directly on tax forms, is shown in the Exhibit Section of this Revenue Procedure.

.07 Use Internal Revenue Service Envelope. When filing substitute or reproduced forms, use the envelope enclosed with the taxpayer's tax package. This envelope is coded for sorting into several categories. Use of the coded envelope can help speed up the processing and reduce processing costs. Do not use the Service-provided, tax-package envelope for other correspondence with the Service, as its misuse can delay the correspondence. (See Section 37 for the only acceptable exception to the use of official IRS envelopes).

.08 Voluntarily Submitted Information. Additional information required or voluntarily submitted should be on the same size paper as the official form and attached to the return following the supporting statements. (See Sec. 8.09.)

SEC. 20. ORDERING REPRODUCTION PROOFS

.01 The Service provides for the public camera-ready, reproduction proofs of many of its printed tax forms. These reproduction proofs can only be ordered by using Form 6747, Order for Reproduction Proofs. Form 6747 can be obtained by written request to Internal Revenue Service, PM:S:FM:P, Attention: Reproduction Proof Coordinator, Room 1528, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20224.

1. Recorded forms distribution information is continuously available, and may be accessed by dialing 202-566-2473 or 2474 (not toll-free numbers). This recording provides for the receipt of form requests and inquiries at the end of the taped message.

.02 Basic specifications, such as margin, pagination, etc., will be printed in the margins of the reproduction proofs and must be removed before printing. The official reproduction proof margins across the top, bottom, and sides must be maintained on all reproductions and substitute forms.

.03 A charge of $1.00 per page will be made for each reproduction proof regardless of page size. After an order has been filled, invoices will be mailed to the requestor.

SEC. 21. AGREEMENT

Any person or company who uses substitute forms and makes all or part of the changes specified in this revenue procedure, agrees to the following stipulation: The Service presumes the changes are made in accordance with these procedures and, as such, will be noninterruptive to the processing of the tax return. Should any of the changes prove to be not exactly as described, and as a result become disruptive to the Service during processing of the tax return, the person or company agrees to accept the determination of the Service as to whether or not the form may continue to be used during the filing season, and also agrees to work with the Service in correcting noted deficiencies. Notification of deficiencies may be made by letter, phone call, or both.

SEC. 22. CONDITIONS—TAX FORMS (1040A, 1040EZ, 1040, 1120, 940, 941, Etc.)

.01 PROHIBITED FORMS.

1. COMPUTER-GENERATED VERSIONS.

Computer-generated versions of a tax return form (e.g., Form 1040, 1040EZ, 1040A, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) which requires a signature are not permitted. Only preprinted substitutes of these forms are allowed (e.g., Reproductions that contain manually entered or computer-prepared entries). Approval is extended to consider certain types of computer-generated graphic formats as acceptable "preprinted" substitutes. All such forms must have formal approval prior to their use.

2. COMPUTER-GENERATED GRAPHICS—First Time Users

First-time users who design substitute forms using computer-graphics (e.g. laser printing, dot matrix addressable printing, etc.) must receive prior approval before using them. Exception: Experienced users who have previously received written approval from the Service for tax forms do not need written approval before using their forms. This assumes that all new requirements for the tax year have been fully complied with, based on actual comparison with the final versions of the official IRS forms. However, users are bound by the agreement in Sec. 21.

.02 FILL-IN INFORMATION.

The tax return form itself (i.e., 1040, 1040A, 1040EZ, 1120, 940, 941, etc.) may be filled in by a computer printer or other similar automated equipment, but the form itself must be created beforehand (i.e. preprinted) using conventional printing methods, photocopying, computer-graphics (laser printing) or other similar reproduction processes.

.03 CHANGES PERMITTED TO THE FORMS 1040, 1040A & 1040EZ.

1. Certain changes (listed below) are permitted to the graphics of the form without prior approval, but these changes apply only to preprinted forms as described in .02 above.

2. Changes not requiring prior approval are good only for the annual filing period, which is the current Tax Year.

3. Other Changes Not Listed. All changes not listed here require prior approval from the Service BEFORE the form may be filed with the Service.

SEC. 23. CHANGES PERMITTED TO GRAPHICS (FORMS 1040A, 1040 AND 1040EZ).

Changes Permitted to the Graphics on Forms 1040, 1040A and 1040EZ and, Where Applicable, on Other Forms as Well for Use With Computer-Prepared (i.e. printed forms Only).

.01 Adjustments.

You may make minor vertical and horizontal spacing adjustments to allow for computer or word-processing printing. This includes widening the amount columns or tax entry areas so long as the adjustments do not exceed other provisions stated in revenue procedures. No prior approval is needed for these changes. However, the user of forms with such changes are bound by the "Agreement" in Section 21.

.02 Name and Address Area.

1. The horizontal rules and instructions within the name and address area may be removed and the entire area left blank; no line or instruction can remain in the area. However, the statement regarding use of the IRS mail label should be retained.

2. The heavy ruled border (when present) that outlines the name and address area must not be removed, relocated, expanded or contracted.

3. Requirement Format

(a) When the name and address area is left blank, as provided in 1 above, the following format must be used when printing the taxpayer's name and address. Otherwise, unless the taxpayer's preprinted label is affixed over the information entered in this area, the lines must be filled-in as shown.

1st name line (35 characters maximum)
In-care-of name line (35 characters maximum)
Street address (35 characters maximum)
City, State (24 char. max.), one blank char., & zip (five char.)

(b) When there is no in-care-of name line, the name and address will consist of only three lines. Examples of the formats follow:

Example of name and address with no in-care-of name line:

JOHN AND MARY JONES
1234 ANYWHERE ST. APT 111
ANYTOWN, DC 12345

Example of name and address with in-care-of line:

JOHN AND MARY JONES
C/O THOMAS A. JONES
4311 SOMEWHERE AVE.
SAMETOWN, DC 54321

.03 Social Security Number (SSN) AND Employer Identification Number (EIN) Area.

1. The vertical lines separating the format arrangement of the SSN/EIN may be removed.

2. When the vertical lines are removed, the SSN and EIN formats must be 000-00-0000 or 00-0000000, respectively.

.04 Cents Columns.

1. You may remove the vertical rule that separates the dollars from the cents.

2. All entries in the amount column should have a decimal point following the whole dollar amounts whether or not the vertical line that separates the dollars from the cents is present.

3. You may omit printing the cents, but all amounts entered on the form must follow a consistent format. You are strongly urged to round off the figures to whole dollar amounts, following the official return instructions.

4. When printing money amounts, you must use one of the following ten-character formats: (a) 0,000,000. (b) 000,000.00

5. When there is no entry for a line, leave the line blank.

.05 "Paid Preparer's Use Only" Area.

1. On all forms, where present, the paid preparer's information area may not be rearranged or relocated.

2. You may add three lines and remove the horizontal rules in the preparer's address area.

3. Form 1040EZ preparers must sign the return and provide all other required information. This information should be provided at the bottom of the form below the taxpayer's signature area. (See Section 8.)

SEC. 24. CHANGES PERMITTED TO FORM 1040A GRAPHICS

No prior approval is needed for the following changes (for use with computer-prepared forms only):

.01 Line 4.

The line caption may be compressed vertically to one line (to allow for same line entry for the name of the qualifying child) by using the following caption:

"Head of household; child's name . . ." name field

.02 Other Lines.

Any line whose caption takes up two or more vertical lines may be compressed to one line by using contractions, etc., and by removing instructional references.

.03 Page 2 (Form 1040A).

All lines must be present and numbered in the order shown on the official form. These lines may also be compressed as in .02 above.

.04 Color Screening.

It is not necessary to duplicate the color-screening used on the official form. A substitute Form 1040A may be printed in black and white only, with no color screening.

SEC. 25. OTHER CHANGES PROHIBITED

No other changes to the Form 1040A graphics are allowed without prior approval.

SEC. 26. CHANGES PERMITTED TO THE FORM 1040 GRAPHICS

No prior approval is needed for the following changes (for use with computer-prepared forms only).

.01 Line 4. This line may be compressed horizontally (to allow for a larger entry area for the name of the qualifying child) by using the following caption:

"Head of household; child's name" (name field)

.02 Line 6c.

1 The vertical lines separating columns (1) through (5) may be removed. The captions may be shortened to allow a one-line caption for each column.

2 The number of lines for listing "dependents" may be expanded by compressing other noted areas and lines.

.03 Other Lines.

Any other line whose caption takes up two or more vertical lines may be compressed to one line by using contractions, etc., and by removing instructional references.

.04 Line 21.

1. This line may be expanded vertically to a maximum of 3 lines.

2. The amount entry box must remain a single entry.

.05 Line 37. You may change the line caption to read "Tax" and computer-print either the words "FROM TAX TABLES:" OR "FROM SCHEDULE/FORM" and computer-print the appropriate text.

.06 Line 38. You may change the caption to read: "Additional taxes from Form" and computer-print only the form(s) that apply.

.07 Line 45. You may change the caption to read: "General business credit from Form" and computer-print only the form(s) that apply.

.08 Color Screening. It is not necessary to duplicate the color-screening used on the official form. A substitute Form 1040 may be printed in black and white only, with no color screening.

SEC. 27. OTHER CHANGES PROHIBITED

No other changes to the Form 1040 graphics are permitted without prior approval.

SEC. 28. ACCEPTABLE FORMATS OF COMPUTER-GENERATED FORMS AND SCHEDULES

.01 Exhibits of acceptable computer-generated formats for the schedules usually attached to the Form 1040 are shown in the Exhibits section of this revenue procedure.

.02 Use of Acceptable Formats. If your computer-generated forms appear exactly like the exhibits, no prior authorization is needed.

.03 Changes to exhibits are not permitted without prior approval. Any change to the text or format of any of the exhibits requires prior written approval.

SEC. 29. COMPUTER-GENERATED FORMS NOT SHOWN AS EXHIBITS IN THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE.

.01 Those desiring to computer-generate forms not shown here may do so, but they must design such forms themselves by following the manner and style of those in the Exhibits section of this publication, and by taking care to observe other requirements and conditions stated here.

.02 Computer-generated forms so designed do not require prior approval from the Service. However, the user of such forms is bound by the "Agreement" in Sec. 21 above. The Service encourages the submission of all proposed forms for review and approval.

.03 If you wish, you may submit any substitute form to the Service for approval consideration, or you may submit only a representative sample of your forms.

SEC. 30. INSTRUCTIONS FOR PREPARING COMPUTER-GENERATED SUBSTITUTES

.01 Format Arrangement.

The format of each substitute schedule or form must follow the format of the official schedule or form as to item captions, line references, line numbers, sequence, form arrangement and format, etc. Basically try to make the form look like the official one, with readability and consistency being primary factors. Use periods and/or other special characters to separate the various parts and sections of the form. With the exceptions in .02 below, all line numbers and items must be printed even though an amount is not entered on the line.

.02 Line Numbers.

1. When a line on an official form is designated by a number or a letter, that designation (reference code) must be used on a substitute form.

2. The reference code must be printed to the left of the corresponding captioned line and also immediately preceding the data entry field even if there is no reference code immediately preceding the data entry field on the official form.

3. In addition, the reference code that is immediately before the data field must either be followed by a period or enclosed in parentheses. There also must be at least two blank spaces between the period or the right parentheses and the first digit of the data field. (See example below.)

4. A decimal point (i.e., a period) should be used for each money amount regardless of whether the amount is reported in dollars and cents or in whole dollars, or whether or not the vertical line that separates the dollars from the cents is present. The decimal points must be vertically aligned when possible.

Example:

5 STATE & LOCAL INC. TAXES	5.	495.00
6 REAL ESTATE TAXES............................	6.
7 OTHER TAXES (LIST)	7.	198.00
or
5 STATE & LOCAL INC. TAXES	(5)	495.00
6 REAL ESTATE TAXES...........................	(6)
7 OTHER TAXES (LIST)	(7)	198.00

.03 Multiple Page Forms. With the exceptions noted below, when printing multiple page forms the entire form with all its parts and pages must be printed. When printed on continuous forms, they must be burst and pin-feed holes removed before filing with the return.

.04 Exception to Forms that must be entirely printed in whole or in part.

1. On Schedule E, it is not necessary to print both pages if data does not apply. Either page one or page two can be printed and filed separately.

2. On Schedule F, depending on which accounting method is used (cash or accrual), the following will apply. If the cash accounting method is used only page one of Schedule F needs to be printed. Otherwise both page one and two must be entirely printed. Page two cannot be filed separately.

SEC. 31. ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR ALL FORMS

.01 Internal control numbers and identifying symbols of the computer preparer may be shown on the substitute, if the use of such numbers or symbols is acceptable to the taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative. If shown, such information must not be printed in the top one-half inch clear area, from the center to the right edge, of any form or schedule requiring a signature. With the exception of the actual tax return form (i.e. Forms 1040, 1120, 940, 941, etc.), you may also print in the left vertical and bottom left margins. The bottom left margin you may use extends 3 1/2 inches from the left edge of the form. (See Sec. 11 for more information on this subject.)

.02 Descriptions for captions, lines, etc., appearing on the substitute forms may be limited to one print line by using abbreviations and contractions and by omitting articles, prepositions, etc. However, sufficient key words must be retained to permit ready identification of the caption, line or item.

1. Explanatory detail and/or intermediate calculations for derivation of fine line totals, may be included on the substitute. We prefer that such calculations be submitted in the form of a supporting statement. If intermediate calculations are included on the substitute, the line on which they appear may not be numbered or lettered. Intermediate calculations may not be printed in the right column. This column is reserved for official numbered and lettered lines that correspond to the ones on the official form. If a supporting statement is submitted, intermediate calculations or subtotals may be formatted at the preparer's option.

2. Text prescribed for the official form, which is solely instructional in nature, e.g., "Attach this schedule to Form 1040," "See instructions," etc., may be omitted from the substitute form.

3. Information for more than one schedule or form may not be shown on the same printout page. Except for high volume computer-generated Schedules A and B (Form 1040), almost any form may be continued on two or more pages if necessary. When a form is continued on two or more pages, clearly identify at the bottom of each page, including page 1, that is continued, e.g., "Page 1, Schedule C Continued." It is strongly recommended that a substitute form not exceed the same number of pages used for the official form.

(a) Both sides of the paper may be printed for multiple page official forms; but it is unacceptable to intermix single page schedules or forms, except for Schedules A and B which are printed back to back by the Service. For example Schedule E can be printed on both sides of the paper, because the official form is multiple page, with page two continued on the back. However, for example, do not print Schedule E on the front page and Schedule SE on the back, or Schedule A on the front and Form 3903 on the back, etc.). Both pages of a substitute form must match the official form version it represents, except that the back page may be blank if the Service form only contains form instructions thereon.

4. Identify all computer-prepared substitutes clearly; print the form designation one-half inch from the top margin and one and one-half inches from the left margin; print the title centered on the first. line of print; and print the taxable year and, where applicable, the sequence number on the same line one-half to one inch from right margin. Include the taxpayer's name and SSN on all forms and attachments. Also print the OMB number and (when applicable) the forms expiration date, as reflected on the official form.

5. The state tax column may be present, but the state tax information must NOT be visible on the copy filed with the Service. When a form is designed with both federal and state columns, the federal column must be to the left of the state column and adjacent to the line caption.

6. Attach all payments (check or money order, no cash) to the front of the tax return.

7. Negative (or loss) monetary amount entries should be enclosed in brackets, or signed minus, to assist in the accurate computation and input of form data. On many official forms the Service pre-prints brackets in selected negative data fields, and these designations should be retained or inserted on affected substitute forms.

SEC. 32. FILING SUBSTITUTE FORMS WITH THE SERVICE

Follow the same instructions as for filing official forms. These instructions are in the taxpayer's tax package.

SEC. 33. SPECIAL FORM 1040EZ OPTICAL CHARACTER RECOGNITION (OCR) REQUIREMENTS

.01 The Form 1040EZ is designed in OCR format. IRS has the capability to machine read this form by optical character recognition (OCR) equipment (Scan-Optics-System 540 and Recognition Equipment Inc.—Input 80 Model B Scanner).

.02 It is optional to produce the 1040EZ substitute as a normal (black and white) reproduction, or as an actual OCR version. The following criteria applies if the form is to be OCR scannable. Otherwise, you may print this form under the previous general guidelines of this Revenue Procedure.

.03 An acceptable substitute OCR Form 1040EZ must generally be an exact replica of the official OCR reproduction proof with respect to layout, content and required OCR characteristics.

.04 The specific paper requirements which must be met for the development of a substitute (privately printed) OCR Form 1040EZ include the following:

1. Color and quality of paper—Paper must be white, OCR grade bond, with no fluorescent additives or water marks, and with zero rag content.

2. Reflectivity of paper—Must be 80% or greater.

3. Opacity—The paper opacity ratio must be 80% or more.

4. Paper Weight—Specified paper weight is 20 lb. OCR bond (.0035″).

5. Dirt—Must not exceed 10 parts per million.

6. Finish (smoothness)—Must be between 90 and 160 units (Sheffield).

7. Porosity—Paper should have a Gurley reading between 15 and 95.

8. Gloss—Paper with shiny or lustrous appearance (glossy) should be avoided.

9. Size—Form trim size must be 8″ × 11″.

.05 The specific ink requirements which must be met for this form include the following:

1. Print Color—The face of the form prints in black and green, the back prints in black only.

2. Ink—Green ink used must be highly reflective OCR type, such as Sinclaire and Valentine J-27975, or an exact match. Black ink used must be non-reflective.

3. Face Registration—Black to green must be .02″ (plus or minus) both horizontally and vertically.

4. Face Screen—Forms contain a green screened background equal to a 15% tone of a 110-line screen. Follow registration marks on reproproof for screen positioning. Handprint boxes are included on Page 1 of the reproduction proof and should be printed as a 50% value of the recommended OCR green ink. Inks used for handprint boxes must reflect at least 90% of the background on which it is printed as measured in the visible range.

5. Face Margins—Approximately 2/6″ head from top trimmed edge to screen (1/2″ to black image). 1/6″ outside from trimmed edges to screen. Exact margins are provided with reproduction proofs.

6. Back Margins—1/2″ head, 5/16″ foot, and 5/16″ sides.

.06 Typography—Type must be substantially identical in both size and shape with corresponding type on the official form reproduction proof.

.07 To assure proper alignment and position of hand-printed characters representing return lines 1 through 11 tax data, they must be hand printed (entered) into the preprinted amount field boxes on the form. A # 2 lead wooden pencil or blue or black ink pen (ball-point, fountain, or felt-tipped) are recommended as the writing tools which will consistently provide the required stroke width and print contrast on entered characters.

.08 Reading of handprinted characters requires adherance to the following techniques.

1. Enter numeric amount digits carefully and clearly. Fill at least 2/3 of the individual character box height, keeping the character within the box with no overlapping or touching characters. Specific required digit constraints are shown below.

2. When entering "fours", keep the top open.

3. When entering "one", do not use serifs.

4. When entering "twos", do not add extra loops.

5. All character lines must be connected, with no gaps.

.09 Color Screening. On a non-OCR Form 1040EZ only, it is not necessary to duplicate the color-screening used on the official form. A substitute (non-OCR) Form 1040EZ may be printed in black and white, with no color screening required.

.10 All the general and detailed provisions of this Revenue Procedure apply (in addition to this specific OCR Section) for the development of substitute OCR Forms 1040EZ.

SEC. 34. SPECIAL FORM 1120A OPTICAL CHARACTER RECOGNITION (OCR) REQUIREMENTS

.01 Form 1120A has been developed and designed in OCR format. This return will be read by Optical

Character Recognition (OCR) equipment (Recognition Equipment Inc.—Input 80 Model B Scanner), if submitted in acceptable OCR format.

.02 It is optional to produce the 1120A substitute as a normal (black and white) reproduction, or as an OCR scannable version. The following specific criteria applies if the substitute form is to be produced for OCR processing. Otherwise, you may print this form under the general guidelines of this Revenue Procedure.

.03 An acceptable substitute OCR Form 1120A must be an exact replica of the official reproduction proof with respect to layout, content and required OCR characteristics.

.04 The specific paper requirements for this form generally duplicate those specified in Section 33, with the following exception:

1. Size—Form 1120A trim size must be 8 1/2" × 11".

.05 The specific ink requirements which must be met for this form include the following:

1. Print Color—Black and Maroon.
2. Ink—Maroon ink must be highly reflective OCR type, such as Sinclair and Valentine J-31859, or an exact match. Black ink must be non-reflective.
3. Face Registration—Black to Maroon must be 0.015 (1/64)" (plus or minus) both horizontally and vertically.
4. Handprint Boxes—These handprint boxes (for IRS entries and use only) are included on Page 2 of the reproduction proof, and should be printed as a 50% screen value of the recommended OCR Maroon ink. Inks used for handprint boxes must measure .19 PCS or less when tested using MacBeth PCM-II tester 'C' scale.
5. Face margins—Minimum margins require 11 2/6" head, 1/2" left and right, and 5/16" foot.
6. Back margins—11 2/6" head, 1/2" left and right, and 5/16" foot. Exact margins are provided with reproduction proofs.

.06 Typography—Type must be substantially identical in both size and shape with corresponding type on the official form reproduction proof.

.07 All entries on an OCR Form 1120A must be either typed or machine printed, to permit OCR scanning. Otherwise the return will be manually processed.

.08 Use Taxpayer's Preaddressed Label. Reproduced OCR Forms 1120A must have ONLY the taxpayer's preaddressed label affixed to be processable as an OCR document. Substitute labels and handwritten name/address information is not acceptable.

.09 All general and detailed provisions of this Revenue Procedure apply (in addition to this specific OCR Section) for the development of substitute OCR Forms 1120A.

SEC. 35. SPECIAL FORM 941 OPTICAL CHARACTER RECOGNITION (OCR) REQUIREMENTS

.01 The Form 941 is designed in OCR format. The Service has the capability to machine read this form by Optical Character Recognition (OCR) equipment (Recognition Equipment Inc-Input 80 Model B Scanner), if submitted in acceptable OCR format.

.02 Effective with forms filed for the first quarter of 1988, the Form 941 should be produced only in OCR scannable format. The following specific criteria applies if the substitute form is to be produced for OCR processing.

.03 An acceptable substitute OCR Form 941 must be an exact replica of the official reproduction proof with respect to layout, content, and required OCR characteristics.

.04 The specific paper requirements which must be met for the development of substitute (privately printed) forms generally duplicate those specified in Section 33, with the following exception:

1. Size-Form 941 trim size must be 8 1/2" × 11".

.05 The specific ink requirements which must be met for these forms include the following:

1. Print Color—Black and Red
2. Ink—Red ink must be a highly reflective (not less than 80%) OCR type ink, such as Sinclair/Valentine J6983 or an exact match. Black ink reflectance must not be greater than 15%.
3. Handprint Boxes (including the numbers outside the boxes)—These handprint boxes (for IRS entries and use only) are included on the reproduction proof, and should be printed as a 50% screen value of the recommended OCR red ink. Inks used for handprint boxes must measure 15% or less when tested using the MacBeth or Kidder testers (see # 5 below).
4. Face Margins—Minimum margins require 1/2" head; center sides; and, 5/16" foot.
5. Testers—The following two print testers may be used for Form 941. Any other type tester must first be approved by the IRS.

(a) MacBeth PCM-II
Use 'C' scale. Range must be between .13 minimum to .19 maximum.

(b) Kidder 082 A
Use infrared scale. PSC values must fall in the range of .32 minimum to .38 maximum. White calibration disk must be set at 100%. Sensitivity must be set at "1".

SEC. 36. PAPER SUBSTITUTES FOR FORM 1042S

.01 Paper substitutes for Form 1042S that totally conform to the specifications contained in this procedure may be privately printed without prior approval from the Internal Revenue Service. Proposed substitutes not conforming to these specifications must be submitted for consideration.

1. The request should be submitted by November 15 of the year prior to the year the form is to be used. This is to allow the Service adequate time to respond and the submitter adequate time to make any corrections. These requests should contain a copy of the proposed form, the need for the specific deviation(s), and the number of information returns to be printed.
2. Form 1042S is subject to annual review and possible change. Withholding agents and form suppliers are cautioned against overstocking supplies of the privately printed substitutes.
3. Copies of the official form for the reporting year may be obtained from most Service offices. The Service provides only cut sheets (no carbon interleaves) of these forms. Continuous fan-fold/pin-fed forms are not provided.

.02 Instructions for Withholding Agents

1. Only original copies may be filed with the Service. Carbon copies and reproductions are not acceptable.

2. The term "Recipient's U.S. tax identifying no," for an individual means the social security number (SSN). The SSN consists of nine digits separated by hyphens as follows: 000-00-0000. For all other recipients, the term means employer identification number (EIN). The EIN consists of nine digits separated by one hypen as follows: 00-0000000. The tax identifying number must be in one of these formats.

3. Withholding agents are requested to type or machine print whenever possible, provide quality data entries on the forms (that is, use black ribbon, insert data in the middle of blocks well separated from other printing and guidelines), and take other measures to guarantee a clear sharp image. Withholding agents are not required, however, to acquire special equipment solely for the purpose of preparing these forms.

4. On corrected returns, the words CORRECTED RETURN must be typed in all capital letters in the top 1/4 inch, right of center margin. All required information must be completed on a corrected return since it replaces and supersedes the information return previously filed.

5. Substitute forms prepared in continuous or strip form must be burst and stripped to conform to the size specified for a single form before they are filed with the Service. The dimensions are found below.

(a) Computer cards are acceptable, provided they meet all requirements regarding layout, content, and size.

.03 Substitute Forms Format Requirements.

1. Privately printed substitute Forms 1042S must be exact replicas of the official forms with respect to layout and contents. Only the dimensions of the substitute form may differ and the printing of the Government Printing Office symbol must be deleted. The exact dimensions are found below.

2. Line 1 must be present, line 2 may be omitted if it is not needed. If line 2 is omitted, also omit line 3.

3. None of the boxes can be omitted. Each box (a through f) must be present and in the exact order. The box for each payment amount must contain the appropriate caption.

4. Color and Quality of Paper.

(a) Paper for Copy A must be white chemical wood bond, or equivalent, 20 pound (basis 17 × 22 – 500), plus or minus 5 percent. No optical brighteners may be added to the pulp or paper during manufacture. The paper must consist of principally bleached chemical woodpulp and be free from unbleached or ground woodpulp or recycled printed paper. It also must be suitably sized to accept ink without feathering.

(b) Copies B and C (For Recipient) and D (For Withholding Agent) are provided in the official assembly solely for the convenience of the withholding agent. Withholding agents may choose the format, design, color and quality of the paper used for these copies.

5. Color and Quality of Ink-All printing must be in a high quality nongloss black ink. Bar codes should be free from picks and voids.

6. Typography—Type must be substantially identical in size and shape to corresponding type on the official form. All rules on the document are either 1 point (0.015 inch) or 3 point (0.045). Vertical rules must be parallel to the left edge of the document; horizontal rules, parallel to the top edge.

7. Dimensions—The official form is 8 inches wide × 3 2/3 inches deep, exclusive of a 1/2 inch snap stub on the left side of the form. The snap feature is not required on substitutes.

(a) The width of a substitute Copy A must be a minimum of 7 inches and a maximum of 8 inches, although adherence to the size of the offical form is preferred. If the width of the substitute Copy A is reduced from that of the official form, the width of each field on the substitute form must be reduced proportionately. The left margin must be 1/2 inch and free of all printing other than that shown on the official form.

(b) The depth of a substitute Copy A must be a minimum of 3 1/3 inches and a maximum of 3 2/3 inches.

8. Carbonized forms or "spot carbons" are not permissible. Interleaved carbons, if used, must of good quality to preclude smudging and should be black.

9. Other Copies—Copies B and C are required to be furnished for the convenience of payees who are required to send a copy of the form with other Federal returns they file. Copy D may be desired as a withholding agent's record/copy.

.04 Additional Instructions

1. Arrangement of Assembly—if all four parts are present, the parts of the assembly shall be arranged from top to bottom as follows: Copy A (Original), "For Internal Revenue Service," Copies B and C, "For Recipient," and Copy D, "For Withholding Agent."

SEC. 37. PROCEDURES FOR PRINTING INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE ENVELOPES

.01 Organizations are now permitted to produce substitute tax return envelopes. Use of substitute return envelopes that comply with the requirements set forth in this section will assist in delivery of mail by the Postal Service and facilitate internal sorting once the envelopes are received at the Internal Revenue Service Centers. The permanent five digit ZIP codes assigned to the ten service centers are listed below. These ZIP codes must be utilized when mailing returns to the prescribed service center.

ATLANTA GA	39901
KANSAS CITY MO	64999
AUSTIN TX	73301
PHILADELPHIA PA	19255
MEMPHIS TN	37501
ANDOVER MA	05501
CINCINNATI OH	45999
HOLTSVILLE NY	00501
OGDEN UT	84201
FRESNO CA	93888

.02 The sorting of returns by form type is accomplished by the preprinted bar codes on return envelopes that are included in each specific type of form or package mailed to the taxpayer. The 32 bit bar code located on the left and above the address on each envelope identifies the type of form that person is filing and assists the Service in consolidating like returns together for processing. Failure to use the envelopes furnished by the Service results in additional processing time and effort and possibly delays the timely deposit of funds, processing of returns and issuance of refund checks.

.03 The Internal Revenue Service will not furnish or sell preprinted tax return envelopes to taxpayers or tax practitioners. A suitable alternative has been developed which will accommodate the sorting needs of both the IRS and the U.S. Postal Service. The new alternative is based on the use of ZIP+4 or 9 digit ZIP Codes for mailing various types of tax returns to the different area service centers. Essentially, the Postal Service will utilize the first five digits of a ZIP Code to sort and deliver the mail and IRS will utilize the last four digits to identify and sort the various form types into separate groups for processing. The list of add-on four digits or +4 portion of the 9 digit ZIP Codes with the related form designations is provided below and are to become a permanent part of the five digit service center ZIP codes shown above.

ZIP+FOUR	FORM/PACKAGE
XXXXX-0001	1040A/EZ
XXXXX-0002	1040 Non-Bus
XXXXX-0003	1040 Bus & Farm
XXXXX-0005	941
XXXXX-0006	940
XXXXX-0007	942
XXXXX-0008	943
XXXXX-0011	1065
XXXXX-0012	1120
XXXXX-0013	1120S
XXXXX-0020	5500C
XXXXX-0024	5500EZ
XXXXX-0027	990
XXXXX-0031	2290

.04 The Internal Revenue Service will produce position/design sheets, OCR readable addresses with the appropriate ZIP+FOUR code(s) and Postnet bar code(s) as Reproduction Proofs. Position sheet specifications must be followed as to size, stock, printing positions, clear areas and ink. Orders for each specific form/package ZIP code proof will be processed under Section 20 of this Revenue Procedure.

1. Any deviations from the specifications outlined on the position/design sheets must be approved in advance. Use of preparer company names, addresses and logos are permissable so long as prescribed clear areas are not invaded. Use of carbon based ink is essential for effective address and bar code reading. Envelope construction can be of side seam or diagonal seam design. Continuous pinfed construction is not desirable, but is permissable if the glued edge is at the top. This requirement is firm as mail opening equipment is designed to slice or otherwise open the bottom edge of each envelope.

.05 The above procedures or guidelines are written for the user having envelopes preprinted. Many practitioners may not wish to have volumes of the different envelopes with differing ZIP Codes/form designations preprinted for reasons of low volume, warehousing, waste, etc. In this case, the practitioner can type or machine print the addresses with the appropriate ZIP Codes to accommodate sorting. If the requirements/guidelines outlined in this section cannot be met, then use of only the appropriate five digit service center ZIP Code is needed.

SEC. 38. PROCEDURE FOR SUBSTITUTE FORMS 5471

.01 Instructions for Preparing Computer-Generated Substitute Form 5471.

Paper substitutes for Form 5471 and the accompanying schedules that totally conform to the specifications contained in this procedure may be privately printed but must have prior approval and are subject to annual review from the Internal Revenue Service.

.02 Copies of the official form for the reporting year may be obtained from most Service Offices. The Service provides only cut sheets of these forms. Continuous fanfold/pin-fed forms are not provided.

.03 Computer-Prepared Tax Forms.

For filing purposes the Service will accept computer prepared tax Form 5471 filled in by a computer or by word processing equipment or similar automated equipment.

.04 Computer-Generated Forms.

For filing purposes, the Service will accept computer-generated versions of Form 5471 that are attached to individual and business income tax returns, provided the substitute and schedule meet the guidelines prescribed herein.

.05 Combination of Manually Prepared and Computer-Prepared/Generated Forms.

For filing purposes, the Service will accept substitute Forms 5471 that contain a combination of computer-prepared/generated and filled in information.

.06 Format Arrangement.

The format of each substitute schedule or form must be an exact replica of the official form, following the format of the official schedule and form as to item captions, line references, line numbers, sequence, form arrangement and format, etc. Basically try to make the form look like the official one, with readability and consistency being primary factors. Use periods and/or other special characters to separate the various parts and sections of the form. All line numbers and items must be printed even though an amount is not entered on the line. The substitute form should be on the same size paper as the official forms and schedules.

.07 Line Numbers.

When a line on the official Form 5471 is designated by a number or a letter, that designation must be used on the substitute form. In addition, the reference code that is immediately before the data field must either be followed by a period or enclosed in parentheses. There must also be at least two blank spaces between the period or the right praentheses and the first digit of the data field.

.08 Filing Computer-Generated Substitute Forms 5471.

Follow the same instructions as for filing official forms.

SEC. 39. ELECTRONICALLY FILED RETURNS

.01 Since the 1986 filing season, the Service has been accepting current processing year electronically filed refund returns. Electronic filing is a method by which qualified filers transmit tax return information directly to an IRS Center over telephone lines. Forms 1040, 1040A, and 1040EZ are transmitted in Form 1040 format.

1. The taxpayer signature does not appear on the electronic part of the tax return. The qualified electronic filer obtains it on Form 8453, U.S. Individual Income Tax Declaration for Electronic Filing. Forms W-2, W-2P, and W-2G are attached to the form as well as any other documents containing required signatures. In certain instances, a signed copy of the paper tax return will also be attached.

2. The electronically filed returns can be printed in hardcopy form via laser printer. The transmitted computer language information is extracted and printed on the appropriate form. The words "Electronic Return—Do Not Process" are printed across the top of page 1 of Form 1040. The hardcopy is a facsimile of the original return. No Service Center Coding appears on the return. All coding is computer generated and appears on the output Code and Edit Sheet. The sheet is part of the hardcopy return and will be supplied for internal use only requests.

3. The following is a list of all the forms and schedules which can be filed electronically:

Schedule B (Form 1040) 1987

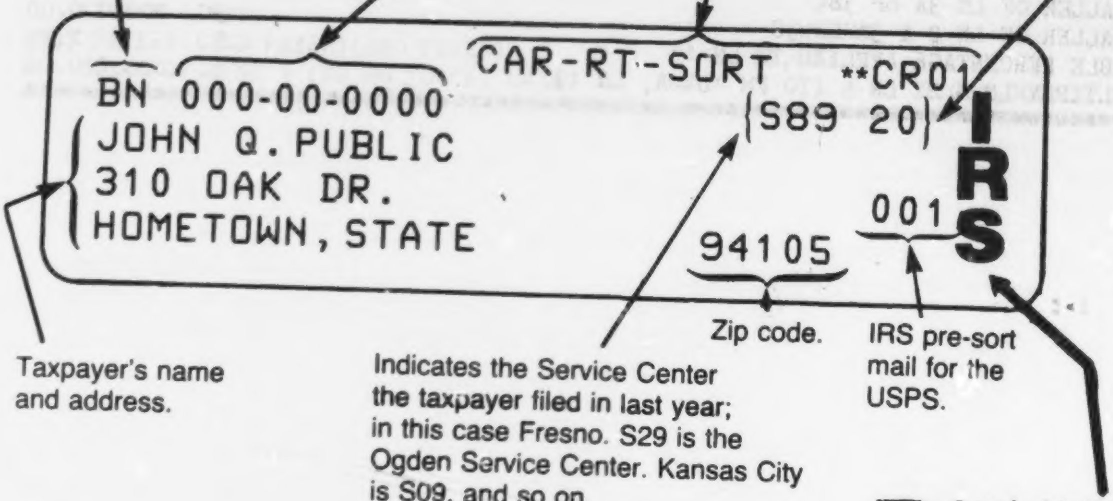
EXHIBIT LABEL (IRS PREPRINTED)

Check-Digit = Computer shorthand for taxpayer's name. By entering the two letters and the social security number, IRS can identify the correct account.

Taxpayer's social security number.

Indicates Postal Service home delivery route.

Signifies type of package mailed to the taxpayer.



Zip code.

IRS pre-sort mail for the USPS.

Taxpayer's name and address.

Indicates the Service Center the taxpayer filed in last year; in this case Fresno. S29 is the Ogden Service Center. Kansas City is S09, and so on.

NOTE: Certain labels will have either a PP, SS, or PL directly under the "S" in IRS. They indicate:

PP = Package (1st label in package)
SS = Sack (1st label in a sack)
PL = Pallet (1st label in a pallet)

These are used by the USPS for control purposes.

EXHIBIT LABEL (SUBSTITUTE)

Preprinted Label information needed from Practitioner in order for IRS to process "as if a label is used."

NOTE: Do not include the check-digit (2 alpha characters preceding the SSN) if there has been a change to either the taxpayer's name or address since last filing. Doing so will result in such things as delayed/erroneous refunds, processing delays, and IRS reviews, contacts, or corrections.

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.

Rev. Proc. 88-8

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to implement section 10511 of the Revenue Act of 1987, Public Law 100-203, enacted December 22, 1987, which requires the payment of user fees for requests to the Internal Revenue Service for rulings, opinion letters, determination letters, and similar requests.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 10511 of the Act provides that the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate (referred to this revenue procedure as the "Secretary") shall establish a program requiring the payment of user fees for requests to the Service for rulings, opinion letters, determination letters, and similar requests. Section 10511 provides that such fees shall apply with respect to requests made on or after the 1st day of the second calendar month beginning after the date of enactment and before September 30, 1990. The fees charged under the program are to vary according to categories (or subcategories) established by the Secretary; they are to be determined after taking into account the average time for, and difficulty of, complying with requests in each category and subcategory; and they are to be payable in advance. The Secretary is to provide for such exemptions and reduced fees under the program as he determines to be appropriate, but the average fee applicable to each category must not be less than the amount specified in the statute.

.02 In order to provide rapid guidance to the public, a revenue procedure has been issued instead of a regulation. However, the Service is providing an opportunity to submit written comments on this revenue procedure. Comments should be sent to: Assistant Commissioner (EP/EO), Attn: E:EP:P, 1111 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. If the comments reflect a need, a public meeting will be scheduled to discuss suggested changes. This revenue procedure, and any changes made in response to public comments, will then be incorporated in the Statement of Procedural Rules.

SEC. 3. EXISTING PROCEDURES

.01 Rev. Proc. 88-1, page 557, this Bulletin, provides, other than for international issues, procedures for issuing rulings and information letters and for entering into closing agreements on specific issues involving the interpretation or application of the federal tax laws under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International). It also provides, other than for international issues, procedures for issuing determination letters on matters that relate to sections of the Code under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International).

.02 Concerning international issues, Rev. Proc. 87-4, 1987-1 C.B. 529, provides procedures for obtaining rulings, closing agreements, and information letters on federal tax issues under the jurisdiction of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) and provides information concerning determination letters under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (International) and the District Directors.

.03 Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685, sets forth the general procedures of the various offices of the Service pertaining to the issuance of determination letters on the qualification of pension, profit-sharing and stock bonus plans involving sections 401, 403(a), 409 and 4975(e)(7) of the Code, and the status for exemption of any related trusts or custodial accounts under section 501(a).

.04 Rev. Proc. 83-36, 1983-1 C.B. 763, as modified by Rev. Proc. 87-40 1987-2 C.B. 514, sets forth the general procedures of the Service in issuing rulings, determination, opinion, notification, and information letters to taxpayers and in entering into closing agreements on specific issues as to the interpretation or application of the federal tax laws in the employee plan and exempt organization areas.

.05 Rev. Proc. 84-23, 1984-1 C.B. 457, sets forth the procedures of the Service pertaining to the issuance of opinion letters relating to master or prototype pension, annuity, and profit-sharing plans involving sections 401 and 403(a) of the Code, as amended by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA), and the status for exemption of related trusts or custodial accounts under section 501(a).

.06 Rev. Proc. 84-46, 1984-1 C.B. 541, provides procedures for applications for recognition of exemption from federal income tax under sections 501 and 521 of the Code.

.07 Rev. Proc. 84-86, 1984-2 C.B. 787, sets forth the procedures of the Service for issuing notification and determination letters relating to the qualification of certain defined contribution and defined benefit plans and any related trusts or custodial accounts under sections 401, 403(a), and 501(a) of the Code, as amended by TEFRA, the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (TRA '84), and the Retirement Equity Act of 1984 (REA). Rev. Proc. 84-86 establishes a means whereby certain "sponsors" may submit "uniform plans" to key district directors for approval as to form.

.08 Rev. Proc. 87-50, 1987-2 C.B. 647, updates and consolidates in one revenue procedure the procedures of the Service relating to the issuance of rulings and opinion letters with respect to the establishment of individual retirement accounts and annuities (IRAs) under section 408 of the Code, the entitlement to exemption of related trusts or custodial accounts under section 408(e), and the acceptability of the form of prototype simplified employee pension (SEP) agreements under sections 408(k) and 415.

A separate fee will apply with respect to each unrelated transaction where a request involves several unrelated transactions or the request is changed by the addition of an unrelated transaction not contained in the initial submission. .07 Effect of Nonpayment or Payment of Incorrect Amount. It will be the general practice of the Service that:

1. Except as provided in 5 below, if a request is not accompanied by a properly completed check or money order (for example, a check has not been signed), the entire submission will be returned to the submitter, along with the check or money order.
2. Except as provided in 5 below, if a check or money order is for less than the correct amount, the entire submission will be returned to the submitter, along with the check or money order.
3. The return of a submission to the submitter pursuant to paragraph 1 or 2 of this subsection may adversely affect substantive rights if the submission is not perfected and resubmitted to the Service within 30 days of the date of the cover letter returning the submission. For example, where an application for a determination letter is submitted prior to the expiration of the remedial amendment period under section 401(b) of the Code and is returned because no user fee was attached, the submission will be timely if it is resubmitted by the expiration of the remedial amendment period or, if later, within 30 days after the application was returned.
4. If a check or money order is for more than the correct amount, the submission will be accepted and the amount of the excess payment will be returned to the submitter.
5. For 60 days following publication of this procedure, submissions that are not accompanied by the correct amount will not be returned for this reason. Instead, the submitter will be contacted and given a reasonable time to submit the proper fee. If the fee is not received in a reasonable time, the entire submission will be returned. However, the Service, in its discretion, may defer substantive consideration of the submission until proper payment has been received. At the end of the 60-day period, the Service will evaluate whether this practice should be extended.

.08 Refunds. In general, the fee will not be refunded unless the Service declines to rule on all issues for which a ruling is requested.

1. The following are examples of situations in which the fee will not be refunded:
   (a) The request for a ruling, determination letter, etc. is withdrawn at any time subsequent to its receipt by the Service.
   (b) The request is procedurally deficient, although accompanied by the proper fee or an overpayment, and is not timely perfected by the submitter. Where there is a failure to timely perfect the request, the case will be considered closed and the failure to perfect will be treated as a withdrawal for purposes of this revenue procedure.
   (c) A ruling, determination letter, etc. is revoked in whole or in part at the initiative of the Service. The fee paid at the time the original ruling, determination letter, etc. was requested will not be refunded.
   (d) A request contains several issues and the Service rules on some, but not all, of the issues. The highest fee applicable to the issues on which the Service rules will not be refunded.
   (e) The taxpayer asserts that a ruling it received covering a single issue is erroneous or not responsive (other than with respect to any issue on which the Service has declined to rule) and requests reconsideration. The Service, upon reconsideration, does not agree that the ruling is erroneous or not responsive. The fee accompanying the request for reconsideration will not be refunded.
   (f) The situation is the same as described in (e) immediately above except that the ruling covered several unrelated transactions. The Service, upon reconsideration, does not agree with the taxpayer that the ruling is erroneous or nonresponsive with respect to all of the transactions, but does agree that it is erroneous with respect to one transaction. The fee accompanying the request for reconsideration will not be refunded except to the extent applicable to the transaction with respect to which the Service agrees the ruling was in error.
   (g) The request is for a supplemental ruling, determination letter, etc. concerning a change in facts (whether significant or not) relating to the transaction ruled on.

(h) The request is for reconsideration of an adverse or partially adverse ruling or a final adverse determination letter, and the taxpayer submits arguments and authorities not submitted before the original ruling or determination letter was issued.

2. The following are examples of situations in which the fee will be refunded:

(a) In a situation to which section 4.081(h) above does not apply, the taxpayer asserts that a ruling it received covering a single issue is erroneous or not responsive (other than with respect to any issue on which the Service declined to rule) and requests reconsideration. The Service agrees, upon reconsideration, that the ruling is erroneous or not responsive. The fee accompanying the taxpayer's request for reconsideration will be refunded.

(b) In a situation to which section 4.081(h) above does not apply, the taxpayer requests a supplemental ruling, determination letter, etc. to correct a mistake that the Service agrees it made in the original ruling, determination letter, etc., such as a mistake in the statement of facts or in the citation of a Code section. Once the Service agrees that it made a mistake, the fee accompanying the request for the supplemental ruling will be refunded.

(c) The taxpayer requests and is granted relief under section 7805(b) of the Code in connection with the revocation, in whole or in part, of a previously issued ruling, determination letter, etc. The fee accompanying the request for relief will be refunded.

.09 Exemptions. The user fee requirement of this revenue procedure shall not apply to departments, agencies, or instrumentalities of the United States that certify that they are seeking a ruling, determination letter, opinion letter or similar letter on behalf of a program or activity funded by federal appropriations. The fact that a user fee is not charged shall have no bearing on whether an applicant is treated as an agency or instrumentality of the United States for purposes of any provision of the Internal Revenue Code.

SEC. 5. QUESTIONS AS TO APPLICABILITY OR AMOUNT OF FEE

A taxpayer or organization that believes the user fee charged by the Service for its request for a ruling, determination letter, etc. is either not applicable or incorrect may request reconsideration and, if desired, the opportunity for an oral discussion by sending a letter to the Internal Revenue Service at the applicable Post Office Box or other address given in section 4.06 above. Both the incoming envelope and the letter requesting such reconsideration should be prominently marked "USER FEE RECONSIDERATION REQUEST" and the request should be marked for the attention of:

Rev. Proc. 88-9

SECTION I. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure sets forth special procedures of the Internal Revenue Service pertaining to the issuance of determination letters on the qualification of pension, profit-sharing and stock bonus plans that will be terminated prior to the delayed amendment date provided in section 1140 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (TRA '86), Pub. L. 99-514.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND AND GENERAL INFORMATION

.01 Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685, sets forth the general procedures of the Service relating to the issuance of determination letters on the qualification of pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans, including determination letters involving the termination of such plans.

.02 Section 1140 of TRA '86 provides that qualified plans need not be amended for any provision in subtitle A or C of Title XI until the first plan year beginning after December 31, 1988, so long as such amendment applies retroactively to the period during which the provision is in effect. For plans maintained pursuant to collective bargaining agreements ratified before March 1, 1986, section 1140 provides that such plans must be amended by the first plan year beginning after the earlier of: (1) the later of January 1, 1989, or the date on which the last collective bargaining agreement terminates (without regard to extensions made after February 28, 1986); or (2) January 1, 1991.

.03 Notice 86-13, 1986-2 C.B. 377, provides that, until further notice, determination letter requests concerning qualification of pension, profit-sharing and stock bonus plans will not be reviewed for qualification requirements changed by TRA '86 other than certain retroactive technical corrections.

.04 Notice 87-57, 1987-2 C.B. 368, modifies Notice 86-13. Notice 87-57 states that the Service will review requests for determination letters on the basis of the law currently in effect with respect to plans being terminated prior to the delayed amendment date provided in section 1140 of TRA '86. Plans terminating prior to that date must be amended to reflect provisions in TRA '86 that are effective as of the date of termination, the temporary REA regulations, as well as the Technical Corrections to the Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. 98-369, 1984-3 C.B. 1, and to the Retirement Equity Act of 1984 (REA), Pub. L. 98-397, 1984-2 C.B. 433.

.05 Notice 87-20, 1987-1 C.B. 456, provides guidance in complying with section 1139 of TRA '86. In general, the interest rates used to determine present values and amounts of certain plan benefits paid from a defined benefit plan in plan years beginning after 1984 must not exceed the "section 1139" rates. However, there are exceptions for distributions that meet the requirements of temporary regulations under REA or that were corrected for underpayment before August 10, 1987.

.06 Notice 87-21, 1987-1 C.B. 458, describes new limitations on plan contributions and benefits under section 415 of the Code as enacted by TRA '86. These new limitations generally apply for limitation years beginning after 1986. However, transitional rules and an exception for plans maintained pursuant to collective bargaining agreements are provided in section 1106(i) of TRA '86.

SEC. 3. REQUIRED AMENDMENTS FOR TERMINATING PLANS

.01 In order to receive a favorable determination letter, qualified plans terminating prior to the delayed amendment date provided in section 1140 of TRA '86 must be amended to reflect the law in effect at the time of termination. These requirements include certain provisions of TRA '86, the Technical Corrections in Title XVIII of TRA '86 and the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under REA.

.02 In Notice 87-2, 1987-1 C.B. 396, the Service published model amendments I-IV that may be used by individually designed plans to comply with TRA '86. In Notice 87-33, 1987-1 C.B. 480, two model amendments were published for sponsors of master and prototype plans. These amendments may be adopted to satisfy requirements of this Revenue Procedure with regard to the provisions of TRA '86, other than the Technical Corrections in Title XVIII, that are effective for plan years beginning before January 1, 1989. If the sponsor of a master or prototype plan has not adopted the appropriate model amendment as described in Notice 87-33 by the date of plan termination, the adopting employer may adopt the appropriate model amendment for individually designed plans.

.03 The simplified model amendment for section 415 of the Internal Revenue Code provided in Notice 87-21, 1987-1 C.B. 458, may not be used to satisfy the section 415 requirements for a terminating plan. The model amendments provided in Notice 87-2 or Notice 87-33 will satisfy the section 415 requirements.

.04 In addition to the requirements listed in this section, other requirements that become effective with respect to plans terminating after the effective date of this revenue procedure may also require plan amendment. For example, if changes in the qualification requirements made by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 (OBRA), Pub. L. 99-509, are effective with respect to a plan, amendments may be required to comply with those changes on or before plan termination.

SEC. 4. FILING INSTRUCTIONS

.01 The requirements of Rev. Proc. 80-30, 1980-1 C.B. 685, are to be followed in requesting a determination of a plan's qualified status from the appropriate Key District Director.

.02 An application for a determination letter is made on a Form 5310, accompanied by a Form 6088 or statement of actuarial evaluation describing distributions to participants. Copies of plan amendments made since the most recent determination letter was issued must also be submitted.

SEC. 5. SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION REQUIRED

Applications for a determination letter on termination of a qualified plan prior to the delayed amendment date of section 1140 of TRA '86 must be accompanied by the following representations, where applicable:

.01 In the case of a defined benefit plan, a representation that any distribution made after December 31, 1984, complied with section 1139 rates (or the temporary REA regulations if made before 1987), or were corrected to do so by August 10, 1987.

.02 A statement as to whether annual additions, benefit accruals, or benefit payments have been made in excess of the applicable section 415 limitations, and which, if any, exception or transitional provision referenced in Section 2.06 of this revenue procedure is applicable.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Section 4.09 of Rev. Proc. 80-30 is hereby modified to require the submission of the supplemental information in section 6 above, in connection with applications for determination letters involving plans terminating prior to the date provided in section 1140 of TRA '86.

SEC. 7. EFFECTIVE DATE

The special procedures set forth in this revenue procedure are effective January 25, 1988. Applications submitted more than 30 days after January 25, 1988, must be accompanied by the appropriate supplemental information described in Sec. 5.01 and Sec. 5.02.

Rev. Proc. 88-10

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure provides guidance to issuers of state or local bonds for requesting an extension of time to file the statement of information required by section 149(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 The Tax Reform Act of 1986, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 1, 567, amended and reorganized the sections of the 1954 Code pertaining to information reporting for certain state or local bonds. Former section 103(l), pertaining to information reporting for private purpose bonds, and former section 103A(j)(3)(A), pertaining to information reporting for qualified mortgage bonds, were consolidated in new section 149(e) of the 1986 Code, which requires information reporting for any state or local bond.

.02 Section 103(a) of the 1986 Code provides that, with certain exceptions, gross income does not include interest on any state or local bond.

.03 Internal Revenue Service News Release IR-83-152, dated December 14, 1983, announced procedures for issuers of private purpose bonds to request relief from the consequences of the late filing of information reports. News Release IR-83-152 was published as Announcement 84-51, 1984-20 I.R.B. 14.

.04 Section 149(e)(1) of the 1986 Code provides that interest on a state or local bond will not be excludable from gross income unless certain information reporting requirements are satisfied. The issuer must submit a statement that contains the information required under section 149(e)(2). The statement must be submitted not later than the 15th day of the 2nd calendar month after the close of the calendar quarter in which the bond is issued (or such later time as the Secretary may prescribe with respect to any portion of the statement).

.05 In general, the statement required by section 149(e)(2) of the 1986 Code must be filed on one of the following forms: Form 8038, Information Return for Tax-Exempt Private Activity Bond Issues Under Section 149(e); Form 8038-G, Information Return for Tax-Exempt Governmental Bond Issues Under Section 149(e); or Form 8038-GC, Consolidated Information Return for Small Tax-Exempt Governmental Bond Issues Under Section 149(e).

.06 Section 1.149(e)-1T(d)(2)(ii) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations provides that the Commissioner may grant an extension of time to file any form required under this section if the Commissioner determines that the failure to file in a timely manner was not due to willful neglect.

SEC. 3. PROCEDURES

.01 An issuer of a state or local bond who fails to timely submit the statement (Form 8038, 8038-G, or 8038-GC) required by section 149(e)(2) of the 1986 Code should take the following action after discovery of the failure:

(1) Mail the statement to the Internal Revenue Service, Philadelphia Service Center, Statistics of Income Unit, P:DA:Unit F-SOI, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19255, Stop # 335. The words, "This Statement Is Submitted In Accordance With Rev. Proc. 88-10," should be typed or printed across the top of the statement.

(2) Attach the statement to a letter briefly setting forth the reasons why the statement was not timely submitted to the Service. The letter should also indicate whether the bond issue in question is under examination by the Service. Copies of the trust indenture or other bond documents should not be submitted with the letter.

.02 The S.O.I. Unit will acknowledge receipt of the letter and statement within 30 days after they are received. If the S.O.I. Unit determines that the failure to file the statement is not due to willful neglect, it will so inform the issuer in writing within this 30-day period. If the S.O.I. Unit is unable to determine that the failure to file the statement is not due to willful neglect, it will inform the issuer in writing within this 30-day period that the matter has been referred for technical advice to the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) at the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service in Washington, D.C. If after an analysis of the technical advice request it appears that advice adverse to the issuer will be given, the issuer is entitled to a conference in the National Office in accordance with the procedures set forth in section 8 of Rev. Proc. 88-2, page 571, this Bulletin. The S.O.I. Unit will inform the issuer in writing of the results of the request for technical advice within 30 days after the technical advice memorandum is received from the National Office.

SEC. 4. EFFECT OF DETERMINATION

.01 If the failure to timely file the statement is not due to willful neglect, then the filing of the statement in section 3.01 above is accepted, and the information reporting requirement of section 149(e)(1) of the 1986 Code is deemed satisfied.

.02 If the failure to timely file the statement is due to willful neglect, then the filing of the statement in section 3.01 is not accepted, and the information reporting requirement of section 149(e)(1) is not deemed satisfied. In such case, the interest on the bond is not excludable from gross income under section 103(a) of the 1986 Code.

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective January 25, 1988.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Announcement 84-51 is superseded.

Rev. Proc. 88-11

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to provide guidance to the public on the filing of requests under section 6110 of the Internal Revenue Code to obtain background file documents relating to a ruling letter or a technical advice memorandum issued by the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

The National Office of the Internal Revenue Service issues ruling letters to taxpayers and provides technical advice to District Directors and Appeals Offices. See Revenue Procedures 88-1, page 557, this Bulletin; 88-2, page 571, this Bulletin; 87-4, 1987-1 C.B. 529; 87-5, 1987-1 C.B. 535; 83-36, 1983-1 C.B. 763; and 80-26, 1980-1 C.B. 671.

A ruling letter is a written statement issued to a taxpayer by the National Office that interprets and applies the tax law to that taxpayer's specific set of facts. Ruling letters are issued only by the National Office.

Technical advice means advice or guidance furnished by the National Office upon request of a District Director or an Appeals Office in response to any technical or procedural question that develops during any stage of any proceeding on the interpretation and proper application of tax law, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, or other precedents published by the National Office to a specific set of facts.

The National Office generally makes ruling letters and technical advice memorandums available for public inspection in the National Office Reading Room. See Section 5.02 of this procedure for location and telephone number. The Disclosure Staff of the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical and International) is responsible for processing, numbering, and releasing these documents for public inspection. The Staff also processes requests for background file documents for any ruling letter or technical advice memorandum issued by the National Office.

SEC. 3. LAW

Section 6110(a) of the Code provides, generally, that the text of any background file document relating to a written determination will be open to public inspection at the place prescribed by the Secretary.

Section 6110(b)(1) of the Code defines "written determination" as a ruling letter, determination letter, or technical advice memorandum. Section 6110(b)(2) states that the term "background file document" includes the request for the written determination, any written material submitted in support of the request, and any communication between the Internal Revenue Service and persons outside the Service in connection with the written determination that was received before issuance of the written determination.

Section 6110(c) of the Code provides, in part, that before making any background file document open or available to public inspection the Secretary shall delete certain specified material.

Section 6110(f) of the Code provides that, upon receipt of a request for a background file document, the Secretary shall mail to any person to whom the written determination pertains, a notice of intention to disclose the document. Administrative remedies and judicial action to restrain disclosure that may be availed of by the person to whom the document pertains are provided for under section 6110(f).

Section 6110(g) of the Code provides, generally, that a background file document, as modified by deletions made under section 6110(c), shall be available for public inspection not earlier than 75 days or later than 90 days after the notice of intention to disclose is mailed.

Section 6110(j)(1) of the Code authorizes the Secretary to assess actual costs for search, deletion, and duplication of background file documents. The section further provides that the Secretary will furnish any document without charge or at a reduced charge if it is determined that waiver or reduction of the fee is in the public interest because furnishing such document can be considered as primarily benefiting the general public.

SEC. 4. SCOPE

This revenue procedure applies to requests for background file documents (documents) pertaining to a ruling letter or a technical advice memorandum issued by the National Office.

This procedure does not apply to a determination letter. A determination letter is a written statement issued by a District Director in response to a written inquiry by a taxpayer that applies the principles and precedents previously announced by the National Office to a specific set of facts. For procedures for requesting documents pertaining to a written determination issued by a District Director, see section 301.6110-1(c) of the Regulations on Procedure and Administration.

SEC. 5. PROCEDURE

.01 Requests. Requests for documents must be in writing and must include the file number of the ruling letter or the technical advice memorandum. The request should specify whether it is for all the documents in the file or only a specific document. For example, a requester may request only the trust agreement (or the will, partnership agreement, plan of reorganization, etc.) that was the subject of the ruling letter or technical advice memorandum.

See Section 5.07 of this procedure for a sample of a request letter for documents under section 6110 of the Code.

.02 File Numbers. Ruling letters and technical advice memorandums are indexed by Internal Revenue Code sections. File numbers for the ruling letters and technical advice memorandums under specific Code sections may be obtained from the National Office Reading Room, Room 1569, IRS Building, 10th and Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC, 20224. The Reading Room is open from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, and the telephone number is (202) 566-3770 (not a toll-free call).

.03 Fees. Requests for documents should contain authorization for the Service to charge the person making the request the costs for searching for the file, making deletions, and making copies. The request should state the maximum amount of charges the Service may incur without further authorization from the person making the request. If the request for documents does not contain a stated maximum amount or the fees will exceed the stated maximum amount, the Service will forward to the requester a payment agreement with the estimated cost for processing the file. The payment agreement must be signed and returned to the Service before processing of the file will begin.

The fees for processing documents are:

Search Fee—$13.00 for each ruling letter file or technical advice memorandum file.

Deletion and Duplication Fee—$2.30 per page.

.04 Mailing Address. Requests for documents should be sent to:

Internal Revenue Service
Attn: CC:IND:D
P.O. Box 7604
Ben Franklin Station
Washington, D.C. 20044

.05 Release Date. Documents are ordinarily made available to the requester between 90 and 120 days after receipt of the request for the documents. This allows the Service the time necessary to notify the person to whom the documents pertain of its intention to disclose them. If the documents have previously been requested and processed, the documents will ordinarily be available within two weeks of the receipt of the request.

.06 Payment of Fees. Payment of the processing fees must be made before the documents will be released to the requester. The person making the request will be notified by letter of the total cost of processing the documents.

.07 Sample Request. The following is a sample of a request letter for documents under section 6110 of the Code.

Rev. Proc. 88-12

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure provides a method for reducing the "excess tax reserve" for certain public utility taxpayers. In general, the method satisfies the requirements of section 203(e) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the Act), 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 63, if used by taxpayers that are unable to utilize the average rate assumption method because they have been required by a regulatory agency to compute depreciation on public utility property on the basis of an average-life or composite rate method, as opposed to a method involving the use of vintage accounts.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Under a normalization method of accounting, the amount of tax expense that a taxpayer reports for ratemaking purposes includes a deferred tax amount to reflect the fact that the taxpayer is using an accelerated method of depreciation for federal income tax purposes. For taxable years beginning on or after July 1, 1987, section 601 of the Act, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 166, reduces from 46 percent to 34 percent the maximum federal income tax applicable to corporations. Section 203(e) of the Act provides rules for reducing the excess tax reserve resulting both from that reduction and from the smaller reduction in rates for tax years starting before and ending after (straddling) July 1, 1987.

.02 Section 203(e) of the Act provides that normalization method of accounting shall not be treated as being used with respect to any public utility property, for purposes of section 167 or 168 of the Internal Revenue Code, if the taxpayer, in computing its cost of service for ratemaking purposes and reflecting operating results in its regulated books of account, reduces its excess tax reserve more rapidly or to a greater extent than such reserve would be reduced under the average rate assumption method. Section 203(e)(2)(A) of the Act defines the term "excess tax reserve" as the excess of (i) the reserve for deferred taxes, described in section 167(l)(3)(G)(ii) of the Code (or former section 168(e)(3)(B)(ii) as in effect on the day before the enactment of the Act), over (ii) the amount that would be the balance in the reserve if the amount of the reserve were determined by assuming that the corporate tax rates provided by the Act were in effect for all prior periods. Section 203(e) also applies with respect to the excess tax reserve that occurs from the normalization requirement that taxpayers provide for deferred taxes at a rate in excess of 34 percent for any tax year (for example, a calendar year) that straddles July 1, 1987.

.03 The legislative history of the Act, however, indicates that section 203(e) of the Act does not apply to any amount of excess tax reserve generated from reductions in corporate tax rates that occurred before the enactment of the Act. For example, section 203(e) does not apply to any excess tax reserve resulting from the reduction in the maximum corporate tax rate from 48 percent to 46 percent under the Revenue Act of 1978, section 301, 1978-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 54. See S. Rep. No. 313, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 98 (1986), 1986-3 (Vol. 3) C.B. 98 (Senate Report); H.R. Rep. No. 426, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. 149 (1985), 1986-3 (Vol. 2) C.B. 149 (House Report). The provisions of prior law apply to the treatment of any excess tax reserve occurring from such previous rate reductions. Of course, a taxpayer may use the average rate assumption method with respect to any excess tax reserve, including a reserve to which section 203(e) does not apply, without violating the normalization rules.

Moreover, the provisions of section 203(e) of the Act apply only with respect to the excess tax reserve resulting from depreciation occurring in years beginning before July 1, 1987, with respect to assets placed in service before January 1, 1987. See Senate Report at 98; see also House Report at 149.

Finally, the provisions of section 203(e) apply only with respect to the excess tax reserve resulting from depreciation "timing" differences that were required to be normalized under section 167 or 168 of the Code. Thus, for example, section 203(e) of the Act does not apply to the excess tax reserve resulting from the normalization of other book/tax timing differences, as described in section 1.167(l)-1(a)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations (for example, state income taxes). Cf. Rev. Rul. 87-139, 1987-2 C.B. 65, which concludes that section 203(e) applies to the "voluntary" normalization method adopted by a taxpayer as described in that ruling.

.04 Section 203(e)(2)(B) of the Act defines the average rate assumption method as the method under which the excess tax reserve is reduced over the remaining lives of the property (as used in a public utility's regulated books of account) that gave rise to the reserve for deferred taxes. Under this method, the amount of the annual adjustment to the reserve for deferred taxes is the product of (i) the ratio of the aggregate deferred taxes for the property to the aggregate timing differences for the property (the applicable average rate), and (ii) the amount of the timing differences that reverse during the year. The calculation is made as of the beginning of the year in which timing differences in the vintage account begin to reverse, that is, the first year in which the tax depreciation taken with respect to the vintage account is less than the amount of depreciation reflected in the regulated books of account computed on the tax basis. Thus, under the average rate assumption method, excess tax reserves pertaining to a particular vintage or vintage account are not flowed-through to ratepayers until such time as the timing differences in the particular vintage account reverse. Moreover, it is a violation of section 203(e) of the Act for taxpayers to adopt any accounting treatment that, directly or indirectly, circumvents the rule set forth in the previous sentence.

In addition, section 203(e) of the Act does not modify the normalization requirements of section 167(l) or section 168(i) of the Code. For example, a violation of the normalization rules occurs if a taxpayer provides for deferred taxes with respect to a particular vintage account at a tax rate less than the statutory rate applicable to the taxpayer for the current year in question.

.05 Some taxpayers have been required by regulatory agencies to depreciate property for regulatory purposes using a weighted average life or composite rate. A method of depreciation that uses a weighted average life or composite rate focuses on the entire plant and does not account for property by vintage accounts. Consequently, taxpayers that use this method may not have adequate data to apply the average rate assumption method.

SEC. 3. SCOPE

A taxpayer is described in this section 3 if, as of the first day of the taxable year that includes July 1, 1987, (i) the taxpayer was required by a regulatory agency to compute depreciation for public utility property on the basis of an average life or composite rate method, and (ii) the taxpayer's books and underlying records did not contain the vintage account data necessary to apply the average rate assumption method. If a taxpayer is subject to the jurisdiction of more than one regulatory body, the determination of the adequacy of the vintage accounting records for each asset or group of assets shall be determined on a jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction basis.

SEC. 4. DEFINITION OF REVERSE SOUTH GEORGIA METHOD

.01 In general, a taxpayer uses a method described in this section 4 if it (a) computes the excess tax reserve on all public utility property included in the plant account on the basis of the weighted average life or composite rate used to compute depreciation for regulatory purposes, and (b) reduces the excess tax reserve ratably over the remaining regulatory life of the property. This method is sometimes referred to as the "Reverse South Georgia Method."

.02 Special rule if a taxable year straddles July 1, 1987. A taxpayer uses the method described in section 4 if the excess tax reserve is computed as of the first day of the year by subtracting from the reserve for deferred taxes (described in section 167(l) or 168(i)(9) of the Code) the amount that would be the balance of such reserve if the amount were determined by assuming that the weighted average tax rate for the year were in effect for all prior periods. (However, any reserve amount to which section 203(e) of the Act does not apply, as discussed in section 2.03 of this revenue procedure, is not required to be included in the excess tax reserve that is subject to ratable reduction under the Reverse South Georgia Method. Instead, the requirements of prior law apply to any such reserve amount). For a taxable year that straddles July 1, 1987, any reasonable method of calculating the weighted average tax rate shall be allowed under section 203(e). For example, under one acceptable method, the weighted average tax rate may be computed by using the marginal tax rate (46 percent) for the portion of the taxable year prior to July 1, 1987, and the marginal tax rate (34 percent) for the portion of the taxable year after July 1, 1987, weighted by the number of days in each period.

If the taxpayer has a taxable year that straddles July 1, 1987, then the taxpayer uses the method described by this section 4 for its succeeding taxable year if the excess tax reserve as of the first day of the succeeding taxable year is redetermined by subtracting from the reserve for deferred taxes (described in section 167(l) or 168(i)(9) of the Code) the amount that would be the balance of such reserve if the amount were determined by assuming that a 34 percent tax rate had been in effect for all prior periods. Redeterminations of the excess tax reserve are not made for subsequent years. Adjustments to the unamortized excess tax reserve may only be made to reflect asset retirements.

SEC. 5. APPLICATION

.01 If a taxpayer that is described in section 3 of this revenue procedure with respect to a jurisdiction uses the Reverse South Georgia Method described in section 4 for public utility property that is subject to the regulatory authority of that jurisdiction, then with respect to that property for that taxable year the taxpayer is deemed to satisfy the normalization requirements of section 203(e) of the Act.

.02 The use of the method described in section 4 by a taxpayer whose books and underlying records contain vintage year data for public utility property constitutes a violation of the requirements contained in section 203(e) of the Act if that method reduces the excess tax reserve more rapidly than the reserve would be reduced under the average rate assumption method.

SEC. 6. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective for any taxable year subject to section 203(e) of the Act.

Rev. Proc. 88-13

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to modify Rev. Proc. 88-8, page 628, this Bulletin, which requires the payment of a user fee for requests to the Internal Revenue Service for rulings, opinion letters, determination letters, and similar requests.

SEC. 2. PROCEDURES

.01 Section 4.031 of Rev. Proc. 88-8 is modified to provide a user fee charge of $150 for a newly electing S corporation filing a Form 2553, Election by a Small Business Corporation, and requesting a fiscal year under section 6.03 of Rev. Proc. 87-32, 1987-2 C.B. 396. Section 4.031, as modified, reads as follows:

Applications with respect to accounting periods (Forms 1128 and 2553)	$150
Change in Accounting Method (Form 3115)	$200
Earnings and Profits determinations (Form 5452).........	$200
All other rulings (which includes accounting period, accounting method, and earnings and profits requests other than those submitted on Forms 1128, 2553, 3115, and 5452)......................	$300

.02 Section 4.05 of Rev. Proc. 88-8 is modified to provide that the user fee check or money order should not be attached to the Form 2553 when filed at the Service Center. When the National Office receives Form 2553 from the Service Center it will notify the taxpayer that the fee is due. Section 4.05, as modified, reads as follows:

.05 Method of Payment. Each request to the Service for a ruling, determination letter or opinion letter must be accompanied by a check or money order, payable to the Internal Revenue Service, in the appropriate amount. (However, the user fee check or money order should not be attached to the Form 2553, Election by a Small Business Corporation, when it is filed at the Service Center. If on the Form 2553 the corporation requests a ruling that it be permitted to use a fiscal year under section 6.03 of Rev. Proc. 87-32, the Service Center will forward such request to the National Office. When the National Office receives the Form 2553 from the Service Center it will notify the taxpayer that the fee is due). Taxpayers should not send cash.

SEC. 3. EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE PROCEDURES

Sections 4.031 and 4.05 of Rev. Proc. 88-8 are modified.

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE

PART A. GENERAL

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to provide the requirements and conditions for filing pre-offset address request, annual certification, weekly update and agency address records on magnetic tape of federal debts which are eligible for the Federal Income Tax Refund Offset Program. This Revenue Procedure is issued under the Tax Refund Offset Program. This Revenue Procedure is issued under the authority contained in Section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and in Section 3720A of Subchapter 37 of Title 31 United States Code. See Exhibit A.1-1 for overview of project.

.02 Included in this Revenue Procedure are requirements for:

(a) submitting Pre-Offset Address Request records to secure the address from the taxpayer's latest income tax return to be used by the agency whe notifying a taxpayer of a potential offset.

(b) submitting Annual Certification records for inclusion on the Debtor Master File.

(c) submitting Federal Agency's addresses and contacts on magnetic tape for inclusion on IRS offset notices to taxpayers.

(d) submitting Weekly Updates to 1) delete or decrease a previously certified debt or 2) indicate that the federal agency has refunded a previous federal income tax refund offset to a taxpayer.

.03 The Internal Revenue Service (IRS), upon receipt of Annual Certification records, will mark matching individual taxpayer accounts to prohibit refunding of overpayments to the taxpayer. When refundable credits (usually resultant from the filing of a current year tax return) are processed, an offset record is generated to the agency for the amount of obligation or the amount of the refund, whichever is less. This offset record will also reflect current taxpayer identifying information valid for the offset tax year, i.e., SSN, name(s), and current address. Claims may be filed by an "injured spouse" to recover their portion of any joint overpayment which is not subject to offset by submitting Form 1040X and Form 8379.

.04 See Section 12 Part A for Information regarding Safeguards and Procedures.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS

ELEMENT	DESCRIPTION
Agency Code	This is a two digit numeric code assigned by IRS to identify the Federal Agency involved. The term "agency", as used in this document, is meant to be the Department level within the Federal Government. One agency code will be assigned to an Agency (Department). Different functions within a Department may be assigned a sub-agency code or a series of sub-agency codes (see definition below). Records submitted for a unique agency code must be consolidated prior to being sent to IRS. IRS will return consolidated records to a single Data Processing center.
Agency Case Number	This is the identifying number of the obligor's file at the submitting agency. Field is optional. Use is recommended when an agency does not use the SSN as the primary account/case number.
ALC	An Agency Location Code is a unique identifier assigned to every government agency for the purpose of reporting receipts and disbursements for each agency. An ALC is necessary to participate in the OPAC system.
Delinquent Date	Date the obligation became delinquent. Certification records with a delinquent date 10 yrs old or more by the first offset cycle effective date, will be returned.
DMF Account	A record that has been created as a result of certification by a federal agency's claim that has matched an account on the Individual Master File. This record consists of an entity section and at least one agency subsection.
File	For the purpose of this revenue procedure, a file consists of all tape records submitted by a Transmitter.
GOALS	The Government On-Line Accounting Link System is an automated accounting system designed by the Department of Treasury through which federal agencies can transmit and receive accounting and financial data.
IMF	The Individual Master File is a comprehensive file containing entity information and transaction activity for each individual taxpayer account.
Invalid Segment	The portion of the IMF which contains all SSN's which are currently considered invalid. Records submitted for invalid SSN's will be returned to the submitting agency and will not cause a refund freeze or allow a refund offset.
Local Code	This is a three digit code used to associate an Agency Address Record (Agency Name, Address, telephone numbers) with an individual obligor for use on IRS offset notices. A local code of "000" is required for each subagency.
NCC	National Computer Center P.O. Box 1208, Martinsburg, W.Va. 25401, FTS 937-8345 NON-FTS (304) 267-2911 EXT 345
Name Control	When cases (original certifications and updates) are submitted to the IRS for processing, the SSN and Name Control are used for matching against the taxpayer's account. Records that do not match exactly on SSN and Name Control will be returned to the submitting agency. To ensure that submissions are processable, the following examples demonstrate the proper manner to derive the Name Control field.

NAME	NAME CONTROL	NAME	NAME CONTROL
John Brown	BROW	Mark D'Allesandro	DALL
John A. Lee	LEE *	Pedro Torres-Lopes	TORR
James P. En Sr.	EN *	Joe McCarthy	MCCA
John O'Neill	ONEI	Mr. Eng U	U *
Mary Van Buren	VANB	Mary X-Williams	X-WI
John Diben Edetto	DIBE	Juan De Jesus	DEJE
John A. El-Roy	EL-R

*Name Controls of less than four (4) significant characters must be left justified and blank filled. Embedded blanks are not allowed. A single hyphen is allowed in all but the first digit of the name control.

Obligor	The person against whom a Federal Agency has certified a delinquent debt.
OPAC	The On-Line Payment and Collection System option of GOALS is an automated accounting system used to transfer the funds weekly to the participating agencies.
Service	The Internal Revenue Service.
Special Character	Any character that is not a numeral, a letter or a blank.
Spousal Claim	An amended return filed by a spouse whose share of a joint overpayment was applied to the other spouses debt. The amount of the claim that is allowed will be refunded to the non obligated spouse. The refund will be addressed to both taxpayers.
SSA	Social Security Administration
SSN	Social Security Number assigned by SSA.
Subagency Code	This is a two digit alpha-numeric code assigned by the agency. The agency must consider the types of delinquent accounts an obligor may have. If multiple accounts are present, a separate subagency code must be used to collect each debt. This code may be any alpha numeric combination. Zero is a valid sub-agency code. All subagency codes assigned by an agency must be approved by IRS.
Transmitter	Participating Federal Agencies preparing tape files.

SEC. 4. REPORTING SCHEDULES/TRANSMITTAL FORMS

.01 Weekly REPORTING/TRANSFER OF ON-Line Payment and Collection System (OPAC) Schedule—The Debtor Master File Program is a reimburseable program and all participating agencies reimburse the IRS for all administrative costs. This is accomplished through the On-Line Payment and Collection (OPAC) System option on the Government On-Line Accounting Link System (GOALS). The actual transfer of funds in this program is coordinated by the IRS DMF Coordinator, Returns Processing and Accounting Division (TR:R:A), 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Room 7514, Washington, D.C. 20224 (FTS 343-0145; non-FTS (202) 343-0145), and each participating agency.

Each Monday, through the OPAC system, the net collections are transferred from the IRS Clearing Account 20F3879.09 to each agency's ALC number. The money is available as soon as the transfer is effected; however, the agency will not "see" it on OPAC until the next workday as the data base is updated overnight. The IRS provides the agencies with a transaction file containing collection (offset/claim) information in the form of magnetic tapes (Service-Weekly collection (Offset/Claim) File) on a cycle basis. The weekly OPAC transfer of funds should match the amounts contained on the Weekly Collection Tape. The following chart shows each offset cycle (week) and the effective date (transfer of funds) for that cycle. Note that these are all Monday dates. If the dates happen to fall on a holiday, the transfer of funds will take place the next workday. Also included are the due dates for the Weekly Update tapes and approximate shipping dates for the Weekly Unprocessable and Collection files.

.02 WEEKLY UPDATE SCHEDULE—Each agency may submit weekly update information to either delete or decrease an obligation amount or to indicate an agency refund/repayment has been made. These tapes must be received by the National Computer Center no later than Thursday night of each week in order to meet NCC's weekly update cycle. Any tape received after this time may not be input until the following week. IRS will return any records found unprocessable to the participating agency within seven days. NOTE: Agencies must send weekly updates as timely as possible to prevent erroneous offsets or refunds from occurring.

TYPE OF DATE	RUN TITLE	FILE NAME
Pre-Offset Address Request Records	440-03 Annual Pre-Offset	440-PO-##
Annual Certification Records	440-03 Annual	440-AC-##
Agency Address Records	440-20 Agency Address	440-AA-##
Weekly Update Records	445-12 Weekly	445-WK-##

.03 TRANSMITTAL LETTER—Tapes submitted to IRS must be accompanied by a letter as detailed in Exhibit A.4-1 in Part A, Section 4.05 below. Use the following chart to determine run title and file name. The symbol ## in the file name is replaced with your agency code (i.e., 01) as assigned by IRS.

IRS will acknowledge receipt of Agency tapes by returning a signed copy of the transmittal letter. If the Agency does not receive the acknowledgment within one week, they must contact the NCC Debtor Master File Coordinator at FTS 937-8345 (NON-FTS (304) 267-2911 EXT 345) to verify receipt of tape. NOTE: For tapes being returned to NCC (not an agency generated production or test file) please mark the transmittal "returned".

.04 TAPE TRANSMITTAL FORM—IRS/NCC will supply each agency with pre-printed forms (Form 3220) to be completed and shipped along with each tape file sent to IRS. Do not ship tapes and transmittal documents separately. This form is in addition to the Transmittal Letter outlined in Part A, Section 4.03 above. This transmittal form will be supplied for use with the TRANSMITTER—WEEKLY UPDATE PRODUCTION file only. See Exhibit A.4-2 in Part A, Sec. 4.05 below.

.05 Upon Shipment of Production tapes, the Debtor Master File Coordinator at the IRS National Computer Center must be notified on FTS 937-8345 (NON-FTS (304) 267-2911 EXT 345). Please limit these calls to Monday through Friday between the hours of 8:00 AM and 4:00 PM (Eastern Time).

.06 EXPRESS MAIL—ALL TAPES SENT TO NCC MUST USE EXPRESS MAIL NEXT DAY SERVICE (USPS). Any deviations regarding tape shipment must be coordinated with the DMF COORDINATOR AT THE NCC ON FTS 937-8345 (NON-FTS (304)- 267-2911 EXT 345). Please limit these calls to Monday through Friday between the hours of 8:00 AM and 4:00 PM (Eastern Time).

SEC. 5. SUBMISSION DATES FOR MAGNETIC TAPES

.01 IRS requires participating agencies to provide test tapes for the purpose of compatibility testing as soon as possible after July 1. Tapes must be mailed to:

Internal Revenue Service
National Computer Center
P.O. Box 887
Martinsburg, West Virginia 25401
ATTN: DEBTOR MASTER FILE COORDINATOR

.02 The following final due dates have been established for the submission of TEST tapes and PRODUCTION tapes. Please note that all tapes must be received at NCC no later than the final dates shown below. Submission of tapes prior to these dates is acceptable and encouraged. A TEST tape must be submitted prior to a PRODUCTION tape.

TAPE FILE	FINAL Due Dates for TEST TAPE(s)	PROD TAPE(s)
(a) Transmitter-Annual Pre-Offset Address Request Record Tape	Aug. 1, 1987	Aug. 20, 1987
(b) Transmitter-Annual Certification Record Tape	Nov. 14, 1987	* Jan. 6, 1988
(c) Transmitter Agency Address File Tape or Letter	Dec. 1, 1987	Jan. 13, 1988
(d) Transmitter-Weekly Update Record Tape	Dec. 15, 1987	Starting Jan. 28, 1988 and every Thursday evening thereafter

* If a Transmitter-Annual Certification Record Tape is received after this date, there is no guarantee it will be included in the annual certification processing. If it is not so included, the accounts on those tapes will not be subject to offset for the entire calendar year.

SERVICE TEST TAPES—will be created and sent to the agency approximately one week after the receipt of the agency test tape.

.03 Pre-Offset Address Request processing will begin in July and continue on an "as needed" basis thru August 20, 1987. The agency must schedule their participation with the DMF Project Staff. A minimum of one weeks lead time is required. Tape files are due at NCC by Thursday evening prior to the scheduled cycle. The following is the Pre-Offset Schedule:

SCHEDULE
DATE 1 = Tape Due at National Computer Center (THURSDAY)
DATE 2 = Approximate NCC shipping date of Unprocessable File (SAT.)
DATE 3 = Approximate NCC shipping date of Pre-Offset Address File (THURSDAY)

CYCLE	DATE 1	DATE 2	DATE 3
8726	06/25/87	06/27/87	07/02/87
8728	07/09/87	07/11/87	07/16/87
8730	07/23/87	07/25/87	07/30/87
8732	08/06/87	08/08/87	08/13/87
8734	08/20/87	08/22/87	08/27/87

.04 Upon Shipment of Production Tapes, The Debtor Master File Coordinator at the IRS National Computer Center must be notified ON FTS 937-8345 (NON-FTS (304)-267-2911 EXT 345). Please limit these calls to Monday through Friday between the hours of 8:00 AM and 4:00 PM (Eastern Time).

.05 BACKUP TAPE FILES—It is suggested that a backup of the Production Transmitter-Annual Certification Records file be sent to IRS. This will minimize the chance of an agency not being included in the year's certification.

NOTE: A backup tape should be sent for the Annual Certification file only.

SEC. 6. INTERNAL REVENUE PROCESSING OF MAGNETIC TAPES

.01 All tapes submitted must conform exactly to this Revenue Procedure. IF TAPES ARE UNPROCESSABLE, THEY WILL BE RETURNED TO THE SUBMITTING AGENCY FOR CORRECTION AND REPLACEMENT. Files received from agencies that contain any of the following error conditions will be returned in their entirety as unprocessable. The National Computer Center will contact the Agency when an unprocessable file is being returned.

(a) A record contains an invalid money amount field (non-numeric).

(b) The control record does not balance with the data records on count and/or amount.

.02 Each unprocessable record will be returned intact with an error code inserted in the record explaining the reason for its return. Part B Sec. 7, 12 and 19 contain the Unprocessable Record layouts which include explanations for each error code.

SEC. 7. PRE-OFFSET ADDRESS REQUEST PROCESSING

.01 Prior to submission of Annual Certification Records, Federal agencies must obtain the latest IRS address information from an individual's tax account by submitting Annual Pre-Offset Address Request Records to IRS. Transmitter-Annual Pre-Offset Address Request Records must contain all elements as specified in Part B, Sec. 5 & 6 of this Revenue Procedure. Agencies must contact the IRS DMF Program Coordinator, Returns Processing & Accounting Division (TR:R:A), 1111 Constitution Ave., NW, Washington, D.C. 20224, (FTS 343-0147, 48, 49, 50, 52, NON-FTS (202) 343-0147, 48, 49, 50, 52), to schedule their participation in Pre-Offset Processing. This processing will begin in July. Pre-Offset TEST tapes must be received no later than August 1, 1987. Pre-Offset PRODUCTION tapes must be received no later than August 20, 1987, to be included in the last scheduled processing cycle. See exhibits A.7-1 and A.7-2.

The purpose of this processing is to obtain address information for use in making a reasonable attempt to notify the obligor of the agencies intent to refer their case to IRS. A reasonable attempt to notify the debtor means that the Agency may use the address they maintain for the debtor if they believe that to be the most current. However, if the notice comes back undeliverable, then the agency must attempt to notify the debtor at the mailing address obtained from the Service pursuant to section 6103(m)(2) or (m)(4) of the Code. The address used by the agency must have been received from the Service within a period of one year preceding the attempt to notify the debtor.

NOTE: REGARDLESS OF WHICH ADDRESS THE AGENCY PLANS TO USE, PARTICIPATION IN PRE-OFFSET ADDRESS PROCESSING IS MANDATORY.

.02 Upon receipt of a file containing Transmitter-Annual Pre-Offset Address Request Records, IRS will validate all records. Those records deemed unprocessable will be returned to the submitting agency containing all elements as specified in Part B, Sec. 7 of this Revenue Procedure. Processable records will be matched against the Individual Master File (IMF).

.03 Files received from agencies that contain any of the following error conditions will be returned in their entirety as unprocessable. The National Computer Center will contact the Agency when an unprocessable file will be returned.

(a) A record contains an invalid money amount field (non-numeric).

(b) The control record does not balance with the data records on count and/or amount.

.04 Records not matching the IMF on SSN and Name Control will be returned to the submitting agency containing all elements as specified in Part B, Sec. 8 & 9.

.05 Records matching the IMF on SSN but not on Name Control will cause extraction of the name line for the SSN as contained on the IMF. The format of the record returned from IRS is specified in Part B, Sec. 8 & 9.

NOTE: The return by IRS of a name line does NOT imply the SSN is correct and the agency name control field is wrong. The agency MUST examine each of these records manually (i.e., not via a computer program!) to determine if the name line IRS has is truly the obligor the agency is attempting to obtain an address for and subsequently certify for offset. Under NO circumstances may an agency routinely use the name and/or name control supplied by IRS.

.06 Records matching the IMF on both SSN and Name Control will cause extraction of the Street Address, City, State and ZIP Code as contained on the IMF. The format of the record returned from IRS is specified in Part B, Sec. 8 & 9.

.07 Because of the similarity in the Pre-Offset and Annual Certification Process, participation in Pre-Offset will allow Federal Agencies to not only receive obligors addresses but also test and review the condition of their data prior to Annual Certification. The submitting agency will be able to review the Unprocessable and No-Match records prior to Annual Certification. Records failing any validity checks at Annual Certification will result in the loss of a potential offset(s) for that processing year.

.08 Agencies are reminded that using any data provided by IRS for other than this program is a conflict with Disclosure provisions and can result in suspension from the program. See statement in Part A, Sec. 1.04.

SEC. 8. ANNUAL DEBTOR MASTER FILE PROCESSING

.01 The federal agencies participating in this program must submit their Annual Certification records in accordance with the specifications in Part B, Sec. 10 & 11 of this Revenue Procedure. A TEST tape of Annual Certification records must be received no later than November 14, 1987. The PRODUCTION file must be received no later than January 6, 1988. See exhibits A.8-1, A.8-2.

.02 Upon receipt of a tape containing the Annual Certification records, IRS will validate all records. Those deemed unprocessable will be returned on a separate tape file to the submitting agency containing all elements as specified in Part B, Sec. 12 of this Revenue Procedure including the error reason code. Processable records will be matched against the Individual Master File (IMF).

.03 Tapes received from agencies that contain any of the following error conditions will be returned in their entirety as unprocessable. The National Computer Center will contact the Agency when an unprocessable tape is being returned.

(a) A record contains an invalid money amount field (non-numeric).

(b) The control record does not balance with the data records on count and/or amount.

.04 Those records that do not find a match on the Individual Master File (IMF) will be returned on a separate tape file to the submitting agency containing all elements as specified in Part B, Sec. 13 & 14 of this Revenue Procedure.

.05 Records finding a match on the IMF will create a refund freeze condition. The Debtor Master File (DMF) is initialized annually only from processable certification records that match the IMF. The DMF file can be updated on a weekly basis through offsets and claims from the IMF, and through decreases, deletes and agency refund repayments from the submitting agencies. New accounts cannot be added to the file after the beginning of the calendar year, nor can obligation amounts be increased.

.06 Accounts on the DMF will be prioritized and federal income tax refunds offset based on the following criteria:

(a) Office of Child Support Enforcement (AFDC)—Aid to Families with Dependent Children claims and state foster care and adoption assistance program claims.

(b) All other participating agencies based on the earliest delinquent date. In the event the delinquency date is the same, the account with the larger obligation will be subject to offset first.

(c) Office of Child Support Enforcement (non-AFDC)—NON-Aid to Families with Dependent Children claims.

SEC. 9. AGENCY ADDRESS FILE

.01 An Agency Address File will be created annually by IRS and will contain address and contact point information which will be included on all related IRS generated taxpayer correspondences. A central address (local code "000") for each Subagency and at the option of the agency, local addresses (additional local codes), must be provided for inclusion on IRS notices. Agencies will have the ability to correct/update address information throughout the processing year. The first line of the address (Agency Name field) must contain the name of the participating agency (i.e., U.S. Department of Education, Office of Child Support Enforcement, etc.). This field will display as the first address line on the notice the taxpayer receives at the time his refund is offset and must clearly identify which agency has received the collection. (See Example below) No reference will be made to IRS within the Agency Address. At least one address with local code "000" is required for each subagency. See Exhibit A.10-4.

Example: Agency Certification Record:

Obligor = Jane Goodbody
Agency Code = 04
Subagency Code = 22
Local Code = 234

Agency Address Record
Agency Code = 04
Subagency Code = 22
Local Code = 234
Agency Address Info. = Veterans Administration
Regional Off. & Insur. Center
Bishop Henry Whipple Fed. Bld.
P.O. Box 1930

Agency Phone Info. = 555-1212 (LOCAL)
(814) 555-1212 (Collect)
1-800-626-2912 (Toll Free)
(Nationwide/Toll Free)

When an offset for the above obligor occurs, an offset notice will be generated as in Exhibit A.10.4.

It is required by IRS that the Agency supply at least one toll free or collect telephone number. Space is provided for three phone numbers. More than one toll free or collect number may be used.

NOTE: The telephone number(s) do not have to be different for each local code. The Agency may assign one toll free number for all subagencies.

Initial address information must be submitted on magnetic tape except as noted below. A TEST tape MUST be submitted no later than December 1, 1987. The PRODUCTION tape must be submitted no later than January 13, 1988. All magnetic media address information must conform to the specifications in Part B, Sec. 15 & 16 of this Revenue Procedure.

NOTE: If an Agency has 5 or less Address records, the address information may be submitted via the Updates to Agency Address File procedure as described in 9.02 below.

.02 Updates to Agency Address File VIA Memorandum

Revisions to the Agency Address file submitted at the beginning of the processing year may be submitted whenever necessary. A memorandum must then be mailed to the National Office, Returns Processing & Accounting Division, Attn: Debtor Master File Coordinator, in the format outlined in 9.03 below. Agencies will be notified when the update(s) have been completed. NOTE: Complete address information, including telephone number, must be submitted for all updates (additions and changes).

.03 CHANGE OF ADDRESS LETTER—A memorandum, in the format shown in Exhibit A.9-2 below, must be used to notify IRS of changes or additions to the Agency Address File.

.04 Updates to Agency Address File Via Tape File Revisions to the Agency Address file may be submitted via a tape file. The format is identical to the initial address (Part B, sections 15 & 16) except that the "update indicator" must be appropriately set. A memorandum letter (Exhibit A.9-2) must be submitted to the DMF Coordinator with an attached listing of the address changes on the tape file.

SEC. 10. WEEKLY DEBTOR MASTER FILE PROCESSING

.01 Federal Agencies are encouraged to submit Transmitter Weekly Update Records. These records must be in accordance with specifications in Part B, Sections 17 & 18 of this Revenue Procedure. A TEST file must be received no later than December 15, 1987. PRODUCTION files must be received no later than each THURSDAY night, beginning January 28, 1988, if they are to be timely processed that week. Tapes received later than Thursday will not be processed until the following week. See exhibit A.10-1.

.02 Weekly updates can include the following types of records:

(a) DECREASES—the record used by the submitting agency to reduce a previously certified amount of obligation. IRS will reduce the current amount of obligation by the amount reflected in the DECREASE record. The remaining obligation, when greater than $25.00, will be subject to refund offset whenever credits become available.

(b) DELETES—this record is basically the same as a DECREASE record except that when the amount of decrease is applied to the outstanding obligation amount,

best copy available

as reflected by IRS, the result is $25.00 or less. In this case, IRS will consider the record as a DELETE. A DELETE record must be used whenever a submitting agency intends to eliminate a previously certified case from the DMF.

It should be noted that whenever IRS processes a DELETE record, the obligor will no longer be subjected to the refund offset program for that agency/subagency combination, for the remainder of the processing year.

(c) AGENCY REFUND/REPAYMENT—this record is used to alert IRS that an agency has directly repaid either a portion or the entire amount of an IRS offset. This record should be forwarded to IRS at the earliest possible date. Failure to send this record to IRS whenever this situation arises could result in IRS erroneously allowing an injured spousal claim and billing the agency for the amount. The amount of repayment by the agency is included in the record.

.03 Upon receipt of the tape containing the Transmitter Weekly Update Records, IRS will validate all records. Those deemed unprocessable will be returned to the submitting agency intact with an error code inserted into the record as specified in Part B, Sec. 19 of this Revenue Procedure. Processable records will be used to update the Debtor Master File.

.04 Files received from agencies that contain any of the following error conditions will be returned in their entirety as unprocessable. The National Computer Center will contact the Agency when an unprocessable file is being returned.

(a) A record contains an invalid money amount field (non-numeric).

(b) The control record does not balance with the data records on count and/or amount.

.05 Each week IRS will process individual income tax data including 1040 tax returns, injured spouse claims and other tax related reversals. These actions will be reflected on the Debtor Master File as follows:

(a) Offsets are made on individual income tax return refunds where the taxpayer has a liability on the Debtor Master File. A notice (CP-47) advising the taxpayer of the offset will be generated by IRS (see Exhibit A.10-4). Individual offset records will be sent weekly to the submitting federal agency on the Service-Weekly Collection (Offset/Claim) Record File as specified in Part B, Sec. 20 & 21 of this Revenue Procedure.

(b) Injured spouse claims are filed as amended returns by a non-obligated spouse who files a joint return with a debtor who has been certified for offset by a state or federal agency. The non-obligated spouse may be entitled to all or a portion of the refund, depending on his/her share of the income earned and credits claimed. The claim may be filed at the same time the Federal Income Tax Return is filed in order to receive his/her refund prior to offset. However, it may also be filed after the offset has occurred. If the claim is filed with the Federal Income Tax Return, the IRS will process the claim and refund the appropriate amount to the injured spouse. Any remaining overpayment would then be offset to the agency which certified the debtor.

(c) If the claim is filed after an offset occurs, the IRS will process the claim as above and refund the appropriate amount to the injured spouse. The amount allowed (refunded) will in turn be charged to the submitting agency and reflected on the Service-Weekly Collection (Offset/Claim) Record file as specified in Part B, Sec. 20 & 21. Other tax related reversals of offsets, such as bankruptcy cases or erroneous offsets of payments received in response to proposed tax assessments, will also be included on this file.

.06 The Weekly Update Records for the last offset cycle are due on December 22, 1988. This will be the last update file processed for the 1988 program.

.07 Each week the Debtor Master File Coordinator at NCC must be notified on FTS 937-8345 whether or not a weekly update tape has/willbe shipped.
